How it came afterwards to the Crown doth not appear. But it was made part of the Endowment of the Hospital of the Savoy in London, founded about 1505, by K. Henry VII. William Holgyll, Master of this Hospital, granted it to John Martin, citizen and bocher of London.

After the suppression, K. Edward VI. granted to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, this maner of Alvithley, among others, to hold in focage (n). It belongs to them as Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital.

The Maner of BELHOUSE,

The ancient Seat belonging to this Maner, is situated in a Park, of about three miles in circumference; well adorned with old Oaks, and various other kinds of Trees.

Here was formerly a Heronry, which, being a thing not commonly to be met with, was esteemed a circumstance of no small consequence while the diversion of Hawking was in fashion: But of late years not thought to ballance the inconveniences attending it, and the Herons therefore not suffered to build longer.

This estate took its name from the Belhouse Family [L]; which flourished in the reigns of K. John, and K. Henry III. and was originally of Cambridgeshire. Richard de Belbus had a confirmation from K. John, in 1200, of all the lands which Reinfred de Bruer held in Ramsden; from him and his successors denominated Belhouse (o). His son,—Sir Theobald de Belbus, had two sons, Sir Richard, and Sir Thomas.—Sir Richard, the eldest son and heir, having only one daughter, Alice, married to Sir Nicolas Barrington, gave in 1283, the maner of Ramsden, to his brother Sir Thomas; who had acquired, in 1274, of John de Burgh, son to Hubert Earl of Kent, the maner of Stanway [see in the other Volume, p. 190.] which afterwards became the principal seat of the Family; and where the Maner-house still bears the name of Belhouse. He had also Newington-maner in Kent, since called Newington-Belhus. This Sir Thomas was Sheriff of Cambridgeshire from 1282, to 1289, and made by K. Edward I. Seneshal of Ponthieu, a province which that King had acquired in right of his Queen. By Floria, or Florentia, his wife, he had three sons, John, his successor at Stanway, who received the Order of Knighthood in that solemn installation made by K. Edw. I. [M]. Nicolas, and William.

Nicolas de Belhus, the second son, seated himself at Alveley. He is buried in the Chancel of this Church, under an ancient Tombstone; the legend torn off but which by the Arms of the Wife appears to have been for him, and not for his son, or grandson. By his wife . . . Odingfel [N], he had—Thomas his son; who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Richard de Nortone, of Alveley. He had with her a considerable estate in this parish and the adjoining ones; and most probably this very Maner, since called Belhus: for in some old deeds and court-rolls 'tis called Nortons alias Belhus. By a deed dated in 1389, he granted to certain feoffees the maner of Bumsted, and other lands in Alveley and Upminster, in trust to convey them to the Abbey of Stratford Langthorne; which they accordingly did. He departed this life about the latter end of K. Richard the Second's reign, leaving his son and heir, John, and two daughters, Alice, and Ifolda.—John, the son, dying without issue, was buried in the Abbey of Stratford Langthorn, to which his Father had been so great a benefactor. Upon his decease, his two sisters and coheirs made, in 1397, a Partition of his Inheritance, not only of the Lands but also of the Mansion house of Belhus [O]. Alice, the eldest, was married to John Barrett Esq; and Ifolda, first, to Gilbert att Lee, by whom it doth not appear she had any issue; and secondly to Walter Serjant.

John Barrett Esq; upon his becoming thus possessed of a purparty of this estate, came and resided at Belhouse. Till that time the Barrett Family lived at Hawkhurst in Kent, where they had been settled for several generations, and 'tis probable came into England with William the Conqueror, the name being in the Roll of Battle Abbey. They might possibly be a branch of the Barretts of Perry-Court in Preston within the Hundred of Feverham; styled by Philipot a good old Family (p); that long made a con-considerable figure there: the last Male whereof was Valentine Barrett, who dyed in 1440, and is buried in Lanharn Church.—John Barrett Esq; aforementioned had, by Alice his wife, —Thomas, his son and heir, who married Matilda, daughter of John Pointz of North-Okendon, [see under that parish.] He was dead before the year 1441 [P].—Robert Barrett Esq; his eldest son, in 1548 purchased his cousin Walter Serjant's moiety of the maner of Nortons, alias Belhous, and became sole Lord thereof. His first wife was Margaret Chichley, a relation of Archbishop Chichley, by whom he had no issue. But by his second wife, Margery, daughter of Knolles, probably of the same Family as the Lords Knolles, her Arms appearing to be the same as theirs [Q], which survived him, he had—John, who applying himself to the study of the Law became eminent in that profession, and is celebrated by J. Leland for his eloquence (q). He married four wives. 1. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Richard Braytoft [R], by whom he had, George; and Thomas, that became a Priest. 2. Philippa, daughter of John Harpsfeild, and relict of Thomas Dineley, and by her he had six daughters: viz. Cecily, wife of William Culpepper; Muriel, married to John Champneys; Anne, to Martin Boice; and Joyce to Sir James Wilford; all Gentlemen of the first rank in the County of Kent; Margaret wife of Walter Crompton; and Bridget. 3. His third wife, was Margaret daughter of Henry Norris of Yattendon in Berkshire, (by Fridswilda his wife sister and heir of Francis Viscount Lovel) sister of Henry Norris Esq; beheaded in 1536, and aunt of Henry Lord Norris (r): whether he had any children by her is uncertain; any more than by his 4th wife, whose name was Mary [S], and whom he amply provides for, in his Will dated in 1525. By that it appears, he had rebuilt the old Seat at Belhouse, and much increased his estate by many purchases in the neighbourhood [T]. He departed this life 4 October 1526 (s). George Barretts, his eldest son by Elizabeth Braytoft, dyed in his life time; having taken to wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Dineley of Stanford-Dineley in Berkshire (by Philippa Harpsfeild above-mentioned.) This Elizabeth brought with her a very considerable estate in Berkshire and Hampshire; being descended by heirs female from the old Barons Fitz-Herbert, and from Milo Earl of Hereford, whose Arms with those of several other illustrious Families she quartered. She survived her husband George Barretts, and married afterwards Sir John Baker of Sissenbert in Kent. By her, George Barretts Esq; had three sons, Edward, Arthur, and Robert, which two last do not appear to have left any issue; and a daughter married to —Kelway.—Edward, the eldest son, born in 1521 (t), upon his grandfather's death succeeded to this and other his estates. He was High-Sheriff of Essex in 1571, and dyed in 1586 (u). He married, first Catharine, daughter of Alexander Culpepper, but whether he had any children by her does not appear. His second wife was, Anne only daughter of Sir George Somerset, third son of Charles Earl of Worcester: By her he had Charles; Edward, who dyed without issue; and Margaret, wife of Sir Humfrey Foster of Aldermaston. His third wife was Elizabeth, second daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Lytton of Knebworth [U], by whom he had Anne, married to Thomas Corbet

[P] Weever in his Funeral Monuments has made a mistake concerning this Thomas, whom he supposes to be the same Thomas Barretts that was Esquire to K: Henry the 6th and killed in an insurrection of the mob Ao. 1461, whereas it is plain from an antient deed bearing date 20 years before that he was then Dead.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, he held, a messuage, and 36 acres of arable, late John Warte's, worth 30s. Another messuage, 70 acres of arable, and 4 of wood, in this parish and Upmynster, called Blachis: another messuage, and 20 acres, called . . . Hethe; worth 4l. per ann.—Of the Earl of Oxford, the maner of Noke, 120 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 40 of pasture, 12 of wood, 100 of marsh, in Wenington, Alvetheley, and Reynham; worth 53s. 4d. per ann.—Of Catharine Queen of England, a messuage called Govions, 66 acres of arable, and 2 roods of meadow, in Horn Church; and in Haveringe att Bower, a messuage, 16 acr. of arable, 30 of pasture, and 4 of marsh; each worth 5l. a year.—Of the King he held, in capite, by knight's service, two parts of the maner of Great Sutton, and 6 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, and 40s. rent, divided into three parts, in Great and Little Sutton, and Prittlewell, and the advowson of Sutton-Church, value 10l. per ann.—Of Clement Earl of Devon he held a messuage, and 80 acres of arable, called Laurence tenement, in this parish, Stifford, and South-Wokingdon, worth 40s.—And of Richard Badby, in Stifford, 14 acres of arable, and 10 of pasture called Horeclose, or Hethfeild; value 26s. 8d. And 11 acr. called Salelond, with 11 acres more; worth 13s. 4d. Inquis. 19 Hen. VIII.

of Sprowston in Norfolk; and Elizabeth to Brampton Gurdon of Affington in Suffolk Esqre. — Charles, the eldest son and heir, dyed before his father, in the 29th year of his age, leaving, by Christian his wife daughter of Sir Walter Mildmay Chancellor of the Exchequer, two sons, Edward; Walter, who dyed without issue; and one daughter, Anne, wife of Sir Edward Harley, Knight of the Bath, who also dyed without issue. — Edward Barrett Esq; aged 4 years and 8 months, at the time of his grandfather's decease (w), succeeded him. Soon after his coming of age, which was in 1601, he set out on his travels, as appears by a letter of attorney he left with his mother, and Sir John Leveson of Halling in Kent to whom she was remarried. He was at Florence in 1606; and before that had been in Spain [W]. K. James I. knighted him; and, in 1618, granted him a Charter of Free-warren in his maner of Belhouse &c. about which time he made the Park. In the beginning of the year 1625 he was appointed Embassador to France [X]: but it doth not appear that he went thither. The 17th of October 1627, he was created Baron Newburgh of Fife in Scotland (x); and 20 July 1628 was sworn Privy Counsellor to K. Charles I. The 20th of August following he took his seat as Chancellor of the Exchequer. Afterwards he was appointed Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, which he enjoyed as long as he lived. Upon Bishop Juxon's resigning the staff of Lord Treasurer, that office was put into the hands of the Lord Newburgh, with four other of the chief Officers of the Crown. He was a man of a very amiable and respectable character, and lived with great hospitality, as the authors who wrote in those days do testify. By his first wife, Jane daughter of Sir Edward Carey, Master of the Jewel-Office, he had one daughter, Catharine, that dyed an infant. His second wife was Catharine daughter of Hugh Fenn of Wotton under Edge in Gloucestershire, widow of Hugh Perry Alderman of London, by whom he had no issue. She survived him. He dyed at Belhouse in 1644, and was buried 2 January 1644-5, in Alveley Church, with his ancestors [Y]. By his last will, dated 17 March 1643, and written with his own hand, he left this his Maner of Belhouse, with all the rest of his estates in Essex, to his cousin

Richard Lennard Esq; on condition he took the name of Barrett; and, at the same time, bequeathed to him his Crest, being a Hydra proper on a wreath argent and gules; and his paternal Arms, viz. Parti per pale, Barry of four, counterchanged argent and gules, and the other Coats he, the said Lord, had a right to quarter [Z]. . . . This Richard Lennard was son of Richard Lord Dacre by Dorothy his second wife, daughter of Dudley Lord North, and was allied to Lord Newburgh, by his grandmother Cecily Lady Dacre, daughter of Sir Richard Baker: which Cecily and Lord Newburgh's father were cousin Germans, her grandfather, Sir John Baker, having married Elizabeth, widow of George Barrett, as above-mentioned. — The Lennard Family had been long settled at Chevening in Kent, at least as early as the time of K. Henry VI. and the title of Dacre came into it in Qu. Elizabeth's reign, when Sampson Lennard, son and heir of John Lennard Esqr. Sheriff of Kent in 1571, married Margaret Fynes, sister of Gregory Fynes Lord Dacre; and, upon his death in 1589, sole heiress to his estates and Barony: which Honor Sir Richard Fynes of Herst Monceaux in Suffex, her progenitor, got in the time of K. Henry VI. by his marriage with the Lady Joan Dacre granddaughter and heir of Thomas Dacre Lord Dacre. This Family of Dacre was one of the most illustrious in the North of England, where they had great possessions in the Counties of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and York; particularly in the former, where they had their principal seat. . . . Sampson Lennard aforesaid had, by Margaret Lady Dacre his wife, Henry Lennard their eldest son and heir; who, upon his mother's death in 1611, became Lord Dacre. He married Cecily, daughter of Sir Richard Baker of Sissenherst in Kent, by whom he had Richard, his eldest son and successor: who took

[Y] The manner in which the Vicar of that Parish has set down his interment in the Register, is remarkable, viz. 'Edward Barrett, Lord Newburgh buried Jany. 2d. 1644. Vir Sanctissimus.'

[Z] The Arms of Lennard are, Or, on a fesse gules, a fleur de lis of the first. . . . The Lord Newburgh's complete shield consisted of twelve Coats; viz. 1. Barrett. 2. Belhouse. 3. Braytoft, a family of great note in Nottinghamshire, and Lincolnshire. 4. Dinely, of Stanford-Dinely in Berkshire, a very ancient family in those parts. 5. Comyn, of Newbold-Comyn, in Warwickshire. 6. Foscot, Foscot, or Foxcote. A maner of this name in Hampshire belonged to Lord Newburgh. 7. Chenduit. On an Atchievement of this Family were quartered 47 Coats.

to his first wife Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Arthur Throckmorton of Paulers Perry in Northamptonshire, eldest son of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, by Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Nic: Carew Knight of the Garter, in the time of K. Henry VIII. and had by her Francis his eldest son, and three others who left no issue. His second wife was Dorothy, daughter of Dudley Lord North; and by her he had Catharine, wife of Chaloner Chute of the Vine in Hampshire; and one son, Richard Lennard, who, as we have already observed, was by Lord Newburgh's will made heir to this Maner of Belhouse.

As to the eldest son, Francis Lennard Esq; On the death of his Father in 1630 he became Lord Dacre. And having married Elizabeth, daughter, and at length coheir, of Paul Viscount Banning, he had by her, Thomas; Francis, who dyed a batchelor; and Henry who left three daughters, Philadelphia, wife of Daniel Obrien, Viscount Clare; Elizabeth, wife of John Earl of Meath; and Margaret. This Francis Lord Dacre dyed in 1662. — Thomas, his eldest son and heir, was advanced to the title of Earl of Suffex 5 October 1674. He married the Lady Anne Palmer, alias Fitz-Roy, daughter of Barbara Dutcheſs of Cleveland, born before she and Roger Palmer Earl of Castlemain her husband were separated; but acknowledged by K. Charles II. as his natural Daughter, who assigned her the Royal Arms with the Batoon sinister. This Earl, though possessed of many amiable qualities, yet by indulging himself in the levities of the Court, where he was one of the Lords of the Bed-Chamber; by deep play; and by other acts of imprudence; very much hurt his estate; a great part of which he sold at different times, particularly his noble Seat at Hurst-Monceaux in Suffex. He dyed in 1715, at Chevening in Kent; leaving by Anne his wife two Daughters, his heirs, Lady Barbara, who married Charles Skelton, a Lieutenant General in the French service; Grand Croix and Commandeur of the order of St. Louis [A]. She dyed in 1741, without issue. Lady Anne, the other daughter and coheir, was married three times. Her first husband was her cousin Richard-Barrett Lennard; whom we shall more particularly mention presently. By her second husband, Henry Roper Lord Teynham, (to whom she was third wife) she had two sons, Charles; Henry; and a daughter, Anne. And by her third husband, the Hon. Robert More, a younger son of Henry Earl of Drogheda, she had one son, Henry. Upon her sister's decease without issue in 1741, She became sole heir to her Father, and as such Baroneſs Dacre.

To return to Richard Lennard above-mentioned, whom the Lord Newburgh by will constituted his heir; In pursuance of that will he took the Name and Arms of Barrett, and was Sheriff of Essex in 1679. He married

Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Loftus, Kt. eldest son of Adam Viscount Loftus, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and had with her the maner of Clones in that kingdom, which she inherited from her mother, the eldest daughter and coheir of Sir Francis Rushe Kt. one of the Privy Council there. This Richard dyed at Belhouse in 1696, having had, by the said Anne his wife, two sons, Dacre; Richard, who dyed a batchelor, being killed by a fall from his horse in the Park at Belhouse; and two daughters, Anne wife of Carew Mildmay of Marks in Essex, and Dorothy, who dyed single. —

Dacre-Barrett Lennard, Esq; the surviving son, succeeding his father, married first the Lady Jane, daughter of Arthur Chichester, the second Earl of Donegal, by whom he had one son, Richard; and three daughters, 1. Jane, married in 1730 to John Ranby, Esq; Chief Chirurgion to his Majesty, by whom she had no issue, 2. Dorothy, wife of Hugh Smith of South Weald-hall Esq; who had by her two daughters, his coheirs, Dorothy, late wife of the Hon. John-Smith Barry a son of the late Earl of Barrymore; and Lucy, late wife of James Lord Strange, eldest son of Edward Earl of Derby. 3. Henrietta dyed single. The second wife of Dacre-Barrett Lennard Esq; was Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Thomas Moore Esq; and by her he had a son who dyed an infant; and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to William Sloan Esq; nephew of the late Sir Hans Sloane, but dyed without issue. His third wife was Sarah, daughter of Sir Capel Luckyn of Messinghall, widow of Richard Saltonſtal of Groves in this County, by whom he had Catharine, wife of Sir Philip Hall of Upton Kt. Dacre-Barrett Lennard Esq; was Sheriff of Essex in 1705, and dyed at Belhouse in 1724. . . . Richard, his son by his first wife the Lady Jane Chichester, was dead about eight years before him. He married his cousin the Lady Anne Lennard, as mentioned above, but lived only six months after his marriage, leaving the Lady Anne his wife with Child of a Son, born in April 1717, and named — Thomas; which Thomas Barrett Lennard Esq; upon his grandfather's death succeeded him in this Maner of Belhouse, and the rest of his estates: As he did the Lady Anne his mother in the Barony of Dacre, upon her decease in 1755; and accordingly took his seat that year in the House of Lords. His Lordship married Anna-Maria daughter of Sir John Pratt Kt. Lord Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, and Sister of the Right Hon. Charles Lord Camden, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, by whom he had one Daughter, Anna-Barbara, who dyed of a violent fever, 14 March 1749, in the tenth year of her age.

The maner of Belhouse had the privilege of felons goods, waifs, strays, &c. and a Court leet, and Court baron; but these grew disused, as the Lords by degrees purchased in most of the Tenants estates, and added them to their demesnes [B].

3. The Maner of BUMPSTED, alias NEW PLACE.

is supposed to be what belonged in the Confessor's reign to Edward, and Godmann; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo Bishop of Bayeux, and Ansgar the Cook [C].

The mansion house is entirely demolished. It stood on the northern edge of Lord Dacre's Park, about a good mile north-east from Alveley-Church; and was moated round.

This Maner did anciently belong to a Family surname de Bumpsted, from whom it took the name it hath borne ever since. In a deed without date in the possession of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Dacre, Matthew, son of . . . de Bumpsted-Steple, grants to his Son, G. . . de Bumpsted all his lands, rents, and services in Alvithley, as well of freemen as villans, to hold by the annual delivery of a rose. To this deed Bartholomew de Breansun, John le Bret, William Baudwin, &c. are witnesses. In another deed, the said Matthew, styling himself of Bumpsted ad Turrim, makes over all his lands, rents, &c. in Alvithley to his forementioned son G. . . and his heirs, by which it should seem he was a younger son. — Sir William de Bumpsted, and — William his son, in the reigns of K. Edward I. II. and III. had also lands in Alvethley [D]. The latter, in 1341, granted a messuage, mill, lands, rents, and services in Avely, to Nicolas Taunton, or Staunton, clerk. And, in 1348, Robert, son of the late Sir William de Bumpsted, granted his messuage, lands, &c. in Alvithley, to — Henry de Dutton; who conveyed them to — William Chidle; and the latter granted them to — Sir John de Staunton. — In 1372, Thomas de Staunton held, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex, this fourth part of a fee called Bumpsted hall (y) [E]. The same year — Ralph, son of Sir John de Staunton of Reinham, granted all the messuage, lands, &c. called Bumpsted, in Alvithley, to

John Byrch, and John Seward; who, in 1373, granted them to Samuel Gryce, and others. And these conveyed the premises, in 1375, to Thomas Belbous Esq; Some years after, He vested them in Thomas Moraunt, citizen and fishmonger of London, John Stodey, William Alkham, William Copto, John Verdon, and other trustees; to the intent, that after his decease they should make them over to the Abbot and Convent of Stratford Langthorn. Accordingly they obtained, in 1400, license to give to that Abbey, 1 messuage, 1 toft, 300 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, & 32 s. rent in Alvythele; and Upmynstre, being this maner of Bumpsted; and in the 2d. of K. Henry IV, settled it in pursuance of their trust.

After the suppression of religious Houses, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1540, to Edward North Esq; Treasurer of the Court of Augmentation, afterwards Lord North. And He, 28 May 1541, sold it to Edward Barrett Esq; by which means it returned again into the possession of the heirs of Thomas Belhouse Esq; who had given it to Stratford-Abbey. It hath descended, like the rest of the estates in this parish, to the Rt. Honble. the Lord Dacre.

Brooklands, a reputed Maner, adjoining to that of Bumpsted, was purchased in 1390, of Robert Roydone by Thomas Belhouse Esq; and by his direction conveyed, with the other, to Stratford-Abbey. Ever since which it hath gone along with Bumpsted-Maner.

4. The Maner of BRETTES,

The mansion house is about a mile north west from the Church, within sight of the road leading from Alveley to Romford. It is large, encompassed with a wide moat of clear water; and though long since converted into a farm house, retains signs of its having been once a Gentleman's seat. Charles Barrett Esq; father of the Lord Newburgh, lived in it. The lower story is of brick, with very ancient Gothic windows: the rest is of plaister, or rough cast.

Keliton is supposed to have been the ancient name of this estate; of which one Ulstan had a part, and Five Freemen the rest, in Edward the Confessor's reign: At the time of the Survey, Suein and his under-tenant Leuvin, and William de Warenn, were the possessors [F].

[D] Which was (as it should seem) a Water mill, and the mill pond part of that piece of Water in Lord Dacre's park, which joins to the spot where Bumpsted house stood.

[E] John de Staunton held it of the Honor of Mandeville: the time not mentioned.

A part of it took the name of Bretts from its ancient owners the Family of le Bret, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 556. 559. The other part retained its original name as low as the year 1395. For, in a grant of that date, in the Rt. Hon. the Lord Dacre's possession, from John Chapman to William Warle, of a house and ten acres of land in Alveley; they are described as lying between the land of Kelington south, and the land of Bretts, north.

This Maner, on account of having belonged to Suein, and to William de Warenn, was afterwards holden of the Honor of Raley, and of the Fee of Earl de Warenn, as appears by the Inquisitions post mortem. From which also we have this further account of the Bret family.

Hugh le Bret, who dyed in 1266, held in this town of Anveliers 1 messuage in ca. of the King as of the Barony of Releigh, and 19 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, and 29s. rent of assise, of the Honor of Releigh, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee [G]. He held also of the fee of Earl de Warenn, 5s. 6d. by the service of the twelfth part of a knight's fee: And of the fee of the Earl of Mandeville, 90 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow and pasture, and 3s. 6d. rent.—John, his son (z), at the time of his decease in 1297, or 1298, held in Anveliers, 1 messuage, 90 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 8 of pasture, and 2s. ob. rent, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reyley: And of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford, 80 acres of arable, 2 acr. of pasture, 2s. rent of assise: Of Earl Warenn, the same as his father: And of John de Brianzon 50 acres of arable, and 2 of pasture.—Simon was his son (a). We do not find when he dyed.—Thomas le Brett, most probably his son, held in this parish 1 messuage, 120 acres of arable, 8 of pasture, 2 of meadow, and 5s. 5d. rent of assise, of the King in ca. as of the Honor of Reyley; and 20 acres of the Earl of Hereford, by the service of 1 d. ob. per ann. He departed this life in 1329. And Joane his widow had an assignation of her dower out of this maner (b).

Elizabeth, their only daughter, and heir (c), brought this estate in marriage to her husband Henry Baudwin of South Okendon, probably younger brother of William Baudwin of North Okendon.

In 1342, Robert Bolington was possessed of part of this estate. And in 1349, his son—John de Bolington, granted to Henry Dutton, in trust, the messuage and lands he had in Alvethley, of the gift and grant of Elizabeth wife of Henry Baudwin. In 1375, he settled in trustees all his lands and tenements called Le Bretts in Alvethley [H]. He dyed about 1395, leaving Joanna, his daughter and heir, under age; whom John Loughton, Clerk, took, and sold her marriage to William Sautree, to the damage of the King, who had a right to dispose of her in marriage (d). This William Sautree Esq; was possessed of Le Bryttes place in 1404 (e).—John Sautree, his son and heir, was living in 1424. And, in 1446, he passed away this maner to

Richard Andrew, clerk, the King's Secretary, afterwards Dean of York (f) [I]. In 1462, he sold this estate to

Richard Selye, alias Cely, merchant of the Staple at Calais: who dyed 5 June 1494, holding the maner of Bretts; and divers lands and tenements so named in this parish; of the Lady de Inglethorpe. He left three daughters co-heirs, Margaret aged 4 years, Isabell, three; and Barbara half a year old (g). The eldest was married to John Kettleby Esq; and Isabella, first to Robert Warham, Gent. afterwards to Antony Cook of Alveley Gent. By the death of the two others without issue, or by purchasing their shares, Isabella became possessed of the whole. In 1531, she, and her husband Cook conveyed it to

John Baker, Recorder of London, afterwards knighted, and made a Privy Counsellor, and Chancellor of the Exchequer. He married Elizabeth, widow of George Barrett Esq; above-mentioned: They two jointly, in 1554, settled the reversion of this Maner, after their decease, on Edward Barrett Esq; son of the aforesaid Elizabeth by her first husband George Barrett Esq;

From him it hath descended to the Right Honorable the Lord Dacre.

The Part of KELITON formerly holden by Suein, is a large Farm belonging to the Lord Dacre, known at present by the name of Kennington. The possessors of it after Suein are unknown till the reign of K. Edward III; when it was in the Gernet family, owners of Wenington-maner, and mentioned in the other Volume, p. 456. Sir Henry Gernet, who dyed in 1345, held, jointly with his wife Joanna, one messuage,

[I] This Richard's Seal, appendent to his Deeds, is remarkable; being an Antique, as it seems, very well cut, with two figures, one like Apollo, the other a woman in a Roman drefs.

120 acres of arable, 15 acres of meadow, and 6s. 8d. rent in Alvethele, of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the service of 30 s. per ann. [Which quit-rent is still paid to the Crown, and was undoubtedly given to that Priory by the Founder Robert son of Suein.] Gernet held also here, 60 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, and 15 of pasture, of Thomas de Bradeston, by homage, and scutage when it happened to be levied, and 6 d. per ann. And, in this parish and Reynham, of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, 20 acres of arable, and 6 s. 8 d. rent, by the yearly service of 10 s. — Maud, and Margaret, were his daughters and heirs (b).

William Trussell, who dyed in 1480, held this maner of Kenyngton, of the Prior and Convent of Prittlewell, by socage, and rent of 30 s. per ann. as well as that of Wenynghon (i). — Sir Edward Trussell his son held the same, and dying 10 June 1499, was succeeded by his son — John Trussell Esq; He departed this life 20 Decemb. the same year.

Elizabeth, his sister and heir then 10 years old (k), was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford, and brought this estate into that noble Family. — Edward, the 17th Earl, sold the maners of Kennington and Wennington to

William Ayloff Esq; who dyed possessed of both of them, in 1585. [See under Bretons in Horn-Church.] His son — William, afterwards created a Baronet, succeeded him (l): whose son — Sir Benjamin Ayloff Bart. alienated them to Edward Barrett, Lord Newburgh. And from him it hath passed to the present possessor, the Lord Dacre.

The ancient Family of De Plaiz, had 4 fees in this parish of Alnemyele, or Alvedele, and in Wennington, Reynham, and Wedyton, in the reign of K. Edward III. which Robert, and Gilbert le Veyse, the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, and Sir Thomas Charvil, held under them (m). What the Priors of St. John held in this parish, is now called More-hall, and was part of the estate of the late Sir John Cross Bart.

It seems to have been given the Priors afore-said by William de Chishull, John le Emmesie, and Mr. Elias de Anvelers; for in 1285. they sued for a writ ad quod damnum to give them 3 messuages, 2 carucates and a half of land, in Anvelers, and Wenynghon; which were of the fee of the said Priors and Hospital, and holden of the same, in capite (n).

The Lord Newburgh erected an Alms house in this parish on the front of which was fixed this inscription, Donum Dei, 1639. It being grown quite ruinous, was taken down in 1745, and a lesser one built out of the old materials by the Lord Dacre, and the original inscription put again on the front.

In 1639, Thomas Clear gave three pounds yearly for ever to the Poor of this parish, to be distributed in bread.

Alveley, was formerly a Market-Town, as appears from several ancient deeds (o).

The High-Road which runs through this parish, was anciently called Bredle-street (p); and from the latter part of the name very probably was a Road in the Romans time, especially as there could not be a better way than this from the Havering quarter of the County to the Thames.

The Soil in Belhouse Park is dry and clean, being gravel; which yet is not unfertile. In the rest of the Parish the soil is much the same; Except that in the southern part of it 'tis rather poorer: But here they have some Chalk-pits, which afford good manure for the Country adjoining.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of a middle pace and north and south ailes, leaded: The Chancel hath a north Chapel, or Vestry, also leaded. At the west end there is a square Tower of flint and stone, containing 5 Bells. Formerly there stood upon it a lofty Spire, shingled, but it was blown down during the great storm of wind in November 1703.

This Church was at first a Rectory, and a Sine Cure, in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of Lesnes in Kent, till 1327, when the first Vicar was admitted at the presentation of the then Rector. But here was no Vicarage endowed till the year 1330; when, at the petition of the Convent of Lesnes, Stephen de Gravesend, Bishop of London, appropriated the great Tithes to them, and endowed a Vicarage, reserving the Collation to himself and his Successors for ever, in whom it hath continued ever since.

The Rectory and great Tithes remained in the said Abbey till the general suppression: On the 20th of January 1525, K. Henry VIII. made a grant of them to Cardinal Wolsey: upon whose præmunire they coming again to the King, he granted the same, in 1535, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their successors. And Lord Dacre now holds them by Lease under the said Dean and Chapter.

Near the Maner house of Alveley formerly stood a Chapel endowed, called the Chapel de la Lee, of which mention is made in records (q) [K].

This parish is rated to the Land-tax at 977 l.

[K] Whether this Chapel was at a distance from, or adjoining to, the parish Church, we are not certain. But by some passages in a record communicated by Lord Dacre, it seems to have been at some distance; since there is mention in it, of placia vocata la Lee, — pastura de la Lee — la Lee hatch — Et terra Capellani de la Lee. Most probably it was founded by, and took its name from, Adam de Legh, who married Maud, one of the heirs of Gilbert de Tani, Lord of Aveley maner, as above mentioned. See Claus. 13 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 30. dorso. and Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. I. p. 509. Or else from John at Lee, who had married one of the daughters and coheirs of Thomas Belhouse.

2. WENINGTON.

This parish lies west of Alveley, having Rainham on the north, and Ingreburn and the river Thames on the west and south: over against Erith. It seems named from the bending or winding of the River: The Scots use Weend in that sense now. Or, else, the first part of the word may be from the same original as mentioned above under Wansted, p. 28. and under Wendon in the other Volume, p. 591. It is otherwise written in records Wenynghon, Winton, and Wininton (r). The Abbey of Westminster had Wenington before the Conquest; Edward the Confessor, in a confirmation of their lands, mentions four hides in Wuntune; and in Domesday-book it is set down as one of their Maners [L].

It was afterwards parcelled out into three; so that there have been reckoned here, The Maners 1. of Wenington-hall. 2. . . . of Noke. 3. . . . Leventhorp's: holden of the Abbey by the families of Gernet, Gildesburgh, Leventhorp, &c.

WENINGTON-HALL.

The Maner-house stands near the Church on the left hand side of the road from Raynham to Alveley. John de Marisco seems to have been antiently lord of this maner [M]. After him, we find no record relating to Wenington till 19 Edw. III: Then Garnet, an ancient Family of High-Easter, who gave name to a maner there, was possessed of this. [See in the other Volume, p. 456.] Henry Gernet, who died in 1345, held, jointly with Joane his wife, the maner of Wenynghon of the Abbot of Westminster, by the service of 100 s. per ann. (s) [N].—Maud and Margaret were his daughters and co-heirs. This estate seems to have been before in De la Hay, because Thomas De la Hay and Elizabeth his wife, the same year, gave up by fine all their right in the maner of Wenynghon, and lands in Alvythele and Raynham, to Joane, wife of Sir Henry Garnet, and her heirs (t).

Of Maud, wife of Sir Thomas Charnels, daughter of Sir Henry Garnet, this estate was purchased by Sir John Gildesburgh (u). Sir John conveyed it to Sir Richard Waldgrave, and other trustees; and Clement Spice released all his right in the maner of Wenynghon and in one messuage, 250 acres of arable, 30 acr. of pasture, and 13 s. 4 d. rent, in Alvythele, Raynham, and Upminster, to these trustees (w). [Concerning this Spice, see under Stapleford-Tany, and in the other Volume, p. 75. 123.]

William Trussell, at the time of his decease in 1480, held the maner of Wenynghon of the Abbot of Westminster, and not of the King, by what service was unknown. His son and heir—Edward Trussell, then two years old (x), afterwards of Cubblestone in Staffordshire, Knight Banneret, died 10 June 1499. He held the maner and Advowson of this Church of the Abbot of Westminster;—Elizabeth was his daughter and heir (y). Another Inquisition shews, that he had a son John, who dying 20 Decemb. the same year,

Elizabeth his sister, was found to be his heir (z). She was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford [O]. [See above under Alveley, p. 84.] John, the next Earl, at the time of his decease, 3 August 1562, held lands in Wenynghon: and was succeeded by his son—Edward, the 17th Earl of Oxford of this noble family (a), who spending his noble patrimony, sold this estate to Sir William Ayloffe, of Bretons in Horn-Church: mentioned also in the other Volume, p. 539. He held, at the time of his decease 11 August 1627, the maner, messuage, or farm, called Wenington-hall, of the Dean of Westminster; 40 acres of marsh, and rushy ground, of the King in capite, by knight's service, &c. —Sir Benjamin, his son (b), alienated this estate. It belonged afterwards to the Rev.

Thomas Allen, Vicar of Cookham in Berkshire; and to—John Allen, whose daughter, Anne, brought it in marriage to

William Ashby of Breakspears in Harefield, Middlesex, Esq;

We find by the Inquisition, that Sir Edward Trussell held the Advowson as well as the Maner, and though his father might have had the same right, it does not appear from the Registry, that any but the Convent presented.

The Maner of NOKE.

Noke-hall lies in the Marshes Westward from the Church; and was so named probably from its situation at the bend of the River, which makes there a promontory, or what we call a Nook. This must have been taken out of the maner of Wenington, because in Domesday-book there is mentioned but one Maner in this Parish; and in Inquisitions it is said to hold of the Lord of Wenington.

A Family of this name, and undoubtedly so denominated from hence, was in being about the beginning of K. Edward the First's reign, as appears from a Charter of William de Rykham to Waltham-Abbey, giving to that Convent, among other things, the services of Richard de Coleworth and Hugh ate Noke in Boreham. One Thomas at Noke lies buried in this Church just under the pulpit: Weever has preserved his Epitaph, in old French; which hath no date: Many are without, the time of whose death was known by the Obits kept for them. In 1320, Robert at Noke, son of Thomas, granted to his brother Henry at Noke, for the term of his life, 22 acres in the marsh of Wenington and Alvethley (c) [P].

Afterwards this estate belonged to the Family of Warner, of Votes Cray in Kent. John Warner Esq; in 1457, conveyed to William Iffe Esq; all his right in the maner of Noke in Wenington, which his father, William Warner, formerly held (d). This was, three years after, alienated to William Pert of Alvethley.

Henry Andrews, of South-Okendon, yeoman, was the next possessor. His son—Robert Andrews, of London, assigned this Maner to John Barrett of Belhouse Esq; At the time of his decease, 4 October 1526, he held this maner. of Noke, 220 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 40 of pasture, 12 of wood, 100 of marsh, and 40 s. rent in Wenington, Alvethley, and Raynham; of John Earl of Oxford.—Edward his son and heir, five years old (e), succeeded him, and dyed in 1585, at which time he held the maner of Noke of William Ayloff Esq; as of his maner of Wenington, in free socage. From him it came, as Alveley, to his grandson—Edward Barrett, created Lord Newburgh in 1627, and hath descended, as the rest of his estates in Essex, to the present worthy owner.

Thomas-Barrett Lennard, Lord Dacre.

was another subdivision of the Maner of Wenington; and seems to have been the purparty of Margaret, younger daughter of Sir Henry Garnet. Her sister's husband dyed in the reign of K. Richard II. and we may suppose them of not very different age.

The Rental of Hedingham-Castle has this; 'William Trussell held lately half a knight's fee in Wenington, now Leventhorp;' This was in the reign of K. Henry VI. So that this Maner took the name of Leventhorp from him that possessed it after Trussell. A Family of Leventhorp came from Leventhorp-Hall in the West Riding of Yorkshire, and settled at Sabridgeworth in Hertfordshire in 1391 (f): But whether this was a branch of the same is not known.

We have another Entry in the Inquisitions, which perhaps relates to this estate. Sir John Howard, who dyed in 1437, held, in right of Margaret his wife, by the courtesy of England, two fees and half in Raynham and Wenington, formerly Arnulph Vesey's, and a moiety of a fee in Wenington belonging to the same Arnulph (g).

Reginald Byssmere, at the time of his decease 15 August 1506, held the maner of Leventhorp in Wenington, Raynham, and Alvethley, of Elizabeth Trussell, as of her maner of Wenington; and divers lands and hereditaments in Wenington, Reynham, Alveley, and Barwick [2]; called Launders, Waltons, and Peryns, by the service of coming twice a year to the turn of the Hundred of Berdestabill, or paying a fine of 12 d. to the Sheriff.—William his son and heir, was twenty three years old (b) [R].

The name of Leventhorp's is almost forgotten in this parish; being retained only in a moderate Farm-house, or Ale-house, west of the Church. It belongs to Mr. William Bradshaigh of Lancashire.

The Lands of the three Parishes of Wenington, Alveley, and Raynham, have been strangely intermixed, and many of the inhabitants removed to Alveley. Or else Wenington hath been greatly depopulated, as have also been many other Parishes. It appears from Mr. Symonds's Collections in the last century, that here were then about 38 or 40 houses; and now not above 12 or 13. One of them, called Cold-Harbour, stands near the Thames. And Mr. Peter Catman hath an estate in this Parish, besides the persons above mentioned.

In 1405, John Kilet of Wenington granted to John Loughton, and others, those lands and tenements which he lately had of the gift of John Frere, and Gilbert Henger, in Reynham, South and North Wokendon, Upmonstra, and West Thurrock.—And in 1407, Thomas, son of William Kilet, released to John Lane, Richard Forster, and Thomas Aleyn mercers in London, and their heirs, all his right in 3 messuages, 400 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 120 of pasture, 6 l. 5 s. rent, in Wenington, Reynham, Alvethley, South and North Wokingdon, Upmynstree, and West Thurrock; which lately were the said William Kilet's (i).—Through whose hands those lands have since passed, is not mentioned in records.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Peter, is a handsome building, standing high, near the Hall above the marshes. The Church, Chancel, and north aisle are all tiled: A square Tower embattled, contains three Bells. It has been lately very much repaired.

This Rectory was in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of Westminster till the year 1540, when K. Henry VIII. granted it to Thomas Thirleby Bp. of Westminster (k). But, upon the suppression of that short-lived See, Qu. Mary I. granted, 3 March 1554, the Advowson of this Living to Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London, and his successors (l), in whose collation it hath continued ever since. There is no Parsonage-house.

Wenington parish is rated to the land-tax at 918 l.

3. RAINHAM, adjoins north north-west to Wenington: and is bounded on the west by the rivulet Ingreburn. This rivulet receives vessels from the Thames, and has a commodious wharf, which Capt. Harle brought to great perfection.

The name is otherwise written in records Raineham, Rayneham, Reinham, Renaham, Renaham, and Reynham.

It is derived from the two Saxon words Rein, clean, or Ran, a wild goat, and ham, often mentioned before.

In the Saxons time, the lands in this parish belonged to Alfi, a freeman; Aluard; Lesttan and a Priest. At the time of the general Survey, they were held by Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Hugh; by Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Robert; by Walter de Doai; and Haghebern.

From thence arose the several following Maners. 1. The maner of South-hall. 2. . . . that of Berwick. 3. . . . that of Gerberville, or Gerpins. 4. . . . Launderers.

1. The Maner of SOUTH-HALL, is so named from its situation in the Southern part of this parish. The mansion house is seated just above the marshes, on the left hand side of the road leading from Rainham to Wenington.

This is what belonged to Odo [S], upon whose being deprived of all his estates by the Conqueror, it came again to the Crown.

Soon after it was held by Roger de Cramavill [T]. And in 1254, Henry de Cramavill held 20 l. land in Renham of the King by the service of wardship at Dover-castle; He was then amerced for not taking the order of Knight-hood, when he had a knight's fee (m). At the time of his decease, in 1269, he held this maner of Reynham of the King in capite; for which, and three other Maners, he paid 60 s. yearly, to the ward of the said Castle.—Henry was his son (n). This last enfeoffed jointly

Alan Plunkenet was his heir (o).

Then it came into the King's hands; and K. Edward III. in 1329, granted this maner, late Oliver Plonkenet's, to Thomas de Weston; and, the year following, confirmed it to Robert Weston, in fee (p).

Richard de la Bere, who had an interest in this maner, conveyed all his right in the same to Walter de Chesbunt, and his heirs (q). He, and Alice his wife, held it in 1343; and he dyed the year following, leaving —Menander his son and heir (r). In 1346, he conveyed all his right in the premises to Sir John de Stanton, and Alice his wife (s).

In 1390 Thomas De la Bere, of Dorsetshire, released to Thomas Newetune, and Amye his wife, and their heirs, all their right in this maner and advowson of the Chapel (t).

Joane, wife of Roger de Ashbournham, that dyed in 1418, held Southall maner of the feoffees of the maner of Ospreng in Kent.—Robert, son of her daughter Anne, was her heir (u).—John Godestone held it of the same, in 1440. And another—John Goddeston, who dyed 24 Febr. 1498, held the maner of Southall of the King in capite; and six messuages, and 300 acres of arable, in Raynham and Sutball, of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem; Joane, Elizabeth, Alice, Margaret, Millicent, daughters of his Son William, were his heirs. [See under Great Warle.] (w).

Sir John Sharw, at the time of his decease, in 1503, held the same, of the King, and the Prior (x).

A Pardon was granted in 1519, to John Makyn for purchasing this estate of . . . Godstone: And another pardon to — Ellis for purchasing the same with appertenances, and 400 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of pasture, forty of wood, 300 of marsh, and 6 l. rent in Reinham, Wennington; Aveley, &c. Sir John Rainsforth had licence, in 1520, to alienate this maner with appertenances, and 500 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of pasture, 40 of wood, 300 of marsh-land, and 6 l. rent, in Reynham, Wennington Alveley, and Upminster to

Richard Nix Bishop of Norwich: He, like his Predecessor Odo, forfeited it, by falling under a Præmunire in the time of K. Henry VIII. who granted or sold it to

William Bellamy, and he, by licence dated 12 April 1552, conveyed it to trustees. Richard Bellamy, most probably his son, alienated it by licence, in 1576, to Antony Radcliff citizen of London, who held it by knight's service, and paid an annual rent of 26 s. 1 d. ob. for wardship of Dover-Castle, it being then worth 12 l. beyond reprises. He dyed 8 May, 1603, leaving — Edward his son and heir (y).

This maner at length was purchased, and possessed by Elizabeth, widow of Robert Conway, an East-India Captain. She was a daughter of — Wetherley of Cheshire, Barrister at Law, and had by the Captain three sons and three daughters: — Robert Conway, Esq; the eldest son and successor, dyed unmarried; the other Brothers and eldest Sister being dead without issue, the estate came to Catharine, second Sister, who being a lunatic, the guardianship of her was granted to Mary, daughter of Laurence Johnson, by Mary his wife, sister to Catharine.

Afterwards, one moiety of this estate was in Mary Johnson, who sold it to Samuel Heckford, of Clement's-inn, Gent: The other moiety was in Frances Howlandt, niece of Mrs. Conway, who was married to Barrington Taverner, Gent.

is so named, because it was originally a Bepe Pic, [a country-hamlet,] in this parish: And is sometimes called a Parish.

The mansion house is near two miles north-east from the Church, on the left hand side of the road leading to Upminster. It is pleasantly situated; and though but mean now, shews visible remains of a large House.

It was the land of Robert Gernon, at the time of the Survey [U], and came of course to — William de Montfichet, his eldest son; and then to his grandson — Gilbert de Montfichet. The latter gave it to the Knights Templars, as appears by the Confirmation-Charter of K. John (z) [W]. But in that Charter Gilbert is very improperly, and by mistake, surnamed de Ver; For the Vere Family came not to be ingrafted by marriage into the descendents of Gernon, till the reign of K. Henry VI. And this serves indeed to render that Confirmation-Charter very dubious.

After the suppression of the Knights Hospitallers, K. Henry VIII. 21 December, and 20 January 1525, granted this maner, with the Advowson of the Church, to Cardinal Wolsey, for building his Colleges. But, upon his præmunire, they falling again to the Crown, the same King, 8 February 1544, granted the Maner of Berwyke-Rayneham, and the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, lately belonging to the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, with many other lands, and large demesnes [W], to Sir

[W] The Clause relating to this land in K. John's Charter, is this 'Ex dono Gilleberti de Ver villam de Reinham cum pertinentiis suis, quas idem G. dedit eis cum corpore suo.' There is a very great mistake in affixing to this Gilbert the surname of de Ver; none of the de Veres having been named Gilbert. Indeed a Part of the inheritance of Montfichet came to John de Vere, by his marriage with Elizabeth, the heiress of Playz; descended from Philippa one of three coheiresses of the last Richard de Montfichet. However, from the Rental of Heningham-Castle, in the reign of K. Henry VI. it appears, that the Knights Hospitallers then held two knight's fees and half of the Earl of Oxford in Reynham and Alveley. This evidently shews, that Gilbert de Montfichet had been the donor, from whom the Veres inherited. In the Pleas at York, Anno 1298, we find the following Grant of a Maner of Reynham, from Joane de Grey to the Knights Hospitallers, which is puzzling: Convenc'o inter Priorem Sc'i Johis Jer'lm. in Anglia, & Dnā Johanna, uxor' Rob'ti de Grey Militis, quam ip'a concedit p'dco Priori & Fr'ibus, &c. in libam pura & ppetu' Elemosinā manerium de Hampton juxta Kingeston, in Com' Midd' Maneriū de Reynham in Com' Essex, & manerium de Sobynton in Bucks. And the Prior, by fine, at the same time, grants this Maner to Joane wife of Robert Grey for life, with a view of frank-pledge. Placit. 27 Edw. I.

How it came to this Joane, wife of Sir Robert Grey of Rotherfeild, we have not been able to discover. The Grey family had the neighbouring parish of Greys Thurrock, and also some lands in West Thurrock. Upon the whole, this maner of Greys seems to me to have been that which was called Gerpins, in this parish.

[X] Those lands and tenement were, the Park of Berwick; Hickmans tenement; In Cotemanfield, 10 acres; Bollingtons croft, Richers croft: And the following parcels of arable land and pasture; in the Melfield, 15 acr. in Thomasfeild, 8 acr. in Sparks croft, 11 acr. in Brompton Hoke,

Robert Southwell, Master of the Rolls (a). He dyed 26 October 1559, possessed of this maner of Barwicke-Rainham, with appertenances; and the Rectory; Advowson of the Vicarage; and free Chapel, here: one messuage, and 50 acres called Jordens; and the maner of Morehall in Morehall Barwike and Aveley.—Sir Thomas Southwell, his son and heir, had license, 2 Sept. 1591, to alienate this to

Robert Houghton Esq; and others (b). But we find no names of other possessors till

Ralph Freman of Aspeden in Hertfordshire, Esq; who presented to this living in 1644; and dyed 28 July 1665, leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of Sir William Hewyt Kt.—Ralph his eldest son and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Aubrey of Glamorgan-shire (c). The latter gave this estate in his life-time to his eldest son—Ralph Freman Esq; And by him it was alienated to

George Finch Esq; a younger branch of the antient noble Family of the Earls of Winchelsea; who by Constance his wife, daughter of . . . Hornby Esq; had—William Finch Esq; He sold this Maner, and several of the lands mentioned in note [F] to Sir Thomas Cross, of Westminster Bart. mentioned under Alveley: who was succeeded therein by his son, the late—Sir John Cross, Bart.

But some parts of this Maner had been dismembred by Sir Robert Southwell the younger. For John Slaney, merchant, who dyed 7 April 1632, held the messuage called Damyans, mentioned above in note [F], the Rectory and Church and great Tithes of Raynham; with several fields and meadows called Stockfeild-close, Peartree feild, Brooks, Homebre-feild, Birds marsh, &c. and a messuage called Jordens, with South-feild, Midle-feild, Jordans meads &c. His nephew—Richard was his heir (d).

This estate is near Gerpins: It is sometimes called Downe-hall.

The Maner of GERBERVILLE, OF GERPINS, took its name from the ancient family of Jarpenville, mentioned under Goldangre, and Totham. It seems to have been what belonged to Walter de Doai [X].

The mansion house stands about a mile and a half east north-east from this Church, near the road leading to Upminster.

Laurence de Impervill, who dyed in 1297, held in Reynham, of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee, 60 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 5 of pasture; and of the heirs of Robert Walram, 100 acres of arable, by the service of 6s. 8 d. yearly; and of Thomas de Fountaynes, 10 acres of heath, by the service of one penny per ann.—William was his son (e). At the time of his decease, in 1337, he held in this parish, 53 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 4 of pasture, of the Prior of St. John, as aforesaid.—John, was his son and heir (f).

We hear no further of this estate till 1631. Then Daniel Lowen held the maner of Jerpines, alias Garleviles, and dying 30 April, that year, was succeeded by his son—John, aged 28 years (g).

is but little mentioned in records. It seems to have been part of what belonged to Walter de Doai.

John Leventhorp held this estate in 1440.

Reginald Bysmere, mentioned under Leventhorps in Wenington, held Launders in 1506 (b).

Richard Herde, citizen and butcher of London, who dyed 13 December 1568, held this maner, or capital messuage, of Lawnders; a messuage called Aylwards, several closes called the Backside, Homefeild, Welcrosse, Horfelease, Barnmead, Launders pasture; messuages and lands called Laks, Swannoks, Brownes, Flaggs, Cowpers croft; 4 acres in Cotmansfeild and Croked croft; of the maner of South-hall in focage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 36 s.—And Chappell lands, of Edward Barrett Esq; as of his maner of Bretts, by fealty, suit of court, and rent of 6 s.—And 3 acres called Hickmans, of the Queen in capite.—Richard, his grandson, was his heir (i).

Charities.

William Heard, in 1593, gave by will, 30 s. a year, to be distributed on Easter-day, at 2 s. a piece, to 15 of the poorest and honestest Householders of Raynham, and to 5 of Wenington.—John Spicer, by will, in 1598, 6 s. 8 d. yearly to the poor, out of a house called Pikemans in this parish.—John Angoe, by will, in 1608, six pence a week in bread to six of the poorest sort of people, out of his freehold in Perry-street in Crayford in Kent.—Henry Gabbot, by will, in 1610, 5 l. to be put on bond, the interest of which to be distributed to the poor.—John Frith of London, scrivener, by deed 28 Septemb. 1612, five pounds seventeen shillings yearly for ever, out of his estate in Southweald, out of which two shillings to be given weekly to the poor in bread, and the remaining 13 s. for reading prayers, and preaching a sermon here on Ascension-day.—Martin Spicer, in 1614, 40 s. towards making a stock for the poor, now lost.—John Lowns, M. D. by will, 13 March 1677, 2 l. 12 s. 0. to provide six two-penny loaves every Sunday for six of the poorest aged and infirm of this parish.—John Elkin, about 1680, 20 l. to the poor, which was expended, with an additional sum, in building an Alms-house in 1714.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Helen and St. Giles, consists of a body, and two aisles; The Chancel is of one pace.

The Walls of this Church are very thick, and the pillars square and very massy: the upper part of the Church-door, and the arch between Church and Chancel, are indented, or curiously wreathed.

This Church was given, either by K. Henry II. or Richard de Lucy the founder [Z], to the Abbey of Lesnes in Kent. And K. John confirmed also to them the donation of Hugh son of Fulk Peynell, of Renham (k).

Thereupon the great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage endowed, of which the Advowson continued in the Convent till their suppression, when they were granted to Cardinal Wolsey (l); upon whose fall they reverting to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. exchanged them, 29 May 1536, with Sir William Weston, Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, for the maner of Paris-Garden in Southwark, and other lands in Surrey. This of Raynham was appropriated to them by act of Parliament, but their possession lasted but eight years. Then the Rectory and Advowson were granted, with Barwyke, to Sir Robert Southwell, as above mentioned.

From him they passed, as the maner of Berwick, to the families of Freman and Finch: The great Tithes belong now to William Blackburn Esq;

The Vicarage house being utterly decayed, Samuel Keckwich, Vicar, in 1701, purchased a House, garden, and out-houses, for the habitation of his successors: And George Finch Esq; then patron, rebuilt it at his own charge.

In K. Edward III's reign, a Chantry was founded here by Sir John Staunton, for the good estate of Isabell, the King's mother, for Sir John Staunton and Alice his wife, &c. It was built in the Church-yard, and had a Chapel there dedicated to All-Saints. In 1391, K. Richard II. gave licence to John Shipman and Willam Lucas, to endow it with 22 acres of arable land, in Reynham and Avele: But the revenue sinking to 33 s. 4 d. per ann. no Chaplain thought it for a long time worth their acceptance. So Richard Fitz-James Bishop of London, with consent of the Patron, Bishop Nix, Lord of Southall maner, 12 October 1521, dissolved the Chantry, converting it into a Free Chapel, to be enjoyed by a Lay-man unmarried, who was to be absolved from the the obligations of a Chantry-Priest. This Lay-man was enjoined daily to say the Psalm, for the soul of the Founder, &c. and once a quarter to procure a Priest to celebrate the Exequies, and Mass for the dead; the possessor to be present, and to offer one penny at each mass, to be distributed by the Priest; and to keep the Chapel in repair. In the Book of Chantries the value, after it came to a Lay-man, was set down at 6 l. 10 s. and the possessor then was one Nicolas Lental, a temporal man. Sir Edward Southwell had a Grant of all belonging to this Free Chapel, and dyed possessed of it, except one parcel thereof, with a certain croft called Capell-Land, and appertinances, worth 35 s. a year (m). This, I presume, did belong to the Chapel, however it came to be excepted from his grant. The book of Alienations mentions lands, meadows, feedings, and pastures lying within Berwick-Park, and other lands called Jordans lands, and Brome croft &c. as part of the endowment of this Chantry.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1870 l. 1 s. 0 d.

Here are three adjoining Parishes, along the side of the river Thames, called in Domesday-book by the general name of Turoch, and distinguished from each other by the addition of West, Greys, and Little. The two first are within this Hundred, and the latter in the Hundred of Barstaple.

The name seems to be formed, either from the German and Saxon Deity Don, and ac, or aak; here being probably a Grove of Oaks consecrated to him (n): Or else from the Saxon word Duppuc, a short or light boat: a Currough, as it was called by the Irish; made of wicker, covered over with leather (o).

It is otherwise written in records, Thorrock, Torrocke, Thurrok, Thurruca, Turoc, Turruc, and sometimes styled Thurrock Breanfon, and Torells, from its ancientest owners.

4. WEST-THURROCK

is so named with respect to its situation, West of the two others.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the owners of the lands in this parish were, Aluuard, a freeman; Mannic, another freeman; eleven other freemen; and Ulquin. At the time of the Survey, they were held by Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenants Hugh and Anschetill; and by Tedric Pointel [A].

Here is now but one MANER.

The maner-house has been called West-Hall, and Le Vyneyard, because it had formerly a Vineyard, now Hib-House, for its beautiful situation on the side of a Hill, commanding a delightful prospect over the marshes and the river Thames.

After Odo, who was deprived of his estates for his secret practises against his brother W. the Conqueror, the next owner we find here, is — Brianzon, who had it probably of the gift of the Crown. — Robert de Brianzon held one fee in Tirroke in the reigns of K. Henry II. and K. John (p). This Robert seems to have been the father of — Bartholomew, who possessed

Alveley in the time of K. Edw. I. because Bartholomew had a son — William, who, at the time of his decease in 1310, held both Alveley and Thurroek [B]. His brother and heir — John de Brianzon dying in 1315, was succeeded by his son — Sir John de Brianzon (q), who held this maner, and also Michelesond. And departing this life in 1337, left — Joanna his daughter and heir (r). She survived him but two years; and had only two parts of this maner, with the Advowson of the Church, the reversion being in —

Sir William de Wanton (s). He held this maner of the Earl of Richmond, by the service of one knight's fee, at the time of his decease, in 1347, with several other estates in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 344, 348, 349, 440, 448, 478, 558.] — William was his son and heir (t). This Sir William seems to have had it in mortgage or on a lease for years, because in the Inquisition upon the death of Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Torell, in 1375, she is said to hold the maner of West-Thurrock, which was formerly Sir William de Wanton's (u). And an Inquisition on Little-Thurrock mentions Wantons having been possessed of West-Thurrock.

It seems afterwards to have been in the Bobun Family, because Thomas Duke of Gloucester who married Alianor one of the daughters and co-heirs of Humfrey de Bobun Earl of Hereford and Essex, at the time of his tragical death in 1397, held, jointly with his wife, among other estates, the maner of West-Thurrock (w).

In 1404, John Lightfoot and others were tenants of this maner, of whom Richard Torell held two parts (x).

Next we find it in the Wydevile, or Woodville, family; K. Henry VI. having granted it to Richard Widvile, 29 May 1448, upon creating him Lord Rivers [C]. His eldest son and heir — Antony Wydevill, at the time of his decease in 1483, held a maner in West-Thurrock, called West-Hall, of the King as of his Hundred of Chafford, by fealty, and rent of 4 s. per ann. worth 20 l. a year; — Richard Earl Rivers was his brother and heir, 34 years old (y). He dying without issue in 1491, it descended to the son of his eldest sister Elizabeth, married first to

Sir John Grey, and afterwards to K. Edward IV. namely to

Sir Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset son of the said Elizabeth. He dyed possessed of it 30 August 1509 (z). His son — Sir Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset, levied a fine, and passed it to John Spencer, in 1517 (a). Sir John Spencer dyed in April 1522, or 1523, holding of the King, by suit at the Hundred of Chafford twice a year, and payment each time of 13 d. ob. qa. and at Michaelmas yearly 6 s. 8 d. 16 cottages, 300 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, 100 of marsh, and 10 s. rent, with appertenances, in West-Thurrock. — William Spencer was his son and heir, aged 24 years (b).

Before we proceed any further, I shall observe, that under the capital Lords of this Maner hitherto mentioned, part of it, or the whole, was held by the Torell family, [mentioned in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. &c.] from the reign of K. Henry III. to that of Henry VIII.

William Torell, who dyed in 1266, held in West-Thurrock, 160 acres of arable, and pasture for 240 sheep, a meadow, pasture for 20 cows, a wind-mill, and 10 s. rent; and also lands in Little Thurrock (c). — William Torell held, in this parish, of Sir Bartholomew de Brienon, 44 s. rent of assise, and a capital messuage, a wind-mill, 180 acres of arable, 20 of meadow and marsh, by the payment of 27 s. 8 d. to the said Bartholomew. — John, his son (d), held here, of the same Bartholomew, 1 messuage, 100 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, pasture for 20 cows and a bull, 22 s. rent, a wind-mill, by payment of 2 marks, and suit of court: and dying in 1282, left — John, his son and heir (e). — William Torell, at the time of his decease in 1290, held here a capital messuage, 120 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 120 of pasture, &c. of Sir Bartholomew de Brianzon. His grandson — John succeeded him (f): He held in Westthorok, of the heir of John de Breunson, the same, except the pasture; and departed this life in 1329. — John was his son (g). — Thomas Torell succeeded him: Elizabeth, his widow, held here of the Duke of Gloucester, in 1375, one messuage, 124 acres of arable, 52 of pasture and marsh, 6 of meadow &c. — Richard Torell, her son, who dyed in 1404, held two parts of this maner (b); — Thomas was next. — Henry Torell, at the time of his decease in 1480, held of Antony Earl Rivers, as of his maner of West-hall, this maner of West-Thurrock, alias Torells Thurrock, the first time we find it so called; leaving — Humfrey his son one year old (i). — Thomas Torell Esq; who dyed 7 February 1516, held this maner of Westthurrock, alias Torrells in Westthurrock, of Thomas Marquis of Dorset, as of his maner of West-hall, by fealty. — Henry, his son, held the same, at the time of his decease 7 January 1525, of William Spencer Esq; as did — Humfrey his son, who departed this life, 12 September 1544 (k).

Anne, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to Henry Jocelyn Esq; fourth son of Sir Thomas Jocelyn of Hyde-Hall [D]: He had by her Thomas afterwards knighted, and several other sons; and Winifred, married to Richard Scott Esq; [See in the other volume, p. 478.] But this estate doth not appear to have continued in the Jocelyn Family.

The Torell family, had, besides this maner, also those of Little Thurrock, Torells-hall in Willingale Dou, and Shellow, and the maner of Gernons in Keldon-Hatch (l).

To return to the capital Lords of this Maner.

Sir William Hollis had the maner of West-hall, alias West-Thurrock, after William Spencer Esq; by what conveyance does not appear; but, at the time of his decease 20 October 1543, he held it of the King in capite, by the service of being the King's Naparius on his Coronation-day; suit, twice a year at the Hundred of Chafford, and the same payments as Sir John Spencer. He had also 22 acres called Ordwyns, and 27 acres called Quernys. — Sir Thomas Hollis, his son and heir (m), joining with others in a Fine, in 1547, passed it to

Robert Taverner, and within four years after it was in Robert Long, citizen and mercer of London, whether by marriage of a female heir, or otherwise, is not said; but he dyed possessed of it 12 January 1551. And his widow Cecily enjoyed it after him till her death 13 October 1559 [E].

[D] This Sir Thomas Jocelyn is styled in his will of High-Rothing, meaning New-Hall there; for the maner of Rothing was purchased by his son Sir Thomas. There are some particulars of this Will, that express so well the plainness and integrity of that age, and customs of it, now obsolete, that they are worth reciting. — “He appoints his burial in St. Mary’s Chapel in Hatfield Priory, near his first wife. If his son die without heirs lawfully begotten and his heirs die without issue, he appoints his lands and estates to be sold, which are mentioned to be in Hertfordshire, Essex, Staffordshire, and Gloucestershire, and disposed of for reparation of poor Churches and Highways, and singing of Priests for his soul. If any man or woman can shew, within three years after his death, any wrongs done by him, his executors shall agree with them, as law and conscience shall require, in discharge of his Soul. His executors to pay for his tythes and offerings negligently withdrawn and forgotten 20 s. and to the Priory of Tremhale, for reparations and their prayers 6 l. 6 s. 8 d. His daughter Anne to have 300 marks in three years after her marriage, if she be ruled in her marriage by the discretion of Philippe his wife. If she die before her marriage in that case 100 marks to be employed in marriage of his poor kinswomen being maids, or other poor maidens.”

[E] At the time of her decease, she held, the maner, or lordship of West-Thurrock, West-hall, or Le Vynyrd; also 9 messuages, or tenements, and 317 acres of arable, 319 acres of pasture, 87 of wood, and 307 acres and a half of marsh, in West-Thurrock, Orset, Stifford, Greys, Alvithley, and Duddinghurst; one of which messuages was called Walter Monks; another Daniells; and another Quernes lands. Inquis. 2 Eliz. n. 37.

Mary

Mary wife of Henry Vyner; Martha, of William Meredith, Magdalen, of Roger Sadler, were their daughters and co-heirs (n).

Meredith, and his wife, by licence, dated 20 April 1583, alienated their part to Richard Smyth and others.

Magdalen Sadler dying 17 March 1574, left her son—John Sadler Gent. (o) who by licence dated 7 May 1583, sold his mother's moiety to Thomas Owen Esq; and Stephen Duckett Esq;

The estate was next in Christopher Holford Esq; descended from the Holfords of Holford in Somersetshire. John Holford married Joane, daughter of Roger Bryne of Stapleford in 1345.—Sir George Holford of Holford, by Isabell, daughter of Robert Lee of Addington, had—Sir John Holford, who, by Margery his wife daughter of Sir Ralph Brereton of Malpas left 3 sons, Thomas, John, and Christopher. The latter married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Daniell, sister of Sir William Daniell, by whom he had—Christopher, seated at West-Thurrock. He died 4 January 1607 (p). His children by Mary his wife, daughter of Henry Vinour of Cundon in Shropshire, were Christopher, Daniel, Henry, Robert, and Martha.—Christopher dying without issue,—Daniel, the second son succeeded to this estate; and died 23 February 1629-30. On the 24th of January 1612, he married Martha, daughter and heir of Valentine Pell of Lynn in Norfolk; by whom he had two daughters and coheirs,—Martha and Mary.

Martha was married to Sir Henry Heyman of Somersfeld in Kent, created a Baronet 12 August 1641. They jointly presented to this living in 1643 (q).

Mary became the wife of Sir Cranmer Harris. [See under Cricksea.] He held Purfleet in right of Mary Holford his wife.

This estate was afterwards in Benjamin Desbrow, or Desbrough, Esq; seventh son of Major-General Desbrow: His descendents are seen at Downham in this county. He sold it to Caleb Grantham Esq; son of George Grantham of Yorkshire; who by his first wife had Caleb, Joshua, and Lydia. By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Vesey of Kent, widow of—Seymour, he had Nathanael.—Caleb Grantham Esq; by will gave this estate to his brother—Nathanael, who married three wives. 1. Mary daughter of David Lambert, Gent. 2. Elizabeth, daughter of John Bromwell Esq; 3. Mary, daughter of Jacob Croome. By this last he had no issue. But by the first had Caleb, and Mary; and by the second Nathanael, and Elizabeth.—Caleb Grantham, the eldest son, was a Captain in the East-India Company's service. He married Mary, daughter of James Somner Esq; and had by her a daughter and heir, married to another Maner in this parish, is called, in an old Deed of 19 Edw. III. in the Lord Dacre's possession, Pourteflete; which shews from whence the name is derived, namely from the two Saxon words, Popt, a haven, and pleot, an arm of the Sea, a bay; here being a little harbour, where the rivulet that passes by Stifford falls into the Thames [G].

It anciently belonged to the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, of whom it was holden in the beginning of K. Henry the Eighth's reign. Afterwards it was in Qu. Elizabeth.—Sir George Hart held it of her in 1583. And Sir Cranmer Harris enjoyed it in right of his wife, as hath been just mentioned before.

About the beginning of the present century, this maner was in

Sir Biby Lake, created a Baronet 17 October 1711 (r). The joint owners of it, a few years ago, were,

Sir Atwell Lake, Bart. son of Sir Biby, Sir Caesar Child, Bart. Robert Hudson Esq; and Philip Hubert Esq; in right of his wife daughter of Sir Jonathan Andrews. A division of it was ordered by the Court of Chancery, which was to be made in Trinity Vacation, 1749.

At Purfleet lately stood very large Corn-Mills, the property of one Mr. Fawcet; which were an annoyance to the Country, by letting in the Tide from the river Thames into that water-course which runs from Bulvan through Stifford, and is the southern bundary of Alveley-parish. But that nuisance is now prevented by a strong sluice, which entirely keeps out the Tide.—For the Government having bought those Mills, the Board of Ordinance have erected here a fine and well contrived Magazine, strongly arched, and every way well secured against Fire, Lightning &c. to receive the large Store of Powder that stood near Greenwich. They have also made a quay by the water-side for landing the powder; and built a handsom House on the hill above for the Store-keeper; and Barracks for about 100 matrosses, to guard the Magazine.

Near Purfleet among the Hills are very great Chalk-pits, and Lime-works, which bring considerable profit to the Bricklayers Company, that took a lease of them from Caleb Grantham Esq;

Here formerly was a Ferry over the Thames into Kent.

That River made a Breach and Inundation at West-Thurrock in the year 1680; at which time subterraneous Trees were washed out, in as great numbers, and of the same kind of Wood, as

Mr. John Sech; Robert Cornwell; and Thomas Hunt, have also some Lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, didicated to St. Clement, consists of a body and two aisles; as doth also the Chancel.

It was the endowment of one of the Seven Prebends, founded in the Collegiate Church within the Castle of Hastings in Suffex. The Prebendary was Rector, and had the great Tithes of this Parish appropriated to him: and presented to the Vicarage.

Upon the dissolution of Religious Houses, K. Henry VIII. granted this Prebend of West-Thurrock, with all the Marsh and Upland, and Tithes of Corn and grain thereto belonging; 1 January 1546, to Sir Antony Browne, and Elizabeth his wife (t).

His son Antony Brown Viscount Montacute, by license, 2 January 1567, sold it to Henry Fosceline and Anne his wife; They, in 1572, sold it again to Mary, widow of Geffrey Gate

Gent.—Geffrey Gate, and Elizabeth his wife, by license dated 9 April 1575, alienated it to —Humfrey Hayes, who presented twice to the Vicarage (u): He had a son Humfrey his heir, whose daughter Catharine brought it in marriage to her husband—Thomas Reading. He dyed 21 February 1592, possessed of this Prebend and Rectory, with 2 tofts, 1 dove-house, 2 gardens, 30 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 30 of pasture, 10 of wood, 40 of marsh, 40 of salt-marsh, 5 l. 3 s. 4 d. rent; and the Tithes of corn, grain, and hay; and the advowson of the Vicarage.—Richard Reading was his brother and heir (w); after whom—George Reading and Rose his wife had it, and Rose, together with Thomas Hayes Clerk, I presume her second Husband, sold it to Daniel Holford Esq; from whom it passed to the subsequent owners of the capital Maner in this parish as above-mentioned, namely Grantham, &c.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 748 l. 2 s. 8 d.

5. GREYSTHURROCK, took that name from the noble and ancient Family of Grey, to which it belonged for many years: Sometimes it is called Great-Thurrock.

It is the south-east corner of this Hundred, adjoining to that of Barstable. Part of the parish is a small Town, upon a creek from the Thames, fit to receive hoys and vessels of small burden.

This Town is 17 miles from London.

Richard de Grey obtained by Charter of K. Henry III. a Market weekly here on Fridays, now altered to Thursday; and a Fair yearly on June 28 and 29, now on May 23. This Grant was confirmed by K. Edw. III. in 1330 [H].

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the lands in this Parish belonged to Herold, and Almar: At the time of the Survey, they were held by the Earl of Ou; and William Piperell. Seven houses in London were annexed to the Earl's Maner: Five sochmen; Gislebert, tenant of the Bishop of Bayeux; and Anschetill, tenant of the Bishop of London, had then some lands here [I].

The Mansion-house of the CAPITAL MANER in this parish, once the Earl of Ou's, or Eu's, stands, on the right hand side of the road, leading from this Town to Stifford.

This

This Maner becoming vested in the Crown, by what means we do not learn; K. Richard I. in 1194, granted it to Henry de Grey. Which grant was confirmed by K. John, with the special privilege of hunting the hare and fox in any lands belonging to the Crown, excepting the Parks of the King's own demesne (x). This Henry married Ifolda, niece and co-heir of Robert Bardolf; and was progenitor of the noble Families of the Greys of Codnovre, Wilton, Ruthin, and Rotherfield (y).—Richard de Grey, his eldest son, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1238. Joining the discontented Barons against K. Henry III, he was taken prisoner at Kenelworth; and his lands were seized, but restored afterwards (z). His son—John de Grey, at the time of his decease, in 1271, held the maner of Thurrock of the Earl de Ferrers by the service of half a knights fee.—Henry his son, then aged 14 years (a), held it also, at the time of his decease, leaving—Richard his eldest son and successor (b). He held this maner of Thurrocks-Grey, [the first time we find it so called,] of Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, by the service of one knight's fee; charged with the payment of 6s. to the church of this parish, and 2s. 10d. to the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem; and dying in 1335, was succeeded by his eldest son—John, 30 years old (c). He mortgaged this estate to Stephen Gravesend, bishop of London (d). The time of his death we cannot find.

Joane Cobham, Lady de Grey, was possessed of this maner in 1392 (e).

Henry de Grey, of Codenoure, who dyed in 1443, held this maner of Thurrok Grey of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem. This shews, either that Piperell's maner, then in the hands of the said Prior, was paramount here: Or else, by the Maner of Thurrok are only meant some other lands, improperly called here a Maner. For Henry de Grey was also seized of divers lands and tenements within the maner of Thurrok, called Clays. He married Elizabeth, daughter and one of the coheirs of Ralph Lord Basset of Sapcote (f); by whom he had—Henry.

Catharine Grey, widow of Sir William Berkeley, that dyed 25 Novemb. 1521, held the maner of Thurrock Grey, and divers lands there, of the King in capite, as of his Honor of Mandeville, parcel of his Duchy of Lancaster; Sir John Stourton Lord Stourton, sixty years old, was her cousin and next heir (g) [K]. Sir John Zouch was lord of this maner in 1564 (b).

It belonged next to Thomas Kighley Esq; descended from the Kighleys of Littleton in Worcestershire. He dyed possessed of it 21 April 1617 (i). By Margaret Littleton his wife, daughter of . . . Luce, he had—Thomas, his son and heir, born in 1582. He married Bridget, daughter of Edward Waldgrave of Lawford, Esq;—Edward his son and heir; by his first wife, Jane, daughter of Sir William Ayloffs Kt. and Bart. had—Thomas, born in 1628; Bridget, Frances, Margaret, and Elizabeth. By his second wife, Isabella daughter of James Harvey of Dagenham, he had John.

Of this last Thomas, William Palmer Esq; purchased this estate. He married Anne, third daughter of Sir Robert Smith of Upton Kt. and Bart. by whom he had—William, his son and heir; who dying in May 1710 without issue, gave this Maner and lands to Joshua Palmer Esq; son of Dr. Palmer of Devonshire, for the sake of the name, being no relation. It came after him to his son—Ashley Palmer, of Eaton Soken, in Bedfordshire Esq; the other in this parish, set down in Domesday-book; came by the marriage of Margaret, daughter and heir of William Peverell to the Ferrers Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 413.]

William Ferrers, Earl of Derby, is supposed to have given it to the Knights Hospitallers: For, of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem Henry de Grey held, in 1443, the maner of Thurrok Grey, as hath been observed a little above; which shews that they had a Maner here. Whatever it was, 'tis now involved with the Rectory, or Parsonage; the Mansion house of which stands in the fields, on the right hand side of the road leading from this Town to West-Thurrock. It now belongs to John Van-Hattem of Buckinghamshire Esq;

William Palmer Esq; founded a Free School here, near the Church, and settled 40^l. a year on a Master, to teach ten poor Children of this parish, to read, write, and cast accounts, and to instruct them in the Latin tongue. The School-master is chosen by the owner of the mansion house [L].

He also gave to the Poor five chaudrons of coals, and clothing for four children, to be distributed November 5, yearly: and twenty shillings in bread, the first Sunday in the year. Moreover, he ordered 20s. for a sermon on the 5th of November.—20s. yearly for the repairing of the wharf, and highway leading thereto: a causey to be raised behind the store-house: 40s. per ann. to treat the parish officers, when they meet to settle accounts. Twelve Trustees were appointed to look after the benefactions; when reduced to three, to choose new ones.

These Trustees are to deduct their charges; and the residue to go for repairs.

The estates given by him for these uses, were, a house in Lombard-street, then of 45 l. a year; another in occupation of Capt. Stiles, of 27 l. five messuages in White-cross street of 24 l. one in Cripplegate parish of 4 l. another of 3 l. 4s. Tot. 103 l. per ann.

Mr. Kighley gave to the Church 10 l. 6s. 8 d. yearly.

A gift of 40 sheep, lost, afterwards recovered, and improved to 20 l. for the use of procession in Rogation-week; viz. for a kilderkin of beer, a lead of cheese, and 6 dozen of bread.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is built in form of a cross: The Tower stands on the north side of the Church, and contains 2 Bells. There was formerly on the top of it a Spire, now taken down.

This Church came from Peverell to the Ferrers family, with the other estate in this Parish. Some time after the year 1200, William, Earl de Ferrars, with the consent of his heirs, granted the Church of Turrok, with all its appertinances, and whatever right he had in the same, to God, St. John the Baptist, and the Poor of the Hospital of Jerusalem; in pure and perpetual alms, for the health of his soul, his wife's and his ancestors and heirs (k). The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to them, and a Vicarage endowed, of which they continued patrons till their suppression.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted this Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, to William Riggs, and Leonard Browne. [See under Folyat's-hall in High Onger.] The same year, they alienated them to William Goodwyn; who had license, 17 May 1561, to sell them to John Osborne, and Andrew Osborne (l). And John Osborne, by license dated 30 April 1569, alienated them again to Thomas Farnell, and Thomas Ruffel (m). Tho: Farnell, in 1577, passed his moiety to Simon Farnell; whose heir John Farnell presented to the living in 1578, as did John Ruffel in 1580. Through whose hands it passed since, may be seen in Mr. Newcourt's Repertorium (n). William Kenwrick Esq; was patron in 1692, and 1693. He sold this estate to Sir Thomas Davall Kt. who dying in November 1712, was succeeded by his son Sir Thomas: upon whose decease in June 1718, it came to his widow, Lydia-Catharine, daughter of Van-hattem, Esq; re-married to Henry Brydges, Duke of Chandos: she dyed 18 Novemb. 1750. John Van-hattem Esq; is the present owner.

* This parish is rated to the land-tax at 662 l.

lies north of the two last-described Thurrocks; and is watered by the Stream that goes to Purfleet: There is a tradition that this little River was formerly navigable as far as Bulvan fenn. From a Ford through it was this Parish named. Sometimes it has the addition of Stifford-Clay, which made some fancy, that the Stiffness of the soil at the ford occasioned the first part of the name. In records it is otherwise called Estinfort; and there is such a Saxon name as East-inne, eastern coast; but how applicable to this place, we submit to the reader's judgment.

The lands in this parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Aluric; Aluvin; and Berking Nunnery; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo, bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenants Hugh, and the son of Turolde: William Piperell, lord of Greys-Thurrock, had also some lands here; and William de Warenn 30 acres by way of exchange [M].

We hear no more, after this, of land here, belonging to Berking, or holden of that Nunnery. And as to William de Warenn's, the term of exchange is a comprehensive word, and frequently signifies, in Domesday-book, as much as seisin without livery. So the whole Parish came soon into new hands, but nothing shews the next possessors after the Bishop and Warenn. Odo was deprived of all his possessions in England by his half-brother William the Conqueror, as is observed elsewhere.

This parish was divided afterwards into 1. The maner of Stifford; and 2. . . . into that of Flete-hall.

1. The Maner of STIFFORD.

Stifford Hall stands a little way east of the Church: and Ford-house about half a mile north-west of the same, on the north side of the Brook.

The earliest possessors of it upon record, after those already mentioned, were the Crammavill family, of the neighbouring parish of Rainham. In 1199, a fine passed between John Becket, nephew of Thomas Archbishop of that surname, and William de Crammavill for one hide and a half of land with appertenances in Stifford and Thurrock (o).

John de Hamme, who dyed in 1319, held one messuage, sixty acres of arable, and 13 s. rent in Styford, of the Bishop of London, by the service of 4 d. per an. — Robert de Hamme was his son and heir (p). The Bishop had nothing at Stifford: but this probably was an appendage to his adjoining Maners of Orset, or Little Thurrock. Or else, the Abbey of Westminster, being lords at Wenington, might have lands extending into this parish, and the Bishop seems named here as a protector of the Abbey Lands. There is some countenance for this from records, where a man is said to hold of the Archbishop; and another, in the next reign, of Christ-Church. David de Tillebury, who dyed in 1330, held in Stifford one messuage, 60 acres of arable, and 20 s. rent, of the Archbishop of Canterbury, by the service of the fourth part of a knight's fee (q). — Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Torrell, at the time of her decease in 1394, held thirty acres of arable in Stifford of the Prior and Convent of Christ-Church in Canterbury, by the service of doing suit at their view of frank pledge at Stifford-Hethe once a year; — Richard Torrell was her son (r). From this account one would imagine Archbishop Becket had placed money in his nephew's hands, to purchase lands to be given to the Convent of Canterbury.

There is good reason to believe, that the maner of Stifford came into a family surnamed de Tilbury, or Tylleberg, about the time of K. Edward II. which we find at West-Tilbury as early as the reign of K. Henry II. We find them again granting away West-Tilbury to Richard Abell, in K. Edward the Second's reign. And we have seen here David de Tilbury holding lands in Stifford of the Archbishop; He probably was son or heir of him that parted with West-Tilbury. This David de Tillebury lies buried here, with a French epitaph, without date. It is farther probable, that this David's son, dropping the Name of de Tilbury, assumed that of de Stifford; for Sabina, a widow, buried here, without a date, calls herself the wife of David de Stifford.

was returned for a Gentleman of Essex, in 1433 (s) [N]. John Ardale, as appears from his epitaph, was Lord of Stifford, and dyed 31 May 1504.

Thomasine, daughter and heir of John Ardall, Gent. was married to Robert Latham, second son of Hugh Latham of North-Ockington Esq; and brought him this estate. She had for her second husband Richard Badby; Gent. and dyed 30 June 1532 (t). Ralph Latham Esq; their eldest son, was of Upminster. — Thomas Latham Esq; the second son, held the maner of Stifford of Sir John Zouche, as of his maner of Greyes Thurrocke, by fealty, and yearly rent of 8 s. 3 d. per ann. then of the yearly value of 20 marks. He dyed 27 Septemb. 1563, leaving — Ralph, his son, aged 32 years (u). — William Latham Esq; the next possessor, dyed 26 August 1622. He married Susan, daughter of Simon Sampson, of Carsey in Suffolk Esq; and had by her — Thomas, who took to wife Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Bernard, citizen of London. She dyed 14 Septemb. 1630, in the 37th. year of her age (w). — Thomas, their son, married Barbara, daughter of . . . Wakefeild, of London, vintner, and had by her — Thomas, who married Mary Crossley of Alveley.

Richard May had this estate afterwards. And then James Silverlock Esq; who sold it to Nathanael Grantham Esq; cousin of the Granthams of West Thurrock. He dyed 24 April 1708, and is buried in this Church. — Kenwick Grantham Esq; was his son.

Isaac Thorley, Gent. was the next possessor. Of him it was purchased by Andrew Goodwin; whose son — Henry Goodwin, of Marshalls near Romford, alienated it, about 1738, to Henry Barrett, of Southwark, for 5400 l. The latter gave it to his daughter, wife of Richard Cooke, of Foster-lane London. But, under a mortgage of Kenwick Grantham's, it came to John Archer Skiff Esq; the present possessor.

He hath sold Ford-House, or Place, to Captain Dodsworth.

2. The Maner of FLETHALL, otherwise CLAYS.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north-east from the Church, on the east side of the Brook.

Till K. Henry VII's time we hear not of the name, of Flet-hall, nor is it to be distinguished whose lands these were at the time of the general Survey. It is most probable they were in the Family of Bruyn of South-Okendon; for, in 1462, Maurice Bruyn Kt. and Elizabeth his wife, granted to Sir John Clay, and John Crow- land, and others, the maners of South-Okendon and Stifford, which they lately received from Philippa late Duchess of York (x). This seems to have been done for the sake of a settlement.

—Sir Henry Bruyn, son of Sir Maurice, married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon, Esq; She dyed in 1471, leaving two daughters, Elizabeth, and Alice, coheirs (y).

Elizabeth was thrice married, 1. to William Malory, Esq; 2. to Thomas Tyrell, second son of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, 3. to Sir William Brandon, standard-bearer to K. Henry VII. at Bosworth-field.

Alice had three husbands, Robert Harleston, Esq, Sir John Heningham; and William Berners Esq; The estate in Stifford fell to her share. In her right, Sir John Heningham, who dyed 10 May 1499, held the maner of Flet-Hall, and a mill with appertenances in Stifford, of the King, as of his Honor of Hagenet, by the service of the 20th. part of a knight's fee. He had also two parts of the Advowson of this Church; the maners of South-Okendon, Goldhanger, Little Totham, and Breghall.—Thomas, his son and heir, was fifty years old (z).—

Sir John Heveningham, who dyed 4 August 1536, doth not appear to have had Flet-hall, though the other estates belonged to him. But his son —Sir Antony Heveningham, at the time of his decease, 22 Novemb. 1557, held Flete-hall of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayleigh.—Henry, his son and heir, was then 20 years old (a).

Antony Bradshawe, who was buried in this Church in 1636, Judith his wife in 1641, and William their son in 1649, were of Stifford-Clays (b); but whether owners, or tenants, is not said.

By the presentations to this Living, it is probable, that this estate belonged some time to the families of Harleston, Durning, Twisden, and Wyld (c): As it did not long ago to . . . Goodwin, and afterwards to . . . Smith.

A maner here called Tendering, and lands and tenements holden of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, belonged to Joane Bradbury, who dyed 11 May 1530. Her heir was her grandson John Bodeley (d). [Concerning her, see in the other Volume, p. 124. 480.] Who had these lands afterwards we do not find, nor into what others they are incorporated.

At the east end of this Village, Jasper Kinsman Esq; hath a very handfom House, and Gardens. See under South Okendon.

The Clock-house, anciently named Loveland, now an Ale-house here known by the sign of the Dog and Partridge, belonged to Sir Thomas Gourney, Kt. Sheriff of this County in 1622, who had the Advowson of this Church; and several parcels of land [O]. He dyed 3 April 1631 (e). His father Richard Gourney, Alderman of London, dyed 5 March 1596 (f). Over the porch of the house are these Letters, and date T. G. H. 1607.

John Dunning Esq; gave by will 20s. to this Parish, which was charged by deed upon the late Mr. Latham's estate.

Here is also an Alms-house for two dwellers.

In Stifford-street a Pottery was set up by Kenwick Grantham Esq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands pleasantly. Besides the body, it hath a south aisle, and the Chancel a south Chapel, all tyled. The Tower is topped with a spire, shingled, and contains 3 Bells.

This Rectory was for a long time in the gift of the Bruyn family of South-Okendon, who had also a Maner here, as we have shewn. But it seems to have been also alternately in the Torell family of West Thurrock (g), it being held originally of the maner of Greys Thurrock.

Sir Ingelram Bruyn, who dyed in 1399, or 1400, held two acres of land in Stifford and the advowson of two parts of the Church of Stifford, of the Lord Grey (h). Elizabeth, widow of Sir Maurice Bruyn, at the time of her decease in 1471, held those two acres of land, and the advowson of two parts of this Church belonging to the said two acres, of the Lord Grey (i).

From her they descended to her younger daughter Alice's heirs, as above mentioned; namely to Sir John Heningham who dyed in 1498; Sir Clement Harleston in 1550; John Harleston Esq; in 1568; Thomas Harleston in 1572; and Robert Harleston in 1573 (k) [P]. It was afterwards in Sir Thomas Gourney; Henry Josselyn Esq; heir of the Torells; in John Durning Esq; and others.

Edmund Noble, of London, vintner, having purchased it in the last century, sold it in 1706 to Kenrick Grantham Esq; Wattlands; and other messuages and parcels: and of the maner of West-Thurrock he held Morrisland, the Brach, Torrells mead, Davy-down-wood, &c. all in this parish. Inquis. 7. Caro.

[P] Thomas Harleston Esq; brother of Robert, besides this Advowson, had a tenement here called Copthall, and 3 acres of land. Inquis. 15 Eliza.

North of Stifford and Alveley are two contiguous Parishes of this name; distinguished from each other by the addition of South and North, in reference to their situation. Okingdon, Wokendon, Wokindon, Wokyndon, Wochaduna; and Lackington, are the other different ways they are styled in records: And, whether from the Saxon Ac ing dun; i. e. Oak pasture hill; or from Wocen, or Woca; a proper name, they were so called; I am not able to determine.

7. SOUTH-OKENDON

is denominated Rokele, from its ancient owners as will appear in the sequel; and ad Turrim, from the Church having a Tower-Steeple, as Little Easton and Burnsted were.

This parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Frebert a Thegn; and, at the time of the Survey, was part of the large possessions of Geoffrey de Magnaville [2].

It was divided afterwards into the two Maners, 1. . . . of Bruyns. 2. . . . of Groves.

The capital Seat was a stately one, not far from the Church, on the right hand side of the road leading to Warley and Burntwood. Little of it remains now but the front, which is of stone, in the Gothick style. It was encompassed by a moat, very wide, and full of fine clear water.

In the reign of K. Henry II. Hugh de Ou held of Geoffrey de Mandeville, in Essex, one knight's fee, and William de Rochelle three parts of a knight's fee, of the new feoffment (l): which seems to have been this estate. In some deeds, William de Ou is styled William de Rochelle (m). Probably he married a daughter of Hugh, and so came into this Maner. [Concerning the Family de Ou, which gave name to Willingale D'ou, see in the other Volume, p. 477.]—Sir Richard de la Rokele, who dyed 13 Decemb. 1222, at his maner of Wokingdon, had, by Maud his wife,—a Son, to whom the King confirmed this maner, to be held of Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford. His son—Richard de la Rokele, held it also of the Earl of Hereford, by knight's service; and dying in 1277, was succeeded by his son—Philip (n). The latter, at the time of his decease in 1295, held of the Earl of Hereford, in Wokindon, by the service of three knights fees and a half, 1 messuage,

400 acres of arable, 24 acr. of meadow, 20 of pasture, 20 of wood, 10 of heath, a wind-mill, and 32 s. 10 d. rent of the free-tenants.—

Maud, his daughter and heir (o), was married to the Lord Grey [R].

Ifolda, another daughter and co-heir of his, brought this estate in marriage to Sir William de Brune, or Bruyn, of the Bed-Chamber to K. Edward I; was so much in favour with that Prince, that he gave him the Maner of Beckingham in Kent: And his wife, Ifolda, who was Lady of the Bed-Chamber to Queen Alianore, obtained also from her several lordships. They had—Maurice their son and heir; who, at the time of his decease, 17 March 1354, held this maner of Wokyndon Rokele, with the Advowson of the Church, by the law of England, after the death of Maud his wife.—William was their son (p); afterwards knighted. He married Alice, daughter and heir of Richard Lair of London; and in 1357 they levied a Fine for this maner, and advowson of the Church and Chapel of this village, and the Hospital of St. John de Brook. He dyed 24 February 1361, leaving—Ingelram his son and heir (q). His widow Alice was re-married to Sir Robert Marney; who, 20 March 1370, had this maner releafed to him for a term of years; and afterwards his son in law granted it to him by deed in 1377. Sir Robert presented to this Living five times in thirty-one years, and, all but the last time, upon the death of the Incumbents (r).

Sir Ingelram Bruyn held this maner, with appertenances, of the Countess of Hereford, by the service of one knight's fee and a half; and the advowson of this Church; with the advowson of the free Chapel of St. John Baptist of Sedeboroughbroke. He dyed 7 August 1400. Elizabeth his widow, daughter and coheir of Sir Edmund de la Pole held in dower the third part of this maner, till her decease 1406 (s).—Maurice their son and heir was in wardship to the King, who presented to the Rectory upon that score in 1400; but he himself presented from 1408 to 1446, being a Knight, and Sheriff for Essex and Hertfordshire, in 1424, and 1436 [S]. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Ratford of Ireby, he had—Sir Henry Bruyn his son and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon Esq; [T] When he dyed doth not appear; but She dyed in 1471, leaving Alice, late wife of Robert Harleston Esq; and Elizabeth, wife of

This is recited in Letters patents 2 Ric. III.

[T] Arms of Bruyn. Azure, a cross moline, or.

Thomas Tyrell, son of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, her daughters and heirs (t).

Between these two coheireffes the Bruyn estate was parcelled out: and this Maner divided into two, called BRUYNs, and GROVES.

The Maner of BRUYNs

fell to the share of Elizabeth, who had three Husbands; 1. William Malory Esq; by whom she had no issue; 2. Thomas Tyrell Esq; 3. Sir William Brandon, Standard-bearer to K. Henry VII. at Bosworth-Field, where he was killed by K. Richard III. himself. He was Father to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, who is said to have been born here [U].

Elizabeth Brandon dyed 26 March 1494. She held the maner of South-Wokingdon, and Advowson of the Church, of Elizabeth Queen of England; by the service of a knight's fee; — Hugh Tyrell her son, by her second husband, was her heir (u). — William, his brother, succeeded him, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Bodley Esq; They had two sons, John who dyed without issue, and — Humfrey. This last, who dyed 15 January 1548, held of the King, as of his Earldom of Hereford, by the service of half a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 3 s. 4 d. to the King, payable to the Dutchy of Lancaster; the maner of South-Okendon, and 400 acres of arable, as much of pasture, 100 of meadow, forty of wood, and 12 s. 10 d. rent in South-Okendon; and certain parcels of land, called Colcarters, Chamberlyns, Hamptonys, Bosts, Wrests, Geppys, Nether-Crofts, Cokehedds-Crofte, and Le Forge (w). By Jane his wife, daughter and heir of Robert Ingleton, of Thornton, he had — George Tyrell of Thornton in Buckinghamshire, and of Okendon in Essex, Esq; his son and heir; who dyed 10 May 1571, possessed of a moiety of this maner; which he held in fee-tail, to him and the heirs of the body of his first wife Helen (x). She was daughter of Sir Edward Montague of Boughton, Lord Chief Justice of England, ancestor to the Earls of Sandwich and Halifax. By her he had, Edward, William, Thomas; and Margery, wife of Thomas Yorke. His second wife was Margery, daughter of . . . Cooke of Chester. — Edward Tyrell Esq; the eldest son, being a Knight, was created a Baronet 31 Octob. 1627 (y) [W].

The genealogy of the Family makes William Tyrell, second son of George, alienate Bruyns, but shews not to whom. By this one would believe it was settled on him by his father.

The next owner we find was William Petre of Stanford-Rivers, Esq; He sold it to Jasper Kinsman of Arden-Hall in Horndon on the Hill, who gave it, from his eldest son, to his cousin — Josias Kinsman, and to his son — Josias Kinsman Esq; who dyed possessed of it: As did his brother — Jasper Kinsman Esq; at Stifford 29 May 1754; from whom it descended to his son — Jasper Kinsman Esq;

The Maner of GROVES.

The mansion house stands about a mile north of this Church.

This was the part of Alice, daughter and co-heir of Sir Henry Bruyn. She had three husbands; 1. Robert Harleston Esq; 2. Sir John Henningham, 3. William Berners Esq; Harleston, the first husband, left issue. But K. Richard III. upon the attainder of William Brandon, having restored to Sir John Henningham, a moiety of this maner, and the advowson of the Church, he dyed possessed of them 10 May 1499. — Thomas Henningham was his son and heir (z). [See under Stifford.]

The same year K. Henry VII. presented to this Church, as well by reason of the death of Sir John Henningham, as of the minority of the son and heir of John Harleston. The Presentation was at this time alternate between the heirs of Bruyn's two daughters, for Humfrey Tyrell Esq; son of William, presented in 1535, in his turn (a). — John, son of Robert Harleston Esq; of Shington, married Jane, daughter of Thomas Higham; and had by her — Clement, afterwards knighted, who by . . . his wife daughter of William Tey, of Laver de la Hay, had 4 sons, John, Henry, Clement, and Antony. He held the site and capital messuage and mansion of the maner of South-ookendon, and 7 messuages, 6 tofts, 8 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 1000 of pasture, 100 of meadow, and 100 of wood, in this parish; and the Advowson of the Church; of the King, as of the Honor of Hertford, by the service of one knight's fee. He dyed 27 March 1550, and was succeeded by his eldest son — John, then aged 37 years (b). He was also knighted, and had two wives, namely, Mildred, daughter of Sir John Munday, and Mary, daughter of . . . Felton. By the first, he had, Robert, born in 1539; Thomas; William; Juliana, Joanna, Frances, Relevior 12 Hen. VII. rot. 2. Trin. Fin. — William Brandon, of South-Okendon Esq; was witness to a deed, 1 Edw. V. in Lord Dacre's possession. This William Brandon had been Esquire of the body to K. Edward IV.

[W] This Sir Edward Tyrell had, by his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Aston of Cheshire Esq; Sir Timothy Tyrell Kt. whose son, Sir Timothy Tyrell, by Elizabeth his wife, sole daughter and heir of the most learned Archbishop Usher, was father of James Tyrell Esq; author of the General History of England, 5 Vols. fol. Bibliotheca Politica, &c.

Margaret, Elizabeth. And by the second, Mary, married first to Gilbert Saltonstall, and afterwards to . . . Dyngley. Sir John Harleston dying 28 February 1568, was succeeded by his eldest son—Robert (c). He held of the Honor of Tutbury, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaster, the maner place of South-Okendon, with fishponds, warenn, and 200 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, parcel of that maner: a messuage called Mollands, and 300 acres of land; another messuage called Rowleys, with 60 acres of land, in this parish; another messuage, and 60 acres of land, in this parish and Stifford, named Hobbes and Fordes: and several other parcels. He dyed 28 January 1569; without issue.—Thomas, his next brother and successor, departed this life 11 August 1572. By Mary his wife, daughter of Rowland Lytton, he had —John, his only son (d): who dyed 13 April 1626, leaving—John, aged thirteen years, and 8 months (e).

Gilbert Saltonstall Esq; descended from the ancient family of that surname of Halifax in Yorkshire; and eldest son of Richard Saltonstall of London, merchant-adventurer. Gilbert dyed 17 Novemb. 1585, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph. He doth not appear to have had any issue; but, in all probability, the Half of this maner had been settled in marriage upon him, remainder to his Heirs: Or, else his father had purchased it, for he presented to this Living in 1590. He was afterwards knighted, and Lord Mayor of London in 1598. By Susan his wife, only daughter of Thomas Poyntz of North-Okendon, with whom he lived fifty years in the chaste and holy Lawes of marriage (f), he had 7 sons, and 9 daughters, of whom 4 sons and 7 daughters survived him; and having arrived to the age of 80 years, he dyed 17 March 1601, and was buried in this Church, with an epitaph. At the time of his decease, he held a moiety of the maner, of South-Wokingdon, and divers lands and messuages; and a moiety of the advowson of this Church: also the tenement, or messuage, called Graves or Grovesland, formerly parcel of the endowment of a Chantry in the Parish Church of Grace-Church, in London [X]: and divers lands and tenements in Stifford. — Richard is said to be his son and heir (g). But he had undoubtedly this estate of the gift of his father; for, according to the pedigree, Sir Samuel, Sir Peter [Y], and Edward were older than him. Richard was knighted, and held the moiety of this maner, and of all other lands and tenements, assured, as well as not assured, upon his marriage: with the moiety of the Advowson of this Church; and the messuage called Groves. He dyed 11 Decemb. 1619, leaving—Sir Richard Saltonstall Kt. his son and heir, aged 23 years (b). His son, or grandson, — Philip Saltonstall, lord of this vill, Patron of the Church, dyed by a fall from his horse, 14 Septemb. 1668, in the 33d year of his age. He had six children; by Alice his wife, daughter of — Graham, namely, Misericord, Anne, Philip, Richard, Mary, and James. — Philip, the eldest son and heir, married Sarah, daughter of Sir Capell Luckyn of Messing Bart. afterwards remarried to Dacre-Barrett Lennard, of Alveley Esq; [See under that parish]. By her husband Saltonstall she had — Philippa [Z], who became the wife of John Goodere of Claybury Esq; and brought him this part of the maner and estate in marriage. And it continues in that Family.

Pointz, is a House here, belonging formerly to Admiral Littelton.

Mr. James Harrold, and the heirs of Mr. Edward Cheslyn, have also some lands in this parish.

John Crowland, Rector of this parish, gave by will lands in North-Okendon, called Crowlands, for the reparation of the Church, and to the Poor. After the suppression of Chantries, K. Edward VI. gave them to Tho: Golding (i).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is pleasantly situated. It consists of a body, and a north aisle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel: both the latter are leaded, but the body of the Church, and the Chancel, are tyled. The Tower is round, after the Danish fashion, and embattled. There was on it a leaden Spire, which was fired by lightning, and burnt down in December 1638.

The Advowson of this Rectory was at first in the Bruyn Family. After the division of the Maner and estates here, the Presentation became alternate in their heirs, and successors.

Some have fancied, that here was in old time only a Free-Chapel; grounding themselves upon a Presentation of Sir Maurice de Bruyn to the Free-Chapel of Sedeboroughbroke, in 1326 (k). But this Free Chapel was in the Hospital of Brook-street, which was also in the gift of the said Sir Maurice. And we find the Advowson of the Church of South-Wokendon, and the Advowson of that Free Chapel, distinguished in the Inquisitions post mortem (l) [A].

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1307l.

8. NORTHOKENDON, as the name imports, lies North of the other. It is otherwise written in records Wokyndon Septem Fontium, or Fontan, either from some owner of that surname; or from Seven Fountains, or Springs, formerly famous here.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, it belonged to Earl Harold; and, at the time of the Survey, to the Abbey of St. Peter's at Westminster: Of which, part was held of the Abbot by William Camerarius, or the Chamberlain [B].

We hear no more of the Abbey of Westminster here, and may conclude the land went away in exchange, or what was called so. William Camerarius, a Courtier, the Chamberlain, having made a beginning here, probably got a grant of the rest.

From the year 1086 to 1315, no mention occurs in records of the owners of this estate. In 9 Edw. II. John Malegreffe was possessed of it: For then a Fine passed between William Bawdewyn, plaintiff, and John Malegreffe, deforc', of two messuages, 200 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 10 of pasture, two of wood, and 10 s. rent, with appertenances, in Wokendon septem Fontibus and Wokendon-Rokele (m). William Baudewin was buried in this Church in 1316 (n). In 1320, it belonged to Baldwyn, son of William de Wokyndon Setfantayna [C]. And a fine was levied in 1321, between this Baldwyn, son of William de Wokindon Seet Fountaynes, and Emma his wife, plaintiffs, and B——, Parson of the Church of Seet-Fountaynes deforc' of the maner of Seet-Fountaynes, and Advowson of the Church of the said maner (o). This B—— must be Bartbolomew Baldwyn: The London Registry shews, he quitted the living, and Henry de Wokyndon, was instituted, in 1326. Whether he was proprietor or trustee, nothing shews.

Soon after, by the marriage of Elianor, daughter and heiress of . . . Baldwyn, this estate came into the ancient Family of Pointz, originally of Tokington in Gloucestershire. The first mentioned in the Pedigree, is Sir John Pointz, who by . . . daughter and heir of Sir John Glanbow, had his son, Sir John Pointz, who married . . . sister and heir of Sir John Acton, and had by her Sir Robert Pointz, whose wife was Catharine, daughter and heir of Thomas Fitz-Nicholl. They had two sons, Nicolas, and Thomas. Nicolas, the eldest, took to his first wife Elizabeth daughter of Henry Hufsey, by whom he had one daughter, Jane. By his second wife, . . . daughter of . . . Milles of Gloucestershire, he had two sons, 1. John; whose son, Sir Robert, married Margaret daughter of Antony Wodville, Earl Rivers.

2. Henry Pointz Esq; the second son of Nicolas, married Elianor, daughter and heir of William Bawdin of this parish, and came and settled here. By her he had one son, John; and two daughters, Agnes, married to William Copdo of South-Wokendon, Gent. and Margaret to John Fuller of Cavendish. — John Pointz Esq; the son and heir, by Elianor his wife, daughter and one of the coheirs of Sir John Dancote, had John his son; and two daughters, Matilda, wife of John Barrett of Alveley Esq; and Margaret, of John de Bures, Gent. — John Pointz Esq; successor to his father in this estate, married Maud, daughter, and one of the coheirs, of William Perte of Alveley Gent. by whom he had — William, and several other children. William, by Elizabeth his wife, sister of Sir John Shaa, Lord Mayor of London, had John, Thomas, Henry, and other children. They both dyed in 1500. — John, the eldest son, married Anne, sister and heir of Isaac Sibley of Buckinghamshire; and dyed 16 June 1558; but having no issue was succeeded by his brother — Thomas Pointz Esq; He is the first of this Family mentioned in the Inquisitions post mortem; which is very uncommon. At the time of his decease, 5 May 1562, he held this Maner, with appertenances, and 6 messuages, 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 500 of pasture, 200 of wood, 100 of marsh, 20 l. rent &c. in North and South Wokenden, Alveley, Upminster, South-weald, Brend-wood, Warley, Childerdiche, Dunton, Est Horndon, Greys-Turrock, and Bulvan; and the Advowson of this Church of North-Wokenden, of the Queen in free socage, by fealty (p). It is said in his Epitaph, that for his most faithful service to his Prince, [K. Edward VI. we suppose,] and his most ardent profession of the truth of the Gospel, he suffered bonds and imprisonment beyond sea, and was destined to death, if he had not wonderfully escaped out of prison by the divine assistance. He married Anne Van Calva, daughter and one of the coheirs of John Calva Esq; a German; by whom he had, Gabriel, afterwards knighted; Ferdinand; Robert; and one daughter named Sufanna, wife of Sir Richard Saltonstall, of South-Okendon. — Sir Gabriel Pointz, the eldest son, born in 1538 [D], married Etheldred, daughter of Peter Cutts, of Arkesden, Esq; widow of Ralph Latham, of this parish, Esq; and had by her, Thomas, who dyed without issue; and Catharine, sole heiress to this estate, which she brought in marriage to her husband Sir John Morice, of Cheping-Ongar in this County. They had 4 sons, and 3 daughters (q), and among the rest—John, their eldest son, who took the surname of Pointz, alias Morice, and was knighted 22 May. 1603. He dyed 31 January, 1617-18, and was succeeded by his eldest son—Sir James Pointz, alias Morice, Kt. who also departed this life 31 August 1623 [E].

The latter held this maner of North-Woken-don; the capital messuage called Groves, or North Ockendon-hall, with divers lands, in the adjoining parishes, belonging to this maner; and the maner of Poyntz in South-Ockenden. And, in Bulfan, tenements called Wicks, otherwise Gyrlsty, and Frithes: in Little Thurrock, Saverings, Berds Court, Swaynes, &c. He had also the estates in Ongar; Mascalls-bury, in White-Roding; and Abbots-hall in Great Wigborough (r). By Mary his wife, one of the daughters of Sir Richard Smith of Leeds Castle in Kent, he had his only son—Richard Pointz, alias Morice, Esq; who dyed, unmarried, at Montauban in France 15, 1643, and was buried there [F].

This estate then came by marriage to the Family of Lyttelton, or Littleton, descended from the famous Judge, Sir Thomas Lyttelton, author of the Treatise on Tenures. According to the account of this Branch of the Family, Sir Adam Littleton, Bart. married Audria, daughter of Thomas Pointz Esq; I presume this Thomas must have been a younger son of the first Sir John Pointz, alias Morice, and uncle to Richard, and that by her the estate came to Sir Adam Littleton, created a Baronet 14 Octob. 1642, and then styled of Stoke-Milburgh in Shropshire. He had 4 sons, Thomas, William, Edward, and James. Sir Thomas Littleton, alias Pointz, his eldest son and heir, married Anne, daughter and heir of Edward Lord Littleton, Lord Keeper, and had by her an only son. He dyed 12 April 1681, aged 57 years, and was buried here, as also was his Lady, who dyed 27 Novemb. 1705, aged 82.—Sir Thomas their son, born 3 April 1657, after a suitable education at Oxford, and the Inns of Court, was made Commissary of Prizes; was member in several Parliaments; and Speaker of the House of Commons, in 1698. He married Anne, daughter of Benjamin Baron of Westcote in Gloucestershire, Esq; and dying 1 January 1709, was buried here, with a monument. By will he gave this estate to his Lady for life; and having no issue, left it after her, [who dyed 21 July 1714,] to his kinsman, or great nephew,

James Littleton of Longueville in Surrey Esq; who by his first wife Susan, daughter of—Meddlicot of London, widow of Mr. White Attorney at Law, had—James his son and heir, who being bred to the Sea, became at length Vice-Admiral of the White, and was also Member of Parliament for Woodstock, and for Chichester, and Portsmouth. He married Jane, only daughter of Richard Bunch M. D. by whom he had issue Thomas, and other children. He dyed 5 Feb. 1722, and was buried here, the Admirals Jennings, Wager, Norris, Hosier, De la Vall, and Strickland, supporting the pall. His only son—Thomas Littleton Esq; dyed before him without issue: and his daughter, Susanna, was married to Sir Barnham Rider, of Kent, Kt. [G].

The estate is in Littleton Poyntz Meynell Esq;

There was paid out of this maner a yearly rent of 10l. and 4s. for a common Fine and View of Frankpledge, within this Maner; also 5s. yearly rent for a messuage called Baldwins and Wards in this parish and Upminster; and for the Advowson of the Rectory: All which sums K. Henry VIII. granted to John Pointz, and his heirs for ever (s).

STUBBERS, is an ancient seat or capital messuage in this parish, about half a mile west from the Church, which anciently belonged to the Family of Coys, of Welch original.

Gwillim ap Jenkyn, alias Herbert, of Guorney in Monmouthshire, by his wife Gwenlian, daughter and heir of William Howell, ap Jovan ap Howell, had issue John ap Gwillim; David Howell ap Gwillim; and Thomas ap Gwillim, alias Herbert.—John was father of—Roger Coys of London, who by Joane his wife, daughter of Robert Warren, of the same place, and of Thurlow in Suffolk, had one son, William, and seven daughters.—William Coys, of North-Okendon Esq; married Mary, second daughter of Giles Alleyn of Haseley-hall Esq; and had by her 8 sons, and 6 daughters. He dyed 6 March 1627, and she 13 March 1617; and both are buried in this Church with an epitaph.—Giles Coys Esq; was their eldest son and heir.

It was purchased by Sir William Russel Kt. of a Worcestershire family. From him it came to his son—William Russel Esq; mentioned in the other Volume, p. 573. He married Mary, daughter of Samuel Saville of Colchester Esq; and had by her—William, his son and heir; who dying 6 October 1754, was succeeded by his son—John Russel Esq;

Mr. William Mayes, hath also some Lands here.

Richard Pointz Esq; above-mentioned, left by will, in 1643, the sum of 200l. to be laid out in the purchase of land for the Poor. With this money was bought a Farm, of about 40 acres of land, called Stedding-hill, lying in the parish of Horndon on the Hill.

He also gave 50 l. to purchase Plate for the Communion.

appears in Records by this name no higher than the reign of K. Edward IV. Okendon, or Wokendon, was at first a name common to this district; which, when it came to be divided into three Lordships, received the three distinguishing appellations of South, and North, Okendon, and this in particular of Wokendon-Episcopi, i. e. the Bishop's, because at the time of the Survey it belonged to the Bishop of London, and his undertenant Hugh. But, in Edward the Confessor's reign, it had belonged to Aluric [H]. The name of Cranham seems taken up for brevity, to avoid so long a one as Bishop's-Okendon [I].

This is one of the eighteen Maners entered in Domesday-book, under the title of Feudum Ep'i Londoniensis, distinct from the Terra Ep'i Londoniensis. The Feudum seems to me the Bishop's private estate granted upon the Conquest, and the Bishop to have been Gul. Normannus, or his successor Hugh de Orevalle, both foreigners, perhaps of great merit; or nearly related to the Conqueror, or some of his great men. The names of these Lordships are for the greatest part lost, and I believe absorbed in other estates. Some few of them were afterwards in the See of London, which I cannot account for, unless that Bishop, who had the grant upon the Conquest, settled them upon his successors [K].

If this maner was settled upon the See of London, and holden of the Bishop in the time of K. Edward III. as we shall presently observe it was, it is much we should hear no more of

In 1343, Thomas Malegreff held in Wokendon Seftmaynes, Wokyndon Bishop, and Warle Abbess, 2 messuages, and 160 acres of arable, which were holden of Crawhale, as of John de Bundehome, and of Francis de Scoland, by the service of 4 s. a year (t). Concerning this Malegreff, or Malegrave, Family, See under Horndon.

the Bishop here till the time of K. Henry VIII. and after that, he is said only to have the Leet. For, if the Maner were at any time taken from the See, how came the Leet to remain? But however so it was.

CRANHAM-HALL,

the maner-house is situated near the Church.

Nicolas de Halughton, heir of Joane, daughter of Nicolas de Wokingdon, claimed free-warren in Wokingdon, Braxted, and Chaldwell (u). He held the maner of Wokendon-Powell [L], of the Bishop of London, and three parts of the maner of Little Braxted, and lands in Terling, and the maner of Chaldwell, of the same Bishop, by knight's service. He dyed in 1339, leaving — Margaret and Joane his daughters and heirs (w).

In 1399, a fine was levied between Sir Thomas Erpingham, James Billington, William Wolseley, William Burgh, and William Trendle, Chaplain, plaintiffs, and Sir John Curson, and Beatrix his wife, deforc' for this maner; the right of William Trendle (x). The same year, Sir John Curson granted to Sir John Erpingham, and James de Ballington, 120 cows and four bulls within the maner of Wokyndon-Episcopi.

In 1407, Nicolas Seyntleger Esq; releases to Sir John Curson, and his wife, and to Byllington, Burgh, and Trendle, and to John Filyoll, all his right in this maner. And in 1421, William Trendye, or Trendle, Parson of the Church of Ingeldesthorpe in Norfolk, releases all his right in the same, to Sir John Curson and his heirs (y).

[I] I should imagine it came from a resort of Cranes here, the Hawking of which was an ancient sport. And if we would guess by the bills of fare into which Cranes come, and the price of Provisions, remarked by our Historians, in the time of K. Edward I. we must imagine the stomachs of that fighting age of a strange tone. By order of Council, a fat cock was to be sold at three half-pence, a fat capon two pence half-penny, two pullets three half-pence, a goose four pence, a malard or a partridge three half-pence, a pheasant four pence, a Heron six pence, a plover a penny, a swan three

In 1426, . . . Selman releases to John Archbishop of York, all his right in the maner of Wokendon-Episcopi, and in fifteen acres of land in Little-Warley (z).

Sir Lodowic John, [of West-Thorndon where see an account of him,] who dyed in 1442, held the maner of Wokyndon-Episcopi, with the Advowson of the Church, of the Bishop of London, by the service of 30 s. per ann. (a). His son, — Lewis John, was attainted, but for what reason we cannot find, unless it was during the cruel wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster.

However, among other very large estates, in 1471 Richard Duke of Gloucester, afterwards King Richard III. obtained a grant of this maner, by the name of Cravenham, part of the possessions of Lewis John, attainted (b).

It came afterwards, with the maner of West Horndon &c. into the Mordaunt Family; For Ela, wife of Sir John Mordaunt, that dyed 2 June 1543, held the maner of Craneham, in Wokingdon-Episcopi and South-Wokingdon of the Bishop of London by fealty and yearly rent of 33 s. — Lodowic, or Lewis Mordaunt was her son and heir, five years old (c). This Ela and her husband, Sir John Mordaunt, granted the Presentation of this Rectory to Edward Lee, who presented twice, in 1545. and 1559; and in the grant she was called daughter and heiress of Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis.

Soon after, they sold this estate, with others, to Sir William Petre: At the time of his decease, 13 January 1571, he held this maner and advowson of the Church; — John his son and heir, afterwards created Lord Petre, dyed 11 Octob. 1613, and held this estate of the Bishop of London, as of his Castle of Stortford (d); with the advowson of the Church. He gave this estate to his third son,

Thomas Petre Esq; who resided at Cranham-Hall, and married Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Baskerville of Wanborough in Wiltshire. He dyed 3 Octob. 1625, holding this maner of Cranham, and advowson of the Church, of George Bishop of London, as of his maner of Stortford, in free socage, and yearly rent of 33 s. (e). — Francis Petre Esq; his son and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Gage of Ferle in Suffex, Bart. He was Lord of the Court-Baron in 1635; and the Bishop of London at that time Lord of the Leet. He sold this estate to

Nathan Wright Esq; merchant in London, second son of John Wright of Keldon-Hatch, in this County, Esq; He dyed 11 March 1657, aged 66, leaving by Anne his wife, daughter of Giles Fleming of Warley-place Esq; his son and heir, Benjamin; and five daughters, Susan, Alice, Mary, Frances, and Jane. Susan was married first to Charles Potts, afterwards to

Francis Drake, Esqres. and dyed 15 July 1664, aged 39 years. There is an Epitaph in this Church for her, and another for her father. —

Benjamin Wright, the son and heir, was created a Baronet 15 Febr. 1660, being styled of Cranham-Hall. He married Jane, daughter of John, or William Williams of London, Merchant; and had by her Nathan, born 21 August 1661, and Benjamin. — Sir Nathan Wright, the eldest son and heir, had four wives. First, Anne, daughter of John Meyrick of London, Merchant, by whom he had — Nathan, who married . . . daughter of Sir Thomas Lawley, and John. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Frances Brage of Hatfield Peverell, Esq; widow of William Brown of Norwich, Esq; by whom he had Benjamin, and another son. His third was Elizabeth, daughter of John Bowater of Whitely in Warwickshire, Esq; by her no issue. His fourth was Abigail, third daughter of Samuel Tryst of Culworth in Northamptonshire, Esq; by whom he had Samuel and Elizabeth.

Sir Nathan dyed 16 Octob. 1727 [M]. Abigail his widow was remarried to Herbert Tryst Esq; Sheriff of this County in 1737, who in her right enjoyed this estate till her death 7 Decemb. 1741 [N].

Elizabeth, his daughter by his fourth wife, and his only surviving heir, was married, 15 Septemb. 1744, to James Oglethorp, of Westbrook place in Surrey Esq; General of his Majesty's Forces: who was at the pains of settling the Colony of Georgia.

BERDENS, is a reputed Maner, or capital messuage, in this parish, about two miles north from this Church, toward Warley-place.

Ralph Latham Esq; who had estates in Upminster, and Warley &c. held the maner of Berdens, with appertenances, and 24 acres of arable in Craneham, called Busshops, of the maner of Cranham, by fealty, and rent of 36 s. 8d. He dyed 19 July 1556, leaving — William Latham his son and heir (f): who held the maner of Bardens, and 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 80 of pasture, 20 of wood, and 3 s. rent, with appertenances, in Craneham, of Sir John Petre, as of his maner of Cranham. He departed this life 17 May 1600. — William Latham, was his son and heir (g).

Stephen Skrofield hath also some lands here.

There are two Alms-houses in St. Mary lane, given by Sir Nathan Wright.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. In a wooden Turret there are three Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Cranham-hall. The Parsonage-house was rebuilt some years ago.

The parish of Cranham is rated to the land-tax at 710 l. 2 s. od.

10. UPMINSTRE,

otherwise called in records Upmonstra, Upmynstre, Hepmynstre, is a large parish, extending from Rainham on the South to S. Weald on the north; having Cranham and the Warleys on the east; and, on the west divided from the Liberty of Havering by the rivulet named Ingreburn. Μύνστρ, though it generally signifies a Cathedral or Collegiate Church, being derived from the Latin Monasterium, yet frequently means a Parish Church (b). Up is for some distinction, either in respect of one of the neighbouring Churches which stands lower; or from its situation on a rising ground, above the rivulet. It is divided into North and South Upminster.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the lands in this parish belonged, to Waltham-Abbey; Suene Suart; and Ulunin. And, at the time of the Survey, they were in the said Abbey, in Walter de Doai; and in Odo, Bishop of Bayeux.

What Walter held, being the greatest part of the Parish, is what received afterwards the name of from a very considerable Family surnamed de Engaine, who had one of the Colnes, denominated also Gaines from them. [See in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] [O].

The mansion house of Gains stands about half a mile South of this Church, near Gaines cross.

This estate did not very long continue in Walter de Doai's Family. In K. John's reign, it was in William de Courteney [P]. His heirs were William de Cantilupe Baron of Bergavenny, and Vitalis Engaine Lord of Blatherwick in Northamptonshire (i). And upon the partition of his estate, in 1242, this, with other Maners fell to Engaine, in whose Family it continued at least till the year 1318 [Q]. [For a more particular account of the intermarriages of this Family, see in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] [R].

Vitalis Engaine dying in 1244, was succeeded by his eldest surviving son—Henry, who dyed 24 Febru. 1271, unmarried: Whereupon—Sir John Engaine, his brother, came into his estates (k). He held this Maner by the serjancy of keeping the King's grey-hounds [S]. Departing this life in 1297, he was succeeded by his son—John; who, at the time of his decease in 1302, held the maner of Hepmynstre of the King in capite, by knight's service (l). Leaving no issue, he settled by fine this estate, about the year 1318, on John, the son of his brother Nicolas, and the heirs of the body of the said John (m). This last — John Engaine was a Knight banneret; served under K. Edward III. in his wars in France; and had frequently summons to Parliamene. [See in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] But, according to John Weever, (n)

Simon de Havering, and afterwards John de Havering, about this time, were in possession of this Maner; whether as feoffees in trust, or otherwise, doth not plainly appear. It seems to have been in fee, upon the payment of a pair of gilt spurs of the price of six pence. For,

Sir Thomas Engaine, who dyed 29 June 1367, is not recorded to have had this Maner, only the rent of one pair of gilt spurs, and the Advowson of the Church of Upmynstre; the said rent to be received out of the Maner once John de Havering's. Sir Thomas married Catharine, daughter of Hugh Courtney Earl of Devonshire, but leaving [R] There are many Places in England named Gaynes, Engaines, D'Engains, one, for instance, near St. Neots in Huntingdonshire, another at Taversham in Cambridgeshire. Dr. Brady, author of the English History, used to say, that these were possessed by, and had their name from one surnamed De Ingeniis, Engineer to the Conqueror, or from his descendants. Agreeably to this, we have the Name in the Monasticon written Ingaine. There is one difficulty in admitting this, that so great a man as the Conqueror's Engineer would be found in the entries of Domesday in many Counties. It is probable that we have him so but by his Family name, and not by that of his office, which his posterity might be fond of taking. Monastic. Vol. II. p. 297.

no issue, his three Sisters became his coheirs; namely, Joyce, wife of William de Goldington; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Laurence Pabenbam; and Mary wife of Sir William Barnak (o).

Elizabeth, and her husband Sir Laurence Pabenbam had the Advowson of this Church; and the yearly rent of a pair of gilt spurs of the price of 6 d. (p). Which he held in her right at the time of his decease in 1398 (q). The Advowson continued in their heirs till the year 1557; namely, in Sir Thomas Aylesbury, the Cheney family, William Lord Vaux, &c. as we shall shew more particularly under the account of the Church (r).

As for the Maner itself of Gaines, it remained in the Havering Family. Lora, wife of Sir John de Havering, afterwards of William Morewoode, held it till her decease, 4 Novemb. 1393 (s).

It hath been said, that Alice Perrers, Abishag to old K. Edward III. and daughter or granddaughter, of Richard de Perers, several times Sheriff of this County [T], was possessed of this maner; undoubtedly of the King's gift. This Maner is not indeed mentioned among the rest, which she had in this County, [namely those of Bradwell near the sea, Hokkele, Pilton, Daneseye, and West Newland in St. Laurence and Steple,] and were declared forfeited in 1377 (t). But in 1378, the sentence against her being reversed, and her goods and estates restored to her, and her husband Sir William Windsor, Lieutenant of Ireland, he had, among the rest, a grant of the reversion of this maner of Upminstre, otherwise called Gaynes in Upminstre. He dyed in 1383 (u). After his decease, Sir John Deyncourt obtained a grant of the reversion of this maner; but he dyed either before, or at least the same year, as Lora afore-said; leaving his son—Roger, under age, and the King's Ward (w). Immediately upon Lora's death, one Robert Chickell of London, as heir to the said John Deyncourt, intruded and entered upon the King's possessions, viz. two messuages called Napers-Tenement and Snellinge-Tenement, together with arable, meadow, and pasture, to the said messuages belonging, in Havering, which were members and parcels of the said maner of Upminster (x).

Sir John Deyncourt, who obtained a grant of this Maner, was a branch of the noble Family of D'Eincourt, descended from Walter, that came in with William the Conqueror, and had large possessions in the northern parts of England (y). Sir John married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Henry De la Feld, who is said to have had an interest in this Maner [U]. His son Roger Deyncourt, or Dencourt, dyed 20 . . . 1455, and is buried under the arch between the Chancel and north Chapel, with Elizabeth his wife, by whom he had several children (z). Whether one of them was Robert Dencort of Alveley, we cannot exactly find out. But the next possessor of this estate upon record,

Nicolas Wayte, citizen and draper of London, son of Thomas Wayte of the same place and occupation, married Ellyn daughter of the said Robert Dencort, by Elizabeth his first wife daughter of Jenkyn Clarke of Alveley: And Robert Dencort by his second wife Maryon Miller, had Richard, Anne, and Alice. Whether Nicolas Wayte had not this estate in right of Ellyn his wife, is doubtful, and yet very probable. She dyed 27 May 1545, and he 7 August 1543, and both lye buried in this Church, with an epitaph. He held this maner of Gaynes, with appertenances, and 3 messuages, 250 acres of arable, 26 of meadow, 121 of pasture, 130 of wood, and 16l. 2s. 3d. qa rent. His heirs were, the grandson, and the daughter, of his kinsman Edward Wayte late of Ronhale in Bedfordshire, namely, Edward Bendowe, son and heir of Elizabeth Bendowe, one of the daughters and heirs of the said Edward Wayte, aged 38 years; and Agnes Pyke, the other daughter, 53 years old (a). Upon partition of Wayte's estates, this Maner fell to John Pyke's share, in right of his wife, who soon parted with it: For, 12 May 1543, they obtained a license to alienate this maner of Geynes with appertenances, 3 messuages, 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 200 of wood, 60 of furze and heath, in Upminster and Horn-Church, to

Ralph Latham Esq; (b) citizen and goldsmith of London. This Ralph was a lineal descendent in the male-line from a younger branch of the ancient family of Latham, of Latham in Lancashire, who were lords of that place from the time of K. Richard I. to the latter end of K. Edward the III'd's, when Isabel, sole daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Latham, by her marriage with Sir John Stanley, brought it into the noble [U] In 1406, John Despayne, alias Sotherey, demised to John Prophete, and Thomas Feld, clerks, and to the heirs of the said Thomas, all his right in the maner of Gaynes; and in one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 40 of pasture called Godeshouse, in Upminstre. . . . Claus. 8 Hen. IV.

The year following, Henry de la Feld entailed the maner of Gaines upon his three sons, one after another; and in default of their issue, upon John Deyncourt, and Elizabeth his wife daughter of the said Henry De la Feld; in whose right afterwards it should seem he came to be lord here; and lieth buried with his wife under a fair tomb. . . . Such is J. Weever's account, Fun. Monu. p. 691. But there must be a mistake at least in the Christian name. For the person buried here, is named in the epitaph Roger, and not John.

Family of Stanley Earls of Derby. Latham-bouse became remarkable in the last century, by the most brave defence made in it on K. Charles the Second's side, by Charlotte, Countess dowager of Derby. Ralph Latham Esq; dyed 19 July 1556, possessed of the maners of Gaynes, Upminster-hall, Bridge-house, and Newplace; and one messuage, 40 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 32 of pasture, and 6 of wood, called Gladmans, with appertenances, all in Upminster; and several estates in parishes adjoyning (c) [W]. This Ralph was son of Robert Latham of North-Okendon Esq; son of Philip, and grandson of Sir Robert. Robert's wife was Thomasine, daughter and heir of Thomas Ardale, [remarried to Richard Badby,] and by her he had Ralph; and Thomas, from whom descended the Lathams of Stifford. Ralph's wife was Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Hill, or, according to J. Weever, of Sir William Roche Lord Mayor of London, by whom he had two sons both named William, the youngest of whom was settled at Sandon in this County.—William Latham Esq; the eldest son and heir, born in 1539, departed this life 17 May 1600; at which time he had, in this parish, only the capital messuage called New-Place, and Goodhouse, and Gladmans (d) [X]. For he had alienated this maner, by license dated 14 Septemb. 1560, to

Robert Badby, Gent. and to Ralph Latham, and others (e). Again, by licence dated 21 March 1563, to

William Strangman, and others, for the proper use of the said W. Latham (f). And, by license dated 1 May 1587, to

Gerard D'Ewes, citizen and stationer of London, son of Adrian D'Ewes, descended from the ancient Lords of Kessel in Gelderland, who had come and settled in England about the beginning of K. Henry VIIIth's reign. He dyed 12 April 1592, leaving—Paul D'Ewes his son and heir born in 1570 (g), afterwards one of the Six Clerks in Chancery [Y]. He, by licence dated 7 August 1793, alienated this Maner, with all its rights, members, and appertenances, and the Advowson of the Church and chapel, to Francis Rowe Gent. and George Wiseman, for the use of William Latham Esq; the elder, for the term of his life, remainder to his son. So that now Gaines-hall returned into the Latham family; and probably all the foresaid alienations were only by way of trust. The father William Latham Esq; married Amia, daughter of William Strangman Esq;—William his son married Alice, daughter of Paul d'Ewes Esq; and dyed 14 Febr. 1614 (h).—Ralph his son, Common Serjeant of the City of London, was his heir; whose son—Ralph succeeded him in this estate.

Tradition goes, that one Mr. Herbert has been since that time Lord of Gaynes. The maner was sold in 1721, by a widow of Mr. Graves, brother to Mr. Joseph Graves a Clergyman of Lewes in Suffex, who had enjoyed it about sixty years, to Mr. Amos White, present possessor.

The Maner of UPMINSTER-HALL

was one of the seventeen, given by Earl Harold to the Abbey founded by him at Waltham, and thence named Waltham-Hall.

K. Edward the Confessor confirmed it to that house, as did also K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. Henry III. And in the Carta antiqua it is called 104 acres (i). That Abbey was possessed of it at the time of the general Survey [Z].

The Bounds of this Lordship are particularly described in the Monasticon, Vol. II. p. 12, in the following Saxon words, . . . Eneƿt at Tigelhýnƿt ƿuð toƿane Manceice.

of þane dīce Weƿt in Ingcebyrne. 7 of þane byrne nonð in to Beccengane. 7 of Beccengane nonð and lang þane Waldrate into Stangane. of Stangane nonð into Manner Land. of Manner lande eft into Tigelhýnƿt. . . ' and from Beccengare north along the Wald-freet to Stangare. from Stangare north into Mannes land. from Mannes ' land again to Tigelhýrste.' Upon which the learned Dr. Derham made the following observations.

The Northern limit was what is now called Tilehurst from the two Saxon words Tigel, and hýnƿt signifying a wood affording earth, fit for making Tiles; and such is the soil at this day, near Mr. Branfill's, above the Medicinal Spring; where is a house called Tyler's, and where the best Tiles and bricks in these parts are made. Tigel is probably from the Latin Tegula, the Saxons having borrowed both name and use of Tiles from the Romans. Southerly we go to Manceice or Mark-Ditch, otherwise Boundary, by Cranham parish, to the road leading from Horn Church to Warley. Here may have been a Ditch for a British mound, dividing the Territories of one petty King from another, which perhaps extended to Childerdich, and there gave name: And this may have been defaced by ploughing and Husbandry. Westward we go thence to Ingcebyrne, or, as it is now written, Ingreburne, a Bourn or brook, which separates Chafford Hundred from the Liberty of Havering. Thence we go Northward to Beccengane, the brook, or beechen weare; or perhaps it was a compound of Becan-aunƿne, the Beacon-place, where the Beacon once stood, which probably

Upminster-

Upminster-Hall was probably a retiring-place, or hunting seat, for the Abbat. Here he had a Chapel, built of stone, yet remaining; with a Font in it, for the use of his Tenants and dependents; which farther appears from their having a Cemetery where the Garden now is, for, in it human Bones have been dug up. It is pleasantly situated about a mile north from this Church.

After the dissolution, K. Henry VIII. granted this estate to Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex. Upon his attainder, it reverted to the Crown; and was by the same King 7 July 1543, for the sum of 848*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* granted, or rather alienated, to Ralph Latham of London, goldsmith, together with the annual rent of 38*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* which was the fee-farm rent reserved to the Crown for the keeping of thirty dogs, or hounds [A]. This grant was full and absolute, with all the Honors, &c. And exempted from all service to the Crown.

In the grant were included the following woods, or coppices. Ansedown, Milredon, Newfeild, Sallethills, Thickehope, copices; and a wood and waste called Abbots common wood (k). Ralph Latham dyed possessed of it 19 July 1556 (l). His son—William Latham had license, 21 May 1563, to alienate the maners of Upminster-hall, and Gaynes, with appertenances; to

William Strangman, and others (m): And again, 8 August 1593, to Roger James, and his heir (n): This Roger dyed 10 Decemb. 1596, holding the lordship or maner of Upminster of the Queen in capite, in the several tenures of George Wiseman, and William Latham.—Roger, his son and heir, was 7 years old (o).

In 1599, a Court was held here in the name of Thomas Clayborne Gent. and Sarah his wife; and in 1605, another Court was kept in their names. In 1628, Sir Roger James and Mary his wife, with Sir Robert Cock and Robert Fryth and their wives, levied a fine and declared the Uses to

Ralph Latham Esq; Common Serjeant, and his heirs. In 1641 Ralph, son of the Common Serjeant, mortgaged this estate, and next year sold it for 6640*l.* to second son of Baptist Noel, grandson and heir apparent to Edward Lord Campden. In 1664 the said Henry Noel possessed it: He dyed in 1677, and by will gave it to his wife for life, then to his brother—Edward, afterwards Earl of Gainsborough, in whom it continued till 1685; then it was purchased under a decree in Chancery by Captain Andrew Branfill. He was of Dartmouth in Devonshire; and being bred up to the sea; as most of his relations were, became Commander of a ship at the age of 19 years, and by his industry acquired a considerable fortune. The original name of this family is supposed to have been Bampffield, but since altered to Branfill: the Arms of both families being the same. In 1681, he married Damaris, eldest daughter of John Aylet of Kelvedon-Hatch, son to the heroic Captain Aylet, of Magdalen-Laver; concerning whom see more under that parish. By her he had several children. He dyed 27 July 1709, aged 59, and was buried in the north aisle of this Church; with a monument.—Champion Branfill Esq; his eldest son and heir, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Browne citizen and vintner of London. He was High Sheriff of Essex, in 1734, and dyed in . . . —Champion Branfill Esq; is his son and heir, present possessor [B].

A third MANER;

in this parish, that was Uluuin's in Edward the Confessor's reign, belonged to Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, at the time of the general Survey [C].

This I take to have been the most southerly part of this parish, adjoining to Alveley, and parcel of the estate called Bumpsted's [of which see an account under Alveley.] Probably it comprehended many of the lands which are now freehold in South-Upminster; if not most of the lands, from Bumpsted's along the eastern side, and so through Corbet's-Tye, as far as New-Place.

If we divide the whole parish of Upminster into ten parts, according to the number of Hides in Domesday-book; about six parts and more will belong now to the maner of Gains; about two parts to Upminster-hall; and the remaining part and a half to Bumpsted's. And what adds to the probability, or rather certainty, that these was about the present Windmill in the most conspicuous part of the country, answering to another Beacon which was near to Mr. Green's House at Navestoke. Thence more northward along Walbyrnathe, the Street which leads to Weald Camp from Tilbury or thereabout. Then to Stangape, or Stone-weare, which seems to have been a paved Passage in Brook-street Stream or Weare; so to Manner Land, which was a boundary for Weald maner, described to be a spot on the confines of Weald, Warley, and Upminster, which their processioners went up to, but none of them took in. Going eastward from No Mans Land, the circuit is ended at Tigel-hynre.

[A] I have found nothing before this time of the estate's being obliged to keep the King's Dogs, nor is it usual for Monastery estates to be so charged. This would have been a great deal too high a price in Harold's time, nor can it be thought to be imposed upon the Abbat afterwards. It is like one of the fines of Empson and Dudley, to exchange such services for ready money, and to screw up the owner of an estate to such a pitch.

very lands were what belonged to Odo, is, that Malger held also under him the lands in Alveley, adjoining to these, and part of Bumpsted's estate.

NEW PLACE,

a nominal Maner, stands a little way east from this Church: and was so named in contradistinction to Gaines, the ancient residence of the Lords of this maner. The House is down, and nothing but the out-houses remaining.

There belonged to it 40 acres of arable, holden of the maner of Cranham-hall, by fealty, and yearly rent of 33 s. And 10 acres of meadow, 2 messuages, 2 gardens, and 3 s. yearly rent, of the maner of South-Okendon, by fealty, and a red Rose on June 24.

It was part of the estate of Ralph Latham, who dyed in 1556 (p). His descendent Ralph came and resided in it, after having parted with Gains, and Upminster-hall.—Mary, his only child and heir, brought it in marriage to Sir Thomas Skipwith, Bart. of Metheringham in Lincolnshire. He sold New Place to—John Rayley, citizen and draper of London.—John, his son, departing this life without issue, in 1718, left it after the decease of Hester his mother, who dyed in 1724, to Sarah his wife, daughter of Francis Clerke, Vicar of Stoke-Daubernon, in Surrey. Having no issue, she was remarried to John Major of London.

BRIDGE-HOUSE,

another maner in this parish, stands near the Bridge over the Brook, from whence it takes its denomination: and lies partly in this parish, and partly in that of Horn-Church. John de Reydon, John Cook, and Richard Goddeston were the ancientest possessors upon record [D].

The lands belonging to it were 30 acres of arable, holden of the maner of Dovers, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6 s. . . . 18 acres of arable, and 15 acres of meadow, of the maner of Gwydye-hall, by fealty, suit of court, and yearly rent of 8 s. 8 d. . . . and 60 acres of pasture, and 6 of wood, of the Warden and Fellows of New College, by fealty, and rent of 11 s. per annum (q).

It belonged, as the former, to Ralph Latham, and his successors, mentioned above.

SUNNINGS is a capital messuage in this parish, a mile and upwards south-east from the Church, beyond Gaines.

It was anciently the residence of the Family of Frith, who were benefactors to Rainham. John Frith of Sonnings in Upminster, and of London, Scrivener, had issue George Frith of Rainham, who married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Howe of Navestok, and had by her Thomas Frith of Sonnings, who by Elizabeth, daughter of John Holden of Rainham, had Robert, Gregory, James, Joan, and Catharine.

Catharine, widow of George, was remarried to Robert Holden, and had children by him. She lived a wife and widow 65 years in Rainham, and dyed there 15 Decemb. 1612, aged 90.

Park-Corner, a farm of 66 acres in this parish, belonged to John Lewen; then to John Radford, who left it in 1723 to Tudor Lockley.

In 1569, John Willett held of the maner of Gaines, one messuage, and 50 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, here, called Martyns and Motts (r).

Corbet's Tye, a hamlet in this parish near Gaines, was so named from an owner, and the Saxon word tyg, inclosure.

Mr. James Eisdale; William Palmer; Robert Reynolds; Thomas English, and William Bravunds, have also some lands in this parish.

The Charitable Benefactions, are Five pounds ten shillings, distributed in bread weekly, and for a sermon: the gift of Thomas Frith.

Given by Mr. Phoenix 40l. towards a stock.
—5l. added, in 1613, by William Latham Esq;
—5l. added, in 1626, by Mrs. Grace Latham.
—5l. added, in 1636, by Mrs. Alice Latham.
—20l. added by Mr. Nathan Sand, Curate of this parish.

In North Upminster is a mineral Water impregnated with alkaline salts, of the same nature as that at Brentwood. It is good to correct acicities, and in vomitings, reachings, and too copious hæmorrhoidal fluxes.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence, consists of a body and a north aisle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel, built by Sir John Engaine. The Church and Chancel are tiled, the rest leaded.

In 1638, part of the Church and Steeple were fired by lightning, and defaced; but since repaired. The Tower, which is of stone, contains 4 Bells; and on the top of it there is a Spire, partly shingled and partly leaded.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Gaines, till they were separated by Sir John Engaine, as related above. After that time the Advowson of the Rectory continued in Engaine's heirs. From Sir Thomas Engaine, it came to his sister Elizabeth, and her husband Sir Laurence Pabenham. Their only daughter and heir, Catharine, brought it to her first husband, Sir Thomas Alesbury; and afterwards to her second husband, Sir William Cheney, or Cheyne;

The present Rector, Mr. Samuel Bradshaw, hath built an elegant Parsonage-house.

The Chapel above-mentioned was built by Sir John Engaine, and thence called Gaines-Chapel, and St. Mary's, as well as the Lane near it, because dedicated to St. Mary. 'Twas the burial place of the Families of Engaine, and Latham; which had in it several monuments and epitaphs. Hamlet Clarke, Gent. whose only child Mary was married to Ralph Latham of this place Esq; and who himself took to his second wife Alice mother of the said Ralph; 'out of his pious devotion to the Honour of God, did at his sole charge repair and beautify this Chapel, A. D. 1630.' And also set up the Arms of Latham and R. L. on the north wall, and in the east window of the same, the Arms of Latham, Dencourt &c. with 1630 under them.

WARLEY,

Two adjoining Parishes of this name, are distinguished from each other by the appellations of Great, and Little; otherwise Abbess, and Semeles.

From which of these Saxon words, pæp, signifying Weare or pond; paap, a Sea-weed; pape, wares, or merchandise [E]; the first syllable of the name is formed, we cannot judge. As for the termination ley, it signifies untilled, or pasture, land. It is otherwise written in records Verdeleia, Wardley, and Wareleia.

II. GREAT WARLEY is the largest Parish of the two, as the name imports.

In it are two Maners, 1. The maner of Great Warley, alias Abbess-Warley. 2. . . . that of Warley Franks.

The Maner of GREAT OR ABBESS WARLEY, belonged, before and after the Conquest, to the

By an exact account of all the Inhabitants taken in 1695, there were found to be, in South-end 258, in North-end 112. Tot. 370.

South-Upminster is rated to the land-tax at 984 l. and North-Upminster at 692 l.

The learned and good Dr. William Derham, Rector of this parish from 1689 to 1735, was not only an ornament to it, but also to this County and Nation. He was born at Stowton near Worcester 26 November 1657; educated at Trinity-College in Oxford; Chaplain to Catharine Lady-Dowager Grey of Warke; presented to this Living 31 August 1689; installed Canon of Windsor 19 September 1716; created Doctor in Divinity by diploma from the University of Oxford, 26 June 1730. He was one of the most useful and industrious Members of the Royal Society, to which he communicated great numbers of curious pieces, inserted in their Philosophical Transactions. Physico-Theology; Astro-Theology; Christo-Theology; Notes and Observations upon Eleazar Albin's Natural History of Birds, and English Insects, &c. are well known works of his. But for a fuller account of him we beg leave to refer to Biographia Britannica, Vol. III. p. 1649. By Anne his wife, aunt to George Scott of Chigwell Esq; he had several children; the eldest of whom, William Derham, D. D. dyed President of St. John's College in Oxford some years ago.

Abbess of Berking [F]: which occasioned its name of Abbess.

The mansion house stood behind the Church, but is now down: The Farm house belonging to the estate is called Pound-house. The Court is kept at an ale-house on Warley Common.

The Celerefs of Berking Nunnery received from the collector of Warley 50 s. at Easter, and 50 s. at Michaelmas (w).

Upon the suppression of Monasteries this estate coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, 10 Febr. 1539, the maner of Great Warely, with all lands and privileges thereto belonging, in this parish, Stifford, and Shenfield; and the Advowson of the Church, to William Gonson Esq; and his heirs: to hold by the tenth part of a knight's fee, and payment of 4 l. 2 s. per ann. (x). And yet, 28 May 1541, Edward North is found to have alienated them to Edward Barrett Esq; (y); so great was the confusion of property in those times of Reformation! But William Gonson at the time of his decease, 3 August 1544, was possessed of this maner, and Advowson, and 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 6*l*. rent;—Christopher his son and heir, was then 30 years old (z): whose son—Benjamin Gonson succeeded him, and dyed 26 November 1577, leaving—Benjamin, his son and heir 26 years old (a). He dyed 26 May 1600, possessed of this maner, and Advowson, and of Cley-rey &c. in this parish: And his four daughters were his coheirs; namely, Ursula, wife of Robert Peterfon; Anne, wife of Giles Fleming; Benedicta, wife of Thomas Wallenger; and Thomasine, wife of Edward Fenton (b).

Among these four was this estate divided. For Anne Fleming, who dyed 28 March 1627, held a fourth part of the maner of Great-Warley, and of the Advowson of the Church, and of other, the premisses, of the King in capite:—Ursula Fleming, her daughter and heir was 17 years old (c). The Fleming Family lived at Warley-Place.

Some of the Evelyn family had it from the year 1649 to 1655; and in 1655 sold it to

John Hart, of London, merchant: of whom it was purchased, in 1669, by

Rowland Winne of London, merchant, second son of Edmund Winne, of Thornton in Lincolnshire Esq; younger brother to Sir George Winne of Nostell-Abbey in Yorkshire. Rowland fined for Alderman and Sheriff of the city of London. He gave this estate to two nephews, and the survivor of them.—Mark Winne Esq; one of the nephews dyed possessed of the whole, from whom it descended to—Mark Winne Esq;

This Family sprung from those of the same name in Wales, and have been a long time at Little Warley.

The Maner of WARLEY-FRANKS.

The mansion house stands about a mile west from the Church.

This was held free by one Godric in Edward the Confessor's reign; and at the time of the Survey by Suene of Essex [G]. His grandson Hugh de Essex forfeiting it by his cowardise, [as related under Rayleye, and in the other Volume, p. 611.] it escheated to the Crown.

K. Henry III. upon his creating Hubert de Burgh Earl of Kent, 11 February 1226, granted him, among others, the maner of Warlee, part of the possessions of Henry de Essex (d).

It was, not long after, in Francis de Scoland, father and son; from whom it is supposed to have derived the name of FRANKS.

Francis de Scoland, who dyed in 1284, held of Laurence de Plumberive one messuage and 310 acres of arable, ten of meadow, 12 of wood, and 40*s*. rent in Warle, by the service of one knight's fee;—Francis was his son and heir (e). The estate continued some time in this family, for we find that, in 1372, Francis de Scoland of Cataungre, granted to John Payn, citizen of London, his heirs, and assigns, the maner of Great-Warle (f).

In 1418, Joane, wife of Roger Ashbournham had the maner of Frankis in Great-Warle; and also the maner of Southall in Rainham, and estates in Upminster. — Robert, son of Anne her daughter, her grandson and heir, was eighteen years old (g).

John Godston, who dyed 24 Febru. 1498, held the maner of Warle-Franks, of the King in capite; by knight's service; and parcels of land, called Latchetts, Tarecroft, Smithfeild, and Smithes mead, Coddeham, North-land &c.—Jeane, Elizabeth, Alice, Margaret, and Milli-cent, daughters of his son William, were his heirs (h).

The maner after this appears divided between Hollingshed, Elton, and Ellis, probably husbands of three of the daughters, but no wives names are in these Inquisitions. Ralph Hollingshed had licence, 20 March 1528, to alienate a fourth part of the maner of Franks, alias Warley-Franks to Henry Averell of London, goldsmith. He departed this life 13 Novemb. 1540, leaving—John, his son and heir (i): who, at the time of his decease, 20 Septemb. 1554, held a fourth part of this maner, and the third part of a fourth part of the same, and the third part of a messuage, 4 cottages, 360 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 280 of pasture, 95 of wood, 30 of marsh, and 40*s*. rent in this parish. His father elder brother's son—Bartholomew Averell, then aged 42 years, was his heir (k). He dyed 14 May 1562, possessed of the premisses.—Bartholomew was his son (l) [H].

John Elton, coheir to this estate, dyed 28 May 1550, possessed of a third part of this maner, and the other premisses (m).—Charles, his brother and heir, dyed 12 Novemb. 1586, possessed also of the same, leaving—Antony, his son and heir (n).

Hugh Ellice, another coheir to this estate, dyed 30 June 1538, possessed of a fourth part of the maner of Warle.—Frankes, and a third part of a fourth part of the same.—William Elys, his son, then aged 23 years, held a third part of this maner, and the same quantity of land as Henry Averell abovesaid. He dyed 14 January 1543, leaving an only daughter — Anne, but 2 months and 7 days old (o).

Thomas Drywood, and Anne his wife bought Bartholomew Averell's share of this estate, by license dated 4 Novemb. 1584. He also bought Antony Elton's share, by license dated 2 March 1589 (p). And it seems very probable, that Anne his wife was the daughter and heir of William Elys. He dyed 16 March 1592-3, holding two third parts of the maner of Warley Franks, of Henry Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Raley, by two parts divisible into three of one knight's fee, and suit of Court from month to month. — William Drywood, his son and heir (q), of Chesthunt in Hertfordshire Esq; did, in 1604, sell this estate to Nicolas Fuller of Gray's-inn Esq; afterwards knighted. He held this maner of Warley Franks of the King in capite; and dying 3 July 1620, was succeeded by his son — Dowce Fuller, of Chamber-house in Berkshire Esq; (r). The latter, in 1658, sold this estate to Thomas Gundrey, of Chingford Esq; [concerning whom see more under that parish.] From him it hath passed to his heirs.

Peter Poulton, and Elizabeth his wife, passed by fine, in 1568, to Henry Billingsley, two third parts of one third part of this maner of Warleigh Franks; and two thirds of one third part of several parcels of land in Abbesse Warley, and Reynham (s).

WARLEY HALL, a capital messuage, standing east of the Church, is no Maner. Benedicta, daughter of Benjamin Gonson above-mentioned, having it for her purparty, brought it to her husband Thomas Wallenger. From him it came to Antony Wallenger of London Esq; who dyed 4 June 1728. One of his daughters was married to John Wright, another to . . . Webster; and the youngest to Mr. Harris, of London, merchant. They left three daughters; one married to Mr. Batt, of Devonshire-Square, London, merchant; another to John Creswick of the Custom-house Esq; and another to . . . Godfrey.

WARLEY-PLACE is an ancient seat, pleasantly situated, about two miles north from this Church.

It once belonged to the Abbess of Berking; and afterwards to the ancient family of Fleming. Thomas Fleming was father of Giles, of Warley-place, Esq; who dyed 18 October, 1623, having married Catharine, daughter of Paul Claybrook of Kent, by whom he had, Capt. William Fleming, and Giles. The latter, who dyed 29 November, 1633, had by Susanna, his wife, daughter of Francis Sturtevant, two sons, John, and Edmund, and 8 daughters.

Capt. John Fleming, the eldest son, married Mary daughter of Ralph Latham, of Upminster, Esq; and had by her 9 daughters; of whom, Anne was wife of Nathan Wright of London, merchant; Susan, of Samuel Ferrers, of Berkshire; and Martha, of Thomas Clere, of London [I].

This estate belonged afterwards to Thomas Jackson Esq; Bencher of Gray's-inn, who departed this life 13 October 1727, aged 64; and then to — George Jackson, Esq; his son, who dyed 28 Decemb. 1734. His sister and heir, Winifred Jackson, that dyed 1 May 1746, gave by will Warley-Place, and the lands thereto belonging, with a considerable estate in London, to David Scott Esq; Upon an ejectment brought by him against the heirs at law, he had a verdict at the summer-assises in 1747. And a writ of error being brought thereon, judgment was affirmed in the Court of King's-Bench in Easter-Term 1748.

Browns, a tenement so called, in this parish; and 40 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 50 of pasture, and 8 of wood, belonged in 1557 to Ralph Latham: who had also here 10 acres of arable, and 8 of pasture, called Cotterells (t).

Cley-Tey, a messuage or farm, with 212 acres of land in this parish, belonged to the Gonson Family (u).

Mr. John Arnold; Thomas Robinson; Samuel Sumner; John Scott, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, and almost of the same breadth: the whole tyled. The Steeple, in which were 5 Bells, was burnt down with lightning, some years ago. At present there is a wooden Belfrey, shingled; and in it 3 Bells. On the top there is a small spire, of one square piece of wood [K].

This Rectory was in the gift of Berking Nunnery till the dissolution. After that it was granted to the Gonson family (w): in which it continued till after the year 1589; and by successive purchases came into several other hands. It now belongs to St. John's college in Cambridge.

The Priory of Prittlewell received Tithes out of several lands in this Parish; which, by a very advantageous composition to the Rector, were granted to him and his successors, 20 July 1513, for the reasonable payment of 20 s. a year (x).

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1100 l. 2 s. od.

12. LITTLE WARLEY.

This Parish lies East of the other, and on that account is called East Warley; It is otherwise styled in records Semeles, and in Latin De Septem Molis, & Septem Molar' (y), because there might be in it at one time Seven Mills; which is a thing not impossible.

Anciently this parish belonged to the Church of St. Paul; but had been taken from it, and one Guert was in possession before the Conquest. William the Conqueror gave it to William, Bishop of London, because it had formerly belonged to his see [L].

How, and when, the Bishops of London parted with this Maner, does not appear; but they had the Advowson of the Church as low as the year 1327 (z).

There is only one MANER in this parish.

Little Warley Hall stands near the Church, and is pleasantly situated, with a fine prospect over the vale below: but it is old and decayed.

William de Semeles was possessed of this maner in the reign of K. Henry III. [M].

About the same time, or soon after, it seems to have been in the Burnel family, mentioned above, p. 14. 17. and in the other Volume, p. 12. 577. For, Petronilla de Bello manso, Pernel de Belhouse, who dyed in 1296, held of the inheritance of Philip Burnel, by the rent of 1d. per an. one messuage in Warle-Semeles, 280 acres of arable, 18 of meadow, 15 of pasture, 33 s. rent of assize; — Malcolm was her son and heir (a). But how Burnel came to be interested here nothing shews, nor how the Bishop's right, acknowledged in Domesday-book, came to be defeated.

In the year 1361, Sewall Michel, of Canewdone, presented to this Church (b). And in 1363, he did grant to Sir Thomas Tyrell, and his heirs, two acres of land in Little-Warle-Semeles, with the Advowson of the Church of the same village (c). But it must be supposed, the Patron of the Living had lands here before his purchase of two acres.

About the same time, John de Fishide held what was called his maner of Little-Warle; for John Smert, who was out-lawed for felony in 1372, held a messuage, and half an acre of arable, here, of Fishide, as of this maner (d).

In 1413, Thomas Cleveboud released to William, son of William Parker citizen and mercer of London; and to John Parker, brother of the saïd William Parker the father, and Edmund Chymbeham, the other brother of the saïd William Parker the father, all his right in the maner of Warle in the vill of East Warle Semeles (e). From these Parkers descended the Lords Morley and Monteagle. [See above, p. 512.]

John Eton, who dyed in 1453, held the maner of East-Warle-Semeles, and divers lands and tements called Fynches, of Thomas Bishop of London, in right of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, by fealty and 10 s. per an. rent for all services; — Isabel his daughter and heir, was forty-one Weeks old (f). It is strange that the Bishop's title, so long dormant, should in this reign be revived. We find it mentioned again in the time of K. Henry VIII. and Sir John Tyrell holding under it. This seems to have been for part of the maner which some of his ancestors had purchased of one Gylwyn. For, in 1503, a fine passed between Robert Tyrell Knight, plaintiff, and Richard Gylwyn and Alice his wife, deforc' of the third part of the maner of East-Warley-Semel (g). Sir John Tyrell, who dyed 28 February 1540, held the maner of Little-Warley, alias Warley-Semels, and 300 acres of arable, 40 of wood, and 40 s. rent in East-Warley-Semells and Childerdich, of the Bishop of London; — John Tyrell, his son and heir, who was then aged 26 years (h), departed this life 2 March 1585, leaving — Mary, wife of Thomas Clinton, his daughter and heir (i).

Of this ancient Family a particular account will be given, under Heron, their seat in East Horndon. And here we shall only give this short abstract. Sir John Tyrell of Heron, Treasurer of the Household to K. Henry VI. married Alice, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Coggeshall, and had by her — Thomas his son and heir, afterwards knighted; who by Emma, daughter of Sir John Marney of Laver-Marney, had four sons, 1. Sir William the eldest, of Heron; 2. Thomas of South-Okendon; 3. Humfrey, fixed at Warley-Hall; and 4. Robert, at Horndon on the Hill. — Humfrey-Tyrell, of Warley-hall, Esq; was twice married. By his first wife, Isabella, daughter and co-heir of John Helion Esq; he had Anne, heiress to her mother, and married to Sir Roger Wentworth of Codham-Hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 306. 381. 531.] His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Walwyn of Lounsford in Hertfordshire, by whom he had — Sir John Tyrell of Warley, his son and heir; and Humfrey of Shenfeild, who by Alice, daughter and heir of Thomas Glemham, had Thomas, Richard, Henry, and Robert [N]. Sir John married Anne, daughter of Edward Norrys, by whom he had, John, William, Stephen, Ralph, Maurice; and Gertrude, wife of Sir William Petre. He dyed 28 February 1540. His son—John Tyrell Esq; married Anne, daughter and heir of Ambrose Woolley citizen of London, by whom he left, at the time of his decease 2 March 1585,—Mary his daughter and heir, wife of Thomas Clinton, second son of Edward Earl of Lincoln.

The next that we find possessed of this estate, is Sir Denner Strutt Knight, created a Baronet 5 March 1641, and stiled of Little-Warley-Hall. His first wife was Dorothy, one of the daughters of Francis Stafsmore of Forlesworth in Leicestershire, Esq; Knight for that shire in the first parliament of K. Charles I. She dyed 17 August 1641. His second wife was Elizabeth daughter of Sir Tho: Woodhouse of Kimberley. His third was Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Chapman of London, Esq; She dyed 4 August 1654, aged 32. By his 2d. wife, he left two daughters co-heirs; Anne, the younger, was wife of William Samwell of Watton in Norfolk;

Blanch, the elder, was married to Thomas Bennet of Wiltshire, Esq; related to Lord Ofsulston: and had by her, Denner, Bennet, Thomas, Andrew, John [O]. The eldest son and heir,—Denner Bennet Esq; married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. John Walker of Brentwood, and had by her, Denner, Hugh, Elizabeth, and Mary.—Denner, the eldest son, dyed in 1741, and left his son.—Denner Bennet.

DANNELINS, or Dame-Ellins, is a farm, or reputed Maner, of about 140 acres of woodland, and other grounds adjoining. Denner Bennet Esq; and his trustees, sold it, in 1686, to Miles Corbet, Attorney, of Lyons-inn and Old Brentford. It belongs to . . . Mr. Grosvenor.

Thomas Sumner hath also some lands in this parish.

Mr. Pocklington, of this place, Attorney, gave 18 l. a year for ever to the Poor of this parish; and tied lands here for the payment.

Three Houses with gardens are also for the use of the Poor.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and stiled. The Tower was new-built of brick in 1718, and contains 1 Bell.

This Rectory hath been in the gift of the ancient family of Tyrell of Heron, ever since the year 1382.

lies north of the Warley's. The name is otherwise written in records, Childewyk, Childiche, Childrick, Chiltendich, Chilterdich, Chilterdyke, Ciltedic, Ciltendis. From whence it is derived, is not very easy to discover. A Ditch being an usual mound, or boundary, among the ancient inhabitants of this island, here might formerly have been some remarkable one. From whence the first part of the name was taken, whether from cild, cille, or ciltern, I am not able to determine.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the lands within this parish were divided into three parts; one whereof belonged to Herbert, and afterwards to the Queen; another to Aluuen, a free-woman; and the other to Orgar, a freeman:

[N] This Robert was of Berking; and by Anne his wife, daughter of Bolney, had Robert of Warwics in this County.

[O] Sir Denner Strutt was greatly hurt by the civil wars, being forced to pay a composition of 1350 l. List of Compounders.

At the time of the Survey, the first was held by the Sheriff of Surrey; the second by Suene, and his under-tenant Osbern; and the third by Saffeline [P].

They were divided afterwards into the two Maners of 1. Childerditch-hall; and 2. . . . Tillingham-hall.

CHILDERDITCH-HALL

stands a little way south-west from the Church.

This is what belonged to the King at the Survey, and was in the hands of the Sheriff of Surrey. The Maner is said to have continued in the Crown till the reign of K. Henry VIII; who granted it, as well as the other, to Sir Thomas Seymor.

This is placed within the Hundred of Berdestaple, next to another estate of Suene's.

But

But several of the Demefnes of it were granted early to the Abbey of Coggeshall, as appears by the quantity of land they had here, even two knights fees, in the year 1254. And some lands they had obtained from Robert Hovel, and Margaret his wife [2].

How Childerditch-Hall with its demefnes was disposed of by K. Henry VIII. we shall see presently.

stands low about a mile and a quarter south south-east from the Church, and contains a vast extent of land: some of which lies in the parish of South-Weald.

In all probability it was so denominated from a Family, surnamed de Tillingham from the parish of that name in this County.

Richard de Tillingham held 2 fees in Childiche and Tilbery; which Robert de Tillebury held afterwards in 1165 (k). And another Richard de Tilbury held the same, in 1275, of the Honor of Reyle, by knight's service (l).

Sir William Baude, senr. who dyed in 1376, held this maner of Tillingham of the King, as of his Honor of Reyle, by service and homage (m). These Bauds were seated at Coringham, and had also estates at Wormingford, and Bures: see in the other Volume, p. 231.

In 1377, license was granted to William de Humberstone and others, to give the maner called Tillingham-Hall, in Childerdich, Dodinghurst, and South-Welde, late the estate of William Baud, to the Abbat and Convent of Coggeshale (n), for finding daily a wax-taper, to burn, in their Abbey-Church, before the high altar, at the time of high mass (o).

The maner of Tillingham continued in the Abbey of Coggeshall for many years, but not till its surrender and final dissolution which was 5 February 1538. For, in 1525, K. Henry VIII. had granted it among many other estates to Cardinal Wolsey, for the building and endowment of his two Colleges (p). This seems to be the reason, why it is not valued among the rest of that Abbey's revenues. [See in the other Volume, p. 164.] Upon the Cardinal's præmunire all his lands and goods coming to the Crown, K. Henry granted the Maners of Childerdich, and Tillingham, &c. to

Sir Thomas Seymor, and his heirs (q). The 17th. of April 1540, he had license to alienate the Maners and Granges called Childerdiche-hall, and Tillingham-hall, in Childerdiche, Little Warley, and West-Horndon, to Sir Richard Riche (r): who, upon license obtained 15 April 1554 (s), settled them, with North Weald, on his second son, Sir Hugh Riche; at his marriage with Anne, daughter and heir of Sir John Wentworth; He dying 1 November 1554. She took to her second husband Henry Fitz-Alan, Lord Maltravers [R]. But as Sir Hugh had no issue, these Maners reverted to his father Richard Lord Riche, who was possessed of them at the time of his decease, 12 June 1566 (t). From him they passed to his descendents — Robert, Lord Riche, and — Robert, Earl of Warwick (u). The daughters of Robert, the second Earl of Warwick, seem to have shared these estates: For, Edward Montague, Earl of Manchester, who had married Anne, the second of those Daughters, (and others,) presented to this Vicarage in 1662 (w).

For many years they were in the Cheke Family of Pirgo. Concerning which see above, p. 61.] Sir Thomas Cheke had to his 2d. wife Essex, daughter of Robert Rich the first Earl of Warwick of this Family; and with her he probably got this estate in marriage; or else purchased it of his brother, or father-in-law. However the Cheke family appears possessed of it ever since the year 1666. Namely — Robert, — John, — Edward, — Thomas, — Edward. And then, in 1707, it came to the youngest sister of the last, namely

Thomas Offin hath also some lands in this parish.

A widow gave ten pounds to this parish, for ever, to be lent out, by 50s. to some of the poor inhabitants, for a year, without interest.

About a mile from this Church, there are Alms-houses for two dwellers.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints and St. Faith, is a neat building, of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The Steeple, of brick at the bottom, and of timber above that, with a spire shingled, hath in it only 1 Bell.

Robert Hovel, and Margaret his wife, in 1249, put the Advowson of this Church into the hands of the Abbot and Monks of Coggeshall; to which they presented as a Rectory from about that time till 1370 (x).

In 1379, upon the petition of the Abbot and Convent to Urban VI. that Pope, by his bull [R] She had the Advowson of the Vicarage during her life, and presented to it from 1557 to 1575.

dated 16th August that year, deputed and empowered Simon Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, to appropriate this Church to that Abbey: which he accordingly did 13 June 1380; and, the 16th of January following, ordained and endowed a Vicarage here. But this being done without the King's license according to the statute of mortmain [S], the patronage became forfeited to the Crown. However they obtained a pardon from K. Henry

VI. for the sum of 100 s. paid into the Hancoper, under pretence that it was done by them through ignorance, and the neglect of their Counsel. And they remained possessed of the Great Tithes, and of the Advowson of the Vicarage, till their dissolution; when they were granted away with the two Maners and have passed with them ever since.

is a large Parish, taking up the northern point of this Hundred. The Saxon word Weald signifies Wood, and this place seems to have been one of the first inhabited parts of the Forest of Essex. It has the addition of South, to distinguish it from North-Weald near Epping.

By the south-west side of Weald-Hall Park, there is a Camp, inclosing about seven acres. It is circular, and single-ditched, and is thought to have been a Roman Summer Camp, or Castra Exploratorum.

The chief part of this parish belonged before, and at, the time of the Survey to Waltham-Abbey [T]; Geoffrey de Magnaville got some of it by way of exchange. And Robert Gernon had also one portion, which had belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to one Sprot.

These lands were divided afterwards into these several Maners. 1. The Maner of South-Weald. 2. that of Bowells. 3. The Maner of Caldecot's. 4. The Maner of Brentwood, or Costed-hall. 5. that of Baads, or Dounfells. 6. and that of Ropers.

In this parish are the Four Hamlets, of Brentwood, Brook-street, Haftingwood, and Thornwood.

The mansion house, called Weald-Hall, is pleasantly situated, a little way north-west from the Church.

This is one of the seventeen Lordships where with Earl Harold endowed his Abbey at Waltham in the year 1062, under the name of Walda. And by the same name it was confirmed to that House by K. Henry II. and K. Richard I. (y) [U]. From its belonging to the said Abbey it received the denomination of Abbot's Weld.

It continued in the possession of that Abbey till 26 February 1540, when K. Henry VIII. granted the Maner of South-Weld, with appertinances, and the Rectory or Great Tithes, for the sum of 883 l. 6 s. 8 d. together with a messuage called Bowells lately belonging to the Priory of Blackmore, to Sir Brian Tuke, Treasurer of his Chamber, and his heirs; To hold in capite by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and rent of 4 l. 18 s. 2 d. (z). He had been Sheriff of this County in 1533; and was a man of learning [W]. For a further account of him, [U] The boundaries of this estate are set down in the Monasticon, in the following words, in Saxon. Eneꝝt of dellen nonð into pepe gemýðe. eaꝝt into Hapegeaete; of Hapegeaete eaꝝt into þam pulfrýtte. of ðam pýtte juð into punce; of þam punce juð to fneobearner hlýpe 7 7pa into manner lanbe. 7 þanon eft into dellen.

From Dellen north through a Gate, east into Halfgate, from Halfgate east into the Wulfpytte. from that pytte south into the park or inclosed land, from thence south to Freebearn's leap. and so into Mannes land. and then again to Dellen.

Upon which N. Salmon made the following observations, or rather conjectures. The Delle is the low ground towards Navestoke, through which the Rivulet passes which divides the Liberty of Havering from Weald. The Gate, or way, goes from thence by Pilgrims-Hatch through part of Shenfeld to Billericay, out of which is still a Road through the middle of the Camp. The Northern course of this Road points to Ongar, anciently called by the Saxons Aungre, i. e. the Place, by way of eminence. The Road as it passes by Coxey-Green has the name of West-street. North of this lane and Coxey Green, is a lane retaining the name of Haccot-Lane and Haccot-Hall, supposed to be a corruption from Half-Gate. Toward the north-east are Pits, named probably by the Saxons Wulfpitts, for having been the kennel of beasts of prey whilst Wolves were in this island. Thence we go south to Purce; thence still southward to Freebairns-Leap, somewhere about Brook-street: supposed to have been a Place of Exercise of young gentlemen, for vaulting, leaping, throwing the bar, and other feats of activity, in all nations used as well as Troy Games by the Romans. Hence the description leads to Mannes-Land, and ends the circle at Delle again.

[W] J. Leland highly commends him, for his wonderful eloquence in the English language.—'Anglicæ linguæ eloquentia mirificus.'—And J. Bale says, he wrote Observations on Chaucer, and a Chronicle against Polydore Vergil. T. Tanneri Bibliotheca: sub voce.—He had been constituted in 1522 Secretary to the King for the French tongue; was Clerk of the Parliaments: and in 1528, being one of the King's Secretaries, was sent Ambassador to the King of France with Bp. and his estates, see under Layer-Marney, where his seat was. He dyed 26 October, 1545, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

Charles Tuke Esq (a); who departing this life 29 March 1547, was succeeded by his next brother—George (b): to whom indeed their father had left this estate by will (c). He, and Walter Celey, Gent. had license 10 Decemb. 1547, to alienate them to

Sir Richard Riche, Lord Chancellor of England. And a Fine was levied accordingly (d). Of Riche I suppose it was purchased by Sir Antony Browne. The Browne Family was originally of the west of England. Robert Browne had two sons, Thomas, of Abbess Roding in this county; and Robert, of Wakefeild in Yorkshire, which last had only one daughter named Agnes.—Thomas, the eldest son, married Joanna, daughter of . . . Kirkham, and had by her—Robert Browne, of Langenhoo in this County Esq; who by his wife, Mary daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Charlton, had 3 sons, Robert, Humfrey, and—Wistan [X]. This last married Elizabeth, daughter of William Mordant of Turvey in Bedfordshire Esq; by whom he had Antony the purchaser of this estate; John, of Abbess-Roding; Thomas, a priest; William, that dyed without issue; Jane, wife of . . . Bridges, Constance, wife of . . . Smyth of Lincolnshire; Anne, wife of William Eyton; . . . of John Pryour; and Elizabeth, of John Cutts, of Depden.—Antony Browne afore said studied some time at Oxford; but before he had taken a degree he removed to the Middle Temple. In 1555 he was created Serjeant at law; and, 16 October the same year, made King and Queen's Serjeant. The 5th of October 1558 he was constituted Chief Justice of the Common Pleas: and continued in that office by Qu. Elizabeth, 18 Novemb. 1559. But, the 22d of January following, he was removed from it, most probably because he was a Papist, however he continued as one of the Judges of that Court: in which employment he remained till his decease 16 May 1567, having received in 1566, the honor of Knighthood from the Queen in the Parliament-house (e) [X]. He and his Lady lie buried in the Chancel of this Church, under a large tomb. Her name was Joane, only daughter and heir of William Farington Esq; widow of Charles Booth Esq; she dyed 22 Novemb. the same year. They left no issue. The estates he possessed, were, the maner and Rectory, of South-Welde, and

20 messuages, 40 acres of arable, . . . meadow; 300 of pasture, 200 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 4 l. rent, in this parish, Shenfeild, and Duddinghurst; which he held of the Queen in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 4 l. 18 s. 2 d. He held also, in this parish, the maners of Calcote, and Costed-hall: the Hospital and Free-Chapel in Brookstreet: the maner of Cockermouth, and the Rectory in Dagenham: Church-hall in Pakelsham, &c. (f). His great nephew—Wistan Browne Esq; was his heir: being the grandson of his brother John, just mentioned above, and son of George Browne, both of Abbess-Roding. [See under that parish.] Wistan Browne Esq; dyed 1 August 1580, possessed of this and other estates. He married first Mary daughter of Sir Edward Capel, by whom he had Antony, who dyed 14 April 1583, without issue: and two daughters, Catharine, wife of Sir Nicolas Waldegrave, and Jane, married first to Edward Wyatt Esq; of Gellingham, and afterwards to Gamaliel, fourth son of Henry Capel Esq; the first then aged 18 and the second 16 years (g). Antony dying thus without issue, is said to have been succeeded by his father's brother—John Brown of Wickham Esq; But the estates at South-Weald do not appear in the Inquisition taken after his death, which happened 26 February 1585, there being only the maners of Merks, and Colville-hall in White-Roding, and Church-hall in Pakelsham, set down (b). He married Anne, daughter of Thomas Stanton of Somersetshire Esq; by whom he had 3 sons, Wistan, who dyed without issue; Antony; John: and 5 daughters, Jane, wife of John Filiol of Rayne, Gent. Sibilla, of John Christmase of Colchester, Gent. Elizabeth, of Thomas Cheney; Anne, of Thomas Perient; and Mary, who had three husbands, Antony Pake, John Cutts, and Brian Tuke.—Antony, the eldest surviving son and heir, knighted 23 July 1603, married first, Margaret daughter of John Sulyard Esq; widow of Thomas Tyrell Esq; and by her had no issue; but by his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Pyrton, of Little Bentley Esq; he had John; Elizabeth, wife of . . . Tooke; and Catharine, wife of Nicolas Padmore, Vicar of this Church. He dyed 26 March 1623, possessed of this and other estates in this parish.—John Browne Esq; his son and successor (i), by Martha his wife, daughter of William Tabor L. D. had Antony; John; George; Mary, and Elizabeth.—Sir Antony, the eldest

[X] This Humfrey Browne was brought up to the Law, in the Middle Temple; created a Serjeant at law in 1532; made King's Serjeant in 1536; one of the Justices of the Common Pleas 20 November 1543; afterwards knighted. He dyed 5 Septemb. 1562, possessed of Ridley-hall in Terling; and of Whitey Roding. [See the other Volume, p. 128. 469.] He was twice married. By Anne his first wife, daughter of Sir Henry Vere, of Great Addington, he had, George, who dyed before him, leaving, Thomas his son, that dyed without issue. By Anne, his second wife, daughter of John Lord Hussey, he had Mary, wife of Thomas Wilford, of Kent, Esq; Christian, of Sir John Tufton; and Catharine, wife of Sir William Rooper, remarried, after his decease, to Roger Townshend of Brampton in Suffolk, Esq; father of Sir Roger Townshend of Rainham. . . son [Z], having obtained an act of Parliament in 1661, or 1662, to sell lands for payment of his debts, alienated this estate to

Sir William Scroggs, who was created Serjeant at law 25 June 1669; King's Serjeant 2 November following; Justice of the Common Pleas 23 October 1676; Chief Justice of the King's Bench 31 May 1678; but removed 11 Apr. 1681, through the heats of the Plots in the reign of K. Charles II. (k). He married a daughter of Matthew Bluck Esq; and dying 25 October 1683, was buried in this Church.—Sir William Scroggs Knight his son and heir, not long after sold this estate to Erasmus Smith, alias Heriz, of St. John's Clerkenwell in Middlesex, Esq; Alderman of the City of London. He was eldest son, by the second wife, of Roger Smith, alias Heriz, of Edmunthorp in Leicestershire, Knight; whose great-grandfather was William Smith, alias Heriz, of Withcock in Leicestershire Esq; descended in a direct line from the ancient family of Heriz of Weverton in Nottinghamshire, but who changed his name, in the reign of K. Henry VII. to Smith, alias Heriz, and quartered the Arms of Smith and Heriz, as all his descendents have done ever since. The cause of this so changing his name is not mentioned: It may however be reasonably presumed, that the maner of Withcock might be settled upon him by some relation of that name, upon those conditions; because in the Pedigree of Heriz, when he is named, these words follow, "Smith of Withcock." He married Catharine, daughter of William Ashby of Loseby in Leicestershire, Esq; whose ancestor had to wife Elizabeth the heir-general of William Burdet of Loseby aforesaid, Esq; that had married Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir of Sir Robert de la Zouch of Lubsthorp in Leicestershire; from whom descended Alan, Lord Zouch of Ashby: whose lineal ancestor, named Alan Viscount of Rohan in Bretagne in France, married Constance, daughter and heir of Conan le Gros Duke of Bretagne, by Maud his wife daughter of Henry I. King of England.—The lineal ancestor of the said William Smith, also named William Heriz, in the reign of K. Edward I. married Maud, daughter of Peter Lord Bassett of Drayton; from which family descended the Duke of Kingston upon Hull, and the Viscount Chaworth.

Erasmus Smith, Esq; above-mentioned, married Mary, daughter of Hugh Hare, Baron of Colrane in Ireland, by the Lady Lucy Montague, daughter of Henry Earl of Manchester. He had by her six sons, Erasmus, Samuel, Hugh, Roger, Montague, and Henry; and three daughters, Lucy, Mary, and Anne. Erasmus, and Samuel, dying without issue [A], the estate descended to the third son—Hugh Smith Esq; who also survived his three younger brothers, that dyed batchelors. He made great improvements at his seat of Weald-Hall, and much beautified it in the modern taste: But dyed 9 May 1745. He married Dorothy, daughter of the Honble. Dacre-Lennard-Barrett, of Alveley, by whom he left only two Daughters, coheirs, Dorothy, and Lucy [B].

On the 17th of April 1746, Dorothy was married to the Hon. John-Smith Barry Esq; fourth son of James Earl of Barrymore: And Lucy, 17 March 1746-7, to the Rt. Hon. James Stanley, Lord Strange, eldest son of Edward Earl of Derby, by whom she had 5 children. She dyed 7 February 1759.

Thomas Towers Esq; now resides at Weald-Hall.

The Maner of BOWELLS, otherwise called Boyls, Cooke a Bowells, Dowells, and Cook a Dowells.

The mansion house stands about a mile and a half south of this Church, on the right hand side of the road leading from Brook-street to Warley.

This seems to be the carucate of land, lying within the Maner of Weald, which one Sochman had possessed before the Conquest; and that Robert Gernon held, of the King's gift, as mentioned in note [T].

It belonged afterwards to the Priory of Blackmore, and was granted, 26 February 1540, with the Maner of South-Weld, to Sir Brian Tuke (l). His son—George Tuke obtained a license, 20 April 1551, to alienate this messuage, called Bowells, alias Cocke a Bowellys, and 40 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 70 of pasture, and 4 of wood, with appertenances, in this parish, to Humfrey Frith (m).—Robert Fryth, who dyed 27 July 1573, held this capital messuage, and 120 acres of land occupied therewith, of the Queen, in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee.—Ralph was his son (n).

It belonged afterwards to John Justice Esq; of whom it was purchased by David Papillon, Esq; late Commissioner of Excise, and Member of Parliament: and now belongs to his son.

The Maner of CALDECOTS.

The mansion house lies north of the London-road, near Weald-hall park. And the name might be derived from the two words, Ceald and cothe, i. e. cold cottage, or house. Part of the Roman Camp is within this estate.

This is the part that Sprot held in Edward the Confessor's reign; and Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Ralph, at the time of the Survey [C].

The whole, or part, of this estate was given by William, or Richard de Montfitchet to the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn. This appears by the following extract from a Rental of the Honor of Hedingham-Castle, in the reign of K. Henry VI. 'The Abbot of Stratford held 'one quarter of a knight's fee in Welde, in pure 'alms, as he says, of the donation of Richard 'Mounfichet.'

In the valuation of the lands belonging to this House, taken at the Dissolution, the state of this Maner is thus set down; Rent-afsize of the free and customary tenants 6 l. 3 s. 4 d.—Farm of the maner 53 s. 4 d.—Perquisites of Courts, 1 l. 14 s. 0 d.

After the suppression, K. Henry VIII. 22 August 1544, made a grant of this maner to Thomas Blucke, and other citizens of London (o).

Qu. Elizabeth, in 1592, granted Caldecots, a maner once belonging to Stratford-Langthorn, to William Tipper and Robert Dawe; among many other estates (p). But as few grants to those hunters after concealed Lands stood good; the same Queen, 15 August 1599, granted this estate to (q)

Antony Browne, Esq; From whom it passed, as the rest of the estates, to Hugh Smith, Esq; and his heirs.

Langton's, a principal House here, seems to have been so named from Langthorn, the Abbey at Stratford, to which it belonged.

The Maner of BRENTWOOD, otherwise COST-HALL, or COCKSTED-HALL.

This Maner contains the chief Hamlet in this parish; that of Brentwood, or Burntwood, a Town on the London-road, 17 miles from that city; pleasantly situated on a hill, with an agreeable prospect. And, as it is at so small a distance from the capital, it affords an agreeable retirement to several citizens; upon which account it is lately much improved in buildings.

Here is a good Market on Thursdays weekly; and two Fairs yearly, one July 18, and the other October 15.

The Assises have been sometimes kept in this Town; but the unreasonable Expence of obtaining that Favor; the want of proper and sufficient Accommodation; and the Distance of the Place from the northern and largest parts of the Shire, have generally caused them to be fixed, as well as the Sessions, at Chelmsford, which is considerably larger, better provided with Inns, and in the center of the County.

[C] Terra Roberti Grenonis. Hund' de Ceffeorda. Waldam tenet Radulfus de Roberto, quod tenuit Sprot pro manerio, & pro i hida. Modo i villanus, & vi bordarii, & i carucata. Silva xl porcis. . . . Hanc Terram habet Robertus, sicut dicit, pro escangio per Hubertum de Portu; et nunquam reddidit Geltum, et neque ultimum. Lib.

What occasioned the Name, is at present unknown. Undoubtedly it was on account of a Wood here, (part of the Forest of Essex) being designedly, or by accident, Burnt, or Brent, as the old English word is. In Latin it is styled Boscus arsus, by corruption barsus: and in old French Bois ars.

As for Costede, alias Cocstede, it was probably derived from Coyt, a weed called Herb-Mary, or Coc, a Cook, and sted, place. It is sometimes called Coast-wood.

This land was by William de Wochendon given to the Abbey of St. Osith, and confirmed to that House by K. Henry II. (r) [D].

The donor seems to have been the same William de Wochendon, Camerarius, who held land in North Okendon; and, if he was the King's Chamberlain, might easily obtain from the Crown so much Forest-land as this. However, it seems to have been given as soon as the Monastery of St. Osith was founded by Richard de Beaumeis Bishop of London; for it was grown so considerable a Place in the reign of K. Stephen, as to have of his grant a Market and Fair.

It continued in that Monastery till its dissolution; and, in the Valuation of its revenues, is thus described, 'The maner of Brentwood, called Cost-Hall alias Costed-Hall.' The farm of this maner was let to John Derby, 31 Decemb. 1537, for twenty years at 20 l. per ann.

After the suppression, K. Henry VIII. in 1559, granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell (s); Upon whose Attainder it came again to the Crown; and belonged in 1549 to the Lady Anne of Cleve (t).

K. Edward VI. in 1553, granted this Maner of Costed-hall, with a Fair and a Market in Brentwood, to Antony Browne; to hold in ca. by the 100th part of a knight's fee (u). From Browne and his successors, it came, as the maner of Weald, to Hugh Smith Esq; and his heirs, Lords paramount of all the Maners in the Parish.

The Maner of BAADS, or DOUNSELS,

Lies on the right hand side of the Street leading from Brentwood towards Ongar: and the House is about 2 miles north-east from Southweald Church. It stands partly in this parish, and partly in that of Shenfeild. The highest account I find of this estate, is a conveyance from John Baas of Brendwood, to Thomas Willyngale and others, of all his lands and tenements in the parish of South-Weld and Hamlet of Brendwood (w). And the first time it occurs in records by its two names, of Bawdes alias *Dounsell*s, is in 1483 (x).

Ralph Bawde, who dyed in 1483, held the maner of Bawds, otherwise called Dounfells, of the Bishop of London, by the service of 6 s. 8 d. per ann.—Thomas his son and heir, was thirteen years old (x). One would have imagined this estate held of the Abbey of St. Osith. How the Bishop of London came by any Lordship here will be hard to account for; nor is he mentioned in the more ancient conveyance of Baas, so that he seems to have had no title to any thing here before Richard II. nor after Henry VIII. [E].

Thomas Bradbury, who dyed 9 January 1509, held the maner of Bawdys, with appertenances, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 40 of pasture, 20 of wood, and 20 s. rent in South-Weld, Dodinghurst, and Shenfield, of the Bishop of London. But eighty acres of arable, parcel of the said maner, lying in Shenfield, held of the Queen, as of her maner of Shenfeild-hall, by the rent of 19 s.—William, son of Robert his brother, was his cousin and next heir (y).

The Bradbury family had also the Maner of Manuden. See in the other Volume, p. 619.

From Bradbury this maner came to the Family of Crafford, whether by inheritance or purchase nothing shews. Arthur Crafford Gent. who lived at his maner of Downfells, and dyed 11 May 1606, aged 72 years, held the maner of Bawdes, alias Downfells, with appertenances in South-Weld, of Sir Thomas Lucas, as of his maner of Shenfield;—Mary, and Winifrede then wife of George Gittens, were his daughters and heirs (z). Mary was married very soon after into the Fermin Family, and held a moiety of the maner of Bawds, alias Downfells, in South-Weyle, Shenfield, and Duddinghurst. She left no issue, for at the time of her decease 13 June 1608, her sister Winifrede, wife of George Gittens Gent. was found to be her heir (a). The son of this George, named also George Gittens, dwelt at Bishop's Hall in this parish, and departing this life there 25 November 1712, in the 83d of his age, was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph.

But the Maner of Bawdes got, during the civil wars, into the hands of one John Leech, a Cornish-man, and grocer in London, Secretary to the Sequestrators for this County. Soon after the Restoration, he sold it to

Thomas Manby Esq; descended from William Manby of Elisbam in the County of Lincoln; a Family so named from Manby, a place in that County, which they enjoyed from the reign of K. Edward I. William Manby aforesaid, living in 1563, had issue—James, father of William, and—Robert. The latter, living at Walmsgate in 1634, had three wives, 1. Joane, daughter of Thomas Manby of Leicestershire, 2. Ellen, daughter of Lyon Skipwith, 3. Alice, daughter of John Newcomen Esq; (b)—Thomas Manby Esq; the eldest son and heir, who purchased this estate, dyed 2 February 1678-9, aged 55, and was buried in this church with an epitaph. He married Mary, daughter of Daniel Caldwell of Horndon on the Hill, Esq; and had by her two sons, Caldwell, and Thomas. The eldest son, and two daughters, dyed in their infancy.—Thomas Manby Esq; the second son, and heir, was knighted by K. James II. in the first of his reign, and High Sheriff of Essex in 1688. By his first wife, Julian, daughter of Sir George Selby of Northamptonshire, Bart. he had two sons, Francis, and Thomas; the latter dyed young: By his second, wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir George Cary of Torr-Abbey, in Devonshire, Knight, he had Robert, Edward, and George.—Francis Manby Esq; the eldest son succeeded his father.

This estate is between 50 and 60 l. a year; and the Quit-rents belonging to it are 1 l. 2 s. 0 d. a year, and some capons. It pays a Quit-rent of 1 l. 3 s. 6 d. to the Maner of South-Weald [F].

The Maner of ROPERS

Is at present divided into Great-Ropers, and Little Ropers. The Lands are on the left hand side of the London road going from Brentwood, and extend from Brook-street toward Great-Warley: It was so named from an owner. Henry Roper Gentleman Pursuivant to Queen Catharine of Arragon, in 1614, lett a Lease of the Place, Lands, and Mill, here. The Place is that now called the Moat-House.—Constance Roper passed this away, in 1517, to William Ipgrave (c).

Great-Ropers was in John How of Stonedon, Esq; and then in William Taylor Esq;

Little-Ropers is in Henry Hall of Hutton, Esq;

The MOAT-HOUSE, so styled because surrounded with a Moat, was called Brook-Hall when it was in the hands of Wright, who had both Ropers. It stands in Brook-street, on the left hand as you go to London: and was held of the Duchy of Lancaster. The estate came from Laurence to Wright, and probably from Ipgrave to Laurence, because we have seen Constance Roper convey to Ipgrave.

This Family of Wright came from Kelvedon-Hatch. John, of that place, had 3 sons, [E] A Conjecture may here be ventured; that after the death of Thomas of Woodstock Duke of Gloucester, who inherited the lands of Bohun in Shenfield, and their coming to the Crown, the Bishop of London might obtain of Henry IV. or some succeeding King, a grant of the maner of Bawds, in order to secure the interest St. Osith had in the three above-mentioned parishes from the encroachments of the chief Lords of those Parishes. Or else the Bishop had that part of the estate, called Bishop's-Hall, now Mr. Cheveley's.

[F] Arms of Manby. Argent, a lion rampant, fable; between an orle of 7, or 8, escallops, gules. Crest. On a torse argent and gules, an armed hand proper, sleeved or & argent, cuffed or, grasping a dagger, argent.

Robert; John of South-weald; and another John of Wrights-Bridge [G]; Robert married Mary, daughter of Robert Green of Navestoke; and had 2 sons. The eldest—Thomas Wright of Brook-street had 4 sons, whereof—John, the eldest, was succeeded in this estate by his son, and grandson, both named—John. The latter, in 1721, sold the Moat-house to Mr. William Wheatley, a Broker in London.

is one of the Hamlets in this parish, by a Brook, at the bottom of Burnt-wood-hill, and about a mile south-west from that Town, on the London-road. The Brook here is called in old writings, Seddeburhebrok, Sedebourbrock, South-bournbroke, Sydeburghbroke.

On the north side of this street, by 'Spital-lane, was formerly an Hospital for Lepers, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and founded by the Bruyn Family of South-Okendon. It had a Master, or Warden, admitted by the Bishops of London, at the presentation of the said Bruyn Family (d) [H]. Some remains of the building are yet visible.

Of this, Sir Antony Brown had a grant, but the name of Hospital, for better sound, was turned into Free Chapel. At the time of his decease he held a Free Chapel in Brook-street, and one messuage or tenement called Le Spittle in Brook-street, and 80 acres of arable and meadow, and three of wood, with appertinances in South-Weld, and all other lands, tenements, rents, services, and hereditaments, in the tenure of John Wright of Brook-street, of the Queen, by the service of the 40th part of a knight's fee, worth by the year 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*—In the next Inquisition it had got the name of Chantry-Lands. Winstan Brown Esq; who dyed 1 August 1581, held a third part of one messuage or tenement, one orchard, one garden, and one curtilage, lately belonging to the Free Chapel; and the third part of 100 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and wood, commonly called Spittle-Lands or Chantry-Lands; and the third part of 36*s.* 3*d.* of yearly rent, late parcel of the said Chapel; and of certain other messuages, lands, and tenements in South-Weld, Brentwood, Brooke-street, Shenfield, and Doddinghurst, to the said Chapel lately belonging; parcel of the possessions of Sir Antony Brown (e).

This estate is now parcelled out. Mr. Erning Bayley has, or lately had, the site of the House.

Charitable Gifts, and Foundations.

Here are Alms-houses, near the Church, for three men and two women, in the gift of the Lord of the Maner, to be chosen out of South-Weald, Brook-street, and Brentwood; if none to be found there, from White-Rothing: To each is paid quarterly 18*s.* 4*d.* and 10*s.* to each for a robe.

Five pounds per an. the rent of an House in the market place of Brentwood, in the tenure of Lambert Brazier, for the repair of South-Weald Church, given by Edward Lamb in 1546.—Item, For the repairs of the same Church 40*s.* per an. charged upon the lands lately held by Edward Carver, called Church-Lands, given in the reign of K. James I. by John Wright of Brook-street.

There are the following Gifts to the Poor of the Parish of South-Weald.

Twenty shillings issuing out of an House at Halsted in Essex, formerly in the possession of Wrights of Brook-street; payable three weeks after Michaelmas-Day, at the Crown inn in Brentwood, by the owner or occupier of the said House in Halsted, for the use of the Poor of the Uplands, Brentwood, and Brook-street, 13*s.* 4*d.* to each Division.

There is also an House in the parish of Alveley, with a garden and spring of water, given by one Humfrey Waller in 1601, for the use of the Poor of Uplands and Brentwood during the world.

An House in South-Weald, called Edwards, given to the Overseers of South-Weald, by Mr. George Gittens, late owner of Bishop's-hall, to pay 30*s.* per an. to thirty poor housekeepers not receiving alms.

Mr. George Gittens also charged Bishops-Hall with 20*s.* per an. for the Poor of Brentwood.

Twenty Shillings per an. charged upon a Copy-hold estate held by Thomas Attridge of Coxey-Green, for the use of the Poor of South-Weald.

Twelve Shillings have been paid yearly to twelve poor Widows of Brentwood, out of an house, in the occupation of — Carter, now unpaid.

George Abbot Bishop of London, and Dr. John Donne, Dean of St. Paul's, 18 July 1622; published the Institutions of this School, drawn up by Edmund Grindall Bishop of London and Dr. Nowell Dean of St. Paul's, temp. Eliz. The Bishop of London to present, if the Patron do not in a Month. The School-house stands in Burntwood town. The Endowment is the Parsonage of Dagenham, worth 400 l. per an. leased out and renewable every seven years, the reserved rent 40 l. per an. And Chigwell Grange, worth 80 l. per an. let at 26 l. 13 s. 1 d. per an.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, stands on a hill, from whence is a fine prospect. It is a handsom building, consisting of two paces, supported in the middle by five pillars of the Tuscan order: The Chancel the same; and the whole tyled. At the west end there is a stone Tower, of considerable height, embattled, in which are 5 Bells. This Tower was built in the beginning of K. Henry the VIIth's reign; and for that purpose a rate was granted for five years, on which were collected 289 l. 5 s. 10 d. (f).

This Church was given by Earl Harold to his Abbey of Waltham, under the general name of Walde, "with all its appertenances;" and probably there was then no Church built here. Afterwards K. Henry II. and K. Richard I. confirmed to that Abbey Walda, and the Church of this vill by name, with its appertenances [I].

About the year 1244, this Church was appropriated to that Abbey by Fulk Basset, bishop of London; and afterwards more fully settled, 26 January 1274, by John Chishull, bishop of that see. At which time, the Vicarage was endowed with all Tithes, both great and small, out of the lordship or demesnes of the Abbey and Convent of Stratford in this parish; and with all other Tithes belonging to this Church, except the rest of the Corn only [K], which was to belong to the Abbey of Waltham. At the same time, the Bishop reserved to himself and successors the collation to this Vicarage: and it hath accordingly continued ever since in the gift of the Bishops of London.

The late Incumbent, Dr. Bridges, was a considerable Benefactor to this Living, by building a handsom Vicarage-house of brick, and laying out a pleasant Garden.

A CHAPEL

was founded at Brentwood, in or about the year 1221, at the request of David Abbot of St. Osith, for the conveniency of their tenants at Cost-hall; with the consent of the Bishop of London, of Richard Parson of Weld, and the Abbot and Convent of Waltham.

The Abbot and Convent of St. Osith were to build it in their own Fee, at the New-Place [L]; to dedicate it to the Honor of St. Thomas the Martyr, i.e. a Becket; and to maintain a proper Priest to officiate daily in it, if they thought fit.

The Chaplain was to be presented by the Convent of St. Osith, and, before his admission, to swear that he would not knowingly injure the mother-Church: That he would not receive any of the Parishioners to divine offices, Communion, Confessions, or Purifications, on Sundays or Holydays, without the Parson's express leave, except on the day of St. Thomas's passion, or translation; and the time of the Fair, if there should be any appointed: Nor shall there be any Baptism, or Burial of the dead. If any profit should arise from the parishioners, the Chaplain is immediately to give it to the parson of the mother Church; and not receive any thing to its prejudice privately or openly. And if there shall be any Fair, the parson of the mother-Church, or a priest deputed by him, may if he please officiate the whole time of the Fair in the Chapel; and on the Feasts of St. Thomas, and receive all the offerings to his own use. The Chaplain during that time shall serve the mother-Church, but at no other time be compelled to it. The offerings that are made by strangers and passengers at other times of the year shall be entirely for the maintenance of the Chaplain, who shall pay yearly two pounds of wax to the Parson. The Chaplain may receive any gifts for the building, repair, or ornaments of the Chapel, employing them strictly to that use. If he invades the Privileges of the mother-Church contrary to his oath, and the Convent doth not, upon complaint of the Parson, suspend or correct him in twenty days, the Parson shall have liberty to deprive him, without asking the Abbot's and Convent's leave, saving to the Bishop all his right. And the mother-Church shall receive all Tythes great and small from the demesne of the said Abbot and Convent without deduction, upon any pretended privilege now in being, or hereafter to be obtained [M].

The Perquisites of this Chaplain arose from Travellers upon the road, and such as came out of devotion to St. Thomas; whence a gate upon the way from Ongar in this parish retains the name of Pilgrims-Hatch. Opposite to it, was another Hatch, or Forest-Gate, which is called to this day Hou-Hatch.

Divine Service is now kept up in this Chapel for the benefit of the Inhabitants, who are numerous since the London Road was made here, and are a mile from South-Weald Church. The Chaplain is presented by the Lord of the manor of S. Weald, who pays him 5*l.* per an. out of Caldecots; and he hath a House, garden, and orchard, and a little field. The Revenue of this Chapel is lately augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty.

This Chapel continued in the Abbey of St. Osith's disposal till the reign of K. Henry VIII.

Upon the Dissolution, K. Henry granted this Chapel to Thomas Lord Cromwell. On his attainder it reverted to the Crown, and the same King, 12 July 1544, granted the Chapel of Brendwood, known by the name of Thomas Becket's Chapel, and the Church-yard and Belfrey, and all the houses, messuages, edifices, structures, and gardens, adjoining to the said Chapel, late part of the possessions of Thomas Lord Cromwell attainted, to John Cocke and Anne his wife, to hold of the King in fealty, and not in capite (g).—Whether this grant took effect, or whether Cocke or his heirs transferred their right to Antony Brown, does not appear, but Brown had a grant of it in 1553 (b), from whom it hath descended and passed as the manor of South Weald. This Chapel is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. A small stone Tower, with a spire on the top, contains 1 Bell.

In this Chapel was a Chantry founded for the soul of Isabel Countess of Bedford. In 1388, license was granted to Edmund Duke of York, Sir Robert de Plesington, and John Parker, to give one messuage, 220 acres of arable in Shenfield, Weld, Yengrave, and Brentwood, to a certain Chaplain of the Chantry at the Altar of St. Mary in the Chapel of Brentwood, to be founded by the said Duke, Sir Robert, and John; and the said messuage and lands were held of the Duke of Gloucester as of his manor of Shenfield, by the service of 40*s.* 1*d.* rent per an. and suit at the Court of Shenfield; except 20 acres in Yengrave, holden of Robert Goshalme by the service of 2*s.* (i). A Chaplain was instituted, and admitted 3 May, 1393, at the presentation of Edmund Duke of York and others. After this, according to the London Registry, the Rectors of Shenfield and Ginge-Rafe presented [N].

This parish, with its several Hamlets, is thus rated to the Land-tax, South-Weald, 1303*l.* Brentwood, 1181*l.* Brooke-street, 572*l.*—Thornwood Hamlet, 595*l.* Hastings-Ward, 457*l.* These two last are rated with the Half-Hundred of Harlow.

[O] The Crown Inn at Burntwood is very ancient, as appears from the buildings of the back part of it. Mr. Symonds, in his Collections, saith he was informed from the Master, who had writings in his custody to shew it; that it had been an Inn three hundred years with this sign; that a Family named Salmon held it two hundred years; that there had been eighty-nine owners, amongst which an Earl of Oxford, and an Earl of Suffex.

TOOK its name from the chief Town in it, that of Ongar, derived from the Saxon word Aungre, signifying The Place, by way of eminence. Unless it should be derived from the old word Hangre, a hill (k).

Its Boundaries, On the south, are Becontree-Hundred, and Havering Liberty; On the east, part of this same Liberty, and of the Hundreds of Chafford, Barstaple, and Chelmsford; On the west, the Half-Hundred of Waltham, and part of that Harlow; and On the north, part of this last, and of the Hundred of Dunmow.

In its greatest extent from North to South it is about fourteen miles long; and where widest from West to East about seven miles broad. Through the midst of it runs the River Rodon.

This Hundred was originally in the King's disposal. K. Henry II. granted it to Richard de Lucy, who had also the Honor and Castle of Ongar. Maud, sister of Herbert de Lucy, brought it in marriage to her husband, John de Ripariis, or Rivers; she dyed in 1242, or 1243. Her grandson, John de Rivers, held it of the King, as of his Crown; at the time of his decease in 1294 (l). John de Rivers, in 1336, enfeoffed John de Havering, and his heirs, in this Hundred; and, in 1339, granted it to—Sir John de Sutton, of Theydon-Mount and Wivenhou in this County (m); with all its rights and liberties. The latter, in 1348, enfeoffed—Ralph Lord Stafford, and his heirs, in this Hundred of Aungre, with letes, view of frankpledge, and Sheriffs turns, belonging to the same Hundred; which was holden of the King in capite, in free socage, without any payment (n). This Ralph, then Earl Stafford, dyed possessed of it in 1372 (o). It continued in his posterity, Earls of Stafford, and at length Dukes of Buckingham (p), till 1521, when upon the attainder of Edward it reverted to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. granted it to — Richard Lord Riche, who dyed possessed of it 12 June 1566 (q). In his posterity it continued several years: And, upon the partition of the Family's estates, was allotted to — Sir Henry St. John; who sold it to—Philip Traherne Gent. of whom it was purchased by—Sir Eliab Harvey; and it has been ever since in the Harvey Family of Chigwell.

As to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, the Hundred and Deanry of Ongar is in the Archdeaconry of Essex.

Within the Hundred of Ongar are twenty six Parishes, of which we treat in the following order.

Cheping-Ongar.	Greensted.
Highb-Ongar.	Stanford-Rivers.
Norton Mandeville.	Theydon-Mount.
Fi field.	Theydon-Gernon.
Roding-Beauchamp.	Theydon-Bois.
Roding-Abbeys.	Loughton.
Laver-Highb.	Chigwell.
. . . Magdalen.	Lambourn.
. . . Little.	Stapleford-Tany.
Moreton.	Stapleford-Abbots.
Shelley.	Navestock.
Bobingworth.	Kelvedon-Hatch.
North-Weald.	Stondon.

The parishes of Chigwell, Loughton, and Lambourn, are within the Forest; those of Theydon-Bois, and Navestock, partly in, and partly out: all the rest are out of the Forest.

As the WARDSTAFF of this Hundred, and of that of Harlow, make a considerable figure in records, it will be proper to insert the following account of it here [P].

Aungr Hundr The Order of the gathering and yearly making of the Wardstaff of the King there with the due course and circumstance of the yearly Watch, Ward, and Service Royall incident to the same. That is to say,

First, The Bailiffe of the said Libtie, or Hundr, shall gather and yearly make the Wardstaffe of some Willow Bough growing in Abbasse-Rothing Wood the Sunday next before Hock-Munday (r), which shall containe in length iii qrters of a yard, and viii inches round in compasse or thereabout. And hee shall convey the same ymediately unto the Mannor Place of Ruckwood-Hall in Abbasse-Rothing afore'd, where the Lord of the said Manor for the tyme being shall reverently the same receive into his house, and shall rowle itt up in a faire fine linnen cloth, or towell, and so lay it upon some Pillowe or Cushion on a table or cubberd standing in the chiefe or highest place in the Hall of the said Maner Place, there to remaine untill the said Bailiffe shall have relieved and refreshed himself. And when the said Bailiffe shall see convenient tyme to dep'te he shall convey the same Staffe by sunne shineing unto Wardhatch-Lane besides Long-Barries in Roothing afore-said, when and where the said Lord of Ruckwood-Hall and all and everie other tennant and tennants, land-owners, which by reason of their Tenure doe hold their lands likewise by service Royall, to watch and warde the said Staff there upon convenient summons and warning to be given unto them yearly by the said Lord of Ruckwood-Hall for the time being, with their full ordinarie number of able men well harnished with sufficient weapon shall attend. Where upon the Lord of Ruckwood-Hall shall then and there yearly at his p'per costs and charges, have readie prepared a great Rope, called a Barr, with a Bell hanging on the end of the same, which he shall cause to be extended overthwart the said Lane, as the custom hath beene, to stay and arrest such people as would pass by. Att the end of which said Barr, not farr from the said Bell, shall be laid downe reverently the said Staffe upon a Pillowe, or Cushion, on the ground; which done, forthwith the said Bailiffe shall severally call the names of all the afore-said tenants, land-owners, who shall present their said ordinarie number of men accordingly. Then shall the said Bailiffe in the King our soveraigne Lord's name straightlie charge and comand them and everie of them to watch and keep the Ward in due silence, soe that the King be harmeles and the Countrie scapeles, untill the sunne arising, when good houre shall be for the said Lord of Ruckwood-hall to repaire unto the said Staffe, who in the p'rence of the whole Watch, shall take the same Staffe into his hand, and shall make upon the upper rind of the same with a knife a score or notch, as a marke or token, declaring their loyall service done for that year in this behalf. And soe shall deliver the said Staffe unto the Bailiffe, sending it unto the Lord, or Land-owner, of the Mannor of Fiffeild, or unto the Tennant resiant, saying this notable narracon of the Wardstaffe hereafter written in the Saxon tongue; which done, they may hale up the said Barr, and depart at their pleasure.

I. O N G A R

This Town having given name to the Hundred, claims the first notice. To distinguish it from the other adjoining Ongar, it has the addition of Cheping; from the Saxon Leaping, buying. For it hath been many years a Market Town; The Market being now held weekly on Saturdays, but formerly on Tuesdays. It hath also a Fair on the 30th of September.

It is otherwise called Ongar ad Castrum, from a Castle built here by Richard de Lucy, as we shall see presently. Besides Ongar, it is written in records, Angra, Angre, Angria, Aun- gre, Ongre.

This Town is 21 miles from London.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, this Lordship belonged to Ailid; and to a Freeman; at the time of the Survey, Eustace Earl of Bologne yearly unto the Lord of the Manor of High-Laver, &c.—Watch at Poole-Lane end in Maudlin-Laver.

The Ceremony of the Watch in each parish I have omitted, being the same as in Abbasfe-Rothing. I have also omitted the number of Watch-men in each Parish.

This Procession seems to have been a yearly Muster of fencible men who were appointed to guard the Hundred against murders and robberies, for both which it was liable to pay, a fine. If by preventing these the King receives no Harm, as in the loss of a subject, or the felonious breach of his peace, the Subject escapes a Fine, otherwise due for suffering a murderer or thief to escape.

The Ceremony began at Abbasfe-Rothing, as at the extremity of the Hundred, went on to Chigwell the other extreme, and returned to High Laver, which was in the neighbourhood of Ruckwood-hall. At one of these two maner-houses we may suppose it deposited, with due regard to Royal Authority.

What we learn from records concerning the Design of this ceremony of the Ward-staff, is, That it was to represent the King's person [2]; and to keep the King's peace. Some lands were held by the service, of finding two men to watch with the Ward-staff; of keeping the Ward-Staff; and of paying Ward-Silver, and doing white service at the Ward-staff [R]. To conclude, this Ward-Staff, was to be carried through the Towns and Hundreds of Essex, as far as a place called Atte wode near the Sea, and be thrown there into the Sea [S]. This Custom hath been long neglected.

logne held it in demesne: and Ralph Baignard had the part that had been the Freeman's [T].

From Eustace this estate descended to his third son — Eustace, also Earl of Bologne; whose daughter — Maud brought it in marriage to her husband.

Stephen Earl of Blois, afterwards King of England.

K. Stephen's son, William Earl of Mortain, and Surrey, gave it to Richard de Lucy, Lord of Disce in Norfolk, who being Governor of Falaise in Normandy bravely defended that place against the attacks of Geoffrey Earl Anjou, by whom that place was besieged (u). With this he had also a Grant of Greensted near this Town, and of Stanford-Rivers; and Rodings, and Crishtall; to hold by the service of three knights fees (w).

He got this Lordship erected into an Honor, on which depended several Fees [U]: And built a Castle here. It was situated on the top of a very high round artificial hill, [i. e. thrown up with hands,] and surrounded by a large Moat; which, with several other moats, composed the old Fortification, most of which are still to be seen. This Castle being grown much ruinous and decayed, was taken down in Qu. Elizabeth's reign by the then owner William Morice Esq; who, in the room of it, erected a very strong, handfom, brick Building, three stories high: and by reason of its lofty situation, prospects, beauty, and pleasant walks exceeded any place in this County. But this Building was demolished by Edward Alexander Esq; who in 1744 erected, instead of it, a large and handfom summer-house.

To return to Richard de Lucy, he was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1156; constituted Justice of England in 1162; and intrusted with the office of Lieutenant of the Kingdom, during the King's absence in Normandy in 1166. As we have already observed, he had a grant of the Hundred of Aungre; and of an hundred acres of assart lands in the Forest of Stanford, and of Greensted, and Angte (x). The Priory of Lesnes in Kent, was of his foundation, where he entering himself a Canon Regular, dyed there 14 Janu. 1179, and was buried in the Chapter-house. By Rohais his wife he had two sons, Geffrey, and Herbert; and two daughters, Maud, married to Walter Fitz-Robert, progenitor of the noble family of Fitz-Walter, to whom she brought the lordship of Disce; and Robais, to Fulbert de Dover, Lord of Chilham in Kent. [See in the other Volume, p. 115.]

The eldest son, — Geffrey de Lucy, dyed in his father's life-time leaving — Richard, his son, who departed this life without issue.

Herbert the younger son, who had the Hundred of Aungre, and lordship of Stanford, for his maintenance, dying also without issue, their sister Robais, upon paying a fine to the King in 1207 had livery of the whole Barony, whereunto she then had an hereditary right by descent from her two brothers (y).

In 1242 Maud de Lucy held this maner of Aungre of the Honor of Gloucester, by ten knights fees (z). She held also the maner of Stanford of the King, in his escheatry. If she was the same Maud, as the above-mentioned daughter of Richard de Lucy, she must have lived to a very great age, this being 63 years after the said Richard's decease. She was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to

Richard de Ripariis, or Rivers, for which he paid the King a fine; and his lands here were then valued at 40*l. per ann* (a). She had by him two sons, — Richard, who dyed before her; and Baldwin (b). The former left a son — Richard, born in 1238, for whose wardship Philip Basset gave 1000 marks (c). — John de Rivers, who dyed in 1293, held this maner of Aungre ad Castrum of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of three knights fees. — John was his son and heir (d). He had also the Hundred, as mentioned-above: And so likewise had his son — John (e). It seems to have passed from this last, with the Hundred, to

Sir John de Sutton: and to have been by him conveyed to

Ralph Lord Stafford. For his son, — Hugh Earl of Stafford, who dyed in 1386, held this maner of Aungre ad Castrum of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's service (f). So did — Thomas Earl of Stafford, son of Hugh, at the time of his decease, in 1392 (g). And — William, and — Edmund, brothers of Thomas, who dyed in 1398. and 1403 (b). — Humfrey, son of this last, and created 14 September 1444 Duke of Buckingham, had also this maner among other considerable estates [W]. Being slain at the battle of Northampton 10 July 1460: and his eldest son Humfrey having been killed at the battle of St. Albans in 1455, he was succeeded by his grandson — Henry Earl of Stafford (i). He had this maner in 1483, when he was beheaded for attempting to dethrone K. Richard III. and his estates became forfeited to the Crown (k). Among which are named the maners of Ongre, Vances and Hatfeild Brodoke, and the Hundreds of Ongre and Harlow (l). For a further account

In 1541, K. Henry VIII. granted this maner of Onger ad Castrum, alias Chipping-Onger, to George Harper, and his heirs. The 20th of May 1543, Harper had license to alienate it to

William Morice Esq; (m) eldest son of John Morice of Roydon in this County. He married Anne, daughter of . . . Isaack, of Kent, by whom he had James, Thomas; and Margaret wife of George Tuke. At the time of his decease, 17 January 1553, he held this Maner, and the mansion house called Bansons, with several other messuages, lands, &c. by knight's service; and some lands in High-Ongar. — James his eldest son and heir was then 15 years old (n). He was of the Middle Temple; Recorder; and one of the representatives for the Borough of Colchester, in Parliaments 27, 28. 31. and 35. of Qu. Elizabeth. Besides the above estates, and Parson's acre, he had the maner of Suttons in this County. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of George Medley, he had John, Mary, Elizabeth and Anne. And dying 2 February 1596, was succeeded by his son — John Morice Esq; (o) [X]; He married Catharine, daughter and sole heiress of Sir Gabriel Pointz, which brought him a considerable estate; [see under North-Okendon, p. 103.] They had 4 sons and 3 daughters. — John their eldest son, took the surname of Pointz, and was knighted 22 May, 1603. He dyed 31 January 1617-18, and was succeeded by his eldest son — Sir James, who departed this life 31 August 1623 (p). His widow was re-married to Maurice Barrow. — Richard, his son, dying without issue, the estate came to his two sisters, Anne, married to Sir Fulk Grevill, and Elizabeth, to William Duncomb of Battlefen in Bedfordshire, Esq; These sold the maner of Ongar to

Sir Thomas Whitmore, whose son — Sir William sold it again to

Thomas Goldsburgh of Ongar, Gent. son of Robert Goldsburgh of Chesselburn in Dorsetshire, and grandson of Thomas Goldsburgh, of Goldsburgh in Yorkshire. Thomas, the purchaser of this estate, married Elizabeth, daughter of William Alexander, of London, Gent. and had by her, Thomas, Elizabeth, and Anne. Elizabeth was married to Richard Turner Esq; and had by him Dorothy; and Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Bull, a Turkey-Merchant, and Sheriff of London in 1718. — Thomas Goldsburgh Esq; the son, married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Jernegan Chaplin, of Finchingfeild Esq; by whom he had Thomas. His second wife was Susan Havers. About the year 1717, he sold this estate to

Edward Alexander Esq; second son of Nicolas, of Marden-Ash in High-Ongar, and Proctor in Doctors Commons; who dyed 27 October 1751. He married Levina, daughter of Sir Levinus Bennet of Baberham in Cambridgeshire, and had by her — Bennet Alexander Esq; who, in pursuance of the will of his aunt Mrs. Judith Bennet, assumed the surname of Bennet: And having taken to wife Mary, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Ash, of this Town, had by her a son named Richard-Henry Alexander, who hath married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Peter Burrell Esq; and a daughter named Levina. Their father departing this life 20 Decemb. 1745, his widow was re-married 2 May 1747, to Richard Bull of this place Esq; son of Sir John Bull Kt. abovesaid.

Levina Bennet, the daughter, was married, 16 January 1762, to John Luther Esq; one of the Representative in Parliament for this County: They have had two children. [See under Kelvedon Hatch.]

Charles Fowler Esq; Mr. John Carter; Charles Bridgeman; John Martin; Richard Carey; Edward Harper; John Lenham, &c. have also some lands here.

Joseph King, born in this parish, citizen and ironmonger of London, and buried here 28 Febru. 1678-9, gave for Charitable uses Five Houses in this Town; to be managed by feoffees; and out of the rents, — 10 l. yearly to be paid to a School-master for teaching 6 poor Boys, till fit to be put out apprentices. — One to be put out yearly, and 5 l. to be given with him. If none fit one year, then 8 l. to be given with one the next year. — If any are fit for the university, 5 l. per ann. to be given him for 4 years, and no apprentice to be placed out in that time. — 40 s. per ann. for teaching poor girls to read. — 20 s. per ann. to be laid out in Bibles for poor families, and when furnished with them, for books of devotion. — 10 s. to be spent on a dinner upon Tuesday in Whitsun-week yearly. — And 4 s. to the Clerk, for keeping the board on which this is painted clean.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Martin, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. A spire, leaded, contains 1 Bell.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner. The Value of it being but small, the neighbouring Church of Greensted was united to it by act of Parliament in K. Edward the sixth's reign, but soon separated again. [See under Greensted.]

In 1721, this Living was augmented by the purchase of a House and lands; through the interest of the Rev. Mr. Houblon, Rector of Bobingworth; who having procured 200 l. of Qu. Anne's Bounty, and 100 l. of Mr. Edward Colston's benefaction, added thereto 107 l. 2 s. of his own money.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1349 l. 0 s. 6 d.

2. HIGH-ONGAR,

hath sometimes been called Old-Aungre, and sometimes Great, and Little, Aungre. It could not be styled Little in regard to its extent, which must exceed that of Cheping, but that its Lords were inferior. The addition of Old is not met with 'till above 100 years after the Conquest, when William de Monceaux, who got it so named in a Charter, had, perhaps, as little reason for it as was afterwards for calling it High: Or, if it was written Aungre-Alta, or Alt, that might, by mistake, come to Old.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Leuric was possessed of part of this parish, which John son of Waleram, and his under-tenant Roger de Ramis, held at the time of the Survey [Y]. Another part called Passfeld belonged before and after the Conquest to Waltham-Abbey.

The part that belonged to John son of Waleram was divided afterwards into these several Maners. 1. The Maner of Astelyns. 2. Onger-Park. 3. Folyot's-hall. 4. The maner of Chevers. 5. The maner of Ashe-hall. 6. . . . that of Wetherspane.

The Maner of HIGH-ONGAR,

as we observe by the Survey, comprehended the chief of this Parish. But it may reasonably be supposed to have been then chiefly wood-land, else it would have been rated, or valued, more than at one Maner, and three virgates.

The next possessor, upon record, after John Waleram's, was William de Moncell, or Monceaux, who held Little-Angre, by the Serjeancy, of being Marshal of the Barony of Gilbert de Thany; This was in the reign of K. Henry II. (q) [Z].

It is probable Monceaux came into this estate by a daughter, or descendent, of John de Waleram, because in the year 1277, in an Inquisition upon Shelley, Waleram de Munceus is mentioned (r).

William de Monceaux is said to have obtained of K. Henry III. 3 Aug. 1220, a Fair here on the 7th. and 8th. of September.

The Maner of ASTELYNs, otherwise Gapps, [a Hamlet in this parish,] is one of those which were taken out of the capital Maner here; the lands lye partly in Bobbingworth, and North-Weald. It has now no Court nor quit-rents. There formerly belonged to it a seat, moated round; but is now a mean farmhouse, or cottage. It had anciently about it a Park of some hundred acres; the Lodge stands in Bobbingworth. Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk is said to have concealed himself here, when he was charged with high treason; for abetting Mary Queen of Scots.

After Monceaux, the next possessors upon record were the Wretyll, or Writell Family, seated at Bobbingworth, and mentioned in the other Volume, p. 156. 609. Walter Writell, who dyed in 1475, held this maner of Astelyns, and lands and tenements in this parish, Bobbingworth, Morton, Lauver Maudlyn, Fiffhide, and North-Weld.—William, was his son and heir (s). Catharine Hawte, his widow, being remarried to John Grene, enjoyed till her decease 12 July 1493, this maner of Harstelynes, with appertenances, and 4 messuages, 2 crofts, and 140 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 30 of pasture, in the parishes aforesaid (t).—John Wretyll held the same, at the time of his decease, 28 July 1507 (u). As did William Ayliffe Esq; 10 August 1517.

Dr. Baldwin Hamsey of the College of Physicians London, purchased it, and settled it, in 1672, on that College, who are present possessors. The Estate contains three hundred thirty seven acres (w).

The Maner of FOLYOT'S-HALL, alias FOLIATS, now FOREST-HALL.

The mansion house stands about three quarters of a mile north of the Church.

It does not appear whence the name of Folyot came: it was, probably, from some owner. Likely from Gilbert Foliot, Bishop of London.

This estate belonged of old to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. K. Henry VIII. having got it into his hands, granted it, in 1544, to William Riggs, and Leonard Brown. They had license, 15 August the same year, to alienate it to

Sir Richard Riche; who by license dated 2 May 1562, did sell it to

Richard Stane, senior, and Richard Stane, junior (x). Richard Stane, dyed 8 March 1600, holding this estate, of the Queen in capite by knight's service.—Richard, his son and heir, was 42 years old and upwards (y). He was Doctor of Laws, and possessed of the premises: which, at the time of his decease, 7 January

He dyed 15 Janu. 1714, aged 84, leaving by his wife. . . . daughter of Dr. John Gauden Bishop of Worcester, his son and heir — William Stane Esq; who married Alice, daughter of Sir Thomas Abdy of Felix-Hall, Bart. and had by her——William Stane Esq; is supposed to take its name from Sir William Chevre, who possessed it in the time of K. Edward III. (a). [Concerning this Family of Chevre, see the other Volume, p. 44.]

The Maner of CHEVERS

The maner house stands on the side of a hill, about a mile east from the Church.

John Stalbroke held this maner of Chevershall, 1 May 1484, of Jasper Duke of Bedford and was succeeded by his son——Matthew (b).

William Pawne Esq; had it in 1524, and dyed 22 May 1570, leaving his son——William, who dying without issue, 2 April 1578, it came to Bridget, wife of William Chatterton daughter of Roger Bassingborn by Anne his wife sister to the first William Pawne (c).

In the Inquisition taken after the death of this last, this maner is called Chyvers-hall, alias Pasfeld Chyvers.—The Pawne Family had also the great Tithes of Norton-Mandeville.

John Austin, who dyed 16 January 1633, held this estate, and after him——James his son and heir (d).

About the same time, it was held by Philip Holeman (e), one of whose ancestors enjoyed also Wetherspane. For some years it has been in the Family of William Stane Esq;

The Maner of Newarks is also in Mr. Stane, lying partly in this parish, and partly in the parish of Norton, in which the maner-house stands.

The Maner of ASHE-HALL.

The mansion house stands about a quarter of a mile east from the Church, by a brook.

John de Frenles, son and heir of Sir William, held this maner of Hugh Earl Stafford, as of his Hundred of Aungre, by the service of 12 d. a year, and suit at the Hundred. He dyed in 1378, and was succeeded by his brother——William de Frenles (f).

We hear no more of the owners of this estate till the reign of K. James I. Sir Thomas Mildmay of Springfeild-Barnes, Kt. then held it by the name of Nashall, with divers lands and tenements in both the Ongars, Norton-Mandeville, and Shelley; and dying 15 Decemb. 1612, was succeeded by his grandson——Thomas Mildmay Esq; (g).

Mr. Thomas Wallenger had it some time ago; and afterwards

Peter Champion, of Croydon, Esq;

The Maner of WETHERSPANE.

All that we can find concerning this Maner, is, that it belonged in 1614 to Alexander Holman; and was held under him by Dr. Stane (h). It belonged since to Mr. William Baker: and then to his son——Bramston Baker.

The Maner of ONGAR-PARK.

This is no where contiguous to the rest of the parish, but is cut off from it by Greensted and Bobbingworth; which gives room for a conjecture, that these two villis were erected out of the Woods of Ongar, before the Conquest. Part of Ongar Park pays tythes to Stanford-Rivers, and only 3 l. per ann. to the Rector of High-Ongar.

The oldest possessor of this maner, after Monceaux, that we have an account of, is Andrew de Walden, who dyed in 1352. He held of the King in capite, by knight's service, 1 messuage, 1 carucate of land, and 800 acres of wood in Aungre, Stanford Rivers, and Welde; jointly with his wife Joane (i). Their son——Thomas de Walden, dying in 1420, was found to hold, jointly with Margaret his wife, the maner of Aungre Park of the King, in capite by knight's service: remainder to

Thomas Bataile, son of his sister Alice, and to Alianore his wife, daughter of Thomas Ondeby, and their heirs (k). He departed this life in 1439, leaving, by Isabel his wife,——John, his son and heir, 14 years old (l). He was knighted, and at the time of his decease in 1473 left——John, his son (m):——Richard Bataile, son, as I presume, of this latter, held of the King in capite in Stanford-Rivers, and Ongar Parke by the service of half a knight's fee, 1 messuage, 1 carucate of land, 100 acres of arable, 100 acr. of pasture, 600 of wood, and 4 s. 5 d. ob. rent; all together of the yearly value of 36 l. 13 s. 4 d. He dyed in 1540. Two Sisters were his heirs; Constance, wife of William Ferne, Margery Butler, and Richard Kigbley, son of a third sister (n). [Concerning the Bataile Family, see in the other Volume, p. 187. 620.]

Humfrey Shelton, Esq; who dyed 1 May 1605, held this maner of Ongar, formerly Battells maner, containing 1 messuage with appertenances, 280 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 400 of pasture, 220 of wood, and 20 d. rent, in this parish, Stanford-Rivers, and Stapleford-Taney.——William Shelton Esq; his son and heir, was then 30 years old (o).

Some years after, this maner was purchased of William Minshull Esq; by Sir Thomas Webster, of Copped-hall; who sold it again to Aaron Frank Esq;

The Maner of PASSELOW, otherwise called Passfeld, was one of the seventeen Lordships given by Earl Harold to his Abbey of Waltham [A]. They remained possessed of it till the Dissolution, when it came to the Crown. In 1541 K. VIII. granted this maner of Passfeld, alias Passlow-hall, then valued at 210l. per ann. to

George Harper: who, the same year, alienated it to Sir Richard Riche (p). He had it at the time of his decease; and it descended to his posterity, Earls of Warwick (q). Upon the partition of that noble Family's estates, as mentioned in the other Volume, p. 102, this came to the Earl of Manchester.

Sir Josiah Child purchased it; from whom it hath descended to the Rt. Hon. John Earl Tylney, the present possessor.

Mr. John Witham; William Robjent; John Williamson; William King; Francis Yates &c. have also some lands in this parish.

In Marden-Ash, a seat here, resided Nicolas Alexander Esq; He dyed 29 July 1714, aged 83, leaving 7 children, William; Edward of Chipping-Ongar; Thomas; Henry; Anne; Margaret; and Joanna, which last was married to John Gibson D. D. Provost of Queen's-College in Oxford.—It was anciently called Mardens and Brekeles, and consisted in 1524, of one messuage, 16 crofts, 2 closes, a marsh, Long croft, and a parcel of meadow called Betts (r).

Henry Parker, who dyed 15 January 1541, held the maner of Fritball, and 180 acres of land thereto belonging, in High Onger and Norton Mandevile, of the Bishop of London, William Pawne, and . . . Chedley, Gent. in socage, by the rent of 17 s. 8 d. (s). Concerning this H. Parker, see the other Volume p. 380.

Mr. John Wyberd, citizen and haberdasher of London, gave 50 s. a year for ever, to buy bread for the Poor of this parish, payable out of the King's head-inn at Kirton in Lincolnshire.

Eight poor widows of this parish partake of Mrs. Alice Thomlinson's benefaction, viz. 5 s. each yearly, to buy them waistcoats. See a more particular account of it in the other Volume, p. 509.

Mr. Waller, gave 10 s. yearly to the Poor here, out of a farm called Farrows.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. The roof is lofty, arched, and painted with clouds, and a sun rising in a glorious manner. The spire is shingled, and contains 5 Bells.

This valuable Rectory is a Maner, consisting of demesnes, and several copyholds (t).

It was all along in the gift of the Crown, till K. Henry VIII. gave it to Sir Richard Riche, in whose heirs it continued till lately. The last that presented was John Turvin Esq;

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1214l. 0 s. 10 d.

3. NORTON MANDEVILLE had the name of Norton most probably from its northern situation with respect to Ongar. The addition of Mandeville it took from Ralph Mandeville, whom we shall mention presently, to distinguish it from Cold-Norton in Dengey-Hundred.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, this parish was divided into two parts; one belonged to Godid, a woman, who gave it to the Church of St. Paul in London. The other part belonged to Gotil; and, at the time of the Survey was held by Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Wimund [B].

Hence arose the two Maners in this parish. 1. . . . that of Norton Mandeville. 2. . . . that of Newarks Norton.

The maner of NORTON MANDEVILLE.

By the account given of it in 1181, it contained 100 acres of arable, 5 acr. of meadow, 12 of wood, pasture for 40 sheep, 3 cows in demesne, one plough; and paid to the Canons of St. Paul 40 s. at Easter, and 3 l. on the 14th of September.

Ralph de Diceto, Dean, and the Canons of St. Paul, lett this estate to farm to John de

Dammartin, at the yearly rent of 100 s. about the year 1190 (u). But how they came to be deprived of the Lordship of this place, we do not find. Galiene Dammartin had for her second husband Ralph Mandeville, and gave some lands here to her son Robert Mandeville (w). [Concerning the Dammartin family see in the other Volume, p. 331. 338.]

In 1480, this maner of Norton, and that of Cannes in North-Weald, belonged to Thomas Danvers Esq; and were both purchased that year by Merton-College in Oxford, with the sum of 400 l. given them by Thomas Kempe, bishop of London, once Fellow of that College; with the addition of 93 l. 6 s. 8 d. of the College's money. The Bishop's gift, was for finding the Fellows with liveries, as the revenues of the College could allow. All which appears from the old Register of that House, fol. 40. a. & fol. 47. b.

was probably named from some new building or other work. The house is about a mile east from the Church. This estate lies partly in Norton, partly in High-Ongar. Some of the possessions of Hamo came by marriage to the Family de Clare, Earls of Gloucester, and so to the Honor of Clare. [See in the other Volume, p. 115. 423.] I find nothing how this estate passed, 'till K. Henry VIII. granted it in 1542, to John Williams and Antony Stringer, who had licence, the same year, 25 Febr. to alienate it to Sir Richard Riche (x). I have seen a memorandum that this estate was once in the Church of Westminster, but find no authority for that. King Henry's possessing it, makes it not unlikely.

John Waylett, at the time of his decease, 5 Septemb. 1566, held this maner, of the Queen

[C] Mr. Newcourt believes Norton to have been a Chapel of ease to High-Ongar, from the account of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's lands, and the state of them, taken in 1181, wherein it is said, That the parochial duty of the mother Church of Great Angre extended to the neighbouring one of Norton, for which the Rector of Angre received all Tithes both great and small out of the whole Maner, [that is, we suppose, out of that part of Newark which lay in H. Ongar.] But yet, on account of the conveniency of attending Christian duties, it payed to the neighbouring Church of Fyfhide one sack of wheat, and one sack of oats. Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 439. from the Register of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

[D] A Hyde of land, is commonly understood to be the same as a Plough-land; or such a quantity of land as might be ploughed with one plough in a year; or as much as would maintain a Family. Some think it was one hundred acres. . . . Spelman Gloss, sub voce Hida. . . . Others 120 acres. But Sir Edward Coke affirms, that an Hyde did not contain any certain number of acres. 1 Instit. in capite, by knight's service.—John his son, who dyed 30 October 1612, held this same maner, with 60 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 28 of pasture, and 10 of wood, thereto belonging; and left—John his son and heir (y). [See in the other Volume, p. 481.]

It is now in William Stane of High-Ongar, Esq;

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. A little spire, shingled, contains 1 Bell.

Here is neither Rectory nor Vicarage; a Curate is appointed by the Impropiator, and licenced by the Ordinary. This Curacy was augmented in 1743.

The Rectory and great Tithes were given by Galiene de Dammartin to the Nunnery of St. Leonards at Bromley in Middlesex, and confirmed by her son, and her second husband Ralph Mandeville. Robert de Burgate and Galiene his wife gave to the same all the tythes out of his wood called Alewode, &c. (z). After the Suppression K. Henry VIII. granted this Rectory, in 1540, to Sir Ralph Sadlier: who conveyed it to—William Pawne Esq (a) [C]. He dyed possessed of it 22 May 1570, as did his son—William, 2 April 1578. From whom it descended, as Chevers, to Bridget Chatterton (b).

Edward Ellyot held it at the time of his decease, 26 Decemb. 1595; and left it to his son—Thomas Ellyott (c). [See in the other Volume more concerning this Ellyott family, p. 33. 74. 182.]

It belonged some time ago to one Mr. Nicolas, but hath since been sold.

Thomas Mead, and Thomas Mullucks have also lands here.

John Bott, B. A. was licensed to the Perpetual Curacy 1 Febr. 1738-9.

The lands in this parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Brihtmar, Aluvin, Leuric, and Alestan; and, at the time of the Survey, to Eustace Earl of Bologne, and John son of Waleram [E].

. . . There was anciently a tax upon every Hyde of land, called Hytage.

They

They were divided afterwards into 1. The Maner of Fifeild. 2. . . . that of Herons. 3. . . . that of Lampetts; which last is partly in Moreton parish.

Who were the immediate and distinct Owners of these several Maners, after Eustace, and John son of Waleram, doth not plainly appear from records. The Earl of Bologne's was paramount, but Waleram's had the largest demesnes.

FIFIELD-HALL,

the maner house, stands on the north side of the Church.

In K. Henry the IId's reign Pharin de Bologne, and afterwards William de Fessues, or Fesnes, held of the Honor of Bologne six knights fees, and among the rest Fifeild. At the same time, Fifeid is mentioned among the fees of Oger de Curcun (d).

Very soon after, it was in the Family surnamed de Tani, lords of Stapleford, and several other estates in this County: namely, in Hasculf de Tani, and his wife—Maud (e). Then in—Rainald: and in his brother—Grailand, or Gruel de Tani. This last dying in 1179, was succeeded by—Hasculf; and he by—Gilbert de Tani who, at the time of his decease, in 1220, left William de Fauburg, Maud, wife of Adam de Legb, and Nicolas de Beauchamp his next heirs (f).

Nicolas de Beauchamp had this whole estate, and presented to the Living, in 1331 (g).—Roger de Beauchamp held in 1280, 1 messuage, 2 carucates of land, 20 acres of meadow, 10 of pasture, 10 marks rent, 80 acr. of wood, a wind-mill, in Fifehide, with the Advowson of the Church, of the King in capite by the service of one knight's fee (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 329, by mistake printed 229.]—John de Beauchamp, his son, who dyed in 1305, held also this maner of Fyfhid (i).

John de Brianzon was possessed of the same at the time of his decease in 1315, and succeeded by his son—John (k). See under Alveley.

The next possessor was John, son of John Hotkam, of Bondeby [F], who held it jointly with his wife, and dying in 1351, was succeeded by his two sisters and coheirs—Catharine, and Alice (l).

Whether one of these two was married to Henry Lord Scrope, of Masham, doth not appear. But, at the time of his decease, in 1392, he held this Maner, with Brettes tenements being 200 acres of arable, and 20 of meadow, purchased of old from it; with the Advowson of the Church; of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne. Three acres, part of Bretts, were holden of the Prior of Leghes: 16 acres of Robert Tomkyn, and 18 of Sir William de Wanton.—Sir Stephen Scrope was his son and heir. He dyed 25 Janu. 1405 (m). Margery, his widow, had this estate in jointure till her death in 1422 (n). Their eldest son Henry being executed in 1415, for his treachery to K. Henry V. his next brother—Sir John Scrope Treasurer of the Exchequer, succeeded to this and other estates. He dyed 15 Novemb. 1455; as did Elizabeth his wife, who had this estate, in 1466 (o).—Thomas, their son, Lord Scrope, departed this life in 1475 (p); leaving—Thomas Lord Scrope, his eldest son and heir, and also three other sons, Henry, Ralph, and Geoffrey: and three daughters Alice, Mary, and Elizabeth. This last Thomas Lord Scrope married Elizabeth, daughter of John Nevill, Marquis Montacute, but dyed 23 April 1493, leaving an only daughter, Alice, then 12 years old (q): married afterwards to Henry Lord Scrope of Bolton. His widow was remarried to Sir Henry Wentworth; and held this maner of Fifeild, and advowson till her decease Septemb. 30. 1515 (r). [Concerning this Family of Scrope, and their other estates in this County, see in the other Volume, p. 237. 240.]

Thomas, the last Lord Scrope, leaving only a Daughter, and his three Brothers dying without issue, his Three Sisters became his coheirs: namely, Alice, married to Thomas Strangways Esq; Mary, to Sir Christopher Danby, and Elizabeth, to Sir Ralph Fitz-Randolph.

In 1531, Sir James Strangways held in capite, of the Honor of Bologne, this maner of Fifeid (s).

Marmaduke Wyvill Esq; by the marriage of Agnes, sister and coheir of John, son and heir of Sir Ralph Fitz-Randolph, had another share.

—Christopher Wyvill was their son and heir. The 13th. of July 1536, Marmaduke Wyvill Esq; and Agnes his wife, and Christopher their son, sold their purparty of this maner, and Advowson to

Sir Richard Riche (t). When his descendants, Earls of Warwick, purchased the rest, I do not find; but in them the estate remained [F] There is an unknown name, Bondelay, used by Froissart, l. iv. c. 33. 36. when he is giving an account, how K. Richard II. decoyed his uncle the Duke of Gloucester, and brought him through the Forest towards London. I am inclined to believe that the right name was this Bondeby, a seat or place hereabouts. See in the other Volume, p. 452.

'till by the death of Charles, the last Earl of this Family, it came to the female heirs. Of the Earl of Manchester it was purchased by Sir Josiah Child, whose grandson, the Rt. Hon. Earl Tylney, is present possessor.

The Maner of HERONS.

The mansion house stands near a mile south from the Church.

This Maner, which was taken from the capital one of Fifield-hall, was given to Lees Priory in this County; but when, and by whom, we do not find. Part of Bretts-tenements, as above-mentioned, were holden of the Prior of Lees, as of this maner.

After the suppression, K. Henry VIII. in 1536, granted this maner, with the Priory's other possessions, to Sir Richard Riche (u). He was possessed of it, at the time of his decease in 1566: And also of 40 acres of land in this parish, that had belonged to the Monastery of Waltham (w). It continued, as the last, many years in his noble descendents.

Thomas Brand Esq; of Pickèrells in this parish, was lately possessed of it: and it now belongs to his son—Thomas Brand, of the Hoo, Esq; of which the mansion-house stands about three quarters of a mile west northwest from this Church; either took its name from, or gave name to, Thomas Lampett, an ancient owner about the reign of K. Henry IV. (x). See under Lambourn.

He hath also John-Ash, a large Farm in this parish.

The Maner of LAMPETS,

It belonged to the Writell family, of the neighbouring parish of Bobbingworth. Walter Writell Esq; who dyed in 1473, held the maner of Lampettys, in Fifhide and Moreton, of Thomas Scroope of Masham (y). This Walter ordered, in his will dated 6 Octob. 1473, this maner to be settled for the maintenance of an Obitt in Bobbingworth-Church. But this devise doth not seem to have taken place [G]. For his son and heir—John Wretyll, Esq; held also this maner of the Lord Scroope; He dyed 28 July 1507, and by reason of his minority the premises came into the King's hands (z).

This estate belonged lately to John Collins Esq; a Justice of Peace, who resided in it: He dyed 18 Septemb. 1750, leaving, by Mary his wife sister of Mr. Thomas Binckes of Ongar, an only daughter named—Mary.

Mr. John Collins; Robert Goodwin; Edward Barwick; William White; George Wolfe; William Glascock; Simeon Havers; Samuel Kent; Joseph Lindsey, &c. have also some lands here.

Richard Fifhide, who dyed in 1374, held one messuage, and 160 acres of arable in Fifhide, of Sir Henry Le Scrope, by the service of 21 s. per ann. Humfrey was his son. He had also estates in Shelley, and Lamborne (a).

Whitney Green is about half a mile eastward from this Church. Upon it stands a fair mansion house, some time the seat of George Pochin Esq; Sheriff of this County in 1700. His son John had it afterwards, and dyed in 1723 [H]. It afterwards came to . . . Major, who left two sons, William, and Joseph.

Charities.

Six pounds a year towards the reparation of the Church; The Donor's name unknown.

Dr. Walker, Rector of this Church, gave 10 l. a year for teaching poor Children to read and write.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is large, consisting of a body, and two aisles supported by pillars arched over: But the Chancel is of one pace; the whole tyled. In the middle stood the Tower, cathedral-wise, with 5 Bells. It fell down some years ago. In the south wall of the Chancel are three arches, one above another, supported by two columns of gray marble, of the Tuscan order: And the windows are curiously wrought in stone-work.

The Tithes of this Parish [I] were given, in the year 1094, to the Monastery of Bermondsey, by Roger, I suppose de Tany, one of the Knights of John Fitz-Waleran, with his Lord's consent (b).

In 1107, these Tithes were confirmed to that Monastery, by Maud wife of Asculph, and her son Graald de Tany; who, at the same time, gave them this Church of Fifhide: which grant was confirmed by K. Henry I. and II. (c). Notwithstanding, before the year 1331, this Church was taken again from them, by whom doth not appear: and, luckily, before they had got the Tithes appropriated to themselves.

This Rectory hath been ever since appendent to the Maner of Fifield-hall; and is now in Earl Tylney.

The parish of Fifield is rated to the land-tax at 1372 l. 2 s. 4 d.

5. RODING BEAUCHAMP.

There are eight Parishes in this County named Roding. Six of them are in the Hundred of Dunmow, under which we have described them, in the other Volume, p. 465. &c. We proceed to describe the other two, which are within this Hundred of Ongar.

Roding Beauchamp was undoubtedly so named from William Beauchamp of Bedford, who held it in 1262 (d).

Leuvin and Eccius enjoyed this parish in Edward the Confessor's reign: At the time of the Survey, Alan Earl of Bretagne was possessed of it, and under him Alberic de Vere [K].

LONG BARNES,

the Maner house here, stands in a bottom, about a mile north of the Church.

Henry Biddock or de Byddik, held this estate about the year 1328; undoubtedly under the Vere Family.

Robert de Vere Duke of Ireland, lost it upon his attainder in 1387, and it was forfeited to the King.

Richard Weald, who dyed in 1391, held this maner of Longeburnes, with the Advowson of the Church, of K. Richard II. by reason of the said forfeiture. His next heir was his daughter—Elizabeth, married to Lewes Mewes Esq; (e) who presented to this Church in 1430. and 1447. as did his son—Thomas Mews Esq; in 1463 (f).

It was next in the Gate Family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 146. 457. 450. &c. Sir Geffrey Gate, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Rothing-Beauchamp, alias Longbarnes; with lands and tenements in this parish called Frayes, of Richard Duke of Gloucester, by the service of a quarter of a knight's-fee.—William, his son and heir, was then aged 14 years. But his widow Agnes, remarried to William Bramlac, enjoyed these estates till her decease in 1481 (g) [L]. Richard Gate, who dyed 28 September 1485, held the premisses of John Earl of Oxford; and was succeeded by his son—Geffrey, then but one year old (b). He was afterwards knighted; and, at the time of his decease 7 May 1526, held this maner of Bechampe Rodinge, alias Long Rodinge, with appertenance; and the Advowson of the Church: And the Maner of Frayes; all of the Earl of Oxford. His son—John Gates Esq; (i) afterwards knighted, had the misfortune of losing his life and estates, for his adherence to the Lady Jane Gray.

K. Philip and Qu. Mary, 21 July 1558, granted all Sir John Gate's estates, and the Maners of Long Barnes and Fraies among the rest, to Richard Weston, and Margaret his wife: To hold, the first of the King in ca. by the service of the 40th. part of a knight's fee; and the latter of the King as of the maner of East Greenwich, by fealty in free socage (k). He was soon after constituted one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas [See in the other Volume, p. 71. 171.] Dying 16 July 1572, he was succeeded in this estate by his son—Jerom (l): afterwards knighted; who departed this life 31 Decemb. 1603.—Sir Richard Weston Kt. his son and heir, was then aged 26 years (m).

In 1605 Richard Courtman, and others, recovered this estate against the said Sir Richard Weston, by writ of Entry (n).

It belonged in 1635 to Edward Stokes.

Next to the Lord North.

And afterwards to . . . Heneage Esq; of Hatton Garden: and then to—Mrs. Elizabeth Heneage.

The Maner of FRAYES, of which the House is the chieft in this parish, lyes not far from Long-Barnes.

The Families of Gate, and Weston, were possessed of it a considerable time, as well as of the other.

Mr. John Miller sold it to

Mr. John Pochin of London, brother to George, of Fifield. From him it hath passed to his son—George, and to his—grandson of the same name.

Mr. Thomas Davis, and John Brecknock, have also some Lands here.

There is no Court kept in this parish.

Birds-Green is a Hamlet partly in this parish and partly in that of Willinge-hall Dou. It is rated to the Land-tax at 401 l.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Botolph, is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the maner of Long-Barnes, but hath passed, through several mean conveyances, into divers hands.

John Harrington, and George Durden had it in 1559 (o).

Sir Gamaliel Capell, not taken notice of by Mr. Newcourt, was possessed of the Advowson of this Church at the time of his decease 13 Novemb. 1613 (p).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 511 l.

6. R O D I N G - A B B E S S , was so named, because a Maner in it, and the Advowson of the Church, belonged to the Abbes of Berking.

Leuild had another Maner in this parish, before the Conquest, which, at the time of the Survey, was held by Geoffrey de Mandeville, and his under-tenant Geoffrey Martell [M].

In this parish are now three Maners. 1. Abbes-Hall. 2. Rookwood-hall. 3. The maner of Berwick Bernes, or Berners.

I. ABBESS-HALL

stands behind the Church.

This maner continued in Berking-Abbey, till the suppression.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. sold the maners of Abbes-hall, and Caldecotes, with appertenances, and Tanfeild grove, in this parish, to Robert Chartsey, and others; to hold by the 40th part of a knight's-fee (q). The next year, by license dated 10 January, Robert Chertsey alienated the premisses, and a wood called Abbots wood, to

Robert Meredith (r): who, the day following, sold them again to

Robert Long (s). The latter, in 1549, conveyed the maners called Abbes-hall and Cladecotts, in Abbes, and Ledon, Roting, formerly belonging to the Monastery of Barking, with a wood of 17 acres, called Abbes-wood; Abbes grove, containing 2 acres; and Tanfeild grove, 2 acres; to William Glascock, Gent. (t). He dyed 3 Decemb. 1579, possessed of this, and other estates in this County, [See in the other Volume, p. 424. 508. 580.] leaving — Richard, his son and heir, 32 years old (u).

Tipper, and Dawe, the two greedy hunters after concealed lands, got a grant of these among many others, in 1592 (w). But, whether they could not keep possession or otherwise, Qu. Elizabeth, 31 Aug. 1599, granted this maner again to

Richard Glascock (x). He sold it, a few days after, to Gamaliel Capel, Esq; owner of Rookwood-hall adjoining, under which we shall give an account of him and his family. He was knighted 7 May 1603, and dyed 13 Novemb. 1613, possessed of this estate: wherein he was succeeded by his son—Sir Gamaliel Capel, Kt. (y). He dyed in June 1652, and had for successors his son and his grandson, both named—Gamaliel. The latter dyed in 1720. He mortgaged, or sold, this estate to

John Howland, of Stretham Esq; from whom it came to his daughter—Elizabeth; and then to her son—John, Duke of Bedford. His Grace, in 1739, sold it to Stephen Skinner, of Waltham-Stow Esq; Emma, his eldest daughter, was married to the late William Harvey, of Chigwell Esq; his second daughter, to the late Sir James Colebrook, and the third to Grosvenor Esq; brother to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Grosvenor.

is about half a mile west from this Church: and took that name from some ancient owners [N].

This was the part which, at the Survey, belonged to Geoffrey de Mandeville; who, it seems by the account given there, had taken it from the Abbey of Berking. But he that held it was only a tenant of Geoffrey's ancestor; and they could not dispose of this land any where but to the Abbey.

We have no account of the subsequent owners of it till 1250, when John Fitz-Richard held it; next — Richard Fitz-William; and — Richard, son of William de Roynges, in 1268.

The lords paramount were the Earls of Oxford. For, under John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, the heirs of William Fitz-Richard held half a fee; and William Weld one fee in Rothyng Abbess (z). The latter held the whole fee and a half, under Thomas de Vere Earl of Oxford who dyed in 1370 (a). — William Weld held it in the reign of K. Henry V.

We find it next in a branch of the Browne Family; for a particular account of which see under South-Weald. Anne Browne was possessed of it in 1427, and Thomas Browne in 1466. — John Browne, who dyed in 1468, held this maner of Rothyng Abbess of the Earl of Oxford. He had also those of White-Roding, and Langenho. — Thomas his brother succeeded him (b). He married Joanna, daughter of Kirkham, by whom he had — Robert; who by Mary his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Charlton, had Robert; Humphrey, and Wistan. [See above, p. 118.] Robert, dyed 20 April 1488, holding this maner of Rooke-wode hall [the first time we find it so called] alias Brounes maner, and 300 acres of arable, 200 of pasture, 26 of meadow, and 10 of wood, of John Vere Earl of Oxford, as of his castle of Heningham, by knight's service. And one toft, garden, and half an acre of land, in this parish, of Jasper Duke of Bedford, as of his Hundred of Ongre, And the maners of Hadleys in Harlow, and Stokhall in Matching. — William, his son and heir, was 15 years old (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 498.] This William we suppose dyed without issue. For the next possessor was — John Browne Esq; second son of Sir Wistan Browne, and grandson of Robert. [See under South-Weald.] At the time of his decease 27 Octob. 1550, he held this estate, and the maners of Lagenhoo, and White Roding, and the third part of Marks (d). By Etheldred, daughter and coheir of Henry Vere of Addington, he had George, and Henry. — George Browne Esq; the eldest son and heir, born in 1510, dyed 26 Febru. 1558 (e), having had two wives. The 1st was Elizabeth, daughter of John Leventhorp, by whom he had Wistan, and John; and two daughters. By Wilford, his 2d wife, he had no issue. — Wistan, the eldest son, dyed 1 August 1580; possessed not only of this estate; but also of those in South-Weald, which he inherited from his kinsman Sir Antony Browne (f). [See above p. 118.] By Mary, his first wife, daughter of Edward Capel, of Rayne-hall, Esq; he left Antony, who dyed 14 April 1589, without issue; and two daughters, Catharine, married to Sir Nicolas Waldegrave; and Jane, married, first, to Edward Wyatt of Ilkham, and afterwards to Gamaliel Capel Esq; (g) [O].

Between these two coheiresses and their husbands was this estate divided.

We cannot find when Sir Nicolas Waldegrave dyed. But Sir Gamaliel Capel, at the time of his decease 13 Novemb. 1613, held a moiety of this maner of Rookwood-hall with appertenance, and a moiety of Rookwood PARK, in this parish, and in Margaret, and Beauchamp, Roding, High, and Little Laver; of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Castle of Heningham, by fealty: also the maner of Bydfeild farm, with the lands thereto belonging; Abbess-hall; Halgreen, and 80 acres of land thereto appertaining; Nethercroft: these two last in Little Laver, &c. (b).

As this Sir Gamaliel Capel, and his posterity resided here, it will be proper to give a particular account of him. He was the fifth son of Henry Capel Esq; of Rayne hall in this County, by Catharine, his second wife, daughter of Thomas Maners Earl of Rutland. [See in the other Volume, p. 402.] On the 6th of September 1584 he married Jane, one of the daughters and coheirs of Wistan Browne Esq; as above-mentioned, by whom he had six sons, Gamaliel, born in 1589; Thomas, Antony, Henry, Theodofius, and Francis: and three daughters, Mary, wife of Arundell; Anne, married 29 Septemb. 1619, to Robert Wiseman of Canfield Esq; and Mildred, to Sir William Luckyn of Little Waltham Bart. She dyed 23 August 1633 aged 31, and is buried in the Chancel of this Church, with a noble monument. Their father, Sir Gamaliel was knighted 7 May 1603, and, at the age of 50, departed this life 10 Novemb. 1613; His Lady departed also this life 22 August 1618. They are both interred in the Chancel of this Church, with a fair monument. — Sir Gamaliel Capel Kt. the eldest son and heir, married Dorothy Bennet. They had five sons, Gamaliel, Francis, Arthur, Thomas, Robert; and five daughters, Dorothy, Mildred, Anne, Elizabeth, and Lucy. He was buried in this Church 27 June 1652, and his Lady 22 March 1648. — Gamaliel, their eldest son, married Sarah Marshall, of Surrey, and had by her two sons, Gamaliel, baptized 8 March 1659; and Charles: and three daughters, Sarah; Dorothy; and Mildred, married, 10 Septemb. 1685, to John Wale of Little Bardfield Esq; Their father was buried here 24 Decemb. 1683; and his widow 18 April 1698. — Gamaliel Capel Esq; the eldest son and heir, was married, first, to Anne, daughter of Sir James Bunche, Alderman of London, by whom he had Anne, wife of William Mason of London, brewer. His second wife was Elizabeth daughter of John Booth of London, cloth-worker, and by her he had Gamaliel, and John, who both dyed young; Mildmay: and Elizabeth, wife of . . . King, bookseller. He sometimes lived at Springfeild, and was buried here 12 June 1720.

He mortgaged, or sold, this estate, as well as the former, to

John Howland of Stretham Esq; From him it descended to his only daughter — Elizabeth, Duchess of Bedford, who dyed 29 June 1724, and then to her son — John, Duke of Bedford. His Grace, in 1739, sold it, as well as Abbess-Hall, to

Stephen Skinner Esq;

But the Maner, and some of the Demesnes, had been sold before to Mr. Hazard, of Harlow. He mortgaged them to Mr. Jackson, whose widow sold them again to Mrs. Clark.

now, which causes it to be reputed within that Hundred. The House is above a mile north-east from this Church.

It belonged anciently to the noble Family of Berners, from whence it took its additional name.

Ralph Berners, who dyed in 1297, held this maner of Rothinges and Berwyk of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex. [See in the other Volume, p. 449. 474.] — Edmund was his son and heir (i). — Sir James de Berners held it in the reign of K. Richard II. and after his attainder for being one of that King's evil counsellors, it was restored by the same King to his widow — Anne Berners, in 1389 (k). — Sir John Bourchier, Lord Berners, was also possessed of it at the time of his decease in 1475 (l). He is said to have sold it to

Sir William Capel; who held it of the King as of his Castle of Pleceye, parcel of the Honor of Mandeville: He dyed 6 Septemb. 1515 (m). And his heirs that enjoyed it after him, were, his son — Sir Giles, who dyed 29 May 1556. He held this maner of Barwick Barnes, with appertenances, and 20 messuages, 10 tofts, 450 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 120 of pasture, 70 of wood, and 6l. rent in Barwick Barnes, Rothing Abbess, and High-Ester. — Sir Henry was his son and successor (n). Next — Sir

Edward Capel, who dyed 19 March 1576, and his son — Henry Capel Esq; who departed this life 22 June 1588 (o). Then — Arthur — Sir Henry &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 401, &c.] [P]. It was afterwards in Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. who sold it to

Thomas Brand of Fifield Esq;

Samuel Pratt Esq; and Mr. Thomas Nicholls, have also some lands here.

Nicolas Burton, Rector of this parish, gave out of a tenement near Rookwood-hall, 40 s. a year to the Church-Clerk, who lives in one end of the House.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Edmund, is of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tyled. In a little wooden Turret, with a Spire, there are 3 Bells.

This Rectory seems to have been appendent to the Maner of Abbess-Hall, and as such was in the gift of Berking-Abbey till its dissolution.

After that it was held by Sir Ralph Fane in 1550: and by John Gate Esq; in 1552 (p). William Glascock was possessed of it in 1579, from whom it came to his son Richard (q). And then to the Capel family (r): From whom it hath passed through several hands.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 438 l. 1 s. 0d. and Berwick-Bernes Hamlet at 276 l.

is a general name for three contiguous Parishes here, distinguished from each other by the appellations of High, Magdalen, and Little.

They are otherwise called in records Lagafare, Laghefare, Lanfare, Lauver: which name might be derived from Laga, and pape, or læp; but the reason of it we cannot assign.

At the time of the Survey, it was held by Eustace Earl of Bologne [R].

There are two Maners in this Parish. 1. The Maner of High Laver. 2. The Maner of Otes.

The Maner of HIGH LAVER.

The mansion house stands behind the Church.

This Maner having descended to Earl Eustace's granddaughter Maud, Queen of K. Stephen, remained in the Crown till K. Henry II. gave it to William Fitz-Aucher; whose son, — Richard Fitz-Aucher, held, in that reign, eight pounds in land, in Lagefare: and his successor — Richard four fees in 1210, and 1211 (t).

The Abbess of St. Sulpicius in Berry claimed the services and homage of the tenants of this maner, as assigned to her Abbey, by Richard son of Henry Fitz-Aucher, who held in this parish two carucates of land, with appertenances. She founded her claim upon a grant of William Earl of Bologne, son of K. Stephen, who she pretended had given it to her Church. At last, in 1237, it was agreed between Amicia, the then Abbess, and Richard son of Henry Fitz-Aucher, that He should hold and enjoy this Maner with appertenances, by the service of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and pay the Abbess and her successors ten pounds per ann. This was settled by fine (u). Afterwards Joane, another Abbess, granted this 10 l. rent to Waltham Abbey, which Stephen son of Richard, son of Henry, was to pay; and thenceforth the Auchers held of the Abbot of Waltham (w) [S]. There must have been some exchange or equivalent from the Abbot to the said Joane.

Sir Henry Fitz-Aucher, who dyed in 1304, held of the Abbey of Waltham this maner, and the Advowson of the Church.—Sir Aucher Fitz-Aucher was his son and heir (x). He presented to this Church in 1331, and 1334 (y). Concerning this Family, see above, p. 48.

If we can judge by the Presentations, it was for some years in the noble Family of Ferrers of Groby. And in Richard Priour Esq; in 1438, and 1452 (z).

Walter Writell Esq; of the neighbouring parish of Bobbingworth, at the time of his decease, in 1475, held this maner of High Laver, with the Advowson; and other lands, tenements, &c. in these three Lavers, and in Moreton, Harlow, and Matching:—William, or John, was his son and heir (a). The latter dyed 13 October 1485, and was succeeded by—John, his son; who departed this life 28 July 1507, under age (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 156.] They held this maner of High Lanfere, alias Laver, of the Family of Stafford, Dukes of Buckingham.

Alienor, daughter and heir of Walter Writell abovesaid, and wife of James Walsingham Esq; seems to have inherited this estate. For they two jointly presented to the Living, in 1533 (c). Their son—Sir Thomas Walsingham, who dyed 15 Janu. 1583, held this Maner of the Lord Riche, as of his Hundred of Ongar;—Edmund was his son and heir, who departing this life 16 Novemb. 1589, was succeeded by his son—Thomas Walsingham (d).

Arthur Stanlake Esq; had it next.

In the last century it came to two co-heiresses: Mary, daughter of Richard Matthews citizen of London, brought one moiety in marriage to her husband Samuel Beachcroft Esq; and they left it to their son Matthews Beachcroft Esq; The other moiety was enjoyed between Lewis Scawen Esq; and Mr. Richard Merry of London, merchant, that married the daughters of Abraham Forster of Eltham in Kent Esq; who had the other coheirefs to wife.—Lewis Scawen Esq; was second son of Sir Thomas Scawen, Kt. Alderman of London. He married his wife . . . Forster 13 September 1728 [T].

The Maner of Otes,

According to tradition, took its name from John Otes, who, with others, held the maner of Little-Laver of the Lord Scales; in the time of K. Edward II. (e).

The Maner house stands about a mile and a half north from the Church.

This estate seems to have been divided, about the year 1486, or before, between Sir John Suliard, and John Pikenham Esq; Sir John Suliard, one of the Justices of the King's-Bench, who dyed 18 March 1487, held a moiety of the maner of Otes in High-Laver of Edward Duke of Buckingham, as of his maner of Cheping-Ongre.—Edward was his eldest son and heir (f), whose sister Elizabeth was married to . . . Garneys, or Garnish, Esq; The time of Edward Sulyard's death doth not appear, but his son—Sir William Sulyard dyed 25 March 1539. He held the half of this maner of Otes, and 2 messuages, 100 acres of arable, 70 acr. of meadow, 200 of pasture, 200 of wood, and 11 l. rent, in the three Lavers, and Maching, of the King, as of the maner of Cheping Ongar, by fealty, and rent of 3 s. per ann. Also 20 acres, parcel of the moiety of this maner, of the King, as of the maner of Beaulieu: and other estates in Lambourn, Runwell, Downham, &c. Leaving no issue, he was succeeded by his cousin

Robert Garneys Esq; son of his aunt Elizabeth above-mentioned (g). He was then aged 50 years. [See in the other Volume, p. 42.] But it came again into the Sulyard Family, for Eustace Sulyard Esq; who dyed 26 February 1546, held a moiety of this maner in High-Laver, alias Laver Muchgrose, of the maner of Onger ad Castrum, by fealty, and 18 d. rent, and service at the Ward-Staff, and fine of 3 s. per ann. to the Bailiff of Onger-Hundred for suit at the Court of that Hundred.—Edward, his son, succeeded him (b): He was afterwards knighted, and dyed 5 June 1610. But this estate is not mentioned in the Inquisition taken after his decease, so that it had undoubtedly before that been purchased by Sir William Masbam.

As to the other Moiety of this Maner, George Pikenham Esq; who dyed in 1499, held a moiety of the maner of Otes in High Laver, of John Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Boreham-hall, worth 20 marks a year—Margaret and Elizabeth, daughters of Thomas his brother, were his heirs (i).

The estate has been farther subdivided; for John Limsey, who dyed 4 May 1546, held a moiety of a moiety of the maner of Otes, and a moiety of a moiety of 10 messuages, 4 tofts, 1 dovehouse, 10 gardens, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 40 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, and 100 s. rent, in the three Lavers, Matching, and Harlow, of the maner of Chipping-Onger.—Edward was his son and heir (k).

In the reign of K. James I. it was purchased by Sir William Masbam.

The family of Masbam, or Maffam, was antiently seated in the north parts of England; and undoubtedly took their surname from Masbam, a village near Richmond in Yorkshire (l). About the reign of K. Henry VI. Sir John Masbam fixed himself in Suffolk, and was buried at Thornham in 1450. From his heir, John Masbam Esq; descended Thomas Masbam Esq; seated at Badwell-Ash in the said County, ancestor of the Masbams of Suffolk. His son John had two sons, John; and William, who was an Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs, of London in 1583. His son—William Masbam Esq; became seated at Otes, and by . . . daughter of . . . Calton, left—William Masbam Esq; who was created a Baronet 20 Decemb. 1621. He represented in Parliament the burgh of Maldon in 1623, and twice in 1625; the burgh of Colchester in 1640, and was one of the knights for this shire in the Long Parliament. [See the Histories of those Times, and the Peerages.] He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Francis Barrington of Hatfeild-Broad-Oak, widow of Sir James Altham of Mark-hall in Latton.—William was his eldest son and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Trevor Kt. He dyed in his father's life-time, having had, besides other children, two sons William and Francis; — Sir William dyed unmarried, upon which the Honor and estate came to—Sir Francis, who had so great interest in this County, that he was chosen one the Knights of the Shire in 1690, and 1695, and in all the Parliaments from 1700 to 1708. He married, first, Mary, daughter of Sir William Scot of Rouen in Normandy, Bart. and by her had eight sons, all of which dyed in his life-time, except the youngest, Samuel, created Lord Masbam.

Francis, the fourth son, left a Son Francis, who succeeded to the Baronetship upon the death of his grand-father, and dyed unmarried. Sir Francis had also a daughter, Hester, who out-lived him; she was a Lady of great accomplishments. He had to his second wife Damaris, daughter of Dr. Cudworth Master of Christ's College Cambridge, by whom he had a son Francis Cudworth Masbam Esq; who was Accountant general to the High Court of Chancery. She dyed 20 April 1708, and is buried at Bath, with a monument. Sir Francis himself dyed 2 March 1722-3, and was succeeded in his estates by his son—Samuel, Lord Masbam. He was in high posts under George Prince of Denmark: and, under Queen Anne, had the command of a Regiment of Horse, and was advanced to be Brigadier General: In the year 1711 he was Cofferer of the Household, and 1 January that year created Baron Masbam of Otes. His Lordship married Abigail, daughter of Francis Hill, Esq; an eminent Turkey-merchant, sister to General John Hill of Enville green in Surrey; and dying 16 October 1758, was succeeded by his son, the Rt. Hon.—Samuel Lord Masbam, who had married Herriot, daughter of Thomas Winnyngton Esq;

Mr. William Betts; John Runnington; William Morris; Edward Speed; John Andrews; Robert Foster; James Randal; John Corney; Benj. Redington &c. have also some lands here.

The learned John Locke Esq; spent much of his time in the last ten years of his life at Otes, as appears by the dates of his Letters; where he was used with the utmost civility by Sir Francis Masbam, and his excellent wife Damaris. Here he dyed 28 Octob. 1704, and was buried in the south side of the Church-yard, under a black marble grave-stone, inclosed with iron rails; and on the Wall of the Church above it is an Epitaph, printed in his works.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. The Steple, in which are 3 Bells, is covered with a lofty spire, shingled.

This Rectory was a long time appendent to the Maner of High-Laver. It hath passed since, by sale, into several Families.

The parish of High Laver is rated to the Land-tax at 895 l. 0 s. 2 d.

8. MAGDALEN L A V E R.

was so called, from the dedication of the Church to St. Mary Magdalen.

This parish belonged in the Saxons time to one Sexi; and, at the time of the Survey, to Ralph de Toden, and his under-tenant Roger [U].

Here is but one MANER.

The mansion house stands near the Church.

The earliest possessors we find after Toden, are Robert de Burnaville, and John de Angerville, John de Monpyncon, and Arabella his wife, in the reign of K. Henry III. (n). The two first were infeoffed by Joane de Marcy their grandmother (o).

In 1320, a fine passed between Humfrey de Waldene plaintiff, and John son of Robert de Burnaud, for this maner, and the Advowson of the Church (p). And this Humfrey, at the time of his decease in 1331, held them in capite, of Sir Hugh de Audele, and Margaret his wife daughter and co-heir of Gilbert Earl of Clare, as of the said Margaret's right, by the service of half a fee, and 7 d. to the Hundred of Aungre, for the Wardstaff.—Andrew, son of his brother Roger was his heir. He dyed in 1352 (q), holding in fee-tail, of the Earl of March, this maner; and having no issue, was succeeded by Thomas Bataile, son of his sister Alice; who held the premises of the Honor of Clare; and departing this life in 1439, left—John, his son and heir, 14 years old (r). [See above, p. and the other Volume, p. 187. 620.

The next possessors upon record, were Sir Thomas Cook, mentioned above, p. who dyed in 1478: and his grandson—John, in 1515 (s). And—Sir Antony, in 1576 (t).

But, in the mean time, it was also possessed by some, of the Families of Ayloff, and Barrington; namely, by — William Ayloff Esq; mentioned above, p. and in the other Volume, p. 138. 368. 606. He dyed 10 August 1517, and was succeeded by his son—William, then aged 13 years (u).

John Barrington Esq; held also this maner of Maudelon Lower, in 1536, of John Earl of Oxford, as of his Honor of Castle-Henningham (w). Howsoever they got it, yet it reverted to the Cook family.

William Cook Esq; second son of Sir Antony, presented to the Living in 1588, but the Maner doth not appear among the rest of his possessions (x).

It was next in the Aylet-family.

William Aylet yeoman presented to the Rectory in 1619. William Aylet of Magdalen-Laver, married Anne, daughter of . . . Sumner, and had issue—John Aylet, of the same place; who took to wife Alianor, daughter of Isaac Bernard. His son and heir was—John Aylet of White-Rothing, in 1664, who married Mary, daughter of Ralph Pettus of Brices in Kelvedon-Hatch (y). This must be the same Gentleman who, according to the Account kept in his Family, was Lord of Magdalen-Laver, and, like his father-in law . . . Pettus, was a great sufferer for King Charles I. He spent 700 l. per ann. in that service, raised a troop of horse at his own expence, and was in many engagements during the war [W]. He was one of the commanders in Colchester at the Siege, and was sentenced to be shot, but escaped in woman's cloaths. However, he was retaken, and purchased his life of the Parliament for 460 l. and had a pardon from them. He received afterwards a commission from King Charles II. to surprise Chepstow Castle in Monmouthshire, and to be Governor of the same. There he was betrayed, and made prisoner till the Restoration set him at liberty. It is probable then he took up his Residence at White-Rothing, within view of his lost estate [X].

John Throckmorton Esq; presented, in 1662, George Kindleton B. D. to the Rectory, to which he had been presented before in 1631, but during the civil wars had been sequestred for 16 years. After his decease, in 1667, —George Throckmorton Esq; presented again (z); by which we may conclude they possessed the Maner. Of one of the Throckmortons, the estate was purchased by William Cole Esq; Treasurer of St. Thomas's Hospital, who was Sheriff of Essex, in 1716, and dyed 1 Febru. 1729-30. He gave it to his nephew—William Cole, who dyed 24 February

This is placed in Domesday-book under the Hundred of Harlow.

[W] The King, to shew his approbation of his zeal, ordered an augmentation to his Arms, at Oxford in 1646, having no other reward to bestow on him. His Coat was, Gules; three annulets, a chief, argent. The addition was, on a canton, or, the Rose of England, proper. Crest, an Arm, gules, holding a sword, hilted, or, blade argent.

Motto, NOT IN VAIN.

[X] There he might, as Dryden says of Alexander, Fight all his Battles o'er again; and count his sword drawn NOT IN VAIN, if he had refined his taste enough to prefer the esteem of Heroes and Philosophers to a comfortable inheritance. This Gentleman is not mentioned as a condemned person in our Histories. Having escaped his pursuers, their intention might not be proclaimed, though he had intimation of it. 'Tis generally said, that no more than the three Knights were appointed for execution; yet it is plain from the Authentic Journal of the Siege, published by one that was in the Town, that Colonel Farre was called out with the Knights, to have been sharer of their fate, if he had not, contrary to custom, ran away.

the same year; and was succeeded by his brother — Henry Cole Esq;

Mr. Thomas Butler; John Cousins; Daniel Judd; Obadiah Clark; Herbert Croft; Joseph Bush &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Seventy acres of arable and pasture, 6 acres of meadow, and 6 of wood, in this parish, called Rolles, belonged to Sir William Sulyard of the next parish of High-Laver, in 1539 (a), now we suppose to Lord Masham.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is of one pace, and equal breadth, with the Chancel, and tyled [Y].

This Rectory was always appendent to the Maner. And the parish is rated to the land-tax at 749 l. 1 s. 6 d.

9. LITTLE LAVER

was in the Saxons times, and at the Conquest, comprehended under one of the two others: there being then no account of it as a distinct Maner, or Parish.

Here are two Maners. 1. Little-Laver-hall.
2. The maner of Enefield, or Enville.

LITTLE-LAVER-HALL,

the maner-house, stands near the Church.

The earliest account we have of it, is, that, in the year 1200, Eustace de Lagefare passed this estate, by fine, to Ralph de Roucester (b). This Ralph, in 1210, held half a Fee in Parva Langefara of the Honor of Bologne (c). He was son of Thomas Rochester, or Roffes, Lord of Nucelles in Berkway in Hertfordshire, which maner was given to one of his ancestors by Eudo Dapifer. Ralph had issue William, Peter, and Alice. Upon the death of William, in K. Henry the III'd's reign, — Peter inherited; and he leaving no issue, it came to Alice, who carried it to her husband Robert de Scularis, or Scales; descended from Hardwin de Scales, who came in with William the Conqueror, and had many grants from him in Hertfordshire; one whereof in Berkway had a great wood, still called Scales Park. [For a more particular account of the Scales Family, see the other Volume, p. 145.] Robert de Scales abovesaid dyed in 1324, leaving his son and heir — Robert: at which time, John le Bouffer, John Otes, Thomas de Badeford, and John de Ennefeld, held the maner of Little Lauare of him, as of his maner of Rewen-hall, by the service of one knight's fee (d). It seems after that to have been holden entirely by the Bourchier-family under the Lords Scales. Robert Bourchier, High Chancellor of England obtained free warren here in 1330 (e). His successors were, — John Lord Bourchier, who dyed 21 May 1400. — Sir Bartholomew, 18 May 1409.

— Idonea, his widow, 12 Septemb. 1410. Afterwards — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, and Essex, who departed this life 4 April 1483, and — Henry, Earl of Essex, his grandson, who dyed by a fall from his horse, 13 March 1540 (f). The last but one held it of Henry Stafford, Earl of Hereford, &c. Anne, daughter and sole heir of Henry Bourchier the last Earl of Essex, of this family, brought it in marriage to her husband William Lord Parre [Z]. And he obtained a license 1 October 1542, to alienate this maner of Little Laver, alias Bourchiersball, to

Sir Richard Riche (g). Of him it was purchased by John Collyn, or Collen, of Roding-Beauchamp. We can find little more of this Family, than the bare names; viz. William — John — John — John living in 1589. — John, who had 3 children — John, Mary, and Etheldreda. — Nicolas; — Thomas, who married Dorothy, daughter of Edward Elrington of Theydon-Bois Esq; and had by her — Thomas, living in 1664, that married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Wheeler of Laverton in Gloucestershire (h) [A].

This maner was lately in Matthew Bluck of Hunsdon in Hertfordshire, Esq; who bought it of Collin. It was sold by decree in Chancery to the Right Honorable the Lord Masham.

The Maner of ENEFIELD, or ENVILLE.

This seems to have been parted from that of Laver-Hall about the time of K. Edward II. For William de Eneseild, who dyed in 1361, held, jointly with his wife Joane, 1 messuage, 1 mill, 2 carucates of land, 12 acres of meadow, and 40 s. rent, in this parish. — John, his son, held the same, in 1377 (i). From them it was called Eneseild-Laver.

Ralph Tyle, in right of Alice his wife, had it soon after. And John Tyle, his son, who dyed in 1399, held, in this parish and Fifhide, 1 messuage, 270 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 40 of wood, 100s. rent, and 17 capons. His heir was Thomas Enefeld, uncle of his mother Alice (k).

It was long in the Family of Collins of Beauchamp-Rothing; and purchased of the heirs of one of them by Mr. John Austy, who settled it on his grandson Mr. John Evans of Wood-street, London.

Mr. William Norris; George Halden; and William Roast, have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is small, of one pace, and the same width, with the Chancel; and the whole tyled. The Belfrey stands in the middle of the Church, with a spire shingled, in which there is only 1 Bell.

The Advowson of this Rectory was in the Crown, from the year 1313 to 1532; notwithstanding the claim put in by Silvester de Everdon, of which an account may be seen in Mr. Newcourt (l). K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1540, to John Coyes, and his heirs (m); afterwards to Sir Richard Riche: from whom it came to the Collyn family; and then to Lord Masham.

was so named from the two Saxon words Mope, a hill, or rising ground, and tun, town, village, or farm. Between it and the Lavers runs a Brook, that falls into the Rodon at Chipping-Ongar.

This parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Sexi, and one freeman: At the time of the Survey, it was held by William Scobies, or Scobies [B].

The next possessors of it after him upon record, was the Family de Abrincis, or D'avranches, lords of Folkston in Kent. William de Averanches held it about the reign of K. John, of his Barony (n) [C]. He dyed about 1230, leaving by Maud his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Hawise wife of John de Bovill that had estates at Great Lees in this County, [See in the other Volume, p. 95.]—William Davranches, who dyed before the year 1235, without issue; and Maud, a great heiress (o). She was married to Hamo de Crevecoeur or Crevequer, lord of Ledes in Kent, descended from Hugo Dapifer. By her he had—William, [who dyed before him at the age of 24 years, leaving a son named Robert, who had no issue surviving,] and four daughters; Agnes, wife of John de Sandwich; Ifold, wife of Nicolas de Lenham; Elienor, wife of Bartholomew de Kyriell, and Ifabell, wife of Henry de Gaunt.

Hamo de Crevecoeur, husband of the said Maud, dyed in 1262; and Robert his grandson in 1296; whereupon this estate was parcelled out between those 4 daughters, or their heirs (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 339. 570.] Ifabella dying in 1283, her right had centered in the others (q).

This Maner was held of the King in capite, by the Serjancy of finding one man with a horse of 10 s. price, and four horse-shoes, a leather sack, and one iron fastening, whenever the King should happen to go into Wales; at his own charge, viz. the tenant's, for 40 days: as appears by the record set down below [D].

From the partition of this estate arose these two Maners; 1. Nether-hall; 2. Over-hall.

The Serjancy above-mentioned was performed between the owners of both.

NETHER-HALL, OR BOURCHIER'S-HALL [E].

The mansion-house stands near the south-east corner of the Church-yard.

[E] There hath been no Family in this County that hath so called the Lands after their own name, as the noble Family of Bourchier; there being almost an incredible number of Bourchiers-halls.

This

This moiety came by marriage to the noble Family of Bouchier. Robert Burghcher, who dyed in 1349, held it, jointly with his son—John, Lord Bouchier, by the serjancy aforesaid (r). The latter is said to hold it, at the time of his decease, in 1400, by the service of the 4th. part of a knight's-fee (s). His son—Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, and his wife—Idonea held the same (t). Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two husbands Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart. But having no issue by either, it descended to—Henry Bouchier, Earl of Eu, and Essex, who dyed 4 April 1483, and then to his grandson—Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex (u); that dyed by a fall from his horse in 1540. —Anne, his daughter and heir was wife of William Lord Parre Earl of Essex. He by licence, dated 1 October 1542, sold it to

Richard Lord Riche; who held it at the time of his decease, with divers lands and tenements, in Moreton, Little and High Laver, and Matching (w). It continued in that Family 'till it was purchased by Robert Bourne of Blake-Hall in Bobbingworth, Esq; His daughter Alice was married to John Lord Digby, as appears from Mr. Bourne's epitaph, who dyed in 1665. Lady Digby dying without issue, Mr. Bourne settled the reversion.

Some time ago, it belonged to Ambrose Page, one of the South-Sea-Directors: and it being sold, with Scotts farm, by the Company, 12 Febru. 1723-4, was purchased, for the sum of 2505 l. by William Cole Esq; from whom it passed to his two nephews,—William, and—Henry Cole, Esqres. as Magdalen Laver.

The Maner of UPPER-HALL, OVER-HALL, or LADY-HALL, was one of the moieties into which the Maner of Moreton was divided.

The mansion house stands in the fields a little way south-east from Nether-hall.

This seems to have been named Lady-hall from Juliana, daughter and heir of John de Sandwich, by Agnes, eldest daughter of Hamo de Crevecaeur. She was married to John de Segrave, styled le Uncle, because he was uncle to John Lord Segrave (x). This moiety he held by petit serjancy, as above-mentioned [F]. He dyed in 1343. As did his son — John, in 1349, whom—Stephen de Segrave his cousin and next heir succeeded (y).

Elizabeth sole daughter of John Lord Segrave, by his wife Margaret only daughter and heir of Thomas de Brotherton Earl of Norfolk, seems to have brought it in marriage to her husband, Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk: at least he dyed possessed of it in 1400. As did his son — Thomas, who was beheaded in 1404 (z). In the Inquisition taken after the death of this last we find it first called Lady-hall.

From the Mowbrays it came to the Howards. Edmund Lord Howard had licence 29 May 1538, to alienate this maner to Thomas Duke of Norfolk (a).

Next it belonged as well as the other to Sir Richard Riche; and his son — Robert, Earl of Warwick (b). Of some of their heirs it was purchased by Dr. Josias Woodward, Minister Poplar. After whose widow's and son's decease it came to Lewen Choldmondley, a brewer in Southwark; and then to his son—Lewen Choldmondley, of Sutton in Surrey Esq;

The two Moieties of this Maner appear to have been further parcelled out. And the parcels were charged with the duty, or serjancy aforesaid.

John de Lenham, alias de Burndish, had a part of it about the year 1336; which his daughter Elienor brought to her husband

John Gifford, of Bures; and they two enfeoffed, Nicolas Burndish and his heirs with 24 acres, parcel of the same (c).

Of Robert de Sandwich, John Spencer held here, in 1356, one messuage, and 46 acres of land: and of the King in ca. one messuage, and 12 acres of land, by the service aforesaid (d).

Another parcel of this Maner, being 1 messuage, and 15 acres of land, were held by Richard Edwards, and John Scott, in 1358; by John de Dupham, in 1360; and by John Bushe, in 1396 (e) [G].

Thomas Urswick, who dyed in 1479, held 1 messuage called Litheball, and 50 acres, whereof 30 were holden of the maner of Bouchier's-hall, and the other 20 lay in Little Laver (f). [See above, p. 141, and in the other Volume, p. 507.]

Tho: Winslowe, at the time of his decease, in 1481, held the maner of Brundishe, in this parish, of the Earl of Essex; and 2 messuages, 79 acres of arable, and 5 of meadow, of the Lord Howard (g). [See above, p. 141.]—

This Church was given by William Scobies above-mentioned, to the Monastery of St. Stephen at Caen in Normandy founded by William the Conqueror, with the land and tithe thereto belonging. The grant was confirmed by K. Henry I. and a Vicarage ordained, to which the Prior of Pantfield usually presented (i): that Priory being a cell to the Convent of Caen, and the Prior of Pantfield Procurator for them, and receiver of their rents. It was seized by K. Edw. III. as a Priory alien, and afterwards granted by Parliament to K. Henry V. [See in the other Volume, p. 407.] K. Henry VI. endowing his College of Eaton, settled on it a pension of eighteen marks from the Vicarage of Moreton (k). For, a Vicarage it continued till 1532, when K. Henry VIII. presented to the Living as a Rectory, and it has continued such to this time. He granted the Church and Advowson first to Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, and afterward to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, who had licence, in 1538, to sell it to the Lord Riche (l), in whose Family it continued till it was purchased by St. John's College in Cambridge.

Sir Richard Riche; and, at the time of his decease in 1566, he held the site of this maner, with 50 acres of land, of William Pawne, as of his maner of Chevers-hall, in free socage: and the residue of the maner, of the Queen, as of the Dutchy of Lancaster.—Robert Lord Riche, his son, had it also, at the time of his decease, in 1580 (s). But his son — Robert Lord Riche sold it to

John Green: He married Catharine daughter of John Wright. They had 13 children, and lived to see their issue and descendents increased to an hundred and eleven [L]; He dying 18 November 1595, aged 89 years; and she the 11th of January following, aged 71 (t).—Robert Green, Gent. their Sixth son, held this estate in fee-tail: He dyed 19 August 1624, and his wife Frideswid only four days before, after they had lived 52 years together, and had 12 sons (u). Their eldest son and heir—John Greene, Gent. by his wife Agnes, daughter of William Hunt which dyed 26 September 1626, had 2 sons, and 4 daughters (w).—Robert, their eldest son, had—John Greene, his son and heir, who married Sarah, daughter of Edward Hadesley of Gr. Canfield; and had by her—John, living in 1664 (x). His son—Hadesley Greene Gent. departed this life 8 December 1699, in the 36th year of his age; leaving a son, who dyed under age, and two daughters his coheirs [M].

Sarah, one of them, was married, first, to Bernard Cotterel of London, silkman, afterwards to John Baker of Blackmore, Gent. by whom she had a son, John: father of — Bernard Baker. Mary, the other daughter, was wife of the Rev. Andrew Trebeck, late Rector of St. George's Hanover Square, who had by her, James, Rector of this parish, and Vicar of Hutton; and a daughter, married to the Right Rev. Thomas Newton Lord Bishop of Bristol.

Burnish-hall, is a capital messuage in this parish, about half a mile north from the Church; the lands of which extend partly into the parish of Moreton. It seems to be what is mentioned there under the name of Brundishe: And took its name from the Brundishe family. Nicolas Brundishe, who dyed in 1349, held in the vill of Shenle a moiety of 1 messuage, and 20 acres of land of John de Leye, by the service of 7 s. 10 d. per ann. He had also some parcels of land in Moreton, Bobbingworth, and Magdalen Laver. — John was his son.

Sir Richard Riche dyed possessed of it in 1566 (y), and it continued some years in his descendents, the Earls of Warwick.

It belonged some time ago to John Lingard Esq; common Serjeant of the city of London; upon whose decease, 5 Novemb. 1729, it came among his three Daughters and co-heirs. [See the other Volume, p. 110.]

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. In the spire, which is shingled, are 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

'Tis otherwise written in records Bobingford, and Bubingeorda: vulgarly, Bovingor.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, two Freemen were possessed of this parish: At the time

There are in it two Maners. 1. Bobbingworth-hall. 2. Blake-hall.

The next owner of this estate that occurs in records, after Ralph, was Henry Spigurnell, who dyed in 1328. He held the maner, and the advowson of the Church, of William Bohun, by the service of half a knight's fee.—Thomas was his son (z). He was afterwards knighted; and Lord of Dagew-hall, which we take for Deux-hall in Lambourn. Henry, the father, was undoubtedly son, or grandson, of Edmund Spigurnell, who had the maner of Stondon in 1295 (a). [See under that parish.] In 1339, Sir Thomas Spigurnell granted to Robert de Hakeney, citizen of London, and his wife Catharine, and their heirs, this whole maner of Bobbingworth, with all his lands and tenements in High-Aungre (b).

In 1403; it was purchased by Sir John Asheles. And in 1423—William Asheles, of Thaxted, sold it to John de Veer, Earl of Oxford, Sir Reginald West, Nicolas Thorley, Richard Wentworth, and Richard Arden (c) [O].

These conveyed the premisses, in 1446, to Sir Thomas Tyrell, Sir Peter Arden, and others. And in 1464, they were purchased by Walter Writell Esq; He was of a very ancient family, descended from Ralph Fitz-Ralph Esq; to whom Margaret Countess of Gallway gave the maner of Writtle in this County, and from whence he took the surname of Writtle. [See in the other Volume, p. 156.]—Peirce de Writtle, his son, by Mabel, daughter and heir of Sir Stephen Boys, had—Walter Writell, above-mentioned. He married Catharine, daughter of Alexander Walden, and had by her—Hugh; who, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Sir John Norford, had—Ralph: that married Anne daughter of Thomas Breton.—Ralph was their son and heir, and by Elizabeth his wife daughter and heir of Robert Ramsey, left Ralph Writtle, of Bobbingworth Esq; The latter married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Boston, and had by her, John, father of—John, who dyed 13 October 1485, without issue; and three daughters, Grifild married first to John Rochester, afterwards to Edward Waldgrave; Lora, wife of John Waldgrave; and Eleanor of James Walsingham (d).

Walter Writell Esq; first named here, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1469, and 1471. He dyed 18 April 1475, and was buried in this Church with his wife Catharine (e). Besides this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, he held in this parish of Anne Duchels of Buckingham, 3 messuages called Pykerells, Reynkyns, and Bollescrofts; and lands and tenements called Hyerds, Pikerells, Wilkyns, Crowches crofts, Chamberleyns, Pappis, and Tylehous; and estates in several other places (f) [P].—John Writell, son and heir of John, who dyed 28 July 1507, had also several other estates in this County (g) [Q].

In 1510, there was a partition made of this estate between the coheiresses of Writell; viz. James, and Eleanor, Walsingham, and Edward and Grifild Waldgrave. And in 1575 there was another partition between James Walsingham and his wife, and John Rochester and his wife, whereby the Presentation to the Living became alternate. In 1586, Rochester's part, the Hall, was purchased by John Pool [R]; His son—John Poole dyed 20 April 1633, being succeeded by his brother—Richard (h), and his descendents dwelt in the Hall till 1708. Walsingham's part, which was land only, was purchased, of Sir Thomas, and Sir Andrew Walsingham, by Robert Bourne, of Blake-hall.

These two moieties were afterwards purchased by the Houblon Family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 513. The late Rev. Jacob Houblon enjoyed this estate many years, and it now belongs to his nephew—Jacob Houblon Esq; stands about half a mile south-east from the Church. It has now only the empty title of a Maner, without court, or tenants.

BLAKE-HALL

This maner was originally holden of the Honor of Clare, by the service of half a knight's fee; formerly by Robert de Hastings, of the Honor of Marescall, then by John de Londres (i).

It belonged afterwards to Thomson: and in 1516 to—Sir William Capel, who held it of Catharine Queen of England, as of the Honor of Clare (l).

Sir Richard Riche had it afterwards; and next—John Waylet; of whom—John Glascock purchased it in 1592, and paid 4 l. ingress fine. He sold it, in 1598, to Robert Bourne, Gent. who paid 70 s. ingress fine. His father, William Bourne, had purchased of the Lord Riche, 3 Octob. 1566, a certain tenement, and 200 acres of land in this parish. He dyed 18 May 1581, and was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph.—Robert, his second son, lord of this maner, married Catharine, daughter of Henry Medley of Tiltey-Abbey, Esq; which dyed 26 April 1645, aged 80 years, having had 5 sons, William, Robert, Edward, &c. and 6 daughters, among the rest, Mary, wife of William Chapman, of London, merchant; Margareta wife of William, or Nicolas Cowper, of the same place; and Elizabeth, of Richard Glascock of Downe hall in Hatfeild-Broad-oak. The said Robert dyed 10 May 1639 (m). The second son—Robert Bourne Esq; married Rose, daughter of Humfrey Walcott of Shropshire Esq; He dyed 24 February 1665, and she 6 March 1653 [s]. Their only daughter and heir—Alice, was married to John Lord Digby, 26 May 1650, but dyed in 1658, without issue. Whereupon the two daughters of his sister Margatet Cowper inherited this estate; namely,

Dorothy Thomson, and Anne Fowler. In 1709, these two coheiresses sold this estate to

John Clark Esq; who married Elizabeth daughter of Sir Richard Haddock Kt. and had by her—Richard Clark Esq; who has to wife Anne sister of Thomas Fytche of Danbury Esq;

An estate called Bobbingford, alias Monkis, consisting of one messuage, and 200 acres of land, in this parish, and High, and Castle Ongar, Stanford-Rivers, and Shelley, belonged in 1496 to Joane Biddleston (n).

Mr. Charles, and William, Pool; William Burling; John Butler; Henry Greenwood; Joseph Cox, &c. have also some estates in this parish.

The 2d of July 1639, Thomas Pool, Richard, and John Poole, for themselves, and others, lords of Bobbingworth-hall, paid a composition to the King's Commissioners for disafforesting some lands; being the Bishops of London and Winchester, and Francis Cottington; for disafforesting 481 acres in this parish.

Free warren was granted to Sir John Ramfden of Byrom in Yorkshire, who had married Anne, widow of John Poole, Alderman of London.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. German, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The Steeple, having on the top a spire shingled, contains 4 Bells.

This Rectory was anciently in the gift of the Families of King; and of Thorley, and other Lords of Bobbingworth-hall. It belonged afterwards to Sir John Archer, Kt. and to James Lordell, now to Jacob Houblon Esq; It hath a Glebe of acres.

13. NORTH-WEALD

is so named in contradistinction to South-Weald, from which it stands northwesterly, and signifies North Wood. Basset is added to the name, because it anciently belonged to a branch of that noble Family. It is sometimes called Nether-Weald.

This Parish is not mentioned in Domesday-book, unless it should be what is there called Aftoca, and placed in the original between Greensted and Kelvedon-Hatch [T].

In the reign of K. Henry II. it belonged to Henry de Essex, and then to his younger son—Hugh de Essex (o), whose son—Baldwin granted this his maner of North-Wand to

Philip Basset, and the Lady Ela his second wife (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 268.]

He dyed in 1271 (q):—Aliva his daughter and heir by his first wife, held, at the time of her decease in 1291, this maner of North Weld some time of the castle of Benyngton by the service of 5 knights fees; whereof, the Templars of Cressing held two fees in Sutton near Rochford, William de Montcheny one fee in Leyre de la Hay, Sewall de Springefeild one fee in Springefeild, and the heirs of Isabell de Beringham one fee in Beringham and Hyllington (r). She was married first to Roger Bigot, and afterwards to Hugh le Despenser. Her son—Hugh le Despenser held this maner of John de Bensted in 1324 (s).

granted this, among the rest, to his brother Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, to hold by the yearly gift of one spar-hawk (t). For endeavouring to release the said King his brother from his imprisonment he was attainted and executed, in 1330. And this estate was given to Bartholomew de Burghersh for his life (u). But Edmund's attainder being reversed, his son

John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, enjoyed this estate as parcel of the Earldom of Kent, till 27 Decemb. 1352, when he dying without issue, it descended to his sister—Joane, the Fair Maid of Kent (w), married, first, to William Montacute Earl of Salisbury, next to Thomas Holand Earl of Kent, and then to Edward the Black Prince. Upon her decease, in 1385 (x), it descended to her son

Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent; though it is not mentioned in the Inquisition taken after his death; but—Alice, his widow, held it at the time of her decease in 1416 (y). As did—Lucy de Viseconti, widow of Edmund Holand, Earl of Kent, that dyed 14 April 1424 (z). His sister Elleanor brought it in marriage to her husband

Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, who held it by the law of England at the time of his decease 3 Novemb. 1428, and then it came to her daughter

Alice, wife of Richard Nevill, Earl of Salisbury (a). She dyed in 1462. — Richard Nevill, her son, Earl of Salisbury and Warwick, was slain at Barnet field 14 April 1471. His eldest daughter and coheir, Isabel, wife of George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, held it at the time of her decease 16 Decemb. 1476 (b) [U]. Margaret Plantagenet, their daughter, widow of Sir Richard Pole, obtained it in 1513; but her fatal end, in 1541, is well known (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 504. 612] [W].

This estate coming then to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. in 1543, granted the maner of North-Weld, and North-Wed Park, to Richard Higham, and his heirs, to hold by the 20th part of a knight's fee. He had license, 1 June 1544, to alienate them to

Sir Richard Riche (d), who, by license dated 15 April 1554, conveyed them to his second son — Sir Hugh Riche (e). — Robert Lord Riche had them at the time of his decease 27

Febru. 1580, as had his son, — Robert Earl of Warwick, 24 March 1618-19 (f).

From this noble Family it passed into that of Cheke of Pirgo. Latitia, widow of Thomas Cheke Esq; dyed possessed of it 9 January 1721-2. Her daughter—Anne, Lady Tipping, enjoyed it after her: upon whose decease, 20 January 1727-8, it came to her youngest daughter Catharine, who was married to the present owner, the Rt. Hon. Thomas Lord Archer. See above, p. 61.

This Maner had anciently a Park, and there are some fields on the south-west of the House, still called Park-fields.

From this Maner have arisen two others, named MARSHALLS, and CANNES.

The Maner of MARSHALLS

Was so named from Roger Bigot Earl Marshal, first husband of Aliva Basset.

William Fitz-William of Milton in Northamptonshire, Knt. who dyed 9 August 1534, held the maner of Marshalls; — William was his son and heir (g). [See under Theydon-Gernon.] Richard Spranger, of Harlow, held a messuage called Homans, and lands thereto belonging, in Hastings-wood hamlet within this maner, in 1632 (b). The mansion house, which is now demolished, stood within a moat. A family named Larder inhabited it not long since. Walter Larder and his wife and children were buried here about the beginning of the last century.

This estate was once in the Searle family, but now belongs to John Archer of Coopersale, Esq;

John Smyth of Epping, who dyed 22 July 1570, held of John Searle, as of his maner of Marshall here, a maner or messuage called Welbridg [X], alias Gymbilis, in free socage, and by yearly rent of 4 s. 2 d. He also held Pryttlewell lands, of the Queen, in free socage; all in this parish (i) [T]. This Welbridge farm belonged lately to John Stokes.

The Maner of CAWNES, or CANNES, belongs to Merton-College in Oxford; and hath been many years held by lease by the Family of Binckes. See under Norton Mandeville.

[T] Of this maner also, John Luter Esq; held, in 1566, four acres of land called Blackcroft, or Clark's crofts, by fealty, suit of Court, and rent of 4 d. per ann. Inquis. 10 Eliz. — He held at the same time, of the maner of North-weald, a messuage called Great House, and 13 acres of land Ibid.

Weld, in free socage, and by rent of 8 d.—
He held also other lands in this parish (k) [Z].

Some have likewise placed in this parish

A Maner called PARIS.

Such an one appears by the records to extend into this parish. But the chief of it lies within the parishes of Harlow, Latton, and Theydon Gernon.

It was holden of John Writell Esq; as of his maner of Hastlyns (l); and belonged, as well as the maner of Huberts Hall in Harlow, to the Shaa Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 338. 484.] Alice daughter of Ed. Shaa brought it to her husband

William Poley Esq; (m) who, at the time of his decease, 17 Decemb. 1587, held this maner of Paris of George Colt Esq; as of his maner of Sewells, by the rent of 4 s. per ann. (n). His son,—Sir John Poley dyed possessed of the same, 7 Decemb. 1593, leaving his son—William Poley Esq; aged 24 years (o). Of him, or his son, it was purchased by Mr. Fuller, of Coggeshall, clothier, from whom it hath descended to—Mr. William Fuller.

Wheelers, is an estate in this parish, about half a mile south west from the Church, that belonged to the Rev. Simon Lynch, Vicar of this parish; His daughter sold it to John Searl, Gent. [A].

Mr. George, and Robert, Burrell; John Searl; Rev. Philip Walter; John Wilton; Nathanael, and Thomas, Adams; Thomas Pegrin; Daniel Binckes; Richard Priest, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Simon Thorowgood, citizen and fishmonger of London, did, in 1635, devise by will 50 l. towards building a Grammar School house in this parish; and gave in trustees an annuity of ten pounds a year for a School-master, payable out of his lands called Harts-grove in Berking, for instructing the children of this and the adjoining Towns next thereunto. Through some bad management, this Donation lay dormant above 40 years, till 1678, when, by a Commission of charitable uses, it was recovered and settled as it now stands. A school is kept, and the endowment well paid.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, consists of a body and a south aisle, at the upper end of which there is a Chapel; all tyled. The Tower is embattled, and contains 5 Bells.

This Church, by the name of Walde, was given to the Priory of Clerkenwell, London, by Cecily de Essex, with the patronage of the same, and all its appertinances in lands, tithes, and obventions: which grant was confirmed by her sons Henry, and Hugh de Essex, above-mentioned; and by Richard Nigel, bishop of London, in 1194 (p).

The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to that Priory; and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Bishop of London reserved the collation to himself and successors, and they conferred it without interruption till 1483 (q). But the Nunnery of Clerkenwell claiming a right to the Patronage; after many controversies, the matter being referred to Arp. Warham, and the Lord Chief Justice Fineux, they awarded, 10 Decemb. 1515, that the presentation should be alternate, between the Bishop of London, and the owner of the impropriate Tithes: and it hath continued so ever since.

After the dissolution, the Rectory was granted, 2 January 1559, to William Dodington (r). It is a Maner, and reckoned worth about 200 l. a year. John Searle Gent. had it some time ago [B], and conveyed it to—George Finch, who had married his daughter. The latter sold it to—William Plummer Esq; late Knight of the Shire for the County of Hertford, and it is now in his family.

Out of this Rectory are distributed yearly to the Poor, on Ash-Wednesday, 36 bushels of grain, wheat, barley, pease, malt; or the value of the same in money. The donor was one of the Searl family.

The maner of North-Weald had anciently a Free Chapel, in the disposal of the Lord (s).

The Vicar, besides the small Tithes, is endowed with the third part of Corn and Hay: but he pays to the Rector 4 marks yearly (t).

This parish is rated to the Land-tax at 1145 l. 2 s. 6 d.

[A] This Mr. Lynch was memorable upon several accounts. He was born at Staple in Kent in December 1562, instituted to this living 3 August 1592, and enjoyed it till 24 May 1656, almost 64 years. He dyed at the age of 94, having lived 61 years with Elizabeth Seane his wife, by whom he had 10 children, and yet so good a manager was he, that he provided well for them. Bp. Aylmer, his kinsman, gave him this living, then not worth 50 l. a year, and pleasantly said to him, Cousin, play with this a while till a better come. The Bishop afterwards offered him South-Weald, three times better than this, To whom Mr. Lynch answered with a pun; That he preferred the Weal of his parishioners souls before any other Weal whatsoever. *T. 15. GREENSTED, signifies Green Place. This hath usually the addition of Near Ongar, to distinguish it from the other Greensted, in this County near Colchester.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Gotild was possessed of this maner, which, at the time of the Survey, belonged to Hamo Dapifer. Serlo held 40 acres of this maner. Three Freemen had in the Saxons time enjoyed half a hide, and 45 acres. And Ralph, supposed to be de Marci, held half a hide and 5 acres, at the Survey [C].

Hamo Dapifer dying without issue, his lands descended to his brother—Robert Fitz-Hamo, to whom K. William II. gave the Honor of Gloucester: He dyed in 1107. His eldest daughter Mabel, or Maud, was married to

Robert, natural son of K. Henry I. created Earl of Gloucester; to whom she brought her uncle Hamo's large inheritance. He departed this life in 1147. Whether K. Stephen took this estate from him, for his strong adherence to his competitor the Empress Maud, doth not appear. But William, K. Stephen's son, gave Greensted, together with Cheping-Ongar, to Richard de Lucy (u). Of whom see an account under Cheping Ongar.

From the Lucy family it came into that of Rivers. From them to

William de la Hay, though we are not informed by what means: And from him to the noble Family of Stafford, under which it was holden by the noble Family of Bourchier, mentioned sufficiently under Moreton; and more fully in the other Volume, p. 253, &c.—

Robert Burgcher, at the time of his decease, in 1349, held a certain tenement in Greensted, with the advowson of the Church, of Ralph Baron de Stafford, as of the maner of Aungre (w).—Hugh, Lord Stafford, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, had this maner (x). And so had—Sir Lewis Robessart, second husband of this Elizabeth (y). She was possessed of it, at the time of her decease 1 July 1433 (z).—Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, who dyed 4 April 1483, held this maner of Henry Lord Stafford, Earl of Hereford (a); and Northampton. His grandson, and successor, — Henry, Earl of Essex, being killed by a fall from his horse 13 March 1540, this, with the rest of his great estates, came to his only daughter and heir

Anne, married to William Lord Parr, created afterwards Marquis of Northampton. She is recorded to have had this maner, and 4l. rent, the advowson of the Church, and free-warren. The time of her death was 26 Janu. 1570 (b). But, before that, this estate was purchased by Sir Richard Riche, who presented to the Rectory in 1548 and 1561 (c); and, at the time of his decease, 12 June 1566, held the maner of Grenested-hall, with appertenances, in this parish, High-Onger, and Standen, and the Advowson of the Rectory, of James Morrys, as of the maner of Chipping Onger in free socage, by fealty only (d).

This estate was afterwards in William Bourne, Gent. of the neighbouring parish of Bobbingworth, who presented to this living in 1593; and next in the Young family, which presented from 1617 to 1661 (e).

Mr. Gulton enjoyed this estate since, and sold it to

Mr. Alexander Cleeve, citizen of London. He dyed 11 April 1738, having had two wives, 1. Mary, daughter of Duffield. 2. Anne, daughter of . . . Butcher, and had issue by both.

It belongs now to David Rebotier, Esq;

Greenstead-hall stands a little way east from the Church.

Mr. Isaac Blyth has also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is small; the Church and Chancel being of one pace, and tyled.

It is a very uncommon antique building; for the Walls are of timber, not framed, but trees split, or fawn asunder, and set into the ground.

There

There is a print of it engraved by the Society of Antiquaries. It has but 1 Bell.

This Church was, by act of Parliament in 1548, consolidated and united to that of Chipping-Ongar, and the reasons alledged in the act, were, "because the profits of the Church of Chipping-Ongar were not sufficient to find a Priest, being not above 6l. in the King's Books, and because the charges of the repairs, ornaments, and other accustomed Duties to that Church and the Church of Grinsted, (which was of the same value or little more, and stood but a quarter of a mile distant from it, and commodious for the access of the parishioners of Ongar) were much greater than could be raised or born among such poor parishioners, It was therefore enacted that the Church of Chipping-Ongar should be dissolved, and the Church of Grinsted made the Parish Church, as well for the parishioners of Ongar as those of Grinsted; and the advowson of Ongar was thereby invested in the patron of Grinsted, viz. the Lord Rich, his heirs and assigns." But this consolidation, or union, was dissolved by another act made in 1554; in the preamble of which it is said, that one William Moris Esq; then patron of the Church of Chipping Ongar, and member of parliament, did by sinister labour and procurement get the act for the consolidation.

This Rectory was for many years appendent to the Maner. Some time ago it was purchased by Mr. Pratt, Minister of St. Botolph's Aldgate; and settled so, that upon every vacancy it is to be given to the Curate of that Church.

There belongs to it a Glebe of 28 acres.

15. STANFORD-RIVERS.

Stan-ford, signifies a stone or stony ford; and was a name given to this Parish, because a Ford through the river Rodon here, was naturally stony; or was paved with Stone, after the manner of the Romans, who raised a pavement in many rivers in Britain, to make the passage shallower and save the expence of a bridge. The addition of Rivers is from the Family de Ripariis, or Rivers, its ancient owners, distinguishing it from Stanford le Hope.

Stanford-hall stands a little way north-east from the Church.

In Edward the Confessor's days, the possessors of this parish were, Aluvin, afterwards Ingelric; a certain freeman; Brictuvin; and one Aluric's father: At the time of the Survey, it was held by Eustace Earl of Bologne. Part of it was then called Little Stanford [D].

Earl Eustace's granddaughter, Maud, brought it in marriage to her husband Stephen Earl of Blois, afterwards King of England. That King's son, William, Earl of Mortain and Surrey, gave this Lordship, with those of Cheping-Ongar, and Greensted &c. to

Richard de Lucy. [See above, p. 127.] By Rohais his wife he had two sons, Geffrey, and Herbert, and two daughters, Maud, and Rohais — Geffrey was father of — Richard, who dyed without issue. Herbert, the second son, had this estate, and dying also without issue, the inheritance came to the sisters. In 1242, Maud de Lucy held the maner of Stanford of the King, in his escheatry, of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of 3 knights fees (f). She was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to Richard de Ripariis, or Rivers, by whom she had two sons, Richard, who dyed before her; and Baldwin. — Richard, son of Richard, born in 1238, succeeded his grandmother Maud (g). [E]. His successors were, — John de Rivers, who dyed in 1293. — John, his son: and — John his grandson. [See above, p. 127.] [F].

From them it came into the noble family of Stafford. Ralph, Earl of Stafford, who dyed in 1372, held the maner of Stanford-Rivers of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's service: and one carucate of land in this parish, called Traceys, of the same Honor. — Sir Hugh Stafford was his son. Traceys is elsewhere described, as 240 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 64 of wood, and 45 s. rent of assise, within the lordship of Stanford-Rivers, holden of the Abbot of Waltham (b). Sir Hugh Stafford, jointly with his wife — Elizabeth, in 1415, demised to John Tyrell, and others, this maner. So that, at the time of his decease in 1421, he held in this parish only 46 acres of arable, and 9 acres of meadow, of John Chambers, by fealty; and 40 acres here, called Botelers, of the Abbot of Waltham; and for the term of his life, a tenement, 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 16 of pasture, called Tracies, remainder to the right heirs of his brother Edmund late Earl of Stafford (i). The said Edmund Earl of Stafford, had in Stamford Cheyners half a knight's fee, which the heirs of John le Gros held under him (k). But Elizabeth, widow of Sir Hugh, remarried to Sir Lewis Robessart, had this maner till her decease, 1 July 1433 (l) — Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, who was slain at the battle of Northampton, 10 July 1460, held the maners of Stanford Rivers, and Traceyes, of the King of the Honor of Bologne: and the maners of Suttons, Piggesland, Bottelles, and Brigges, and lands and tenements in this parish and High Ongre (m).

By these extracts from the Inquisitions, it appears, that this maner was subdivided into those of TRACEYS, BOTELERS, PIGGESLAND, and BRIGGES; so named from under-tenants, to whom parcels of the Maner were demised [G].

To return to the capital Maner of Stanford-Rivers. It was given by K. Edward the IVth. to John Stafford, younger son of Humfrey, created Earl of Wiltshire 5 January 1469, who dyed possessed of the same 8 May 1473, with those of Piggesland, Botelles, and Brigges; and that of Sutton in Stapleford-Tany (n). — Constance, his widow, at the time of her decease in 1475, held this maner of Stanford-Rivers, and 4 messuages, 4 tofts, 1000 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of wood, in this parish and High Ongre, of the King in ca. by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and Tracyes by the 10th part of a knight's fee: and the maner of Brigges, and 2 messuages called Piggesland and Botley's, by the 20th part of a fee. — Edward, their son and heir born in 1470 (o), dyed 4 March 1499, without issue.

Henry, and Edward, Stafford, both Dukes of Buckingham, had this estate, which upon their several attainders and executions came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. 18 June 1524, granted to William Cary Esq; and Mary his wife, the maners of Stansted-Rivers, Tracies, Piggesland, Brigestone, Botteleys and Suttons, and 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 200 of wood, and 4l. 6s. 8d. rent (p).

This estate belonged afterwards to William Lord Petre, in the last century, who gave it to his second son — William Petre Esq; He was born at West-Horndon in 1602, had his education at Exeter College in Oxford, and at Wadham founded by his great aunt. Afterwards he went to the Inns of Court, and then travelled; He translated Ribadeneira's Lives of Saints out of Spanish into English, and continued the work to the year 1669 (q). He married Lucy, daughter of Sir Richard Fermor of Oxfordshire Kt. by whom he had two sons, and a daughter, and dying 15 January 1677, aged 75, was buried in the Chancel here, as was also his wife, who dyed 3 March 1679. — William their eldest son and heir, married Anne, daughter of Mr. Caldwell of Cantes-Hall in Essex; he dyed 11 November 1686, aged 56 years, and she 4 May 1688: both lie buried here. They had two sons, and two daughters. — William Petre, Esq; the eldest son, married first Anne, daughter of Robert Poultrrel of Derbyshire, Gent. who dyed in child-bed 21 Febru. 1688, and afterwards, Penelope, daughter of John Wolphe Esq; Barrister at Law, by whom he had 8 children. — William Petre, Esq; the eldest son and heir, married a sister of the Rt. Hon. James Earl of Derwentwater, and had by her William and Mary, who dyed before him. He departed this life 24 September 1745, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph.

This estate belongs now to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

about half a mile south-west from the Church, hath been chiefly the Seat and residence of the Petre Family in this parish.

It is written in records Gelhowes, and called a Maner (r).

Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Philip Malpas, citizen and clothier of London, and widow of Sir Thomas Cooke, held, at the time of her decease in 1484, this maner of Belhous of the Earl of Wiltshire, as of his maner of Stanford-Rivers, by fealty, and rent of 2 d. a year.

— Philip Cooke was her son and heir (s). — John Cooke dyed 20 August 1486, possessed of this maner, and of a tenement here called Morrells. — John was his brother and heir (t).

It belonged in 1524 to Robert Troblefeild (u). And came afterwards into the Petre Family.

a tenement called Tracy, of the Earl of Stafford, by the service of a pair of spurs of the value of 6 d. and yearly rent of a pound of pepper. Inquis. 27 Edw. III.

BERWICK, and CAVNES, or CADNES, are two other reputed Maners, partly in this parish.

John Skrene, who dyed in 1451, held these two messuages in Stanford Rivers, with their appertenances in Ongre, Matching, Bobbingworth, and Stapilford: leaving——John his son (w). [Concerning the Skrene family, see more in the other Volume, p. 70.]

Richard Harper, who dyed 11 March 1517, held the maner, or tenement of Berwick, in this parish, and in Onger, Matching, Bobbingworth, and Stapleford, of the Duke of Buckingham; and of Henry Torell, as of his maner of Shelley-hall.——George was his son (x). It is now incorporated with the abovesaid estates.

LITTLEBURY, and ROCKENHOE, is another Maner, of which the mansion-house stands about three quarters of a mile east from this Church; but most of the lands lie in the parish of High-Ongar.

In 1528, Richard Salinge held this maner of Catharine Queen of England, as of her maner of Anstye, parcel of the Honor of Clare, by the service of half a knight's fee. —— Augustin was his son (y).

It belonged in the last century, to John Atwood Esq; who married Dorothy, daughter of William Walter of Wimbledon in Surrey, Esq; and left —— John Atwood of Bromfeld, and Gray's Inn, Esq; his son and heir. He married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Patrick Younge Esq; and had by her, John born in 1644, William, Elizabeth, and Sarah (z). —— John Atwood Esq; sold this estate to Mrs. Sarah Bull, who dyed 24 July 1694. It hath continued ever since in that family.

THEYDON.

The Saxon words Þegn sun signify Thegn's bill, from whence it is most probable that this district was originally the extensive Lordship of some Saxon Thegn, or as vulgarly written Thane; and was then but one Lordship. When divided afterwards into three, they came to be styled, for distinction sake, 1. Ad Montem, or at Hill, 2. Gernon; and 3. Bois. But that distinction was not known at the time of the general Survey; for it is entered in Domesday-book only under the name of Taindena, and Teindana: and is otherwise written in records Teydene, Theydon, Thedon.

The owners, in Edward the Confessor's reign, had been, Godric, Ulmar, and Hacun.

I. THEYDON-MOUNT, or Ad Montem, received that name, as standing upon the highest ground.

It is the part that had belonged in the Confessor's reign to Godric; and was one of the fifty five Lordships bestowed by William the Conqueror upon Suene of Essex, who had given it to his father Robert [H].

[H] Terre Sueni de Exfessa. Teindanam tenet Robertus de Sueno, quod tenuit Godricus pro i manerio, & pro iii hidis, & LXXX acris. Et Suenus tenet hoc manerium de dono

Regis Willielmi, quod dedit Patri suo Roberto. Tunc v villani, modo i. Tunc iii bordarii, modo xvii. Tunc iv servi, modo nullus. Tunc in dominio ii carucate, modo iii. Tunc Suene Suene was possessed of the Honor of Raley, where his Castle and chief residence was; whence this Maner came to be held of the Honor of Raley. To Suene succeeded—Henry de Effex, Constable to K. Henry II. and hereditary Standard-bearer; who, for throwing down the Standard in a battle with the Welsh in 1163, which occasioned the defeat of the English, was deprived of all his estates. He had two sons—Henry, and Hugh, both knights (c).

In 1210, and 1211, Henry de Theydene held 3 knights fees, that had been Henry de Effex's, of the Honor of Raley (d).

Soon after, this estate was in the Lord Robert de Brus, Brews, or Brywes; in exchange, or recompence, for other lands he had yielded to Robert de Wallerand. Under him, John de Lexenton held this maner, containing 3 carucates of land, by the service of 2 knights fees. He had licence in 1250, to make a Park in Theydon, and, in 1253, to hunt in the Forest of Effex (e). He was Chief Justice of all the Forests north of Trent, and Governor of several castles in the north; also commissioner of the Great Seal in 1253 (f). He dyed in 1257.—Henry de Lexington, Bishop of Lincoln, was his brother and heir (g). He dying in 1258, his nephews William de Sutton, and Richard de Markham, were his heirs.

This maner being a very fine one, and lying contiguous to Stapleford Tany, Richard de Tany junr. obtained a pretended and fraudulent grant of it; and, under pretence of that grant, seized some tenements in this parish, belonging to Robert de Sutton, the King's enemy during the wars between him and his Barons. But, upon a tryal before the King, in 1265 or 1266, the fraud was discovered, and Robert de Brywes remained in quiet possession (h).

The Sutton family appears to have been very soon after restored to their estate here; and even to have held the maner, and Advowson of the living, of Brywes. For Robert de Sutton, who dyed in 1274, held in the vill of Theydon de Monte, of the Honor of Reyley, 1 messuage with a vineyard and garden, and 200 acres of arable, 21 of meadow, 61 of pasture, a wind-mill, an outer wood, 4l. 5. 6d. rent of assize, with the Advowson of the Church; doing for it one suit from month to month to the Lord of the Honor of Reyley, and yielding to the Lord Robert de Brus a pair of gilt spurs, or 6d. yearly, and scutage for 2 knights fees, when levied.—Richard was his son (i). The Sutton family remained possessed of this estate till 1331, when—John de Sutton, lord of Dudley, granted this maner and advowson, for twelve years, to Henry de Malyns (k). [Concerning the Sutton Family see more in the other Volume, p. 187.]—Edward de Malyns, a nobleman, presented to this living in 1335; As did—Sir Reginald Malyns in 1361 (l).

The latter dyed in 1384, and held, jointly with Florence his wife, this maner as of the Honor of Reyley, by knight's service, and suit to the Court at Reyley from month to month.—Edmund was his son (m). We find no further mention of the Malyns family in the Inquisitions; but they presented to this living till 1432.

This Estate is next seen in the Family of Hampden, in an age when there were so many changes by confiscation and forfeiture during the wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, that frequently the bare possession is to be known.

Thomas Hampden dyed 21 August 1486. He held the maner of Theydon at the Mount, and Hill-Hall [the first time we find it mentioned] and Advowson of the Church, and 1200 acres of arable, 80 acr. of meadow, 100 of pasture, 100 of wood, in Theydon Gernon; and a tene-ment called Bordeviles, of the Honor of Rayley;—John his son and heir, was 30 years old (n). His grandson—Sir John Hampden dyed 21 Dec. 1553, possessed of this estate, called the maner of Mounthall, and Hill-hall, and then described as 1000 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 200 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 100 s. rent; holden of the Honor of Rayleigh, in socage, by fealty, and rent of 3 s. 4 d.—Edward Ferrers, aged 28

[I] Amongst the Pleas of the Crown, before Solomon de Rochester, and other Justices Itinerant, 10 Edw. I. the Jury found thus; 'Hund. de Aungre venit per duodecim jurat. De Valettis dicunt quod Robertus de Sutton tenuit manerium de Teydon, quod valet per an. 20 l. de domino rege in capite; & Richardus de Sutton, filius ejus & heres, modo est infra etatem & in custodia Dni Regis &c.' This was the form in the Pleas of the Crown in Edw. I's time, and some part of Edw. III. There was a Commission of an high nature sitting every seven years to enquire concerning what had passed since the last sitting. Of murders and misdemeaners, Of Wards, and whose children they were. Therefore the Jury was charged with enquiring de Valettis, a name, which though sometimes taken for an ordinary servant, yet has been appropriated to Officers of the Crown; and indeed to those under age, not being reckoned sui juris. And sometimes these Presentments begin with, De Valettis & Puellis, including the Females, of which the King had the right of Wardship and marriage as well as of the Males. The Jury find the Bishop of Lincoln possessed of the maner, but by what warrant they knew not; therefore the Maner should be seized into the King's hands, until, &c. The Bishop appeared by his attorney, and said, the King had granted the Wardship of the lands, and the marriage of the Heirs of Robert de Sutton, to Stephen de Sutton Canon of York, for a fine of 650 marks, till they came of age, and produced the King's charter for the same.

years; and Anne, wife of William Paulet, aged 23; were his next heirs (o).

Sir John Hampden married Philippa, daughter of John Wilford of London, Gent. by whom he left no issue. After his decease, she was re-married; and second wife, to

Sir Thomas Smiith. She was jointured in this Maner and estate, of which Sir Thomas purchased the reversion. But he had no issue by her, nor by his first wife, who was Elizabeth, daughter of William Karkek, or Carkyke, of London Gent. This great man was the son of John Smiith of Saffron-Walden in this County Gent. and born in that town 28 March 1514. He was educated at Queen's College in Cambridge, where by studying the best ancient authors he acquired a pure elegant Latin and Greek style; and for his further improvement studied some time in the universities of France and Italy; So that he became a most excellent orator, mathematician, philosopher, and perfect in several of the modern languages. In 1548 he was made Secretary of State, and knighted: and employed afterwards in several embassies and negociations of the greatest importance: and constituted Chancellor of the Order of the Garter. He built Hill-Hall, as we shall shew more at large presently. But for a fuller account of this accomplished statesman and scholar, we shall beg leave to refer to his Life published by the industrious John Strype, in 1698, and to Biographia Britannica. He dyed 12 August 1577, and was buried in the Chancel of this Church, where a noble monument is erected to his memory. Besides the maner of Theydon-mount, alias Mount-hall and Hill-Hall, he held lands and tenements in this parish called Bennetts and Skinners, all of the Honor of Rayleigh (p). He had two brothers, John, and George. John was of Walden, and had a son, William, who dyed in 1576. George was a merchant in London: His son — Sir William Smiith was a brave soldier, and till the age of thirty followed the wars in Ireland, where he was one of the Colonels of the Army. But upon the death of his uncle Sir Thomas, being his heir, he returned here to enjoy his full and fair inheritance; as is said in his epitaph; which he did till his decease 12 Decemb. 1626, being then aged 76. He married Bridget, one of the daughters of Tho. Fleetwood of the Vache in Chalfont St. Giles's in Buckinghamshire Esq; by whom he had William, Thomas who dyed young, another Thomas; and 4 daughters. — Sir William, his eldest son, married, first, Helegenwagh, one of the daughters of Edward Viscount Conway, by whom he had Edward, and two daughters who both dyed young. By his second wife, Anne Croft, he had no issue. Departing this life in 1631, in the 32d year of his age, he was buried in this Church, with a monument. — Edward, his son, at the age of 15, served volunteer under Prince Rupert in the Civil wars, where he gained great reputation; but dyed at the age of 22, without issue. Whereupon his uncle — Thomas Smiith Esq; came into the estates, and was created a Baronet 28 Novemb. 1661. He married, first, Johanna daughter of Sir Edward Altham, of Latton, by whom he had eleven sons and four daughters, whereof 9 sons survived him. She dying 14 July 1658, he took to his second wife Beatrice, daughter of Francis Viscount of Valentia, which dyed 26 March 1668, and by her he had no issue. After he had lived 66 years with great reputation for Loyalty to his Prince and Conformity to the Church of England in apostate Times; and served his King and Country in chief places of trust and credit in the Country, as is said in his epitaph, he dyed 5 May 1668, and was buried in this Church with a monument. — Sir Edward Smiith, Bart. his eldest surviving son and successor, married Jane, daughter of Peter Vandeput of London, Esq; by whom he had four sons and two daughters; of which children five dyed in their infancy. He departed this life 24 June 1713, etat. 76. and was buried in this Church with an epitaph. His only son — Sir Edward Smiith, Bart. married, first, Anne daughter of Sir Charles Hedges Kt. by whom he had Edward, Charles, Thomas, William, and Peter; and a daughter, dead. After her decease, which happened in October 1719, he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Wood of London Esq; He dyed 15 August 1744, and was succeeded by his eldest son — Sir Edward Smiith Bart. who dying without issue, the title and estate came to his next brother — Sir Charles Smiith, Bart. the present possessor (q). [See in the other Volume, p. 439.]

the seat of the family; stands on a great ascent, or bill, from whence it took its name. Sir Thomas affected to call it Mont-baut in French. He began this stately structure near the old House, and as he did not live to finish it, made provision in his will to have it compleated. The House is quadrangular, with very thick and strong walls, adorned with great columns in imitation of stone; and the Court is paved with free stone. It has a fine and delightful prospect all ways, especially south and west. The entrance is north-ward, along a very pleasant Avenue of great length and suitable breadth; on each side of which are Rows of stately elms, with other plantations. Great alterations were made in it by Sir Edward Smiith in the last century, and more have been undoubtedly made by his successors.

Sir Richard Glynn, Kt. Mr. Joseph Law, and John Morris, have also some estates in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, stands pleasantly. It was burnt by lightning, and rebuilt by the first Sir William Smiith. It is of one pace with the Chancel. The Tower was so denominated from a branch of the Gernon family.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

The Parish is rated to the land-tax at 985 l. 1 s. 10 d.

17. THE YDON-GERNON

Robert Gernon, or Grenon as he is frequently written in Domesday-book, was one of those Chiefs that accompanied William the Conqueror in his Expedition into England, and was very amply rewarded by him, particularly with 31 Lordships in this County. He had two sons, William, and Robert.

William was of Stansted, and dropping the surname of Gernon took that of Montfichet, from the raised Mount on which his Castle there was built.

Robert, the second son, retained the surname of Gernon. His successors were,—Matthew, or according to others Antony, living in K. Stephen's reign, who by his wife Hodierna de Saucavilla had — Ralph, who by a sister of William Briwer had his son—Ralph Gernon, Kt. a Judge itinerant. He dyed in 1247, leaving by his wife, daughter of . . . Basset, William, Edward; and Mary, wife of Robert Mantell. — Sir William, the eldest son, of the Council to K. Henry III. and Marshall of his House, married Beatrix daughter and heir of Henry de Theydon, by whom he had Ralph, Arnulph, and Geoffrey. His father Ralph gave him this Lordship, which from him took its distinguishing appellation. [Concerning the Gernon family see more above, p. . . and in the other Volume, p. 179. 181. 576.]

Having thus accounted for the Name of this Parish, we proceed to shew through whose hands it hath passed.

In Edward the Confessor's reign it belonged to Ulmar; but, at the time of the Survey, it was held by Eudo Dapifer [K].

Who were Eudo's immediate successors I do not find. Paulinus de Theydon, and Henry de Theydon, had it in the reign of K. Henry III. And Paulin had a Fair and a Market here.

It belonged next to Ralph Gernon above-mentioned, who dyed in 1247. He held this maner of Teydene of Margaret Riveres, Lady of the Honor of Ongar, by one fee; and part, of the heirs of Angre, by the third part of a knight's fee. Before his decease, he had given to his son John by Hawise his wife, this maner of Theydon. But—William Gernon, his eldest son and heir (r), had afterwards this estate. For, at the time of his death in 1259, he held of Lady Dionysia de Montchenfi 3 parts of a knight's fee in Teydene, worth 4 marks a year; and of Badwin de Lisle 2 knights fees, part whereof lay in this parish, worth 100 s. a year, and the rest in divers counties.—Ralph his next heir was 30 years old (s). [See in the other Volume, p. 179. 181.]

This Maner had been hitherto called only by the general name of Teydene: But about the year 1345 it appears in records by the name of THEYDON GERNON, and some parts of it called HEMERHALES, or HEMNALES, PARKHALL or GAYNES-PARK.

Adam de Welles, who dyed in 1345, held the maner of Theydon-Gernon of Thomas Gernon, by the service of 7 s. per annum. And a tene-ment called Hemerhales, in this parish and Theydon-Boys, of John Fitz-Walter, by the service of 26 s. a year. He had also Madles in Epping. — John was his son (t). He held this Maner, and 1 messuage, 172 acres of arable, 6 acr. of meadow, 12 of wood, 43 of pasture, 68 s. 7 d. rent in this parish, Epping at Hethe, and Theydon Bois, jointly with his wife Maud, of Sir Adam de Wells; which maner was holden of Earl Stafford, Reginald Maleyns, the Abbot of Waltham, and Lucy Gernon. He dyed in 1360.—John was his son (u). He was afterwards knighted, and at the time of his decease in 1421, held the maner of Parkhall of the heirs of Thomas Gernon; and the maner of Hemnales of Earl Stafford, as of his Castle of Ongre; and also Madles. His son Eudo being dead before him, he was succeeded by his grandson — Leo de Welles, then 15 years old (w). He held the maner of Park-hall, alias Gaynespark, Hemnales, and Madles in this parish; and 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, and 20 of wood; of Anne Duchefs of Buckingham, as of her Hundred of Ongre; And the maners of Hemnales and Madles are said here to be members and parcels of Park-hall, and made with it the entire maner called Park-hall, alias Gaynes. He was killed in 1461 at Towton-feild, fighting for K. Henry VI. whereupon his estates were con-seized by K. Edward IV. [L]. By his first wife, Joane daughter and heir of Sir Robert Waterton, he left.

Richard his son, then 24 years of age (x): and four daughters, Alianor wife of Thomas Lord Hoo and Hastings; Margaret, of Sir Thomas Dimock; Cecily, of Robert Lord Willoughby, second son of Thomas Lord Willoughby; and Catharine of Sir Thomas de la Laund (y).

This estate thus escheating to the Crown, appears to have been parcelled out: Therefore I shall first trace down to this time the owners of

The Maner of THEYDON-GERNON.

The mansion house, called Garnish-hall, stands about half a mile north-west from the Church.

The next possessor we find of this estate, after the attainder of L. de Welles, was Francis Hampden, Esq; in right of his wife Elizabeth, in the years 1507 and 1535 (z). This Francis was undoubtedly a branch of the Hampdens of the neighbouring parish of Theydon-Mount. He appears to have had only daughters, co-heiresses. One of them most probably was Margery, wife of Edward Busbopp, Gent. At the time of her decease, 20 May 1544, she held this maner of Theydon-Garnon, alias Garnons-hall, with appertenances. She held also 17 acres of wood, and the third part of the Advowson of the Church, of the maner of Gaynes Parkhall, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. 10 d. per ann. She had a son, — Edward, then but a month old (a).

Ellen, wife of John Branche, citizen and merchant of London, was another daughter and co-heir of Francis Hampden Esq; She dyed 14 April 1567, and lies buried in this Church with an epitaph. — John Brauncke, her son as we believe, who dyed 4 July 1588, held the maner of Garnishe, alias Theydon-Garnishe, with a farm called Garnishe mill, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Lysle, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, to be divided into three parts. His heirs were, Anne Stonly one of his sisters; William Udall, son of Mary another of his sisters; and Grace Dorrell, Martha Gelbrand, Joanna Bales, and Mary Bery, daughters of Ellen

Anne, before she took for her second husband Richard Stonly Esq; [M] was married to Robert Dun, and had by him Daniel, William M. D. and Samuel.

Sir Daniel Dun, Kt. the eldest son, held this maner of Garnishe, alias Theydon Garnon, and 5 parcels of pasture and wood called Hides and Bradleys, of the King as of his Honor of Lisle; otherwise Lisky, parcel of his Duchy of Lancaster, by the service of two parts of a knight's fee, to be divided into three parts. He had also a messuage here called Barnells; and four parcels of land named Barnefields, Homefields, and Oatfields. He dyed 27 Septemb. 1617, aged 72 (c). By Joanna his wife daughter of William Aubrey Esq; he had, 5 sons; and 11 daughters [N]. John, the eldest son, dying unmarried, — Cæsar Dun Esq; the second son, inherited the estates: and, besides the lands above-mentioned, he had in this parish some called Maynards, Garnish-wood, Warleys croft, How-croft, the Copyhold-grounds, Oldberry, and Ten acres. He dyed 27 January 1634, leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of Joseph Haines Esq; — Daniel, his son, then aged 12 years, and 8 months (d). He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Thornton of Northampton Esq; and had by her — Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, that became the wife of Ralph Sheldon, of Dichford in Warwickshire Esq; (e).

About the year 1660, it was purchased by Sir Robert Abdy, of Albins in Stapleford-Abbots, Kt. and Bart. [where see a particular Account of the Family] and hath continued ever since in his posterity.

PARKHALL, or GAINS-PARK.

R. Gernon obtained of K. Henry III. a license to inclose his wood of Tayden, for a Park, called Le Leyt (f); which Park gave name to this estate.

The mansion house stood about two miles north-east from the Church, but is now down.

Of this Maner the noble Family of Welles was possessed, and also of Hemnales, as hath been seen above.

[M] By her second husband Stonly, she had Dorothy, wife of William Dawtrey of Suffex, and Anne wife of William Higham.

[N] We learn from his epitaph, that he was worthily born, and learnedly brought up, and attained to such perfection and degree of knowledge in the Civil Law, that he was honoured by Qu. Elizabeth with the state of an Ambassador, and office of Master of Requests; whose Honour was inlarged by K. James with the order of knighthood, and increase of honourable employment, Dean of the Arches, and Judge of the Admiralty, long living in great Honour in Court and Country. His wife Joanna was daughter of William Aubrey, L.L. D. Master of Requests. She outlived her husband 27 years, not dying till 26 Decemb. 1640, aged 72. . . . He was by mistake called in his epitaph Sir Samuel; but the Inquisition post mortem calls him Daniel. — Arms of Dun. Azure, a griffin saliant argent, on its shoulder a spot of ermines.

Upon Leo's forfeiture, K. Edward IV. seems to have given it to his own second daughter Cecily, wife of John Lord Welles, son of the said Leo de Welles by Margaret Duchess of Somerset his second lady. At least Cecily, at the time of her decease 24 August 1506, held this maner of Gainspark-hall, and divers other lands in this parish, of Francis Hampden and Elizabeth his wife, in right of the said Elizabeth, as of their maner of Theydon-Garnon, by fealty, and rent of 6s. per ann. And the maner of Hemnalls, with other lands, of Edward Oglethorp, and Joane his wife, in right of the said Joane, as of their maner of Hubberds and Lovaine, by fealty, and yearly rent of 20s. She had also the maner of Maddells; [See above, p. 51.] but all only during the term of her life (g). Her husband dyed before her, 9 Febr. 1498, leaving only one daughter, which dyed young (h).

This estate was next in Sir William Fitz-William, citizen of London, and chosen alderman in 1506 [O]; He held, at the time of his decease, 9 August 1534, this maner of Gaynesparke-hall, and 3 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 350 of pasture, 250 of wood, and 10l. 16s. 6d. qa. rent in this parish; and 6 acres of meadow in Theydon-Boys, of the heirs of Francis Hampden, and by the same services as above-mentioned. Also the maner of Hemmalls, and 3 messuages, 260 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 70 of pasture, 40 of wood, 3l. 8s. 4d. ob. rent, and 2 capons, of the heirs of John Shaw, by fealty, and rent of 26s. per ann. He had also Madells, as above described, p. 51. and a considerable estate in Lambourh (i). He had two wives, 1. Anne, daughter of John Hawes, 2. Mildred, daughter of Sir Richard de Sackville of Suffex. His children, by the first, were, William, born in 1504; Richard; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Brudenell; and Anne, wife of Antony Cook of Geddy-hall: And by the second, Francis, Thomas, Christopher; Elianor, wife of Sir Nicolas Straunge, of Norfolk; and Mary, wife of John Shelley, remarried to Sir John Guilford, — William Fitz-William Esq; the eldest son and heir, by Anne his wife daughter of Sir Richard Sabcotts of Elton, had William; Bryan, and John, both which dyed without issue; and Christian, married first to Richard Wingfeild, afterwards to George Delves, Esqres. The eldest son, — Sir William Fitz-William was much employed in the wars in Ireland, and was four times Lord Deputy, namely in 1559, 1560, 1572, and 1587, and three times one of the Lords Justices of that kingdom (k). The time of his death we cannot find. He married Anne, third daughter of Sir William Sidney of Penshurst, by whom he had, William, and John; and three daughters, Mary, wife of Sir Richard Deyer; Philippa, wife of Sir Thomas Coningsby; and Margaret of Sir John Byron. She dyed 11 June 1602, and was buried in this Church, with a monument. — William, the eldest son, is not mentioned in records. But — John, the second son, dyed 15 June 1612, holding in demesne as of fee this maner of Gaynes-park; and that of Hamnalls, in this and parishes adjoyning. His heir was his brother — Sir William Fitz-William, Kt. then of full age (l). The maner of Madells had been out of this Family ever since the year 1553. See above, p. 51. (m). Sir William married Winifred, daughter of Sir Walter Mildmay Chancellor of the Exchequer, and had by her William, and Anne [P].

In 1617, Sir Richard Wingfeild Kt. held the maner of Park-hall (n). And by records it appears, that — Harrison Esq; had it about 1636.

The estate has been since in the Earls of Anglesea; and upon the death of — Arthur, late Earl, it came to the Rt. Hon. — Richard Earl of Anglesea.

COOPERSALE.

Is a capital House, about two miles north of the Church. The name doth not occur in records, before K. James Ist's reign; and therefore need not be fetched from the Saxon. Most probably the name was originally Coopers-hall.

It hath been a considerable time the residence of the Family of Archer. This Family derive themselves from Simon de Bois, who attended K. Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt, and had a patent then for a pension of five marks per annum for life. The occasion of altering his name is thus related. This Simon, at a shooting match, with the said King Henry, at Haverling at Bower, performed so well, that the King ordered his name should be changed to Archer.

[O] He was at first a merchant-taylor, and some time servant to Cardinal Wolsey. And, after the Cardinal's fall, happening to give him kind entertainment at his seat at Milton in Northamptonshire, he was sent for by K. Henry VIII. and asked, How he durst entertain so great an enemy to the state. His answer was, That he had not contemptuously or wilfully done it, but only because he had been his master, and partly the means of his great fortunes. The King was so pleased with this Answer, that, saying himself had too few such servants, he immediately knighted him. . . . He gave fifty pounds to mend the High-ways between Co-persale and Chigwell; also 100l. for poor Maids marriages; forgave all his debtors; and did several other handsome and charitable actions. Stow's survey of London, edit. 1720. book I. p. 262. But all that is related further concerning him, in page 263, col. 1. is a bundle of mistakes, all that belonging to William Fitz-Williams Earl of Southampton. See Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. II. p. 105.

[P] Arms of Fitz-William. Mafcles, 8, argent & gules. The other family of Fitz-William bears, lozengy argent & gules.

Simon's successors were, — John, father of another — John: and — Richard. The latter had two sons; of whom — William, the younger son had issue — Henry Archer of this place, Esq; At the time of his decease, 3 Novemb. 1615, He held a capital messuage in which he dwelt, situated and being in Coopersale, in this parish, and divers lands, tenements and hereditaments thereto belonging, of Sir Richard Winkfeild, as of his maner of Hemnals, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 6 d. He held also of the same, tenements and lands called Patches, Drewries, and Plants, alias Fishers, Of Sir Daniel Dun, lord of the maner of Theydon-Gernon, he held messuages and lands called Peacocks, Brookhouse, Cosines, Little Strondcroft, &c. And of Sir William Smythe, as of his maner of Theydon Mount, he held a messuage and lands in that parish called Brookhouse (o). By Anne his wife, daughter of Simon Crouch, Alderman of London, he had — John, his son and heir, born in the latter end of the year 1598. He applied himself to the study of the law, and was called to the degree of a Serjeant 1 June 1660, and constituted one of the Judges of the Common Pleas 4 Novemb. 1663. He dyed 8 February 1681-2, and was buried in this Church, with a monument. By Elianor his wife, daughter of Sir John Curson of Kedleston in Derbyshire, he had John, and Elianor. — John his son dying without issue, Elianor his sister inherited. She was the first wife of Sir Walter Wrottesly of Wrottesly in Shropshire Bart. and left only a daughter; named Elianor, upon whom her uncle Mr. Archer settled the estate. She became wife of William Eyres Esq; who had several children by her, but all dead. He married for his second wife Susan, daughter of Sir John Newton of Barrows-Court in Gloucestershire Bart. — John Archer Esq; is his son and heir [2]. He hath married Mary, sister of the Rt. Hon. Earl Fitz-William.

Jernegan Cheveley Esq; of the Six Clarks Office, hath a seat here.

Mr. John Archer; William Cole; Samuel, and Philip, Martin; John, and Richard, Palmer; Edward Smith; Richard, John, and William, Rogers; William Kidd; Samuel Willingale; John, and Thomas, Bishop; Thomas Scales, &c. have also some estates in this parish.

Anne Lady Fitz-William, mentioned above, appointed by her will an Hospital to be erected within this parish for the perpetual maintenance of four poor Widows, and their successors, and gave to every of them twelve pence a week (p).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, consists of a body and a north aisle. But the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tyled. It appears by a free stone, inlaid in brick on the fourth-side of the Steeple, that Sir John Crosbie was a considerable contributor to the building this Steeple. He was knighted in the field by K. Edw. IV. in 1471, was Alderman of London, Sheriff in 1470, and built Crosbie-Place in Bishop's-gate-street.

The time of his death was in 1475 (q). But the date on the stone is 1520. From which it is concluded, that the building was then finished, and that Money having been collecting for it several years, a good sum was 'gevyn out of his godys toward the making of this stepyl:' as the words of the inscription are.

This Rectory was originally in the gift of the Gernon family: of which we find this further account. After Ralph above-mentioned followed — Sir William Gernon, father of — John Gernon of this place, who had a son named — Thomas, father of — Elizabeth, who was married to . . . Prince. — John Prince, his nephew and heir, succeeded him, and presented to this living in 1458. How the Advowson passed to all the succeeding patrons doth not appear. But it is appendent to the Maner of Gernon, alias Garnish-hall; hath been in the Abdy family, ever since 1660; and is now in the heirs of the late Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. of Albins.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 2159 l. 2 s. 4 d.

18. THEYDON-BOIS, is the most southern, and the least, of these three Parishes.

The addition of Bois, signifying in French Wood, was annexed to the name, either because it stood more among the Woods than the others: Or else it received it from some ancient possessors, styled De bosco, which will be mentioned presently [R].

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Hacun, and Uluuin, and seven Freemen, enjoyed this parish; which, at the time of the general Survey, was held by Peter de Valoines [S].

Under Robert de Valoines, in 1166, Osbert de Thaiden held a knight's fee here: And William de Bosco, one knight's fee, of the new feoffment (r). Also the eighth part of a knight's fee in Hertfordshire (s).

The Maner of THEYDON-BOIS belonged afterwards to John de Tany, son of Sir Peter de Tany, who gave it, in K. Henry the third's reign, to Waltham-Abbey (t) [T]. They remained possessed of it till the suppression, when it was valued at 8 l. a year; clear.

The demesnes of this Maner were then very extensive, but have since been much lessened, by the owners selling off considerable parcels from time to time.

This estate remained in the Crown till 1551, when K. Edward VI. granted it to Sir Thomas Wrotte (u), whose Family is seen at Loughton. He dyed 9 October 1573, possessed of this estate, which he held of the Queen by knight's service.—Robert, his son and heir (w), knighted in 1603, succeeded him; and, at the time of his decease, 27 January 1605, had not only this maner, and demesnes, but also Great Bardfield, and other immense estates in this and other Counties. [See under Loughton, and in the other Volume, p. 519. 616.]—Sir Robert, his son, was then aged 30 years (x). He had the same estates as his father; and dyed 14 May 1614, leaving—James, his son, only 5 weeks old (y). He dying 4 July 1616,—John Wrotte Esq; his father's brother succeeded him (z).

It was soon after purchased by Edward Elrington: who had before a Maner in this parish, called

BIRCH-HALL.

The mansion-house stands on a hill, in the road from Waltham-Abbey to Affe-bridge: It had been the residence of the Elrington family, ever since their being possessed of the great Tithes of this parish.

As we do not hear of two Maners in this parish whilst Waltham-Abbey enjoyed it; 'tis probable, that this part, erected into a Maner, was purchased of the Wroth Family.

Edward Elrington Esq; who dyed 4 April 1578, held this capital messuage, called Burch-hall, of Robert Wroth Esq; as of his maner of Taydon-Boyes, by fealty, in socage. His son — Edward Elrington Esq; held the capital messuage called Birch-hall, of the King, by the same service as the maner of Theydon-Boyes was then holden, by reason of the unity of their possession. He held also the maner of Theydon Boyes, with divers lands, hereditaments &c. in this parish, and in Theydon-Gernon, and Mount, Lamborne, Loughton, Epping, &c. of the King in ca. by the 100th part of a knight's fee: And lands and tenements parcel of Birch-hall, called Little and Great Gaunts, in Loughton. [See in the other Volume, p. 566. 586. 607.] He dyed 3 August 1618.—Edward Elrington, his son and heir, was then near 17 years old (a). This shews, that the Elrington-family purchased the maner of Theydon Bois between the years 1578 and 1618.

About the year 1656, they sold all their estate here to John Smart, of London, merchant: whose eldest son — John succeeded him; and having no issue, it came to his two brothers, Joseph, and Benjamin.—Joseph, who had the whole at length, was Sheriff of this County in 1685; an Alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1699; and a Knight. He was buried here in 1702, with Anne his wife, of the family of Hoskins of Oxted in Surrey. She dyed in 1701. By her he had, Elizabeth, wife of John Lethieullier Esq; [See above, p. 27.] Anne wife of Tho. Barrington of Tofts Esq; and — Benjamin Smart Esq; his son and heir, of the Middle Temple [U].

It was purchased some time after by Robert Meggot Esq; who dyed in 1721, and is buried here. He left a son named — John, and a daughter.

John Hopkins of Horn-Church Esq;

Drew Drewry Esq; Mr. Tho. Smith; Samuel Turner; Richard Waylet; and John Barnfeather, have also some lands in this parish.

There is no Court kept at Theydon hall, but at Birch-hall, and sometimes on Theydon-green.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. A little wooden Turret, with a spire shingled, contains 3 Bells.

This Church was given by William de Bosco to the Priory of St. Bartholomew's West Smithfield, and confirmed by K. Henry the third's Charter, 15 June 1253 (b). They presented to it twice as a Rectory, and then the whole Tithes being appropriated to them, it became only a Curacy, and so continues, supplied now by such Clergyman as the Impropiator nominates, and the Bishop licenses. It is augmented, by Qu. Anne's Bounty.

The Tithes, after the dissolution, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1543, to Edward Elrington, Esq; above-mentioned (c). He was chief Butler of England to K. Edward VI. Qu. Mary, and Qu. Elizabeth. [See in the other Volume, p. 590.] It continued in his posterity, with the rest of the parish (d), till 1656, when it was sold to . . . John Smart Esq; and hath passed as the rest of the estates.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 9811. 2 s. 2 d.

19. LOUGHTON.

The name of this parish is otherwise written in records Lochintun, Lockton, Loketon, Lucton, Lukentone; and derived from the Saxon words Loc, an inclosure, and tun, a town, a village; or perhaps from the word Lowe.

It is one of the seventeen Lordships where-with Earl Harold endowed his Monastery of Waltham (e). 'Tis entered in Domesday-book under Becontree-Hundred [W].

This estate continued in the Canons of Waltham Holy Cross till their suppression, when it came to the Crown; being then valued at 461. per ann. clear.

The 15th of April 1558, Qu. Mary annexed the Lordship and Maner of Lucton, with several others, to the Duchy of Lancaster (f).

LOUGHTON-HALL,

the Maner-house, stands near the Church.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted this maner of Lucton, alias Loughton, and the Advowson of the Church, among many other great estates, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (g).

It was in the Crown again in 1569 (b).

The Wroth family mentioned above under Theydon-Bois, became possessed of it soon after; by the marriage of Susan, daughter of Francis Stonard of this place, Gent.

The Stonards had been seated here some time. For John Stonnard Gent. who dyed 19 June 1541, is buried in the north aisle of the Chancel of this Church, with his wives Joane and Catharine. George Stonard presented to this Rectory in 1554, jointly with Edward Stacy (i). And the said George dying 25 Novemb. 1558, was buried in same aisle, with his wife Mary. At the man's feet were the effigies of several sons, and at the woman's the effigies of 6 daughters (k). Francis Stonard Esq; one of the sons, dyed 13 Septemb. 1604 (l).

As for the Wroth family, they derived themselves from John Wroth, Mayor of London in 1361. His son — Robert, by — daughter of Sir Thomas Lewkenor had — Thomas, who, by his wife Margaret Newdigate, had — Robert Wroth, of Durance in Enfield: He married Jane, daughter of Thomas Hawte, by whom he had Thomas; Dorothy wife of Edw. Lewkenor; and John. — Thomas, the eldest son, by his wife, Mary, daughter of Sir Robert Riche, had 4 sons.

— Sir Robert Wroth of Durance, the eldest son, married Susan, daughter and heir of Francis Stonard of Loughton, and had by her Thomas, who dyed without issue; Robert; John, of Durance; and Henry of Woodbury in Hertfordshire. At the time of his decease, 27 January 1606-7, he held a messuage with appertinances, in this parish, called Buckhurst [X], of the King, as of his maner of East-Greenwich.

He was succeeded by his son — Sir Robert, then 30 years old (m); who dyed 14 May 1613, holding, among other things, the maner of Loughton, alias Luckton, with appertenances, of the King, as of his maner of Endfeild, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, by fealty only, in free and common socage [Y]. By Mary his wife, eldest daughter of Robert Sidney Earl of Leicester, he left — James his son only 5 weeks old (n). This infant departing this life 5 July 1616, was succeeded by his father's brother — John Wroth, of Durance Esq; then 38 years old (o). He married Maud, daughter of Richard Lewellin, widow of Gregory Leonard, and had by her — John, who by his wife, Elizabeth fourth daughter of William Lord Maynard, left — John Wroth Esq; one of the Verdurers of Waltham Forest. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Wroth of Durance Bart. a woman of a martial spirit, who attended him in K. William's Campaigns. He departed this life 3 April 1718; and having no issue, left this estate [Z], after his wife's decease, to

William Whitaker Esq; of Lime-street London; chosen Alderman of that Ward in 1746, one of the Sheriffs of the said City in 1750, but did not live to be Lord Mayor. He settled this estate and maner on his second wife, Anne, now living; and, after her death, on his youngest daughter, Anne. He had also a daughter by his first wife, to whom he left a large fortune.

It is said that in 1688, the Princess of Denmark, afterwards Queen Anne, retired to Loughton-hall, when she saw how things were going on with her ill-advised father.

Sir William Johnson; John Eyre, and Sackville Bate, Esqres; and Mr. Thomas Shelley, have also some estates in this parish.

The parish receives 20 s. a year, part of Robert Rampston's benefaction, so often mentioned.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, consists of a body, and a north-aisle the length both of Church and Chancel; all tyled. In a belfrey, with a Spire shingled, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory belonged to Waltham-Abbey till its dissolution. After that, in 1554, George Stonard, and Edward Stacy presented once, by virtue of a turn granted them by the Abbey. The Crown presented next from 1555, to 1609. Then it came into the Wroth family; and is now we suppose in Mrs. Whitaker.

Loughton parish is rated to the land-tax at 1688 l. 2s. 10d.

is the most southern part of this Hundred. In records the name is written Cingwell; which was undoubtedly formed from the two Saxon words; Cing, and pelle, that is King's Well. For the Saxons use C instead of K. which they pronounce strong like it. The name was occasioned by a Well in Chigwell-Row behind the wind-mill, among the trees, whose water has a purging quality; and the late Dr. Frewin used to speak in its favour. That celebrated Physician was born in Chigwell-Row, in an old mansion house, now pulled down, once belonging to the Pelling family, and afterwards to the Frewins. Here the Doctor's mother dyed, and he used to visit the place every two or three years till his decease. Near this well, there is a Hole, or hollow place, wherein is a Water of the same nature, perhaps proceeding from the other. In Havering Liberty, there is also another purging Water, in a Well near Bone, or rather Bourn, Bridge, under which runs a small stream of common water.

The name of this parish is otherwise written in records Cingheuuella, Cinguehella, Chiwellia, Chickwell, Gykewell.

In this parish are three capital Maners, 1. Chigwell-hall. 2. Barringtons, or Rolls. 3. Wolston-hall.

The first, now called Chigwell-hall, was, before the Conquest, held by Earl Harold of Edward the Confessor.

At the time of the Survey, the possessor of it was Ralph de Limefei, who had also Brundon, and one more Maner, in this County [A].

CHIGWELL-

CHIGWELL-HALL.

The maner house stands near the Church.

Ralph de Limesei was seated at Ukverlei in Warwickshire; of which He and his posterity bore the title of Barons. A grandson of his, of the same name, was succeeded by his son — Alan, father of — Gerard de Limesei. The latter had 6 children; Alianor; John; Alan; Gerard, Amabilia, which three last dyed without issue; and Basilia. — John, by Alice de Harecourt, had his son — Hugh; who dying without issue in 1213, his two aunts Alianor, and Basilia, became his coheirs. Alianor was married, to David de Lindsey, and Basilia to Hugh de Odingsells (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 316.]

Alan de Limesei, above-mentioned gave all his land of Chiggewill, with appertenances, to Richard de Luci, and his heirs; to hold of him and his heirs in fee and perpetuity, by the service of one knight: which grant was confirmed by his son Gerard de Limesei; and for the same Richard gave him three marks of silver; and his son Geffrey de Luci a gold ring, when he became his liege. — Afterwards, Richard de Luci granted this land of Chiggewill, with all its appertenances, to

Ralph Briton, to hold of him and his heirs in fee, as above. Next,

Richard de Luci yielded to William de Goldingham, and his heirs, his inheritance of Chigwell; to hold of him and his heirs, by the service of one knight; and received his homage, for the love of Ralph Briton, and at his petition. Upon that, at the request of the said William, Richard de Luci, when he received his homage before the Barons of the Exchequer, granted and confirmed to — Robert, son of Ralph Briton, his maner of Chigwell, with all its appertenances, in fee and for ever; by the service of one knight to the said William. And this William de Goldingham granted to Robert Briton, and his heirs, all his land of Chigwell with its appertenances, in fee and for ever; to hold of him and his heirs, by the service aforesaid; And for this grant he became his liege; paid him 20 marks of silver; and he received his homage before the Barons of the Exchequer (q). All this was in the reign of K. Henry II.

For several years this Maner continued in the Goldingham Family; and they held it of the Lords Fitz-Walter. — John de Goldingham held one fee in Chigwell, under Robert Fitz-Walter who dyed in 1328. And so did — Sir Alexander de Goldingham under Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1386 (r).

The Goldingham-family had also the Advowson of this Rectory from 1331 to 1386. And it was next in — John Lord Bourchier, and Sir Bartholomew Bourchier (s), from whence it might be inferred that they had also the Maner, but of this we have no certain evidence.

It was next in Mannock family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 232. 361. 456.

John Mannock, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Chigwell-hall; and other lands and tenements here, of Anne Duchess of Buckingham, by knight's service, as of her Hundred of Ongre, by the rent of 3s. 4d. per ann. He had also other estates in this County [B]. — George Mannock was his son and heir (t). In June 1534, he, and his son William with his wife Audry, or Etheldred, passed by fine, for 1000 marks, the Maners of Chiggewill and West Hache, with appertenances, described to be 6 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 300 acr. of meadow, 300 of pasture, 80 of wood, and 12 l. rent in this parish, and Theydon, Lambourn, and Berking; to Sir Thomas Audeley, Lord Chancellor; Sir Brian Tuke, Treasurer of the King's Chamber; Thomas Cromwell Esq; Master of the Jewels; and Christopher Hales, Attorney-general; the right of the said Thomas Audeley (u). It seems to have been purchased for the use of the Crown. For, 24 July 1550, K. Edward VI. granted the maners of Chigwell and West-Hatch to

Sir Thomas Wrothe, to hold of the King by the 40th. part of a knight's fee (w). He had it at the time of his decease 9 October 1573. as also his son — Sir Robert Wrothe, 27 January 1605. And — Sir Robert Wrothe, Kt. son of the last, who dyed 14 May 1614 (x). For a further account of the Wrothe family, see under Theydon-Bois and Loughton. It continued in that family till 1669, when they sold it to

Sir William Hickes. Having traced this family down to the year 1720, I shall now bring it to this present time. — Sir Harry Hickes having sold Rockholt's, in 1720, built a plain brick house here called The Bowling Green, almost opposite to West-Hatch, in which he dyed 1731. His eldest son — Robert having the unhappiness of being blind, he left his estates from him to his second son — Michael, who dying in March 1764, gave by will his estates to his said eldest brother, now Sir Robert Hickes; and his two sisters; and, after their deaths to the youngest son of Howe Hickes Esq; of Whitcomb in Gloucestershire: And, in case of his death, to his eldest Brother Howe Hickes. But he settled one hundred pounds per annum on Michael, the son of his youngest sister, widow of Michael Burton D. D.

Sir Harry sold Chigwell-hall, the maner-house, and farm, to William Davy Esq; Treasurer of St. Luke's Hospital.

But the Maner remains in the Hickes family. Their share in the Forest is at least 1300 acres.

WEST-HATCH, a nominal maner above-mentioned, belongs also to this family. The House stands about 3 quarters of a mile south south-west from the Church, and is a tolerably handsome house; in which lived the late Sir William Nutt. This House, and what land belonged to it, was purchased by James Crockatt Esq; of Luxboroughs. — West-hatch and Buckhurst belonged to Walter Writell in 1475 (y).

The Maner of BARRINGTONS, now called ROLLS.

The mansion house, called Rolls, is about a mile north from the Church. It was purchased, with the Park and land about it, by Sir Eliab Harvey.

This seems to be the estate which Anschetill held of Robert Gernon, at the time of the Survey; but had belonged, in the Confessor's reign, to one Doth [C]. How it came into the House of De Vere appears not; but about the reign of K. Stephen, or Henry II. Alberic de Vere granted it to Sir Humfrey, son of Sir Eustace de Barinton [D].

From the Feodary of the De Veres Earls of Oxford, it is manifest, that the following persons of the name of Barrington, held this maner under them. — George Barington in 1263. — William Barington in 1270. — George Barington in the reign of K. Edward I. — Geoffrey Barington in 1429. — John Barington in 1447. — Thomas Barington in 1466. — Margaret, wife of Thomas Barrington, that dyed in 1479, held, jointly with him, the maner of Little Chigwell called Barrington's maner, of Anne Duchefs of Buckingham, as of her Hundred of Aungre, by the service of doing suit at the Sheriff's turn of that Hundred, and rent of 6 d. per ann. — Humfrey Barrington was their son and heir (z). — Sir Nicolas Barrington did homage at Castle Hedingham, in 1512, for this maner: and held it, at the time of his decease, 22 July 1515, by the name of the maner of Chigwell with appertenances, of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, by the service of half a knight's fee, during the minority of John de Vere Earl of Oxford. — John Barrington, his son and heir, was 6 years old (a). At the time of his decease, 23 Septemb. 1537, he held this maner of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Honor of Henningham-Castle. — Thomas was his son and successor (b).

Some names in the Feodary above-mentioned are not in the pedigree of the Barrington-family, namely two Georges, William, and Geoffrey. To reconcile that, we must suppose that Chigwell was held by a younger branch, and returned to the elder. [See in the other Volume, p. 503. &c.]

William Tiffin did homage for this maner in 1573. It appears after that in the Wiseman family, of Great Waltham. [See in the other Volume, p. 88.] For Thomas Wiseman Esq; who dyed 15 July 1584, held the maner of Barringtons: leaving Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiseman, his daughters and coheirs (c). — John Wiseman, of Stisted, who dyed 20 Decemb. 1616, had the reversion of this maner. [See in the other Volume, p. 390.] — Thomas his son (d) sold it to

John Hawkins. And he, or his son, alienated it to Eliab Harvey. Of the considerable Family of Harvey we have the following account. Thomas Harvey of Folkstone in Kent, Gent. by Joane Halke his wife had seven sons; 1. William. M. D. [See in the other Volume, p. 530.] 2. Thomas, who had John Harvey, of Antwerp. 3. John, Member of Parliament for Hythe, in 1640. 4. Daniel, father of Daniel, of Combe Nevill in Surrey, Embassador to the Porte. 5. Eliab, of Bread-street, London. 6, and 7. Matthew, and Michael, twins. Matthew purchased the maner and advowson of Langford in this County, and dyed without issue, as did the eldest and third sons. The six youngest being bound apprentices in London, and at last becoming considerable Merchants, got large fortunes, of which they made their father treasurer: and he being as skilful in purchasing lands, as they in getting money, he lived to see the meanest of them of far greater estate, than himself (e).

Eliab Harvey, the fifth son, was he who settled here; and dying 27 May 1661, aged 72, was buried at Hempsted in this County; as were also Sarah, and Elizabeth, two of his daughters, and Mary his widow, who dyed 30 Decemb. 1673, aged 67. His eldest daughter, Mary, was wife of Sir William Whitmore of Asley in Shropshire, Bart. which dyed 30 Janu. 1710, aged 64. — Sir Eliab Harvey, Kt. the eldest son and heir, married . . . daughter of Sir William Whitmore, Bart. and had Eliab, who dyed 3 June 1681, at the age of 22. William; Matthew, that deceased 23 Janua. 1692, aged 23 years: and Elizabeth, wife of Edward Harvey of Combe, Esq; She dyed 15 Janua. 1695. Sir Eliab was chosen one of the knights in Parliament for this County in 1678, and Burgefs for Malden in 1695, and dying 20 Februa. 1698, aged 64 years, was buried at Hempsted. — William, the eldest surviving son, was elected one of the Knights for this shire in 1722. He married Dorothy, sole daughter and heir of Sir Robert Dycer of Uphall in Braughing in Hertfordshire Bart. by whom he had William; Eliab. that dyed young: Dorothy, wife of Sir Philip Monoux of Wotton in Bedfordshire, Bart. Mary, wife of Sir Edmund Anderson, of Broughton in Lincolnshire, Bart. and Agnes, of Pulter Forrester, of Hertfordshire, Esq; He dyed 30 Octob. 1731, aged 68. — William, his eldest son and heir, married Mary, one of the daughters and coheirs of Ralph Williamfon of Berwick in the County of Northumberland Esq; and had by her 3 sons, William; Eliab, now King's Counsel, and member of parliament for Dunwich; Edward, Major, and Adjutant General, and also member of parliament for Gatton; and two daughters. He departed this life 25 Decemb. 1742, and was succeeded by his eldest son — William Harvey Esq; chosen one of the Knights of Parliament for this County in three Parliaments, in 1747. 1754. and 1761. The 14th. of August 1750, he married Emma, eldest daughter of Stephen Skynner of Waltham-Stow Esq; He dyed 11 June 1763, leaving — William, his eldest son and heir, a minor, two other sons, and three daughters; to whom his widow, to her great honor, acts a truly motherly part.

The maner of Barringtons was once divided between the Families of Harvey, and Comyns. But the former hath now the whole; having purchased the half of the Comyns family, or of Sir Hugh Myddelton, Bart. father of the late Sir Hugh, whose mother was a Comyns. That family is extinct [E].

The Maner of WOLVERSTON, or WOOLSTON, is the next considerable Maner in this parish. The mansion house stands about a mile and a half north from the Church.

This seems to have been anciently a Parish of itself, or at least a very considerable Hamlet, and united to Chigwell, since the Conquest. There belonged to it a Church, or at least a Chapel.

The name of it is written in records these other different ways, Ulfelmestun, Wolfamston, Wolfhamestone, Wolston, or Woolston, Woolhampton, Woolverhampton, Wolvermeston, &c. and was undoubtedly taken from a Saxon owner, named Wulfham, or Wulfhelm, and tun, town.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, it belonged to Earl Harold; and a freeman had 20 acres: At the time of the Survey, it was part of the royal demesnes, and was farmed by the King to the Sheriff [F].

After having continued several years in the Crown, it was granted by K. Henry II. to a Family furnamed de Sandford, to hold by grand serjancy; namely of finding a Damsel to wait in the Queen's chamber on the day of her Coronation (f) [G]. — Alice daughter and heir of Gilbert de Sandford, being in ward to Fulk Basset, bishop of London, for which wardship the Bishop had given the King 1000 marks; He, in 1248, sold the wardship and marriage of the said Alice to Hugh de Vere [H], the 4th. Earl of Oxford, for five years, whether she lived or dyed. And he gave her to his eldest son

Robert de Vere, the 5th. Earl of Oxford, who in her right became Baron Sanford, among his other titles. By this lady he had his son and successor, Robert de Vere, the 6th. Earl of Oxford, and a daughter named

Joane, that became the wife of William, eldest son of John Plantagenet, Earl of Warenn and Surrey. Upon whose marriage, this maner, and others [1], were settled upon them, and their issue, in 1284 (g). But they lived a very little while together, the husband dying in December 1285, and leaving her with child of a son, born the 27th. of June following, that was named — John. Her father, the Earl of Oxford, enjoyed this maner till his decease in 1295, at which time it was held of William le Plomer, by the rent of 10 s. per ann. the reversion of it being in the heirs of Earl Warenn (b). John Earl of Warenn dyed 30 June 1347, without lawful issue; whereupon this estate, and the rest of his inheritance, fell to his sister Alice, wife of Edmund Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel (i).

In 1323, this Edmund Earl of Arundel, Lord of Wolhampton, claimed Common for himself and tenants in Hynebolt, with housebote, hay, or hedge, bote, and firebote, in his own woods without view of the woodwards, and freedom from gelt, toll, passage, and expediating his Dogs. The Earl, and Alice his wife, had also licence to impark fifty acres in their own maner, within the bounds of the Forest of Essex (k). This Earl was beheaded in 1326. His son — Richard, being restored in blood, enjoyed this estate, till his death, 24 January 1375. — Richard, his son, lost it by his attainder, and his subsequent execution 21 October 1397. But his son — Thomas was restored to his honors and estates. He held this maner of Wolhampton near Chigwell of the King, in ca. by knight's service. Having no issue, he was, on his decease 13 October 1414, succeeded by his 3 surviving sisters, 1. Elizabeth, then wife of Sir Gerard Ufflet, married before to Thomas Moubray Duke of Norfolk and two other husbands; 2. Joanna, wife of William Beauchamp, Lord Bergavenny; 3. Margaret, wife of Sir Rowland Lentball. Alice, another sister he had, who had been married to John Charleton Lord Powis, was then dead (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 53. 463. 465. 498.] Edmund, son of Sir Rowland Lentball, dying without issue in 1450, his share, the third part of this maner, came to the two other coheirs (m).

Margaret, wife of Norman Babington, seems to have brought him one of these third parts. For, at the time of his decease in 1433, he held a third part of this maner: As she herself did at the time of her decease in 1451. And her heirs were, Elizabeth wife of William Hungate, and Beatrix wife of Robert Constable, both of Yorkshire, daughters of William Neffeld brother to the said Margaret (n). She was undoubtedly a descendent from one of the three sisters of Thomas Earl of Arundel.

John Moubray, Earl of Norfolk, who dyed in 1461, held a moiety of this maner, of the King, in capite (o). — John his son, Earl of Warenn and Surrey, dyed in January 1497. From him it came to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, who was slain at Bosworthfield 22 August 1485, and attainted.

This estate becoming then vested in the Crown, was granted about the beginning of K. Henry VIIth's reign, to William Scott Esq; seated at Stapleford-Tany, and lineally descended from Sir William Scott, Lord Chief Justice of England, and Justice of the Forests in the reign of K. Edward III. made Serjeant at law in 1335; Justice of the Common Pleas, 18 March 1338; Justice of the King's Bench, 2 May 1340; Chief Justice of the same, 8 Janu. 1341; and Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, 27 April 1342. He seems to have been advanced again to the King's Bench in 1343. He dyed in 1346. The present worthy owner of Wolverston-hall, George Scott Esq; is in possession of his papers, and of the silver Cup he used to drink out of.

William Scott Esq; the grantee of this estate, son, I take it, of Sir John Scott of East-Tilbury, married Margery, daughter and heir of Thomas Swynborne, of Yorkshire, Esq; and had by her six sons, John the elder, William, Edward, John the younger, George, and Hugh; and two daughters, Joane, and Elizabeth. He dyed 3 Novemb. 1491, and was buried in Stapleford-Tany-Church, with his wife Margery, who dyed 14 October 1505 (p). He held, at the time of his decease, this maner of Woolhampton, with appertenances, of the King, in ca. by knight's service: and the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Howsham-hall, Langtons; and Margaret-Inge. — John Scott senr. his eldest son and heir, was then 35 years old (q). He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Draxe of Berkshire, by whom he had three sons, George of this place; Thomas of Stapleford-Tany; who married Mary daughter of Sir Thomas Urswick, and had by her Walter; John, of the same parish, and also owner of the maners of Little Lees-hall, and Langtons, who dyed 6 Febru. 1526; and William, of Ovesham-hall, who departed this life 20 Janua. 1531 (r). — George Scott Esq; above-named held this maner, containing 10 acres of arable, 24 of meadow, 80 of pasture, 8 of wood, and 9 l. rent; and dying in 1533, without issue, was succeeded by his cousin and next heir—Walter, then 26 years old (s). He married Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Belknap, and had by her Roger, Edward, John, Richard, Walter; Elianor, wife of Michell; and Mary. At the time of his decease, he was possessed not only of this maner of Wollehampton, alias Worson-hall, but also of those of Stapleford-Tany, Ovesham, and Little Lees. Departing this life 25 October 1550.—Roger, his son, 13 years old, succeeded him (t). By his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John Leeds of Steyning in Suffex, he had George, Richard, William, and another Richard. He dyed 9 September 1586 (u).—George, his eldest son and heir, dyed 3 Febru. 1588, aged 29 years. By Dorothy his wife, daughter of John Franck of Hatfeild-broad-oak, and of Duton-hill in Great Easton, he left two daughters, coheirs, Elizabeth, 1 year old; and Mary 41 weeks, and 4 days. He had the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Howesham-hall, and Little Leighs, (w), which his eldest daughter, Elizabeth, brought in marriage to Sir Edward Allyn of Hatfeild-Priory. [See in the other Volume, p. 99. 132. 499.]

But the maner of Wolverston-hall, had been given by the father to his brother William, that married Prudence, daughter and coheir of Edmund Alabaster, of Bretts-hall in Tendring Esq; His son—George Scott Esq; of Lincoln's-inn, married, in 1641, Joane, daughter of William Towse Esq; serjeant at law, remarried to George Brett; and had by her—George; who by his wife Elizabeth, third daughter of Robert Cheyne, of Bramhanger in Bedfordshire Esq; had William, George, Lætitia, and Hester. He dyed 15 October 1683, aged 61, and she 27 July 1705, eighty five years old: and both lie buried in this Church, with a monument. — William, the eldest son and heir, married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Luther of Stapleford-Tany Esq; She dyed 16 October 1710, aged 58, and he 27 June 1725, aged 72. Their children were, George, who dyed un-married 19 Febr. 1726; — Thomas; Anne, wife of the Rev. Dr. William Derham; and Elizabeth. — Thomas Scott Esq; the eldest surviving son and heir, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Hare of Southwark, that dyed 29 March 1720. He himself dyed 19 Janu. 1732-3, aged 52 years, leaving his only son and heir—George Scott Esq; born in 1719. He was educated at St. John's-College in Oxford, where he took the degree of Dr. of Laws. To this good man I am greatly indebted for his kind communication of several curious particulars relating to this Hundred. He married, 13 May 1746, Jane, second daughter of the Right Reverend Dr. Edmund Gibson, Bishop of London, my most munificent patron.

Ovesham-Hall returned into this family, upon Sir Edmund Allyn's dying without issue male, in 1656. [See in the other Volume p. 499.] [K].

The Maner of GRANGE, was one of the Maners, Granges, or Barns, belonging to Tiltey-Priory. [See in the other Volume, p. 436.]

After the suppression, this was granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1537, to Thomas Adington, and his heirs, to hold by the 20th. part of a knight's-fee (x). In 1554, he sold it to

James Altham Esq; and doing it without license, was forced to procure a pardon; as was Altham, for selling it without a license to Antony Browne Esq; (y) The latter made it part of the endowment of his Free-School at Burntwood.

It was formerly a Hamlet, now only a Farm, on Grange-hill.

LUXBOROUGH,

stands about a mile south-west from this Church.

We have no mention of the name, nor any account of the possessors, of this estate, till the beginning of the last century. Then, Sir Robert Wrotte, who dyed 27 Janua. 1605, held the maner of Luxborowes, with its appertenances, and a tenement called Shepecotts in this parish, of the maner of Chigwell, by fealty &c.—Sir Robert Wrotte was his son (z).

Of some of his heirs the demesnes of this Maner were purchased by Robert Knight Esq; cashier of the South-Sea Company; who built a fine house here. Upon this estate's being seized and sold by the South-Sea Company, Sir Joseph Eyles bought it: He dyed 8 Febru. 1739-40.

After his decease Robert Knight Esq; purchased it again; and dying 8 Novemb. 1744, was succeeded by his son — Robert Knight Esq; created, 26 July 1746, Baron Luxborough of Shannon, and in 1763 Earl of Catherlough, in Ireland. The 30th. of July 1747, his Lordship contracted with Thomas Braddyll Esq; for the sale of this estate, for the sum of 19500 l. Governor Braddyll dying before Henry Knight, only son and heir of the Lord Luxborough (in whom was the remainder in tail-male) attained his age of 21 years, which was not till 25 December 1749; it was purchased by James Crockatt Esq; who resides in it, and hath married a daughter of Peter-Darnel Muilman Esq;

POTELES, alias LANGFORD-PLACE.

Here has been a Royal House and Lodge, perhaps as antient as any thing in the Forest. K. Henry VIII. 28 Febru. 1512, having before granted to Sir John Risley, among other things, the keeping his Palace in the parish of Chigwell, within his Forest of Waltham, called Potteles alias Langford's Place with the Lodge annexed; that came into the hands of K. Edward IV. by reason of the minority of Edward son and heir of George Duke of Clarence, (which Edward was afterwards attainted of high-treason in K. Henry VIIIth's time,) the King, viz. Henry VIII. on Sir John Risley's death gave it to William Compton and his heirs (a).

In 1596, 31 January, Qu. Elizabeth granted the reversion and remainder of the same to Thomas Spencer, and others (b). It hath since passed through several hands. [See above, p. 18. .]

In Chigwell village, there is a very good Brick House, which was the habitation of the Penington-family even before the year 1620. John Penington Esq; dyed 21 Novemb. 1702, in the 60th year of his age, and Sarah his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Abdy of Albins, dyed 19 January 1690, in the 42d year of her age (c). John Bramston Esq; of Skrene's married Mary one of the daughters, and became in her right possessed of this house and estate, till his decease 17 August 1718: He left three daughters, the second of which, Mary, was married, 17 Novemb. 1730, to the Hon. Edward Byng, fifth and youngest son of the Lord Viscount Torrington. After her death, the farms belonging to this House were sold to Sackville Bale, of Loughton Esq; who, in consequence of this purchase, supports some Alms-houses in Chigwell.

The mansion-house, and about 15 acres of land, were bought by Edward Tymewell, Esq; of the Victualling-Office; after whose decease, they were sold to John Raymond Esq; the present owner.

A House here, formerly belonging to Abp. Harsnet, hath been lately repaired and modernized by a descendant of his, Mr. William-Park Fisher, Jeweller in Tavistock street, Covent-Garden.

Appletons, a tenement and lands in this parish, were held of John Mannock Esq; in 1486, by John Coke, a branch of the same family as that of Gedding-hall. He had also the maners of Gelhowes, or Belhouse, in Stanford-Rivers; of Chadwell; the tenement called Tyleherst in South-Weald; and held 400 acres of land, and more, in West-ham, of the Abbot of Stratford (d).

The same Abbey of Stratford had, in this parish and Woodford, a tenement and curtilage called Buckhursts alias Monkenhall; concerning which see above, p. 39. We cannot trace out the present owners of these two last parcels; most probably they are incorporated with some of the larger estates.

Samuel Harsnet, Archbishop of York, once Vicar of this parish, founded here, in 1629, two Free-Schools, one called The Grammar, the other The English, School. In the former, to use the Archbishop's own words in his statutes, 'the children and youth are to be taught the ' Latin and Greek tongues; in the latter, to ' read, write, cipher, and cast accompts, and ' their Accidence.' These Schools have 12 Governors or Trustees, two of which are always to be the Vicar of Chigwell, and the Rector of Loughton, for the time being; and the Bishop of London perpetual Visitor.—The Archbishop also gave 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year, for the relief and maintenance of the poor people living in the Alms-house; and 8 or 10 l. a year for maintaining of the high ways.

Besides the Archbishop's schools, here is another for the education and cloathing of ten girls, under the care of a treasurer, principally supported by an annual Charity Sermon.

Lands called Cardhams in this parish are tyed for the payment of 6 s. 8 d. a quarter to three poor widows in the Alms-house. They are, I believe, some of those now belonging to Sackville Bale Esq;

Twenty four two penny loaves are distributed every Sunday to the poor.

This parish receives also 40 s. yearly, part of Mr. Robert Rampston's benefaction, so often mentioned.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of a body and a north aisle: both Church and Chancel are leaded, and the aisle tyled. The east end of this aisle is called the Little Chancel, being the burial place of the ancient family of Scott. The Belfrey is of timber, with a spire shingled, and in it are 5 Bells.

Here is both a Rectory, which is a sine-cure, and a Vicarage to which the Rector presents [L]. From the year 1329 to 1406 the Rectory was in lay-patrons; namely the Families of Goldingham, the Lords Bouchier, and Doreward.

In 1439, John Doreward gave the Advowson of this parish Church and Rectory to the Priory

[L] Mr. Newcourt found in the London Registry, that a Rector here, a Pluralist, appointed a Vicar without proper authority; that afterwards there were disputes between Rector and Vicar, till the Vicarage was settled by Simon Sudbury Bishop of London, in 1374. It is possible that Woolston-hall having been distinct from Chigwell, had also a Church and a separate living, which upon the coalition with Chigwell, might make the Rector a Pluralist. But of this no traces are left, any more than of Woolston's being incorporated with Chigwell, which was once separate. See Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 140.

of St. Botolphs in Colchester; and they procured a license to appropriate it to themselves and their successors: by virtue of which they presented twice to the Vicarage. But in 1451 and 1466 the Rectors used again their right. Soon after, Thomas Kemp, Bishop of London, founding a Chantry in St. Paul's Church, endowed it with the Advowson of this Church, and with lands here and at Great Clacton: uniting it to the office of Confessor in that Cathedral. Afterwards, in 1474, he appropriated to the Priest of that Chantry and Confessor the Prebend of St. Pancras; from which time, whoever had that Prebend, was also Penitentiary; and as such hath ever since been Rector of Chigwell, invested with its profits without institution or induction, and patron of the Vicarage [M].

The great Tithes are held by lease upon three lives. The late Sir Joseph Eyles had them, and now James Crockatt Esq; of Luxboroughes.

This parish is rated to the Land-tax at 2885 l. 2 s. 0 d.

21. L A M B O R N,

otherwise written in records Lamburn, derived its name from the Saxon words, Lamb, a lamb, or from Lam, dirt, and bupn, brook.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the only possessor here upon record was Lessi; and the only one recorded in the Survey, is Eustace Earl of Bologne, whose under-tenant was one David [N].

The several Maners and Estates in this Parish, are set down in records in a more confused manner than any others: However we shall endeavour to unravel them as well as we can.

After Earl Eustace, the oldest possessor here mentioned, was Pharin, or Pharam, de Bologne; and then Sibill de Fesnes; who had two knights fees in Lamburn [O], about the year 1210, or 1211 (e). Some have imagined, that the lands of this whole parish would not make up two knights fees, considering how much of it was wood and forest (f): but that surmise is groundless, considering the extent and value of the parish.

The several Maners in Lamburn we find mentioned in the Inquisitions post mortem, are. The maner of Lamburn. The maner of Shepeshall of Norwich. Hunts, Affebridge, and Arneways. Dawes hall, or Deux-hall. The maner of Priors. Waltham-Abbey had also some land here [P], but it is very doubtful whether they had a Maner; for in the foundation-Charter it is written Lambebythe, i. e. Lambeth near London, where Earl Harold, the founder, is said to have had a maner.

L A M B O R N-HALL,

the mansion house of the capital Maner in this parish, stands a little way north from the Church. It is now only a farm house. The owners have commonage &c. in the Forest.

A family surnamed De Fesnes was possessed of this estate in K. John's reign, as we have just mentioned above. But, either they soon parted with it, or named themselves from the Place, for in eight years after, anno 1218, we find a Lord by the name of Robert de Lamburn, giving the Rectory to Waltham-Abbey (g). This Robert de Lamburn paid scutage for his estate in Essex, from the first to the 13th. of K. John; viz. two marks towards the scutage for Normandy (b).—Will. de Lamburne was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire for half a year, in part of 1285, and 1286.

This William lived at the Manor of Lamborn in Canewden in the Hundred of Rockford. At the time of his decease in 1300, he held the maner of Lamburn of the inheritance of Philip de Burnel, then under age, and the King's ward, by the service of two knights fees.—James was his son and heir (i). He was living in 1334; and under him, Robert William, of Havering, who was outlawed for felony, held three roods of meadow in the vill of Lambourne.

[M] In this Church was a Gild, or Fraternity of the H. Trinity; to which John Elderton, citizen and stokemonger, i. e. stockfishmonger, gave, in 1500, lands and tenements, for 'the sustentation of a Chantre prest to syng at the 'trenteall, and to help devyne service in the quere upon the 'holy days.' And in the certificate it is said, that Chigwell was then 'a great towne, having in yt by estimac'on 360 of 'howling people.'

Vol. II. p. 14. 16.—That land is called in Inquis. 33 Hen. VIII. Maplus, and said to contain 80 acres of arable and pasture, 6 of meadow, and 4 of wood. It then belonged to Sir William Sulyard. Inquis. 33 Hen. VIII. It is called Maples, in Inquis. 2. Edw. VI.

What else the same Robert held in this parish, shews the owners of the several other lordships here: Of the Prior of Dunmow he held 20 acres of arable, 3 acr. of pasture, and the moiety of one messuage; of Thomas Russell, 13 acres of arable, 2 acres and a half and one rood of meadow, and the moiety of one messuage; of John de Lancaster, 16 acres of arable; of Richard de Wylleby, 4 acres of arable; and of the Bishop of Norwich, 15 acres of arable, and 1 acre and a half of meadow (k).—Thomas Lamborn dyed in 1360, and—William, his son, in 1362. [See in the other Volume, p. 53, 54.] The latter dying under age, was succeeded by his sister Joane, wife of Sir William Chene (l). Under him Richard Fifehide, and Alice his wife, in 1374, held 1 messuage, and 200 acres of arable, in this parish, called Laghames; undoubtedly part of the maner's demesnes; by the service of 4 s. per annum (m). See under Fifeild.

Thomas Lampet held the maner of Lambourn about the reign of K. Henry IV.

We find no account of the maner of Lamborne from this time till 1485. John Curson who dyed the 22 d. of August that year, held it of Jasper Duke of Bedford, in right of Anne his Duchefs. — Anne Curson, his daughter and heir, was but one year and a half old (n).

It came next into the Barefoot family, which continued possessed of it till the beginning of this century.

Robert Barefoot, citizen and mercer of London, held the maner of Lamborne with appertinances, as of the Hundred of Ongar, by suit at that Hundred, and the service of the Wardstaff, viz. to carry a load of straw with a cart and 6 horses, and 2 men in rapiers to watch the said Wardstaff when it is brought to the town of Abridge, and also to make a certain quantity of the Park pale at Havering when need shall be, according to the old custom, in lieu of all services. He held also a messuage, and 100 acres, in High-Ongar, of the maner of Stanford-hall; and 80 acres called Perrills in Stanford-Rivers and Bobbingworth (o). He dyed 22 August 1546, and is buried in this Church, as likewise Catharine his wife, with an epitaph. At his feet are the effigies of 4 sons and 1 daughter; and at her feet the effigies of 4 sons and 10 daughters. — Thomas, his eldest son and heir, succeeded him. What further account we have of this family, is, that—John Barefoot Esq; by Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of Thomas Goodman of Leatherhead in Surrey, had Anne; and several sons, the youngest of whom — John, a woollen-draper in London, married Mary, daughter of John Eldred of Little Birch Esq; and had by her—John, his only son, of Lincoln's-inn, who by Mary his wife, daughter of John Eldred of Stanway Esq; had John;

Mary; and Anne, wife of the Rev. Thomas Bernard, Vicar of Earl's-Colne &c. He dyed 26 January 1724-5. It was next in John-Fortescue Aland, Esq; He was born 7 March 1670, and being bred up to the law, was constituted one of the Barons of the Exchequer 24 Janu. 1716; one of the Justices of the King's bench 19 May 1718; and 27 Janu. 1728 one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, being then a knight: but resigned this place in June 1746, on account of his age and infirmities. The 15th. of August following he was created Baron Fortescue, of Credan in the County of Waterford in Ireland; but enjoyed his dignity but a few months, departing this life 19 December, the same year. He had been created Doctor of Laws by diploma from the University of Oxford, which he hath published in his Reports, a work in very good esteem. By his first wife he had two sons, one a Counsellor; and the other a Sea-Officer; and a daughter, all which dyed single. By his second wife . . . Dormer, he had his son and heir Hugh-Fortescue Aland, the present Lord Fortescue [2].

is the next Maner in this parish, of which the oldest mention occurs in records.

Henry Spencer, the military Bishop of Norwich, held, in 1383, this maner called Shepeshall of Norwich, of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, and of Sir John Sutton, by the Service of 6 s. per an. And of the King in capite, as of the maner of Havering, by the service of making sixty perches of the Park-pale with his own timber; and of the Earl of Oxford by one suit of court from three weeks to three weeks, and to Thomas Baill 6 d. per an. He held other estates in Terling of the Honor of Peve-rell, and at Much-Lees of the Prior of the Knights Hospitallers (p). This martial Prelate, bred to arms in Italy in the service of Pope Adrian, a native of England, in his wars against the Duke of Milan, as a reward obtained from the Pope the Bishoprick of Norwich, in 1370. He got together a fleet and transported an army into the Netherlands, in 1383, against the King's will, to chastize the schismatics of that county, who threw off the authority of Pope Urban the VIth. for which he had the Pope's commission. The King and Parliament resenting this, seized his temporalities, and kept them two years; but they were restored by the Parliament in 1385. He had been very serviceable, in 1381, to the King and Nation during Wat. Tyler's insurrection. A party of those malecontents were very strong in Norfolk, against whom the Bishop marched but with a slender force; yet by a stratagem and dint of valour he subdued them, beheading some, killing and taking others, and at length hanged up their Leader Littster, a dyer of Norwich. This boisterous hero, at length, fell out with the Monks of Norwich, whom he humbled and trampled upon fifteen years, till they were forced to purchase their peace with four hundred marks (q).

The Bishops of Norwich had lands in Lambourne till the Reformation, when they came into the hands of Chancellor Audeley, who had license, 2 April 1538, to alienate them to

William Hale: and the latter obtained license, 12 February 1555, to alienate them again to William Porter, and others (r).

BISHOP'S-HALL was the house appertaining to this estate; about half a mile south-west from the Church. It was lately the seat of — Thomas Walker Esq; Surveyor general to his Majesty; upon whose decease 22 Octob. 1748, it came to his nephew — Stephen Skynner Esq; and belongs now to Mr. Skynner's heirs.

HUNTS, AFFEBRIDGE, and ARNEWAYS, are other estates in this parish; which, according to order time as here set down occur in records by the name of Maners.

Hunts took its name from John Hunt, and his partners, who held half a fee in Lamborne, under John, and Thomas, de Vere, Earls of Oxford, in the years 1358, and 1370 (s).

Affeburge, Affebridge, or Abridge, a hamlet and maner in this parish, had its appellation from the Bridge there over the river Rodon. Either this estate, or some lands adjoyning, were given to the Knights-Hospitallers by Peter de Valoines and William de Bois [R]. In 1358, John de Affebregge held 1 messuage, and 60 acres of arable in Affebregge, of the Earl of Hertford (t).

Arneways was so named from Adam Arneway, who, jointly with the Bishop of Norwich, and Joane Pellican, held half a fee here, under the Earls of Oxford, about the reign of K. Henry VI. But the Earls had a parcel of it in demesne within their maner of Stapleford-Abbot (u).

Sir William Fitz-William, mentioned above, p. 51, held 1 messuage, 250 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 100 of wood, and 18 s. 6 d. rent in Arnways, Lamborne, Laxdens in Lamborne, and Awbrigg, &c. of the Countess of Salisbury: And of the Countess of Oxford, 3 messuages, 6 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 200 of pasture, and 20 of wood, in this parish, Stapilford-Abbots, and Navestock. His son and heir — William Fitz-William Esq; succeeded him, on his decease 9 August 1536 (w).

Richard Morgan, and Thomas Carpenter, held, the maner of Lamborne and Affebridge, in 1552 (x).

Robert Taverner Esq; held the maner, or capital messuage, of Arneways, with all its rights and appertenances; and lands and tenements called Arneways, Piggs, Hunts, and Lepryson-house; and 60 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 24 of pasture, 6 of wood, and 40 s. rent, in this parish, Stapleford-Abbot, and Navestock, of Richard Lord Riche, as of his maner of Rayleigh, in fealty: Also, the maners of Lamborne and Affebridge, and 20 acres of pasture, and 60 of wood; with 4 acres in Rey-mead, and 1 rood in Affebridge-mead; and the Advowson of this Rectory, of the Queen, as of the maner of East-Greenwich, by fealty only, in free socage. He dyed 30 April 1556, leaving — Thomas, his son, then only 14 weeks old (y). At the time of his decease, 7 June 1610, he held Arneways, with all lands, tenements, and hereditaments thereto belonging; but not Affebridge, nor the Advowson of the Church. — Thomas was his son (z).

As to the maners of Lamborne and Affebridge, they were then in Sir Robert Wrotbe, who dyed possessed of them 27 January 1605 (a). [See under Loughton.] And afterwards were in the Peacock family.

Arneways belonged, in K. Charles Ist's reign, to Robert Draper Esq; who had considerable estates at Crayford in Kent &c. and departing this life 8 July 1635, was succeeded by his son — Robert (b).

This estate of Arneways, now called Arnolds, lately was in Mr. John Todd of Waltham-Stow. He gave a moiety of it to Mr. William Church, who married his daughter. And their daughter and heir being married to

Mr. Peter Searle, brought it to him. Mr. Searle sold it to

Thomas Scott of Woolston hall Esq; and it is now in his son — George Scott, Esq;

The mansion house of Arnolds is a large old timber building, a mile and a half north-east from the Church, beyond Abridge.

LAMBORNE ABRIDGE, alias St. JOHNS, is mentioned as another Maner in this parish.

It belonged in 1637 to Francis Peacocke Esq; From this Family it came into that of Scott of Chigwell; and William Scott Esq; gave it in marriage, with his daughter Anne, to the Rev. Dr. Derham, of Upminster. It is now only a small Farm, and not reckoned a Maner.

DEUX-HALL, is otherwise written in records Dagew-hall, Daweshall, Deux-hall, Dewxhall.

The first mention we find of this estate by that name, was in 1505. Reginald Bysmere who dyed 15 August 1505, held this maner of Daweshall, of Edward Duke of Buckingham, as of his Hundred of Ongar, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. per annum called Ward-silver, and doing the said Duke white service at the Wardstaff in Ongar Hundred. — William was his son and heir. [See above, p. 86.]

Sir William Sulyard held the same in 1539, then described as 400 acres of arable and pasture, 12 of meadow, and 20 of wood; holden of the King, as of the Ward Staff, by fealty, and rent of 8 d. $\frac{1}{2}$ per ann. (c). [See above, p. 140.] In the year 1621 it was in the Family of Palmer, as appears from an epitaph in Epping Church, for Tho. Palmer Esq; son of Henry Palmer of Dews-Hall in Lamborn, buried in May 1621.

One of the Palmers sold it to Catlyn Thorowgood Esq; He was chief Factor to the South Sea Company at Vera Cruz and Porto-Bello, and served the office of Sheriff for this County in 1729. Upon his decease, 13 Novemb. 1732, it came to his son — Pate Thorowgood Esq; who sold it to Richard Lockwood Esq; an eminent Turkey-merchant; chosen member of Parliament for Hindon in 1713; for the city of London in 1722, and for Worcester in 1734. To the old brick building he made a considerable addition, and with a good deal of taste. The new part makes the grand front, and is very judiciously joined to the old House. This seat stands a little way south from the Church.

It belongs now to Richard Lockwood Esq; son of the foresaid Richard [S].

a mile and a half east from Abridge; by the name seems to have belonged to some Priory, but we do not find it ever did.

The earliest account of it we find, is, that it was part of the estate of Henry Earl of Suffex; who sold it, 18 September 1553, to

Robert Taverner, above-mentioned. At the time of his decease, 30 April 1556, he held this maner or tenement called Pryors, and 60 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and wood, of the Queen in ca. by knight's service, i. e. by the 20th. part of the 20th. part of a knight's fee. — Thomas was his son (d); whose son — Robert sold it, 18 Novemb. 1625, to

[T] There is an Epitaph in this Church for Robert Bromfield Gent. who was buried 21 May 1647; and for his three

Robert Draper, Esq; He dyed possessed of it 8 July 1635 (e). — William Draper sold it in 1641 to

Robert Bromfield, whose grandson — John gave it by will to his sister, — Elizabeth wife of Nicolas Staphurst, M. D. [T]. Their son, Nicolas Staphurst, heir to his mother Elizabeth, sold this estate 22 April 1713, to Dr. Tho. Tooke, Rector of this Parish.

Having no issue, he devised it by will, with Manuden-hall, to his brother, the Rev. — John Tooke, after his wife's decease. And the latter dying in 1764, was succeeded by his son, the Rev. — Robert Tooke.

Dr. Thomas Tooke, the purchaser of this estate, was descended from the ancient family of Tooke, or Tucke, of Bear, in East Kent. His father, Thomas, had the honor of presenting a Bible and Common-Prayer to K. Charles II. upon his landing at Dover: He was admitted in Bennet-College in Cambridge 12 October 1685, made Fellow 20 Novemb. 1690, commenced Doctor in Divinity in 1712. Above 30 years he was master of Bishop's Stortford-School, where by his honest application he became extremely useful in that most important station, and by his industry accumulated a considerable fortune. He dyed 24 May 1721, aged 54, and was buried in this Church, with a monument. His brother John, above-mentioned, married Sufanna, daughter of the Rev. Robert Taylor of Little Hallingbury, by whom he had several children. See in the other Volume, p. 516. [U].

The Luther family had formerly several parcels of land in this parish. See under Kelvedon-hatch.

John Boddicoat Esq; Mr. Samuel Huntley; Richard Holford; William England; Robert Gough; Thomas-Mansfield Musgrave; William Quarell, have also estates, or lands here.

In this parish are two Alms-houses, without endowment.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary and All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tyled. At the west end there is a leaded Spire, in which are 3 Bells. The edifice seems to be very ancient. For, the north Door is indented, and the pillars of the Tuscan order, as Margaret-Roding Church.

This Church was given by Robert de Lamburn to the Canons of Waltham Holy-Cross, and confirmed to them by William de S. Maria Bishop of London in 1218. We do not find it was appropriated to them, tho' such a design was formed; but continued a Rectory, in their gift till the dissolution of Monasteries (f). Then it came successively into the hands of Sir grandsons, John, interred 23 Janu. 1642. Thomas, 7 April 1644, and John 15 Decemb. 1687. These three last were sons of John, son of the foresaid Robert.

Of Nicolas Staphurst Dr. Tooke purchased the Advowson 17 October 1712, and gave it to Bennet or Corpus-Christi-College in Cambridge, of which he had been Fellow; they are to have the Patronage after fifty years from his death, the right of presenting for that term being reserved for his brother's Family. He dyed, as hath been already observed, 24 May 1721.

STAPLEFORD.

Here are two contiguous Parishes named Stapleford, one on the south side, and the other on the north side, of the river Rodon.

The name is derived from the Saxon ſtaple, or ſtapul, and ford; here being very probably piles or stepples at the Ford over the River, for the conveniency of foot-passengers.

22. STAPLEFORD-ABBOTS, is that on the south side of the River; and so called because it belonged to the Abbot and Convent of St. Edmunds-bury in Suffolk.

Upon what occasion it came to be given to that Abbey, is thus related.

The body of K. Edmund the Martyr being removed, in the year 1010, to London from Bedericheshworth, [afterwards St. Edmundsbury,] because the Danes infested those parts; three years after, when they were removing it back into Suffolk, the lord of this maner, who had a languishing Illness, hospitably received it into his house; and being for this charitable deed wonderfully recovered, he, out of gratitude, gave this maner to the foresaid Abbey where St. Edmund's body rested (g). Such is the legendary account.

In this parish are three Maners. 1. Stapleford-hall. 2. . . . The maner of Batayles. 3. . . . that of Albins.

STAPLEFORD-HALL.

The mansion house of this capital Maner, stands a little way south from the Church.

As it had belonged before the Conquest to St. Edmunds-bury, so it continued in it at the time of the Survey [W]. And they had the privilege here, and at Harlow, of being exempt from the regards of the Forest [X].

Upon the dissolution of Monasteries, this maner was granted, in 1540, to John Maynard; and, 28 February the same year, he had license to alienate it to Brian Tuke, which was not executed, but a fresh grant made to John Maynard. He had the Advowson of the Church with it, and Hamans grove, paying 400l. 16 s. 4 d. (b).

This estate reverted again to the Crown, and hath continued in it ever since: for which reason it is styled sometimes Stapleford-Regis. Grace, Lady Carteret and Countess of Granville, held it, by lease or grant from the Crown, till her decease 18 October 1744; and it is now in her son — the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Granville.

Batails-hall, the maner house, stands about a quarter of a mile west from the Church.

It took its name from the ancient family of Batailes, who enjoyed it as early as the reign of K. Henry II.

Five Freemen were possessed of it in the Saxons time; but at the time of the Survey it was part of the large estates of Robert Gernon [Y]: fully mentioned above, and in the other Volume, p. 576. — William, his son, dropped the surname of Gernon, and took that of Montfichet. Under him Richard Battaile held two fees, in 1165 (i). His son Will. de Bataile, gave and confirmed all the Tythes of his lordship of Stapleford to the Priory of the Holy Trinity in London, except an acre of wheat, and an acre of oats, which antiently were divided between the Churches of Stapleford and Lamburn. Also he gave, and confirmed, to them, the Tythes of his assart lands in these parishes for the health of his soul &c. And this grant he made, by laying down a gold Ring on the Altar of the said Church of the Holy Trinity. He calls it his gift, though he owns the same was granted by Harvey Bataile, his great grandfather. This Deed had a Seal of green wax, and a large Bird upon it, with wings expanded (k).

—Simon de Bataile was succeeded by his son — Sir Richard de Bataile, who married Catharine, daughter and heir of Sir Andrew le Blund, lord of Tendring maner, by whom he had two daughters his coheirs.

Margery, one of them, was married to Sir William de Sutton, and brought him this estate, and Wivenhoo &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.] He held these estates, in 1302, of Giles de Plaiz, a descendent of the said William de Montfichet [Z]. And his son — Sir John de Sutton held 3 fees and 3 quarters in Stapelford and Navefcote, Wyvenhoo, and Donilond, of Richard de Plaiz, who dyed in 1273 (l). He, or his son — Sir John de Sutton, held the same, in Stapelford, and Navistock, under Sir John de Plaiz, in 1360 (m). And, at the time of his decease in 1393, held them of Sir John Howard, who had married Margaret sole daughter and heir of the last Sir John de Plaiz. His brother, — Sir Richard de Sutton dyed possessed of them in 1395, leaving his son and heir — Thomas de Sutton (n). He dying without issue,

Margery, daughter of the last Sir John de Sutton inherited his estates. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.] She was the wife of John Walton Esq; and had by him — John Walton Esq; father of Richard, and Joane. — Richard held the maner of Stapelford called Batayles, of Sir John Howard by the service of one knight's fee; and dying in 1408, 10 Hen. IV. was succeeded by his sister

Joane, then wife of Sir John Howard junr. eldest son of Sir John Howard above-mentioned by Margaret heiress of the Plaiz family (o). He dyed 13 Decemb. 1424, leaving Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, 14 years old; who was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 12th. Earl of Oxford (p). He being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to K. Kenry VI. this maner underwent, no doubt, the fate of the other estates of this noble Family. But it was restored to his grandson — John, the 13th. Earl of Oxford, who dyed possessed of the maner of Battleshall, 10 March 1512; and — John, the 14th. Earl, 14 July 1526; both holding it of the Abot of St Ofith (q).

Tradition makes this maner to have been afterwards in the family of Smith: And it is probable, because Thomas Smith, Gent. presented to the Living in 1557, for that one turn (r).

As lord of Battail's-hall, he might have a turn granted him from the Crown. One Philip Smith Esq; is put down by Mr. Holman as holding his first court at Battails-Hall, in 1583.

Anne Waller, who dyed in 1590, held two parts of the maner of Battleshall, by which we suppose is meant this, of the Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaster. She dyed without heirs, and so it escheated to the Crown (s).

In 1612, this estate was possessed by Richard Wiseman Esq; for Clement Stoner held then of him several parcels of land in this parish (t).

Carew-Hervey Mildmay Esq; of Marks is the present owner of Bataills-hall. [See above, p. 68.]

lies partly in this parish, and partly in that of Navefcote; the mansion house is in Stapelford, about half a mile north from the Church, in the middle of a small Park.

This maner and estate was made part of the endowment of a Chantry founded in Wivenhoo Church, in 1413, by Robert Newport, John Tyrell, Ralph Chamberleyn, and others; who had license to endow it with one messuage, 240 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 26 of pasture, 4 of wood, and 26 s. 8 d. rent, in Wivenhoo, Stapelford-Abbots, Navefcote, and Lamburn; of which, the messuage and 80 acres were holden of the maner of Navefcote; 5 acres of the meadow, of Sir John Howard as parcel of the maner of Stapelford, which whole maner was held of him; and 20 acres, of Isabell, widow of Tho: Lampet, as of the maner of Lamburn, by the service of a pair of spurs or 6 d. (u). [See in the other Volume, p. 189.]

Upon the suppression of Chantries, K. Henry VIII. by Indenture dated 6 December 1545, lett the revenues of this maner called Albins, lying and being in the parishes and fields of Navefcote and Stapulforthe Abbot, with all buildings, houses, lands, meadows, &c. thereto belonging, to William Luter, for 21 years, at the rent of 15 l. 9 s. per ann. — The 22d. of June 1552, it was ordered to be lett to John Smithe for 21 years (w).

But, in 1548, K. Edward VI. had made a grant of the two Chantries in Wivenhoo, and of the maner of Albins in particular, with appertenances, to Walter Cely, and his heirs; to hold by the 40th. part of a knight's fee (x). His son — George Celye, Gent. levied a fine, in Trinity term 1569, of the premisses, and conveyed them to George Wiseman Gent. and Mary his wife.

In Michaelmas Term, the same year, a fine was levied for the conveyance of the maner of Albynes, with appertenances, in Stapleford-Abbot and Navestock, from Thomas Hale and Thomas Convers, or Combers, to Thomas Makyn and Richard Convers, or Combers; with 5 messuages, 240 acres of arable land, 40 of meadow, 140 of pasture, 10 of wood, 40 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent (y).

William Fitche Esq; who dyed 20 Decemb. 1578, held this maner of Albyns, with lands and tenements, of the Queen, in ca. by knight's service (z). [See in the other Volume, p. 446. 457. 462.]

Sir John Woode Kt. Clerk of the Signet, who dyed 5 Septemb. 1610, held the maner of Albyns; alias Albyons, with appertenances, and 3 messuages, 40 acres of arable, 20 of pasture, and 10 of wood, in this parish, and Navestocke, of the King, in capite, Lady Magdalen, wife of Sir Thomas Edmonds; Anne Woode, two of his daughters; and Tho. Clark Esq; his grandson, by Mary another of his daughters, were his heirs (a). Lady Magdalen Edmonds dyed 31 December 1614, possessed of this estate (b). Her husband Sir Thomas Edmonds enjoyed it by the courtesy of England (c), probably till his decease 20 Septemb. 1639. He was employed in several important Embassies and Negotiations, by Qu. Elizabeth, and K. James I. and constituted Treasurer of the Household. [See his Life in Biographia Britannica.]

They had one son, Sir Henry Edmonds, K. B. who dyed in 1635, without issue; and three daughters, Isabel, wife of Henry Lord Delawar; Mary, married to Robert Mildmay, grandfather of the late Benjamin Earl Fitz-Walter; and Louisa.

Of these coheiresses, Albins was purchased by Antony Abdy Esq;

This family was first seated at Kelvedon near Witham, in this County. [See the other Volume, p. 152.] Antony, second son of Roger Abdy, of London, merchant, was Alderman of that city, and one of the Sheriffs in 1630; and dyed in September 1640. By Abigail his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Cambell of London, merchant, he had several children, particularly three sons that were created Baronets; viz. Sir Thomas, of Fillol's-hall; Sir Robert, of Albins; and Sir John, of the More in Salcot-Verley, who left no issue.—Sir Robert, just now mentioned, the fourth son of Antony, was created a Baronet 9 June 1660, being the 477th. as his elder brother Sir Thomas was the 312th. Baronet. He married Catharine daughter of Sir John Gayer Kt. Alderman of London, by whom he had 7 sons, and 4 daughters; namely, John,

Robert, Charles, Edward, &c. Catharine; Mary; Sarah, wife of John Pennington Esq; Elizabeth. Their mother was buried here 25 Septemb. 1662, and Sir Robert their father in 1670. His eldest son and heir—Sir John Abdy Bart. succeeded him in title and estates. He married Jane, only daughter of George Nicholas Esq; youngest son of the truly loyal and faithful servant of the Crown, Sir Edward Nicholas Kt. Secretary of State to K. Charles I. and II. by whom he had Jane married to the Rev. Edw. Crank; another daughter, and one son. She being left a widow in the 25th. year of her age, was not more distinguished for her piety and charity, than for rejecting every offer of a second marriage from a real maternal affection for her children. Sir John and She both lie buried here in the Family vault. — Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. the son and heir, was a man of deep knowledge in Antiquity, and Natural History, a great connoisseur in Medals of which he had a fine collection; and, what is more valuable, a true Patriot, and a person of unshaken integrity, and remarkable humanity. All which qualities gained him such universal Love and Esteem, that he was elected one of the Knights of the Shire for this County in 1727, and continued to be chosen in all the succeeding Parliaments till his death, which happened 27 August 1748. He married Theodosia, only daughter and heir of George Bramston L.L. D. [A], by whom he had 4 children, Jane, who dyed young; John; Robert who departed this life in 1735, aged about 20; and Theodosia, married, 17 March 1752, to her cousin the Rev. Stotherd Abdy, Rector of Theydon Gernon, and Stapleford-Tany, but she dyed 20 Febru. 1758.—Sir John Abdy, Bart. his son and heir, was elected Knight of the Shire in his father's room, and again in 1754. He dyed 1 April 1759; and being unmarried, settled by will his estates on his aunt Mrs. Jane Crank during her life. And, after her decease, devised them to the posterity of his ancestor Antony Abdy Esq; namely to Sir Antony-Thomas Abdy, Bart. of Chobham in Surrey; and then to his brother the Rev. Stotherd Abdy. They are both married, but have no children. For want of their issue, the inheritance is to go to the son of the Rev. Thomas Rutherford D. D. Archdeacon of Essex, who has married a sister of Sir Antony-Thomas Abdy; though there is a younger Brother of the Abdy Family.

The mansion house of Albins is by some thought to have had Inigo Jones for its architect; but the Hon. Horace Walpole, in his Lives of the Painters, is of a contrary opinion. It was repaired by the last owner, Sir John Abdy, Bart. and very judiciously, he keeping in his repairs to the old taste in which it is built.

otherwise Knowle's-bill, a mile south-west from the Church, is a pleasant spot in this parish, where Henry Spencer Bishop of Norwich had a feat. One piece of ground, being a wood of 12 acres, is still called Bishop's-Moat, where is a moat, reported to have been paved with marble. Most of the lands belonging to this estate lie in Lamborn.

In Qu. Elizabeth's reign, it belonged to the Stonard family of Loughton.

Francis Stonard, who dyed 13 Septemb. 1604, and Lucy his wife, one of the daughters of Sir Clement Higham Chief Baron of the Exchequer, which dyed 14 Aug. 1596, are buried in the Chancel of this Church, with an epitaph. He held this messuage and 80 acres called Knolles-hill; also Forest-croft, of Richard Wiseman Esq; as of his maner of Battells-hall, in free socage; — Clement, his son and heir, born in 1558, succeeded him (d). Besides the above, he held in this parish, a messuage called Wrights alias Dallons, and 30 acres of land thereto belonging; and Shepherds croft: Two fields called Little Sawyers, and Little Stanes; two other fields called great and little Perry feilds, and Bushie croft; and Black croft, Sedwyne, the Mote, and Mote grove, Barne-feilds, and Wheelers-riden, all which last were parcel of Bishop's Mote, in Lamborn, and this parish; and holden of the King. He dyed 23 Septemb. 1612. leaving by Mabel his wife daughter of Roger Harlakenden. — Francis Stonard, or Stoner, his son and heir (e), who married Anne, or Jane, daughter of Edward Bacon of Codenham in Suffolk Esq; Amy their daughter and heir, was married to

George Waldron Esq; and carried the estate to him. He departed this life 2 Septemb. 1690. She dyed August 24, 1712, aged eighty six; her epitaph styles her the last surviving child of Francis Stonard of Knowles-Hill Esq;

They had a son, named George, who was a student in Christ's College in Cambridge, but was cut off by death 15 May 1681, at the age of 17 years and 9 months (f) [B].

Sir John Fortescue Aland, lord of the capital Maner in the neighbouring parish of Lamborn, having purchased this feat, made it the place of his residence: and by several improvements rendered it a delightful Place.

His Lordship founded a Free School here, near Bone-bridge, for teaching poor Children to read and write.

Mr. William Caldwell; and William Gregory, have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace and of equal width with the Chancel; tyled; but adjoining to this last is a north Chapel, called Abdy's, being the burial place of that Family.

It was granted, as an appendage of the Maner, to St. Edmund's-Bury Monastery, as above related; and the Rectory continued in their gift till the suppression, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. granted the Advowson to John Maynard, with the Maner in 1540; but it seems to have been only for a term of years: For it reverted to, and hath been in the gift of, the Crown, ever since the year 1560. This Rectory hath a Glebe of thirty acres.

Stapleford-Abbot is rated to the land-tax at 1134 l. os. 4d.

received its distinguishing appellation of Tany from a considerable Family, of that surname, who had estates at Latton, Chicknal-St-James, Elmested, and other parts of this County.

Godric was possessed, in Edward the Confessor's reign, of this Stapleford; which Suene of Essex, and his under-tenant Siric, held at the time of the Survey. And Robert, [most probably Gernon, who had an estate in the other Stapleford] held one hide here, given him by W. the Conqueror [C].

On account of its belonging to Suene Lord of Raley, it was holden afterwards of that Honor.

STAPLEFORD-TANY-HALL,

The mansion house of the capital maner in this Parish stands a little way south from the Church.

In the reign of K. Henry II. and Richard I. Richard Fitz-William held eight knights fees of the foresaid Honor (g); and this among the rest.

William Fitz-Richard, or son of Richard, held two carucates of land in Stapleford, in 1260 (b).

Margery,

Margery, his daughter and heir, was married to Sir Richard de Tany, and brought him this estate; which he held at the time of his decease in 1270, or 1271 (i). He was grandson to Sir Peter de Tany, Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire, for the last half of the year 1236, for 1237, 1238, and part of 1239: and son of John de Tany, who gave the maner of Theydon Bois to Waltham-Abbey, to which act this Sir Richard was a witness. Sir Richard himself was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1260, and part of 1261; constituted Keeper of the Peace within the same in 1263; and Governor of Hadley Castle, in 1268 (k). He obtained a license to empark his wood of Stapleford, within the Forest (l). Departing this life as above in 1271, he was succeeded by his son — Richard (m). At the time of his decease in 1296, he held this maner of the King, of the Honor of Reyle, by one knight's fee (n). — Roger, or Robert de Thany, his successor, held this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, of the said Honor, by the service of 2 knights fees. He dyed in 1301, and left — Laurence his son and heir (o), who dyed in 1317, possessed of this maner and advowson. He had no issue though he was married [D]: whereupon his sister

Margaret, inherited his estates (p). She was the wife of John de Drokensford; who, in her right, presented to this Living in 1321; and had free warren in all her lands in Essex. We find him possessed also of West-Horndon (q). — Thomas de Drokensford, or Trekenesford, their son, dyed in 1361, leaving Anne, his only daughter and heir then 4 years old (r). She was afterwards married to Thomas, son and heir of Sir Thomas Mandeville of Black-Notley. [See in the other Volume, p. 79. 123.] He presented to this living in 1370, and 1373, being then a knight (s). His son — Sir Thomas Mandeville, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Wauton, had Thomas, Joane, and Alice. — Thomas dyed, in August 1499, it seems, before his father [E]; under age and unmarried; and was succeeded, in this and other estates, by his two sisters and coheirs, Joane, and Alice (t).

Joane was married first to John Barry, and afterwards to William Pirton of Ipswich. They had 20 l. a year out of this maner of Stapleford; 35 s. 6 d. out of Eastwick maner, and the advowson of that Church; and the maner of Elmsted. Her issue by J. Barry was John, and Joane. John the son dying without issue, Joane inherited, and was married to a Lombard named Frankanel, who had by her Raphael and Daniel. Raphael, after his father's death, would have entered upon the maner of Stapleford; but Clement Spice, great grandson of Alice Mandeville, filed a bill in Chancery against him, wherein all this is recited (u).

Alice Mandeville, the other sister and coheir, had this maner of Stapleford, with the advowson of the Church; and the maners of Bromfield, Chatham-hall in Great Waltham, and Eastwick in Hertfordshire. Her first husband was Helmingius, or Elmyn, Legat, otherwise Legat, Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1401 and 1408, by whom she had a son, Thomas, of whom we have no further account, than that he was 18 years old at the time of her decease. [See in the other Volume, p. 75. 123.] Her second husband was Richard Spice, by whom she had a son named Roger. She dyed in 1420 (w). — Roger Spice, her son, presented to this living from 1431 to 1452. He dyed 11 March 1459, and lyes buried in Black-Notley Church [F]. — Clement Spice, his son and heir, sold this maner, and the advowson of the Church, to William Scott Esq; By a deed of feoffment dated 18 May 1485, George Nevill Lord Bergavenny, Thomas Lord Ormond, Alured Cornburgh Esq; Robert Fenne, Gent. &c. delivered and confirmed to William Scott senr. and Margery his wife during their lives, and to the longest liver of them, this maner of Stapleford Tany, without impeachment of waste; and, after their decease, to their eldest son John Scott sen. and his heirs male; if he dyed without any, then to his next brother William; and if he did not leave any, then upon the same condition to the four other brothers, Edward, John the younger, George, and Hugh: remainder to Joane, wife of Robert Fenne, and Elizabeth Scott, daughters of the said William Scott sen. And if they should dye without issue of their bodies, then to the right heirs of the said William Scott the elder (x). This William, the purchaser of this estate, dyed 3 November 1491, and Margery his wife 14 Octob. 1505, and are buried in this Church, with an epitaph. His successors in this estate, were — John Scott sen. Esq; — Thomas, his second son. — Walter, who dyed 25 October 1550. — Roger, his son, 9 Septemb. 1586.

[F] Having perused some papers relating to this Family, I am thereby enabled to correct some mistakes in the other Volume, p. 123, col. 2. It was Richard Spice that married Alice widow of Elmyn Legat. The time of his death is not mentioned in records. — Roger Spice, their son, dyed 11 March 1459, leaving — Clement Spice his son, who dyed in 1483.

—George eldest son of Roger; departed this life 3 February 1588, aged 29 years, leaving only two daughters coheirs, very young; Elizabeth, and Mary. [For a more particular account of the ancient Family of Scott, see above under Chigwell, p. 168.]

Elizabeth, the eldest of these two daughters, brought this estate in marriage to her husband, Sir Edward Alleyn, of Hatfeild Priory; with Ovesham-hall in Matching, and Little Lees-hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 99. 132.] He was High-Sheriff of this County in 1629, and 24 June the same year created a Baronet. By his said wife Elizabeth he had issue Edmund; George; Robert; John, and Dororhea, which two last dyed unmarried, and two daughters more, Martha, wife of the Rev. Joshua Blower, and Mary of Robert Clive Esq; Sir Edward dyed in November 1638. His eldest son Edmund dyed before him, viz. 28 February 1633, leaving by Mary, daughter of Nicolas Miller of Wrotham in Kent Esq; a son, Edmund, one year and two months old; and a daughter named Elizabeth, married first to John Robinson, of Denston-hall in Suffolk Esq; afterwards to Sir William Jones, Kt. Attorney-general to K. Charles II.—Sir Edmund Alleyn succeeded his grandfather in title and estate; and married Frances, only daughter and heir of Thomas Gent of Moynes in Steple-Bumpsted Esq; He had by her Edmund; and two daughters, Frances; and Arabella, which last was born 5 November 1655. Sir Edmund dyed 2 Novemb. 1656, and his Lady 15 January 1657. Their son Edmund, and daughter Frances, dyed young; so that Arabella became the sole and a very considerable heiress. She was married first to Francis Thompson of Hambleton in Yorkshire Esq; and had by him, William Thompson Esq; Her second husband was the Hon. Lord George Howard, eldest son of Henry Duke of Norfolk, by Jane Bickerton his second wife. [See in the other Volume, p. 132.] This Arabella dyed 9 July 1746; but, thirty years before, namely in 1716, she had sold this estate to seems to have been so named from its situation in the southern part of this parish. The mansion house stands about a mile south south-east from the Church, near Piffingford-bridge.

Sir Edward Smyth, of Hill-Hall, Bart. from whom it hath descended to his grandson — Sir Charles Smyth Bart.

The Maner of SUTTONS,

This maner seems to have been taken from the capital one of Stapleford-hall. We find no mention of it till about the year 1474, when Constance, widow of Sir John Stafford, late Earl of Wiltshire, is recorded to have held the maner of Suttons of Clement Spice, as of his maner of Stapleford Tany. Edward Earl of Wiltshire was her son and heir (y) [G]. It was afterwards in the Luther family.

John Luther, who dyed in 1567, is styled of Stapleforth Tawney, but he doth not appear to have had any estates here: what he possessed then lying in Stanford-Rivers, North-Weald, Lamborne, Stapleford-Abbot, Little Laver, and in Waltham Holy Cross. His son—Richard Luther, of this parish Gent. dyed 5 May 1619, and is buried here, with an Epitaph.—John Luther alias Hewitt, of Suttons, married Jane, daughter of . . . Winterflood, and had by her — Thomas Luther, that married Catharine, third daughter of Robert Bourne of Blake-Hall in Bobbingworth. They both lie buried here, with epitaphs. He dyed 27 Janu. 1648, aged 86: She 20 August 1639. They had one son named Thomas; and 3 daughters, Catharine, Mary, and Anne. The son—Thomas Luther Esq; dyed 1 March 1694, aged 67; and Ann his Wife 2 Febru. 1682. She was daughter and heir of Luke Jackson of London. They had 5 sons, and 6 daughters. John, the eldest son, born 10 March 1662; Bourne, Thomas, Robert, and another Thomas, which four last dyed young. Five of the daughters also dyed young, and Anne, married to William Grosvenor of London, merchant, dyed 30 Janua. 1717-18, aged 66 years.—John Luther Esq; the eldest son and heir, married Jane Luther, of Miles's, by whom he had six or seven sons, and three daughters, most of which dyed young. Jane, the mother, dyed 26 September 1745. Only one of her sons, and one daughter, arrived to any age.—Thomas Luther Esq; the son, being unmarried, and dying before his mother, settled this estate on her during her life, and, after her decease, on his sister Rebecca, and her heirs. She was married to Florian Goebell of Waltham-Stow Esq; now deceased. Out of a numerous family, he left only one son,—John Goebell Esq; still single; and a daughter, Rebecca, wife of Mr. John Voguell, Sugar-baker in London.

This estate was annexed, 15 April 1553, to the Dutchy of Lancaster.

Mr. John Wood; John Laundry; James Collop; &c. have also some lands in this parish.

It is rated to the land-tax at 868 l. o s. 6 d.

On Stapleford Common are 2 or 3 dwellings for poor people, but without endowment.

24. N A V E S T O C K.

The name of this Parish is otherwise written in records Nafestoca, Nassestoka, Nefsetochus, and Nasingstoke, or Nastoke; which name seems to be derived from the Saxon words Næpīg, or Napis; or, if the true and original name was Nasing, then it had the addition of stock, or stoke, to distinguish it from the other Nasing. Stocce, denotes remains of felled timber. See the other Volume, p. 51.

K. Eadgar gave an estate in this parish to the Cathedral of St. Paul's in London [H]. The authenticity of this grant is questioned by Mr. Newcourt (b), on account of the erroneousfness of the date, and Odo, Archbishop of Canterbury's being set down as a witness. But as that Archbishop did not dye, according to the best authors (c), till 958, the year after K. Eadgar's accession to the throne (d), it is neither impossible nor improbable that he should be one of the Witnesses to the King's Grant.

However, certain it is, that St. Paul's had lands in this Parish before the Conquest. They had been taken away and detained from it; but William the Conqueror restored them to the Church on his Coronation-day: Exempting them, as they were before, from all tribute and taxes, except the three usual ones, for military expeditions, and for building and repairing castles, and bridges (e).

The persons that possessed or detained them, were, Two Freemen, Houard, and Hulci, who held part of the Parish, for two Maners and five hides; Turstin Ruffus held another part for one Maner, one hide, and 40 acres; Seven Freemen held two hides; and one Priest held half a hide: At the time of the general Survey they all belonged to the Canons of St. Paul's [I].

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Stapleford-Tany-Hall (a): and is now in the gift of Sir Charles Smyth, Bart. It has a valuable Glebe of 116 acres.

In the time of K. Henry I. this Maner was taxed or rated for eight hides; paid to the Sheriff half a mark; to the bailiff of the Hundred 8 s. for Ward-penny 20 d. and for every master of a family that used husbandry one penny.

K. Edward II. granted to it, among other Maners of the Cathedral, this immunity or privilege, That the Purveyors should not take corn within its precincts for the King's household (f).

At the Reformation, K. Henry VIII. took this estate from the Church, under the form of an exchange, in the year 1544. What he gave in lieu of it, doth not appear. After having continued in the Crown till 1553, Qu. Mary I. granted not only the Maner of Navestocke, but also the Rectory, and the Advowson of the Vicarage, to Sir Edward Waldgrave, and his heirs; to hold in capite, by the 50th part of a knight's fee (g).

The very ancient Family of Waldegrave, derive their name from the German word Wald, power, authority, and gepera, now contracted into Grave, i. e. governor, still used in landgrave &c. qua. the Chief Governor.

They are said to have flourished in this Kingdom before the Conquest, and to have been originally seated in Northamptonshire, where they gave name to the parish of Waldegrave. John de Waldegrave, it is reported (b), lost his lands upon the Conqueror's invasion, but having an only daughter, and meeting with a name sake of his in William's service, that was come out of Germany; upon conferring together, they found they were related. And the German promised the other to obtain a restitution of his lands, and a pardon from the Conqueror, if he would give him his daughter in marriage. It was accordingly performed. The Pardon, and regrant of the lands, in old French, with K. William's Seal, remained in the possession of the lords of this Maner in the year 1612. John de Waldegrave was succeeded by—Warin, who married . . . Riston, and had by her—John, Sheriff of London in 1205. By his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Hastings, he had—Walter, that married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James Nevill.—Sir Richard, his son and heir, was one of the Knights of the Shire for the county of Lincoln in 1339. By Agnes Daubeney his wife he had—Sir Richard Waldegrave, who married Joane, daughter and heir of . . . Silvester of Bures-St. Mary's in Suffolk; and had with her the estate at Smalbridge, where his posterity remained seated for many generations. He was one of the knights that served in Parliament for that County in 1376, and in most of the Parliaments of K. Richard II. and Speaker of the House of Commons in 1382. His wife dyed 10 July 1397, and he himself 2 May 1401, and were both buried in Bures Church.—Sir Richard, his son and successor, departed this life in 1434; but his wife, Jane, daughter and heir of Thomas Montcheny of Edwardston, survived him till 1450.—Sir William, their son, by Joane daughter of William Doreward of Bocking Esq; had two sons, Richard who dyed in 1439, without issue; and — Thomas. This latter was in the battle of Towton, and knighted by K. Edward IV. the same day 29 March 1461. He married Elizabeth eldest daughter and coheir of Sir John Tray, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and departed this life in 1500, leaving three sons, William, EDWARD, and Richard.—William, the eldest son, of Smalbridge, departed this life, 30 January 1526. By Margery his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth of Codham hall in Wethersfield, he had — George, born in 1483, that had Wormingford among other estates. [See in the other Volume, p. 231.] William; and Antony, of Ferriers in Bures, from a younger branch of which sprung the Waldegraves of Ilford. George Waldegrave Esq; survived his father William but two years, departing this life in 1528; and left three sons, William, of Smalbridge; George, of Higham, or Hitcham, in Suffolk; and Edward, of Lawford, in this County. For a further account of the several Branches of this Family we shall beg leave to refer to the Peerages; and return to

EDWARD, second son of Sir Thomas Waldegrave above-mentioned, from whom is descended the noble Family seated at Navestock. He married Elizabeth, Isabell, or Mabell, daughter and coheir of John Cheney of Pindehoo in Devonshire, by whom he had John, and two daughters. Departing this life in 1506, he was succeeded by his son — John Waldegrave Esq; His wife was Lora, daughter of Sir John

Rocheſter, and ſiſter of Sir Robert Rocheſter. He dyed 6 October 1514, leaving three ſons, Edward, Robert, and John. The eldeſt ſon and heir—Edward Waldegrave Esq; had a grant of Borley-hall in this County, and of the maner and rectory of Weſt Haddon in Northamptonſhire. He was an officer in the houſhold of the Princeſs Mary, and incurred the diſpleaſure of K. Henry VIII. and was imprifoned in the Tower, for refuſing to forbid the celebration of the maſs in her houſehold, then at Copped-hall. But, upon her acceſſion to the Crown, ſhe rewarded him, by granting him the maners of Chewton in Somerſetſhire, and of Hever-Cobham in Kent. Moreover, ſhe conſtituted him Maſter of the Great Wardrobe, Lieutenant of Waltham Foreſt, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaſter, &c. Upon Qu. Mary's death, he was diveſted of his employments, and committed to the Tower, where he dyed 1 Septemb. 1561, aged 44 years [K]. By Frances his wife, daughter of Sir Edward Nevill, he had, Charles; Nicolas, ſeated at Borley: and 3 daughters, Mary, married to John Lord Petre; Catharine, to John Gawen of Devonſhire; and Magdalen to John Southcot, of Witham, Eſquires. His widow did not dye till 8 October 1599, in the 80th year of her age.—Charles Waldegrave Esq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was of Staining-hall in Norfolk, and of Chewton in Somerſetſhire: and having married Jeronyma daughter of Sir Henry Jerningham of Coffey-hall in Norfolk, Maſter of the Horſe to Qu. Mary I. left Edward; and two daughters, Frances, and Magdalen.—Edward Waldegrave Esq; the ſon and heir, received the honor of knighthood 19 July 1607. Upon the breaking out of the civil wars, though ſeventy years of age, he zealouſly engaged in the ſervice of K. Charles I. and ſo worthily behaved, that his Maſteſty conferred on him the dignity of a Baronet 1 Auguſt 1643. He continued ſteady in his loyalty to the laſt, although he loſt two of his ſons, and ſuffered in his eſtate to the value of 50,000l. We do not find the time of his death. By his Lady, Elianor, daughter of Sir Thomas Lovel of Harling in Norfolk, who dyed 12 Septemb. 1604, he had — Sir Henry Waldegrave, his ſon and heir. He was twice married; firſt, to Anne, daughter of Edward Paſton Esq; by whom he had 7 ſons and 4 daughters: ſecondly, to Catharine, daughter of Richard Bacon, Gent. and had by her 6 ſons and 6 daughters. He dyed 10 October 1658, aged 60. His eldeſt ſon and heir—Sir Charles Waldegrave Bart. by Helen daughter of Sir Francis Englefield of Berkeſhire, Bart. had two ſons, Henry, and Charles.—Sir Henry, the eldeſt ſon, was created Baron Waldegrave, of Chewton, 20 Janu. 1685. But on the Revolution withdrawing into France, he dyed at Paris in 1689. His Lady was Henrietta, natural daughter of K. James II. by Mrs. Arabella Churchill, ſiſter of John Duke of Marlborough, and by her, who dyed 3 April 1730, he had James; Henry, who dyed unmarried; and Arabella. — James Lord Waldegrave, the eldest son, was advanced to the titles of Viscount Chewton, and Earl Waldegrave 13 September 1729. His Lordship was appointed, 26 May 1727, Ambassador extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of Germany; and continued in the same honorable station to the Court of France from 7 August 1730 to 1740. Departing this life 11 April 1741, he was buried in this Church. His Lordship married, in 1714, Mary second daughter of Sir John Webb of Hatherop in Gloucestershire Bart. by whom he had, James, born 14 March 1714-15. John born 17 January 1715-16, dyed the same day; John, born 28 April 1718, and Henrietta. — James Earl Waldegrave, the eldest son and successor, was appointed in 1752, Governor to his most excellent Majesty: but dyed of the small pox 8 April 1763. Leaving only two daughters, by his Lady, Maria, second daughter of Sir Edward Walpole K. B. he was succeeded in titles and estates by his brother the Rt. Hon. — John Earl Waldegrave. He is married to Lady Elizabeth, fifth daughter of John Earl Gower, by whom he hath several children. For a more particular account of this noble Family we beg leave to refer to the Peerages.

Navestock-hall stands a little way north from the Church.

From this capital Maner of Navestock have arisen some subordinate ones, called Boys-hall, Loft-hall, and Slades.

BOYS-HALL, stands a mile east from the Church.

The first mention we find of this maner was in the reign of K. Henry VII.

Andrew Prior, who dyed 1 June 1507, held this maner called Boys with appertenances, of the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's London, as of their Prebend of Navistock, by fealty and yearly rent of 17s. — John was his son and heir aged 14 years (i). See under Kelvedon-hatch; and under Roding Morell, in the other Volume, p. 471.

John Prest Esq; at the time of his decease 30 August 1546, held the maners of Boyse, and Miles, and 4 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of wood, and 100s. rent in Navestocke, Kelwedon, Chepyng and High Onger, and Stanford Rivers, of the King, as of his maner or Prebend of Navestocke, parcel of the Deanery of St. Paul's Cathedral. — Frances was his daughter and heir, then 4 years old (k).

In Michaelmas term 1564, William Bradbourne, and Frances his wife, I presume daughter of Prest, levied a fine of both these Maners, to William Tuffer, and Charles Belfield. And in 1565, Tuffer and Belfield, conveyed by Indenture the maner of Boys-hall to John Greene Esq; He was descended from the ancient family of the *Greene*s, of Green's Norton in Northamptonshire. — Thomas, his son and heir, had, several children, among the rest John, and Robert [L]. — John Greene Esq; the eldest son, was one of the Judges of the Sheriff's Court in London 37 years, and created Serjeant at law 19 May 1640. He dyed 17 May 1653, aged 74; and Anne his wife, daughter of James Blanchard, 21 July 1641. They had two sons, John, and James; and four daughters.

— John Greene Esq; the eldest son, educated at St. John's College Cambridge, and of Lincoln's-inn, was chosen Recorder of London in March 1658-9, and dyed in the November following. By Mary his wife, daughter of Philip Jermin Esq; one of the Justices of the King's Bench, he had his son — John Greene Esq; born 6 March 1643, who was created Serjeant at law 1 October 1700, and dyed 12 December 1725, aged 81. — John Greene Esq; his son and heir, was educated at St. John's College in Cambridge, as his great, great grand-father, and the rest of his ancestors, had been, and was also of Lincoln's-inn. He dyed 14 Jan. 1752; leaving his estate to his Kinsman Maurice Greene, Doctor of Musick [M].

is called another Maner in this parish.

John Sedley, who dyed 12 August 1581, held it of Frances Pawlett, widow, as of her maner of Navestocke, in socage, by fealty and rent of 20s. per annum. Also 2 messuages, and 2 granaries, 2 gardens, 60 acres of arable, 36 of pasture, and 20 acr. of furze and heath, in this parish, by the yearly rent of 17s. — William Sedley was his son and heir (l). It was purchased, in 1654, of Sir William Sedley Bart. of Northfleet in Kent, by John Greene Esq; and hath passed as the former to the Rt. Honorable Earl Waldegrave.

is also styled a Maner in this parish.

The earliest account we have of it, is in 1525. Henry Torrell Esq; who dyed 7 January 1525, held it of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, as of their maner of Navestocke. And — Humfrey, his son, held it at the time of his decease 12 Septemb: 1544, of the King, in whose hands the maner of Navelstock then was. He left one daughter — Anne (m). [See above, p. 92. and in the other Volume, p. 478.]

It belonged afterwards to the Howland family of Stone-hall in Little Canfield: [See in the other Volume, p. 464.] and now to the Right Hon. Earl Waldegrave, who has the best and chief part of this parish.

This Estate consists of two farms, but is not at present reckoned a Maner.

Mr. William Bowyer; Henry Mott; John Clark; William Pinckney; Thomas Livingstone; George Hills; John Morris; George Rumbold, &c. have also some lands here.

Donations.

In 1365, John Barnet, bishop of Bath and Wells, who had been a Canon residentiary of St. Paul's, and Archdeacon of London, granted to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, a water-mill, 76 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 9 of pasture, 8 of wood, and 43s. rent in this parish; for finding a Lamp to burn every night before the image of the Virgin Mary in that Cathedral, &c. (n).

John Greene, citizen and grocer of London, seventh son of Robert Greene of this parish, who dyed unmarried 3 September 1625, bequeathed by will to the Poor of this parish for ever, certain copyhold lands and tenements held of the maner of Navelstock; and seventy pounds in money, to be employed to buy freehold lands for the further relief of the said poor for ever: He also devised the surplus of his estate, after the payment of his debts &c. to be divided amongst the poor of this parish, at the discretion of his executors (o).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Thomas, is pretty large, and consists of a body and a south aisle. The Belfrey is of timber, with a wooden spire.

The great Tithes of this parish were appropriated to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and a Vicarage was instituted, which continued in their collation till 1544, when K. Henry VIII. took both Maner and Church from St. Paul's. Qu. Mary granted them both to Sir Edward Waldegrave in 1553, as we have seen above.

However, the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction remained in the Dean and Chapter, who are Ordinaries of this place, and give institution and induction to the Vicarage.

John Barnet, Bishop of Bath and Wells above-mentioned, granted to the Vicar of this Church, and to his successors, nine acres of arable land, two acres and one rood of meadow, and 12d. yearly rent, in this parish.

John Furman, Vicar, dyed 26 August 1512.

This Rectory, and the Advowson of the Vicarage, were given, with other Possessions, to the President, Fellows and Scholars, of Trinity College Oxford, by their Founder Sir Thomas Pope, in December 1555. Newcourt recites part of an Instrument, by which it may seem that Sir Edward Waldegrave gave the premises to the College (p). The truth is, as we are informed by one of the Fellows of that College, their Founder, purchased, or acquired by exchange the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, of the said Sir Edward, granting him at the same time a commission to convey them to the College: And hence arose this Appearance of a Donation to the College from Sir Edward Waldegrave. In a Schedule of the Maners, Lands, &c. settled on the said College by the Founder, and signed by Him, this Rectory and Advowson are recited as parcel of his Endowment: and his original Grant of the same now remains in the College. Some years ago the Vicarage was amply endowed by the College on these Conditions: The Vicar, for the time being, is the Lessee for the Great Tythes, paying to the College a small Quit-rent, and a fine certain of 60l. per annum. The first Presentation made by the College to the Vicarage is dated 8 May 1556, in their founder's life-time, when they presented William Bishop, upon Richard Gosteloo's resignation. After him no Presentation occurs in their Register, although they certainly presented, till August in the year 1615, when, Robert Avis B. D. Fellow was presented on the death of John Wood who was admitted Fellow in 1581. Afterwards to the Restoration, they presented, Richard Combes, M. A.	3 Novemb. 1619,	upon Avis's	d. . . .	} Trinity-College, Oxon.

Richard Brooke, B. D.	10 June 1628,	upon Combes's	d. . . .

John Pettifer, M. A.	3 Septemb. 1660,	on the resignation or removal of Malachi Harris, who was never Fellow, and had undoubtedly been put in during the times of confusion [N].

Other Vicars since. — Samuel Lord. — Bayly. — Ball. — Chapman, D. D. Dec. 1763.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1703 l. 3s. 0d.

On Navelstock Common there is an old Entrenchment; and near it runs a high bank with a ditch on each side.

25. KELVEDON-HATCH.

There are two Parishes named Kelvedon in the County of Essex.

This, we are now entering upon, has the addition of Hatch, i. e. a low Gate towards the Forest; to distinguish it from the other Kelvedon or Easterford, in the Hundred of Witham. For the derivation of the name we beg leave to refer to the other Volume, p. 150.

In the Saxons time, the lands in this parish belonged to Ailric; Algar, a freeman; and Leueua. After the Conquest, St. Peter's at Westminster held one maner and two hides here; Odo bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Herbert's nephew, half a hide and 20 acres; and Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Ralph, one hide, and 45 acres, and one maner [O].

These lands were divided afterwards into the two Maners, 1. . . of Germins, or Jermayns; 2. . . of Miles's.

Ailric, or Agelric, gave his part of the Parish to St. Peter's; which grant was confirmed by Edward the Confessor (q).

The Abbot and Monks continued Lords paramount of this Maner till after the year 1532.

As far as we can find, either part of it, or the whole, was what bore afterwards the name of

The Maner of GERMINS, or JERMAYNS.

The Rectory was appendent to this Maner; and by the Presentations we can trace out the owners of the estate. Now, the Advowson in 1372 was in Sir Roger de Kirketon, and others.

John de Hagb; Thomas de Hagb; Richard Haw; and John Haw; Esquires, presented from 1383 to 1457.

Next the Bollis, Bolles, or Bowle, family from 1464 to 1511.

John Wright, Gent. presented in 1547 (r), and his descendents enjoy the estate to this day.

Richard Bolles Esq; who dyed 15 June 1521, held this maner of Kelwedon of the Abbot of St. Peter's Westminster, by fealty. So did his son—John Bolles Esq; who dyed 9 February 1532, leaving—Richard his son and heir, 24 years old (s).

About 1444, Henry Chadirton, held a maner called Germaynes, and certain lands and tenements in Keluedon and Navestoke, of Richard Hawe, by the rent of 6 d.—Henry Chadirton was his son and heir (t).

Henry Torrell Esq; mentioned under the foregoing parish of Navestock, held, in 1524, this maner of Germins with appertenances in Kellowdon, of John Bolles Esq; as of his maner of Kellowden. His son—Humfrey Torrell Esq; at the time of his decease 12 Septemb. 1544, held the same of John Wright Esq; as of his maner of Kellowdon-Hatch (u). So that the Wright Family became possessed of the capital maner in this parish between the years 1524 and 1544.

John Wright Esq; lies buried in this Church with an epitaph, together with Olive his wife. He dyed 5 October 1551. — John, his son, departed this life 10 October 1563. By his wife Joane . . . he had — John his son and heir, who held this maner of Kelvedon, with its rights members and appertenances, of Robert Lord Riche, as of the Wardstafte, by 8 d. rent per annum; and by the service of finding two men to watch with the Wardstafte, in lieu of all other services. He had also the maner of White Notley, and the Advowson of Upmynster Church &c. He dyed 25 May 1608, leaving—John Wright his son, aged 21 years (w); who married Anne one of the daughters of Sir Edward Suliard of Flemyngs in Runwell in this County; and had by her 3 sons and 4 daughters. She dyed in childbed 28 November 1617, and he himself 4 March 1661. — John Wright Esq; their eldest son and heir, departed this life 31 May 1656, aged 46; and Frances his wife, eldest daughter of Philip Waldegrave of Borley in this County Esq; 25 December 1658, in the 44th year of her age. They had two sons, John, and Philip; and one daughter, Frances. — John, the eldest son, married Philippa, daughter, of William Fitz-Williams of Glixby in Lincolnshire Esq; and had by her 5 sons, and 4 daughters. She dyed 16 May 1687, and he himself 2 October 1691 (x). — John Wright Esq; the eldest son and heir, by Eugenia his wife, daughter of Charles Trinder Esq; had — John his son and heir, who dyed 3 December 1751, leaving by Miss Smyth, alias Carrington, of Warwickshire, — John Wright Esq; the present possessor of this estate [P].

MILES'S,

another Maner in this parish, is supposed to be what belonged to Leueua in the Saxons time, and to Hamo Dapifer after the Conquest [2].

The mansion house stands about a mile north from the Church.

Of this Maner no mention occurs in records, at least by the present name, till the latter end of K. Henry the Seventh's reign. Then, Andrew Prior, who dyed 1 June 1507, is recorded to have held a maner called Milles with appertenances in Keledone, and the maner called Boys in Navistocke of the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's in London, as of their Prebend of Navistock, by fealty, and yearly rent of 17 s.—John was his son (y).

John Prest Esq; at the time of his decease, 30 August 1546, held the maners of Miles, and Boyse, with appertenances, and 4 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of wood, and 100 s. rent, in Kelwedon, Navestocke &c. He left only one daughter named — Frances (z). [See above, under Navestock, p. 182.]

Alice, wife of Robert Blackwall Esq; to whom she had been remarried after the death of her husband John Prest; held the maners of Miles and Boyse, and 300 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, in Keldon &c. of Sir Edward Waldgrave, as of his maner of Navestocke, by the rent of 17 s. She dyed 13 July 1561 [R], leaving—Frances Blackwall, her only daughter and heir, 20 years old (a). [See in the other Volume, p. 471.]

This estate was next in Richard, and Antony Luther, Esqres. who, as we learn from their epitaph, were 'so truely loveing brothers, that they lived neare fortie years joynt house-keepers together at Miles without anie accompt betwixt them.' They dyed in 1627.

The first time we find that Family mentioned in this County, is about the latter end of K. Henry VIIIth's reign, when William Luter [for so was the name then written] had a Lease from the Crown of the Maner of Albins [S] in Stapleford-Abbot. [See above, p. 176.]

They were first settled at Stapleford-Tawny. John Luter, of that parish, who dyed 10 January 1566, had estates in Stanford-Rivers, North-Weld, Lamborne, Stapleford-Abbot, Little Laver, and Waltham Holy-Cross [T].—Richard Luter, his son and heir was then 9 years old (b).—John Luther dyed 15 October 1611, possessed of a capital messuage, and divers estates in Stapleford-Abbots, Lamborne, Theydon-Mount, Fobbing, and Coringham. [See above, p. 180.]

Richard Luther was his brother and heir (c). This Richard dyed 8 February 1638-9. He is the first who is recorded to have been seized, in his demesne as of fee, of the Maner of Miles with appertenances, in Kelvedon-Hatche, Chipping and High-Onger, and Stanford-Rivers; and of the maner of Kemis, or Camoys-hall, in Morell Rothinge; and lands in Little Warley; and the maner of Westhedilthorpe, in Lincolnshire.—Antony, his son and heir, was then of full age (d). He had three wives, 1. Jane, eldest daughter of Gilbert Armstrong Esq; that dyed 8 January 1640. 2. Bridget, daughter of John Sadler of Wiltshire Esq; She dyed 28 Septemb. 1649. 3. Anne . . . who dyed 16 October 1680. By the two last he had no children; but by the first he had 5 sons, and 5 daughters. Gilbert, one of the sons dyed in 1664, aged 23 years, and Antony 28 Septemb. 1692. Their father departed this life in 1665, in the 77th year of his age, and was buried in this Church with an epitaph.—Thomas, his eldest son and heir, had—Richard; who by Mary daughter of Edward Meade of Berden had—Richard, that married Rebecca, daughter of Edward Ridge, Alderman of London.—Edward Luther Esq; his son and heir, was Sheriff of Essex in 1701, and married Sarah, daughter of Thomas D'autrey of Doddinghurst-Place Esq; by whom he had—Richard Luther Esq; still living, who upon the death of his uncle William Dawtrey Esq; without issue, had a great accession both of real and personal estates. By his wife, Charlotte, daughter of BRYCES is a good old house in this parish, above a mile South-east from the Church, near Navestock Common. It was built by, and took its name from, Thomas Bryce, citizen, and mercer of London, about 1498. He remained possessed of it till 1515, when he sold it to Sir John Allen, Alderman of London; who, in 1528, alienated it to John Catchmaid; and the latter assigned it to Edward Northey, Gent. Attorney at Law. About the year 1548, Northey conveyed it to Richard Pettus, of an ancient family in Norfolk; whose daughter, or granddaughter, Elizabeth, was married to Sir Francis Jones, Alderman of London, and Lord Mayor in 1620. His daughter Mary Jones was married to Ralph Pettus, son of William brother of Sir John Pettus, Bart. and brought him 6000 l. a large fortune in those days. Ralph being a great Royalist during the civil wars in the last century, and sequestered for 800 l. was obliged, for raising that sum, to mortgage this estate; which he could never redeem. It has been for some time in the Glascock family, concerning which see in the other Volume, p. 456. — Robert Glascock of this place, Gent. married Mary Hawker of Great Badow, by whom he had, Robert, and Anne. See under Bobbingworth.

John, and Willis, King; Rice Evans, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Waltham-Abbey had lands here called Pryors land; which, after the suppression, belonged to Philip Lentall, and John Ballard (e).

In 1356, John Peghbrigg had a Park in Kelvedon [W].

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, consists of a body and a south aisle the whole tyled.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the capital Maner of Kelvedon-Hatch; and in the gift of Sir Roger de Kirketon, and the other Patrons mentioned above; now of John Wright Esq; or his assigns [X].

26. STONDON, or STANDON, MARCI, was so named because it stands on a Stony, or gravelly, bill. And the addition of Marci, came from its ancient Lords the Mark, or Merks, Family; which had several estates hereabouts. For Serlo de Marcy held four fees belonging to the Honor and Castle of Aungre: and Ralph de Marcy two knights fees (g). They had also considerable estates in several other parts of this County [Y]. As for Maffy it is visibly a corruption from the word Marci.

This place is not mentioned in Domesday-book, and therefore was then included in some neighbouring Parish; none so likely as Ongar, to which the Mark family were tenants afterwards.

Here is only one Maner, that of STONDON-HALL, the mansion house of which stands a very little way north from the Church.

The ancientest owners of it after the Marks, were the Spigurnell family mentioned above, p. 148. under Bobbingworth.

Edmund Spigurnell, who dyed in 1295, held in Standon, of Ralph le Merk, by the service of three quarters of a knight's fee, 180 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, 20 of pasture, 4 l. 10 s. rent of assize, 16 acres of wood, with the works of the customary tenants. — John, his son and heir, held the same, of Ralph Merk, by the service of half a knight's fee, and departing this life in 1308 [Z], was succeeded by his son — Edmund (h). This last held in the maner of Staunden 2 parts of one messuage with a garden, 90 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 3 of pasture, 10 of wood, and 7 s. 1 d. rent. And this maner, with a member of it, namely a quarter of a knight's fee in Willingale Spain, in the tenure of two others, was holden of William de Bohun, by the service of three quarters of a knight's fee. He dyed in 1314. — John Spigurnell was his son (i). — Edmund

[Y] Namely at Aldham, Marks-Tay, Dunmow, High-Estre, Latton, Little Bardfield, Leyton, &c. See Inquis.

Spigurnell had held three fees in Standon, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex, who dyed in 1372 (k). But Spigurnell was dead before that [A].

By the marriage of Joane, an heiress, it came into a branch of the Gobyon family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 96, 361, that had considerable estates at Finchingsfield, Bardfeild, Great Lees, Laindon, East Tilbury, &c. This Joane, wife of William Gobyon, presented in her own right to this Living from 1369 to 1385. As did John, and William Gobyon, from 1391 to 1410 (l).

This estate was next in that rich man, Sir John Hende, Lord Mayor of London in 1391, and 1404; of whom see a more particular account in the other Volume, p. 155. He had two sons, both named John; to the younger of which he gave by will, in 1418, the maners of Staundon, Ramsfey, and Wrabnesh, and other lands, in Essex [B], when he should arrive to the age of 21 years. Sir John dyed 1 August 1418. Elizabeth, his widow, was remarried to Sir Ralph Boteler, afterwards created Lord Sudeley, who in her right presented to this living in 1433, during the younger John's minority. — This John, after coming of age, presented to this living from 1445 to 1461 (m). He dyed in 1464, without issue; and his elder brother John, who dyed in 1461, left only one daughter, Joane, heiress to the whole estate. She was married before 1462, the time of her grandmother's decease, to Walter Writell of Bobbingworth, Esq; who in her right presented to this living in 1470, and 1473. He dyed 18 April 1475, leaving two sons, William, who dyed young, and — John. This last departed this life 13 October 1485, leaving — John, his only child, but six weeks old (n). He was married very young to Etheldreda, daughter of his guardian Sir John Shaa, but dyed under age 28 July 1507, leaving one daughter — Julian, which survived him but a little while (o). [See in the other Volume, p. 156.]

By what means we cannot trace out, whether by gift or settlement, this estate appears next in the Belknapp family. Joane, one of the sisters of Sir Ralph Boteler above-mentioned, had been married to Hamon Belknapp Esq; who had by her — William, father of — Sir Edward Belknapp. [See in the other Volume, p. 470.] Sir Edward, at the time of his decease 26 March 1521, held this maner of Stondon, with appertenance; the maner of Maskalebury in White-Roding; and the third part of the maner of Blomsers in Great Easton. His heirs were, his sisters Anne, wife of Robert Wootton, of Boston Malherb; Mary, widow of Gerard Dannett, Esq; Alice, wife of William Shelley; and Antony Coke, son of Elizabeth, his third sister; for Alice was the youngest (p).

William Shelley seems to have had this estate; for he presented to the living in 1538 (q).

In 1604, K. James I. granted this maner of Stondon to John Carill (r).

We find it next in a branch of the Rich family, descended from Richard Rich, Sheriff of London in 1441, who had two sons, John, and Thomas, grandfather of Richard Lord Rich. . . . John Rich, the eldest son, dyed before his father, in July 1458. He left — John, his son and heir, citizen and mercer of London; whose son — Thomas, by Margaret his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Edward Shaa, had — Richard Rich of South-Weald. He married Rachel, daughter of Thomas Newborough of Berkley in Gloucestershire Esq; and left two sons, Edward of Horndon, and Sir Robert, Master in Chancery. — Edward Rich, Esq; the eldest son and heir, dyed in 1599; leaving, by Joan daughter and heir of Edward Sanders Esq; — Robert Rich, of Stondon Esq; who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Dutton Kt. and had by her — Nathanael his son and heir called Colonel Rich. He married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Sir Edmund Hamden of Buckinghamshire, Kt. secondly, Anne, daughter of Charles Earl of Ancram. By this last he had no issue; but by the first he had two sons, Nathanael, and Robert [C]. — Nathanael, the eldest son, married Mary daughter of Matthew Rudd of Little Badow, by whom he had several children. He was for some years Receiver general of the land-tax for this County. But, in 1706, an Act passed for enabling the Lord High-Treasurer to compound with him. Whereupon this estate being sold, it was purchased by third son of Robert the first Lord Rich; who was created a Baronet in 1675, with remainder, in case of failure of issue male, to this his kinsman and successor Robert. This Sir Robert, by Mary second daughter of his predecessor Sir Charles Rich, had Charles, who dyed without issue, and Robert, besides three other sons, and eight daughters. He dyed 1 Octob. 1699. Sir Robert Rich, Bart. his eldest surviving son, was one of the Grooms of the bed chamber to his late Majesty; served in several Parliaments; and has gone through various posts of the Army with great honor; is now senior Field-Marshal of his Majesty's forces; Colonel of the fourth regiment of Dragoons; and notwithstanding the great dangers of war is arrived to a good old age. STONDON.

He was Sheriff for this County in 1730, and departed this life 28 September 1748. By will he gave this maner and estate to William Taylor of Great Hadham Esq; [D].

Stondon-Place, the seat of the late John How Esq; is about half a mile south south-east from the Church.

Francis Taylor; John Aley; &c. have also lands in this parish.

And here are two Farms belonging to Chriff's College, and Emmanuel College, in Cambridge.

Mrs. Alice Thomlinson's benefaction extends to six, or eight poor Widows of Stondon, 5s. each, to buy them waistcoats. [See in the other Volume, p. 509.]

Mr. Giles, or Styles, citizen of London, gave the Poors land in this parish, lett for about 3 l. 10 s. per ann.

Here is also a house and land rented at 2 l. 10 s. od. a year, given to buy bell-ropes.

We find in Domesday-book a parcel of land, under Stondon, then called Plumtons, which Ralph Peverell held [E]. Gilbert Bacun, and Sabina his wife, held it, in 1286, of Dionysia de Montchenfy, as of her Barony of Anefty, by the name of Plimpton-hope (s).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. It hath a Spire, shingled, in which there are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been usually appendent to the Maner.

It hath the Tithes of Marks Maner in Rod-ing, where anciently stood a Chapel named Capella de Roothing Marci; which the Rectors of Stondon have sometimes been instituted to, with this Church. [See in the other Volume, p. 473.]

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 438l.

THIS Hundred is bounded on the North-west by Ongar Hundred; on the West by the Hundred of Chafford; on the North by Chelmsford Hundred; on the East by part of this last and the Hundred of Rochford; and on the South by the river Thames.

In its greatest extent from North to South it is about fifteen miles and a half long; and from East to West where widest about eleven miles, and a half. A point in the north-west stretches between Chafford and Chelmsford Hundreds, which is crossed by the great London road: And if this is taken into the measure, then it must be reckoned about seventeen miles long.

The name of this Hundred, besides Barstable, is otherwise written in records Barstaple, and in Domesday-book Berdestapla. From whence it is derived, is not easy to discover. As it was undoubtedly from the Saxon, we find such words in that language, as Bap, a boar, bape, bare, naked, and ƿapul, the foot of a pillar, ƿaple, a bearer, and supporter; or else possibly from the common word Stable, the latter part was taken. Some are for deriving it from Burgh, there being Burghsted, and Tillaburgh, within the bounds of the Hundred; and ƿtabol, according to them, signifies a mansion or settlement. But, upon the best grounds, it appears to have been taken from the place now called Barstable-Hall, in Langdon and Basildon; where, according to tradition, formerly stood a Town; and which being near the center of the Hundred, was then the most convenient place for holding Courts, and transacting all Affairs of a public nature.

The King is seized in fee of this Hundred, and used to grant the custody and bailiwick of it by patent for life; but of late only for a term of years. The persons, some of them of the greatest eminence, who have enjoyed it, are thus found in records. Robert de Sutton, in 1210, 1211, and 1224, for a fee-farm of 18 l. (t). He gave it to William, son of Hugh Bigot

Earl of Norfolk, who married his daughter Margaret (u). Allanore, Queen of K. Henry III. was possessed of it in 1263 (w). William Gifford, or Gyffard, and Joane, or Gundred, his wife, in 1265, and after; at a fee-farm of 25 s. (x). Edmund of Woodstock, third son of K. Edward I. Edmund viscount Beaumont. John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, second son of Edmund of Woodstock, in 1352. Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent, in 1361. Joane, the fair maid of Kent, daughter of Edmund aforesaid, and widow of Thomas Holand, afterwards wife of Edward the Black Prince, and mother of K. Richard II. had it in 1385. Thomas de Holand, his son, in 1396. Sir Roger Ree, in 1475; and William Ree next (y). In 1678, June 4, it was granted to William Scroggs Esq; for 41 years if he should live so long. And, 3 July 1707, to Sir John Sparrow, Kt. at the yearly rent of 6 s. 8 d.

As to Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, this Hundred is within the Archdeaconry of Essex.

In this Hundred are thirty two Parishes, which I treat of in the following order.

DODDINGHURST.

I. DODDINGHURST,

is the north-west point of this Hundred, adjoyn-ing to that of Ongar immediately preceding, and therefore very properly comes next thereto.

The name is otherwise written in records, Doddenhene, Dudeho, Duddinghurst. As the Division of the Parishes, and the present Names of them, are generally allowed to have been a work of the Saxons; it is hardly credible, that, though the latter syllable hýp̃r signifies a wood, the former part therefore was fetched by those Northern people as far as from Dodona a city of Epirus, near which stood a wood of oaks, dedicated to Jupiter, and the Temple of Jupiter Dodonaëus (z). The learned Dr. Stukeley derived it from the British-word Doeth; a wise man or wizard, as they might call a Druid: and so Doethinel denoted the Druids wood. But as there have been such northern names as Dodo, or Dudo; Dodo's hýrft, or wood, might be the real origin of the name.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Aluric was possessed of this parish; which, at the time of the general Survey, was held by Robert son of Corbutio, and his under-tenant Girard [F].

In it are two Maners. 1. That of Doddinghurst. 2. Doddinghurst-Place; otherwise Kensington's.

DODDINGHURST-HALL,

the mansion house of the first, is on the south side of the Church.

This Maner came early into the noble family of De Vere, as part of their Earldom of Oxford.
—Hugh, the 4th Earl, held it, at the time of his decease in 1263. As did Thomas, a younger son of his, for life. Next, — Robert, the 6th Earl in 1331, as member of his Earldom (a). —
Then — John, the 7th Earl in 1358. —
Thomas, the 8th Earl, in 1370. — Alberic, the 10th Earl, in 1400. — Richard, the 11th Earl, in 1415. — Alice, Countess of Oxford, widow of Richard, held it in dower, at the time of her decease in 1451 (b). Her son and successor —

John, the 12th Earl, then aged 44, lost it in 1461, with his eldest son Aubrey; being both beheaded for their adherence to the House of Lancaster; and their estates were declared forfeited by act of Parliament in 1472, and given by K. Edward IV. to his brother Richard Duke of York (c). But K. Henry VII. restored them to the second son — John, the 13th Earl of Oxford; and they were enjoyed by — John, the 14th Earl; who dyed in 1526. — John, the 15th Earl in 1539. — John, the 16th
Earl, in 1562, and — Edward, the 17th
Earl (d).

For a more particular account of this illustrious Family, which produced a succession of 20 Earls, we beg leave to refer to Hedingham-Castle, in the other Volume, p. 292, &c. which was their capital seat, and the head of their Barony.

Edward, the last Earl, squandering his estates
[G], sold, 1 March 1579, the maner of Doddinghurst, and 20 messuages, 20 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 30 acr. of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, 50 of furze and heath, 5 l. rent, one capon, and a view of frank-pledge, to

Richard Stoneley Esq; who suffered a recovery of the same, with the Advowson of the Church, 9 May following (e). But, in 1599, he sold both Maner and Advowson to Thomas Glascock. At the time of his decease, 6 June 1623, he held the premisses, and 180 acres of the demesne lands; and others called Booles, and Edwins, of the King, in ca. by the hundredth part of a knight's fee: Also a messuage and 16 acres, called Popes; another messuage and 23 acres, called Styles; and two other messuages, in this parish. Priors land, 23 acres, in Shenfeild; and a messuage called Ashewell in the hamlet of Downesells in South-Weald. He left one daughter, his sole heir, then aged 18 years, and wife of

Thomas Luther Esq; (f) a branch of the family of Miles's and Stapleford Tany in this County.

[G] We have given in the other Volume, p. 293, 294, under Hedingham Castle, [Notè O and R.] a particular account of the Estates belonging to this noble Family, in the 14th century; and of the estates entailed upon the heirs male. But, as it may not be disagreeable to the Reader, to see what Estates besides they had in later times, we shall bring them here into one view. And they were, In Essex, The maners of Battlehall, and Battlewick. In Bedfordshire, in Stansted Montfichet; Berwicks, and Scoteneys, in Toppesfeild; Brayes, Northtofts, and Skeyes, in Tilbury

They had——Antony Luther, their son and heir, who departed this life 10 Novemb. 1678, aged 56 years (g). By his wife, Dorothy, daughter of Sir Henty D'autrey of Petworth in Suffex Kt. he had Henry, William, Bridget, and Dorothy.——Henry, his eldest son and heir, married Jane, daughter of Thomas Luther of Suttons Esq; and had by her——Antony Luther Esq; He took to wife . . . widow of William Billingsley Esq; but dyed without issue: so that, upon his decease, this Estate came to his widow, who left it to her niece Miss Surman.

With this maner is incorporated a parcel of land, of about 60 acres, which Osbert Dagge-worth, in 1259, held of the King, of the Honor of Rayley, in socage, by the service of three arrows, feathered with eagle's feathers, bound round with a gold thread.——John Daggeworth, his son, sold them to

Thomas de Vere, who held them by the same service, in 1304; being then described as 1 toft, 69 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 9s. 3 d. rent (b).

DODDINGHURST-PLACE, otherwise KEN-SINGTON'S, is the other Maner in this parish.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north-west from the Church, in a bottom.

It is independent from Doddington-hall; but when it was taken and separated from that maner, doth not appear. Neither have we any account of its owners till about Qu. Elizabeth's reign. Then it belonged to Richard Stoneley, and by the marriage of one of his daughters came to . . . Dawtreys.

This is an antient Family, seated in Suffex ever since the Conquest. The name is Norman; in Latin De alta ripa, translated De haut rey, contracted into D'haut rey, or D'autrey.——Thomas Dawtreys Esq; was Sheriff of this County in 1682, and dyed 6 October 1732. He married Sarah, daughter of William Bright, of Talmash-hall in Suffolk Esq; by whom he had——William Dawtreys Esq; Sheriff also of this County in 1736, who dying unmarried [H], his great estates came to his nephew, Richard Luther of Miles's, Esq; See above.

GROVES, is another reputed Maner, of which we find only this account.

K. Henry VII, in 1503, granted Licence to Sir Thomas Bouchier, to give to the Chantry in Grace Church, London, the maner of Groves, worth four marks per an. one messuage, and 29 acres of arable called Popes, in Dodinghurst; one messuage, and 31 acres, of arable, called Smiths, in Navestock; and other lands in Navestock, South-Okynndon, and other places, of four marks value (i).

Reginald Greene was owner of Smiths in Navestock; his daughter and heir,——Christian, married John Sheffield, whose heir-general sold it, in 1739, to the Right Honorable Earl Waldegrave. Amongst Smith's lands a quit-rent is paid for lands, formerly of the Fraternity of St. Bennet Fink, London.

CONVERS is also called a Maner in this parish.

Winstan Browne was possessed of it in 1567, when, according to the Curfitors book, it was purchased of him by Richard Pety, or Pettus; being 40 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, 6 of pasture, and 5 l. rent, in Doddington and Shenfield (k).

Edward Fage Gent. who dyed 8 June 1611, held this maner of Convers, with appertenance in Duddinghurst, and 120 acres of land, of Sir Thomas Joslyn, as of his maner of Torrells-hall, in free socage.——Robert was his son and heir (l).

These lands seem to have given name to, or taken their name from, a family furnamed Convers; one of whom was buried at Stapleford-Abbots in 1599. The estate extended into Navestock, where the name is yet remembered.

A messuage, lands, and tenements called Wyshfelds, or Westridgefelds, and Wysshfeldgrove, in this parish, belonging to the monastery of Edington in Wiltshire, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1540, to William Barners, and Walter Farre (m).

Mr. Antony-Luther Richardson; Thomas Bolley; Joseph Hill; Richard Thomas, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Doddington List is part of South-Weald, and of Kelvedon-Hatch, consisting of about 400 acres, which pays Constables rate to Doddington, but no other rates. Weald, Kelvedon, and Doddington are in three different Hundreds. So much of Weald and Kelvedon as is reckoned in the List, is, indeed, in the Hundred of Barstable. See in the Introduction, under the title Taxes.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is small, of one pace with the Chancel; and the whole tyled. The Belfrey is of timber.

This Rectory was always appendent to the capital Maner here; a long time in the gift of the noble Family of De Vere; then of Richard Stoneley; of Glascock; of Butler; Harris; and Luther, in which last Family it continues, or their assigns.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1328 l.

Samuel Moody, M. A. 13 October 1713, upon Pratt's d. . . . Antony Luther Esq; Charles Kippax, B. A. 18 May 1751, upon Moody's d. . . . Mrs. Luther.

2. S H E N F E I L D,

next to Doddinghurst, is the other Parish that lies in the north-west point of this Hundred; on the great road to London, between Mountnessing, and Burntwood. Some of its Houses stand in the eastern part of Brentwood-town, from which it is divided by the road leading from Billericay to Ongar.

The name of it is formed from the two Saxon words Scen, and peld, a pleasant field; its situation being really pleasant.

Some Roman Lares were dug up here, about 40 years ago; which came into the hands of Mr. Jackson of Warley-place.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Bodd a free-man enjoyed this parish; But, at the time of the Survey, it was held by Eustace the great Earl of Bologne [1].

It was divided afterwards into two maners. 1. . . . of Shenfeild-hall. 2. . . . of Fitz-Walters.

stands near the Church.

Who were the immediate successors of Earl Eustace in this maner, we do not find [K].

The next possessor of it after him, upon record, was, Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex. At the time of his decease, in 1298, he held this maner of Shenefeld of the King in capite, of the Honor of Mandevill; with the Advowson of the Church (n). By his holding it of that Honor, it is quite credible that it came into his family upon the marriage of his great-grand-father Henry de Bobun, Earl of Hereford, with Maud, heiress of the House of Mandeville. For a particular account of that Family, see in the other Volume, p. 451. 545. &c.—Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, had it also at the time of his decease in 1361, and—Humfrey, his nephew in 1372 (o).

Elienor, his eldest daughter and coheir, brought it in marriage to her husband, Thomas of Woodstock, sixth son of K. Edward III. who had it at the time of his violent death, 8 Septemb. 1397 (p). He left three daughters, Anne; Joane, who was married to Gilbert Lord Talbot, and had 73 s. 4 d. per ann. out of this maner; and Isabel, a nun. Joane dying in 1399, left one daughter, but she surviving her mother a very little while, the whole inheritance came to the eldest sister

Anne (q). [See in the other Volume, p. 62. 80. 453.]

She had three husbands, Thomas, and Edmund, Lords Stafford. The latter had it at the time of his death 22 July 1403 (r). Her third husband, Sir William Bouchier, enjoyed it afterwards, for he presented to the Living in 1408. If her son, Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, succeeded her, as probably he did; upon his being killed in the battle of Northampton, 10 July 1460; this estate was seized on by K. Edward IV. who settled it upon his Queen Elizabeth, and she presented to the Rectory from 1466 to 1495. It remained in the Crown till K. Henry VIII, Edward VI, or Queen Mary granted it away. We find the Advowson in private Hands some time; Humfrey Tyrrel presented in 1545; Francis Rylie in 1559; William Walton in 1562; and Thomas Parker in 1567 and 1575 (s).

But before the year 1559, both Maner and Advowson had been granted to the Lucas Family. For

John Lucas Esq; who dyed 13 September 1556, held the maner of Shenfelde, alias Shen-vyle, and Advowson of the Church, and six messuages, six gardens, six orchards, five tofts, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 40 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, and 5*l.* rent in Shenfield, Brentwood, Weld, Gyngraber Landrye, and Herfordstoke. — Thomas, his son and heir, then aged 22 years (t), afterwards knighted, dyed 29 August 1611, leaving—Thomas, his eldest son and heir, also knighted; and who dyed 25 September 1625. Before marriage he had a son Thomas, whom he settled at Lexden; and, after marriage, two sons, John; and Charles, which last was cruelly shot by Lord Fairfax's order after the surrender of Colchester. — John Lucas Esq; the eldest son and heir, was knighted, and, 3 January 1744-5, created Baron Lucas of Shenfeild, with limitation to his two brothers. But his only son, and his brother Charles dying without issue, and his brother Thomas without issue male, his only daughter Mary, by Anne, daughter of Sir Christopher Nevill of Newton St. Loe in the County of Somerset, inherited. She was, by K. Charles II. 7 May 1663, created Baroness Lucas of Crudwell in Wiltshire, and brought the estate in marriage to Antony Earl of Kent, who left—Henry his son and heir, created, 14 Decemb. 1706, Marquis and Earl of Harold, and Viscount Goderich, and afterwards 28 April 1710, Duke of Kent. He married Jemima, daughter of Thomas Lord Crew of Stene, elder brother to the Bishop of Durham, and had Antony Earl of Harold, called up to the House of Lords by the style of Baron Lucas of Crudwell; who

This Lady Jemima Cambel was married in May 1740 to the Honorable Philip Yorke Esq; eldest son of the Right Honorable Philip Earl of Hardwick Lord Chancellor, and upon his decease now Earl of Hardwick. His comfort, the Lady Jemima, was created Marchioness de Grey in 1740. [For a more particular account of the Lucas family, see History of Colchester, p. 124.]

The Maner of FITZ-WALTERS,

Was named from the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, to which it belonged. It was derived from the Earl of Bologne's capital Maner in this parish.

The mansion house stands about a mile and a quarter north-east from the Church, in a bottom, by a rivulet; on the right hand side of the road from Ingatstone to Brentwood. It is called The Round House, from its unusual octogon form, the chimnies standing in the middle of the whole building.

In 1301, Robert Lord Fitz Walter had licence, to enclose his wood at Shenfield within the Forest of Essex, to make a Park; which is supposed to be this estate(u). About the year 1363,—Joane, wife of Robert Fitz-Walter, held for term of her life the maner of Shenfeild, of the King in capite, by the service of a pair of gilt spurs at the Coronation (w). — Walter Fitz Walter, who dyed in 1386, held a maner called Fitz-Walters in Shenfeild of the King in capite, as parcel of the Barony of Fitz-Walter (x).

Elena, wife of Robert Knyvett, at the time of her decease in 1435, held in fee-tail the maner of Shenfeild, otherwise called the maner of Fitz-Walters in Shenfeild, of the King in capite, by the service of the twentieth part of a knight's-fee.—John, her son and heir, then aged 24 years (y), held it also in fee-tail, at the time of his decease in 1450, and was succeeded by—Thomas Knyvett Esq; his brother and heir (z). [Concerning this Family, see in the other Volume, p. 191.]

John Morecroft Esq; was possessed of it in the last century; and is said to have built the House after an Italian model. Penelope, his eldest daughter by Susanna his wife, dyed 5 April 1677, aged 21 years, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph [L].

In the beginning of this Century, it belonged to Sir Thomas Ambrose, Kt. brewer in Hounsditch, and Sheriff of London in 1718, and 1719. His son—Thomas succeeded him, and left—Thomas, who was Sheriff of this County in 1735 [M].

SHENFEILD-PLACE is a capital messuage on the north side of the London-road, which hath belonged several years to the Vaughan Family. Richard Vaughan of Shenfeild Esq; married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir William Appleton, Bart. and had by her, William, who dyed young; John, Stephen; Sophia, and Jane.—John, married . . . daughter of . . . Patridge of Doddinghurst, a considerable fortune, and has by her Richard. [See under South Bemflete.] [N].

Mr. Thomas Osborne; John, and Thomas, Newland; Robert Holmes; Thomas Walters; John Platt; James Aldridge; Henry Barber, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

John Basset had license, in Edward the second's reign, to inclose his wood of Shenfeild, within the Forest of Essex (a).

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, consists of a body and a north aisle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel. At the west end there is a wooden spire of considerable height, leaded.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Shenfeild-hall.

Henry Forester, not taken notice of by Mr. Newcourt, was Rector here, on or before the year 1320 (b).

John Kenton, B. D. 4 July 1706, upon Scamler's d. . . . Henry Earl of Kent.
John-James De la Porte, 14 April 1716, upon Kenton's d. . . . Henry Duke of Kent.

3. H O T O N, or H U T T O N, stands east of Shenfeild. The ancient Saxon name of it was Hou, a hill, from which, and the addition of tun, a town, or village, was formed the present name; signifying the village upon a hill. In records it is otherwise written Atahou, and Hurton.

This place belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to one Got a freeman; William the K. Henry VIII. in 1539, granted this maner of Hoton, with the Rectory, and appertenances in Hoton, Brendwood, &c. to Sir Thomas Darcy, and his heirs, to hold by the 20th part of a knight's fee. The same year, Sir Thomas alienated it to

Sir Richard Riche (c). — Robert, Lord Riche, his son, by will gave it to his third son — Edwin Riche, Esq; who, 1 March 1594, alienated the maner of Hutton, alias Hoton-hall, 20 messuages, 20 tofts, 1 dove-house, 20 gardens, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 100 of wood, and 40s. rent, to Jerom Weston Esq; (d). But he, soon after, parted with it to the White Family of the neighbouring parish of Runwell; that had been also seated some years in this parish.

Richard White of Hutton Gent. married Maud, daughter of Sir William Tyrell of Heron, and had Richard his son and heir; Susan, wife of Thomas Tonge, alias Clarenceux, King at arms; and Mary, and Jane. The son — Richard White, jun. married Margaret, daughter of . . . Shirley or Strelley, of Nottinghamshire, and had by her George, Humfrey, John; Catharine, Dorothy, Anne, Elizabeth, Mary, and Thomasine. — George White Esq; the eldest son and heir, dyed 13 June 1584, and is buried in this Church (e). He married Catharine, daughter of William Strode of Devonshire Esq; by whom he had, Richard; George; Edmund, of Black Notley; Richard; and Catharine. — Richard, the eldest son, married Mary, daughter of Edmond Plowden of Plowden in Shropshire; and had by her Richard; Thomas [P]; and a daughter Mary, wife of William Waldegrave of Borley, Esq; — Richard White, Esq; the eldest son, had to his first wife Anne, daughter and co-heir of Andrew Gray of the Inner-Temple, Esq; his second was Catharine, daughter of Richard Weston, Earl of Portland: By the first he had Mary, heiress to her mother's fortune, who was married to

Robert Brett Esq; His children by the second were, George, born in 1628; Elizabeth, Frances, and Catharine [Q]. George sold this estate to

Thomas Cory Esq; born at Great Francon in Norfolk, one of the Benchers of the Inner Temple, and 18 years Chief Protonotary of the Court of Common Pleas; who dyed 16 December 1656, aged 65, and is buried in this Church with a monument [R]. He married Judith, one of the daughters of Sir Christopher Clitherow Kt. Lord Mayor of London, by whom he left one daughter married to John Heyward.

The next possessor we meet with was Mr. William Hatherly, a Taylor in Durham-Yard, London, whose wife Mary was niece to Mr. Heyward, and brought him the estate. He, or his son — William, sold it to

Robert Surman Esq; Cashier of the South-Sea Company, for the sum of 15200 l. comprehending a capital messuage, and several farms, lands, &c. of the yearly value of 480 l. Upon R. Surman's forfeiture, the South-Sea Company seized it, and sold it, 12 Decemb. 1723, for the sum of 12060 l. to Henry Hall Esq; brother to Sir Philip Hall, of Upton, Kt. He dyed 2 February 1749-50, and was succeeded by his son — Henry Hall Esq; [S].

Hutton-Hall stands on the north side of the Church.

Isaac Davis, and Joseph Roberts, have also some lands in this parish.

George White Esq; above-mentioned gave Church field here, of nine acres, for the repairs of the Church, and to the Poor.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of a body, and two aisles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tyled. In a spired steple of timber are 5 Bells. It is very pleasant, and well lighted.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, belonged to Battle-Abbey till its dissolution, and have passed since with the Maner. But the Advowson of the Vicarage hath been, at least since the year 1325, in the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 758 l.

BURGHSTED, or BURSTED.

Eastward of the three last places we have been describing, lie the two contiguous Parishes of Burghsted, distinguished from each other by the addition of Great, and Little. The name is formed from the Saxon Bup, or Bupg, a place of retirement, a town, or tower, and sted, place.

The learned Mr. Camden once thought this place to have been the Cæsaromagus mentioned in Antonine's Itinerary: but at last left it doubtful (f). Hereabouts, unquestionably, was some Roman villa, or little station. For, at Blunts-Walls in this parish, are Earth-works, the remains of a Ditch and Rampart, containing about four acres, one part of which hath been inclosed round. And, within the inclosure, have been some Mounts artificially raised, now chiefly levelled.

In Novemb. 1724, a person digging for gravel in a field near Billerica on a high hill, after he had sunk about three feet, came to a large bed of black earth, or ashes; which endeavouring to clear away, he found mixt with it a great quantity of pieces of earthen vessels, of different kinds and colours, some white, some red, and some of a dark brown. Neither he, nor any who have since searched, have been able to meet with any thing en ire; but the pieces appeared plainly to be fragments of urns, patera's &c. In one part of the earth, there was a place made like an oven, of the hard dark clay; and the man believed it was large enough to have held six half-peck loaves. There is no clay within three miles of the place. There have been several Roman coins of copper found here; and two of silver; one of Trajan, the other of Hadrian.

4. GREAT BURGHSTED

is the largest of the two Parishes, as the name imports.

This Lordship belonged in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Ingar, a Saxon Thegn.

William the Conqueror having taken it from him, gave it to his half-brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux [T]. As this was the capital Maner Odo had in this County, it will be proper here once for all to give some account of him. After Arlotta had brought forth to Robert the first of the name and sixth Duke of Normandy his natural son William the Bastard, Conqueror of England in 1066; she was married to Herluin a Norman Gentleman, by whom she had Odo, or Eudo; Robert, Earl of Mortaign; and Emma, Countess of Aumale (g). Odo, being a man of sense and spirit, was much considered by the Duke his brother, and constituted Bishop of Bayeux. He attended him at the fatal battle of Hastings, and is said to have assisted him with his prayers and advice (b). After the victory, he was loaded with lands and possessions, namely 39 lordships in this County, and 216 in the whole Kingdom. He was also constituted Governor of Dovercastle, Earl of Kent, Count Palatine, one of the two chief superintendents of all the military Forces of the Realm, and Justicier of England. But having been guilty of grievous extortions, and preparing to go to Rome with great treasures and a large retinue, in order to get himself chosen Pope, his brother the Conqueror, who had appointed him Governor of England during his absence, arrested him in the isle of Wight, and kept him prisoner in Normandy the remainder of his reign. Entering afterwards, in 1088, into a plot against William Rufus, he was banished England, and deprived of all his possessions (i).

This Lordship becoming vested in the Crown upon that confiscation, we have no account for many years to whom it was next granted: Only it seems to have been to the Family of Marescall, Earls of Penbroke. For, the first time we find it mentioned in records, the Abbot of Stratford who had most of the lands in this parish, held of the Honor of the Marescall half a fee in Bordestedd (k). — Thomas Earl Stafford, who dyed in 1393, had half a fee in Great Bursted, which the said Abbot held (l). — William Earl Stafford, his brother, had the same, at the time of his decease in 1398 (m). And so had Edmund, brother of William, who was slain at the Battle of Shrewsbury in 1403. And Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, killed at the battle of Northampton in 1459 (n).

John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, at the time of his decease in 1433, was possessed of two fees and a half in Bursted, formerly holden by Geoffrey Benhale; and one fee and a half, once Ralph Syward's (o).

These extracts shew who were the Lords paramount of the lands in this parish.

They were divided into these three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Burghsted, otherwise Burghsted-Grange. 2. The maner of West-house. 3. . . . That of Blunts-walls.

I. BURGHSTED-GRANGE,

the mansion house of the Maner of Great Burghsted, stands above half a mile east from this Church, towards Ramsden Cray.

It is named Grange, because it was one of the Barns of the Cistercian Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn [U]. They had most of the lands in this parish, but the donors only of some part are known. Their Founder William de Montfichet had not any lands here, to give them. As early as the year 1262, they held half a fee of the Earl Marshall, as above-mentioned; but this gives no light as to the original donor. K. Richard II. indeed, was a benefactor, besides his removing the Monks who had settled here, and rebuilding their Abbey at Stratford; as is related above, p. 19.—But, before that, in 1338, John Henny, and Rhoesia his wife, gave them 60 acres of arable, and 1 acre of wood, in Great Bursted: They two had remaining in this parish 1 messuage, and 100 acres of arable, holden of the Abbey. — Laurence Gurney gave them also 3 acres here (p).—Their greatest benefactor was William Langdich, who, in 1358, granted them one messuage, 240 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 90 of pasture, and 44 s. ob. rent, in Gr. Bursted holden of the Abbey; and the Abbey held them under the Earl of Gloucester (q).

K. Henry III. in 1253, and K. Edward I. in 1285, granted the Abbot and Monks a Market and a Fair at Great Burghsted. And K. Edward IV. in 1476, a Market, and two Fairs at Bille-rica (r).

Such were the Grants made to Stratford Abbey in this parish. The State of their Revenues here, at the dissolution, will best appear from a Certificate taken of them in 1537; wherein it is said, That the Maner of Bursted was let to William Herres 21 Decemb. 1515, for thirty years after the expiration of a former grant made to John Herres, father of the said William, for 31 l. 7 s. 4 d. The Rent-afize of the free customary tenants in Burghsted 22 l. 19 s. 8 d.—The Maner of West-House was let 1 May 1535, for forty years, for 13 l. 16 s. 8 d.

These Maners, with the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, which also belonged to Stratford-Abbey, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1539, to Sir Richard Riche, who had a confirming grant from K. Edward VI. (s).

He obtained a license, 30 October, 1551, to alienate this maner, with the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage, to Thomas Marthe (t). But most probably that sale did not go on. For Richard Lord Riche dyed 12 June 1566, possessed of the premises, wherein he was succeeded by his second son and heir — Robert Lord

Riche (u). He gave it by will, 25 Febr. 1580, to his third son—Sir Edwin Riche, who sold it, 2 Septemb. 1600, to Sir John Petre, Kt. and his son William (w). Sir John was created Baron of Writtle, 21 July 1603; and at the time of his decease 11 October 1613, was possessed of this maner of Bursted, alias Bursted Grange, and the Rectory of this parish, with the Advowson of the Vicarage (x); which have descended from him to the present possessor, the Rt. Hon Robert-Edward, Lord Petre.

The Maner of WEST-HOUSE.

We have seen that this maner belonged to Stratford-Abbey, and was granted to Sir Richard Riche. He, 8 February 1540, had license to alienate it to Walter Farre, and others (y). — Richard Farre, his son, had — Henry Farre Esq; who dyed 15 Decemb. 1608, and held the farm called West-House of the King in capite by the service of the sixtieth part of a knight's fee; and the Maners of Buckwyns in Butsbury, and of Abbots-Hall in Stanford le Hope. — Henry his son and heir, was then five years old (z).

This estate came by purchase into the Family of Lumley, whose residence was, till lately, at Great-Bardfield. It descended to Sir James Lumley Bart. and was, some years ago, sold to Guy's Hospital by Sir James Lumley's Trustees.

Sir Martin Lumley, or his father, built here; the House was left for some time unfinished, then fell to decay.

It stood about half a mile west from the Church.

The Maner of BLUNTS-WALLS, was so named from the ancient family of Blunt, or Blund, which also possessed, and gave name to, another Maner adjoining, in the parishes of Butsbury and Stock. [See in the other Volume, p. 48, &c.] Walls, for distinction-sake, was added, being taken from the Walls, or earth-works, still here partly remaining, and just mentioned above.

The house stands a mile and a half north-west from this Church. Here is a Court-kept, but without copy-holders.

This Estate belonged to the Priory of Thoby in Mountnessing, concerning which see in the other Volume, p. 45.

In 1525, it was granted, among many others, to Cardinal Wolsey, for endowing his two Colleges (a). Upon his incurring a præmunire it falling to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, is a Hamlet in Great Burghsted, but so considerable as to be a Market Town; the only one indeed within this Hundred; except the Little Town of Horndon on the Hill.

Sir William Petre, and his heirs; to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (c). It hath ever since continued in that noble family.

This estate pays neither great nor small Tithes.

It stands about a mile and a half north from the Parish Church. The Market is on Tuesday; and here are also two Fairs, July 22, and October 7.

The name is not easily accounted for; The first time we find it mentioned is in 1343, when Thomas Malegreff is recorded to have held in Bursted, in the Hamlet of Beleuca, of the Earl of Hereford as of his maner of Fobbyng, 4 s. 6 d. rent, by the service of 4 s. rent per ann. and suit of Court (d). [See above, p. 102.] That name Beleuca was probably derived from the old word Baleuga, or Banleuga, denoting a territory or precinct round a Borough or Maner; in French Banlieu. But how it came to be transformed into Billerica, which name we find it bore in 1395 (e), we cannot even guess.

This Town stands pleasantly, and is a great thorough-fare to Horndon on the Hill, East Tilbury, and Gravesend: and, between Tilbury and Gravesend is supposed to be the place where the Emperor Claudius forded, or crossed, the Thames.

There has been of old a Chapel here, which served for a Chantry. Mr. Newcourt supposes it of 200 years standing, and founded by the Shlyards, of Flemyns in the parish of Runwell (f). I have never found any thing discovering either the age, or founder. It is a strong antique brick Building in the Street, where the Vicar of Great-Burghsted officiates on Sunday Afternoon; or else a Chaplain chosen by the Inhabitants.

The Book of Chantries has this Entry; 'Bursted-Magna; Lands and Tenements there put in feoffment by divers persons to the sustentacon and maintenance of a Preist to sing Masse, and also to minister Sacraments within the Chapple of Bursted-Magna, which said Chapple is distant from the Parish Church a mile and a quarter. — The said Town of Bursted ys a great Towne and populous, and also a Haven towne, there ys in it by estimacon about the numb^r, of 600 howseling people, and more. Yt ys no Parish, but the Incumbent celebrateth in the 'said Chappel of Much-Bursted. The yerely valew of the same worth 38 s. 4 d. For 2 messuages, and certain lands thereunto belonging, copihold of the Lord Rich Lo. Chancellor, as of his maner of Burghsted afore-said, doth amount to the some of 9 l. 10 s. 6 d. whereof in rent-resolute to divers Lords by the yere 1 l. 6 s. 3 d. and to the Lord Rich for the copiehold 8 s. 8 d. The value of all the Goods, Jewels, &c. one small Bell praised at 1 s. one Hutch 1 s. two Vestments one surplise, and other implements, 2 s. 6 d.'

If we may guess at the time of this Chapel's being erected, having nothing sure to go upon, one would imagine it to have been some time after the year 1345, the date of the composition between the Vicars. Mr. Newcourt hath recited from Bp. Bonner's Register, p. 412, that in regard of the inundation of the waters in the winter time, when the Inhabitants of the western part of the Hamlet of Billerica could not conveniently come to their Parish Church of Ging Mountney, the Vicar of Great-Burghsted should receive the small tythes and oblations of Blunts-Walls. Then we will suppose this Chapel built as well for the Chantry, as for the ease of these inhabitants now laid to Billerica. And whether the Inhabitants contributed to the purchase of the Chantry Lands, or by voluntary gifts helped to maintain the Priest; it is plain a Priest was maintained, and, according to the Book of Chantries just quoted, did sing mass and minister sacraments, which last was not the Office of a mere Chantry Priest. Farther it is said, that this was in the Chapel of Burghsted-Magna, which sounds enough like a Chapel of ease. I presume the Vicar of Burghsted was at no expence or attendance here; but when the Chantry Lands were forfeited, the maintenance of the Chantry Priest sunk, and then the duty here devolved upon the Vicar of Burghsted.

K. Edward VI. sold the Chapel, with the Chantry lands to Mr. Tyrell and his heirs; and he, keeping the lands, again sold the Chapel to the inhabitants of Billerica, which was in Trustees for their use. But not knowing whether it had ever been rightly consecrated, the Trustees surrendered their right to Henry Bishop of London, on the 30th of August, 1693; And he, on the 8th of October following, consecrated, and dedicated it to St. Mary Magdalen, with all the usual Privileges belonging to ancient Chapels; but reserving to the mother Church all her Rights (g).

5. LITTLE BURGHSTED, adjoins to and lies west south-west of the other; on which account it is sometimes called West-Burghsted.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Godwin was lord of this parish.

At the time of the general Survey, it was the Bishop of London's Fee [W], by which I suppose was meant his private estate.

The capital Maner here is still in the See of London; probably settled upon it by the Bishop, whose Fee it was.

But it lay unfortunately within the reach of Odo's Talons, who was Lord of Dunton; so that out of this were erected two maners more, which extend into Dunton, whither they may be supposed to have been carried by that mitred plunderer.

From his encroachments were erected the Maners of Whitehall; and of St. Margarets, with South-fields.

The Maner of WHITE-HALL.

The mansion house is fallen down; The out-houses remain, where the Court is kept.

This maner was in the family of Helion as early as the reign of K. Henry II. Of the Barony of Robert de Helion, William de Helion held one knight's fee in demesne, scil. Bursted in Essex (b).

In 1301, Gilbert de St. Ouen held one knight's fee in West-Burghsted and West-Tilbury of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex (i). This was le White-Hall and Bod-necks.

Humfrey de Waleden who dyed in 1331, held one messuage, and two acres of land, of the maner of Atte White-Hall, by the service of 10 s. per an. — Andrew, son of his brother Roger, was his next heir (k).

Humfrey de Bobun Earl of Hereford and belonged to the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn, being appropriated to them. And they had also the Advowson of the Vicarage, to which they presented till their dissolution. Then it came into the Families of Riche, and Petre.

This Parish, with the Hamlet of Billerca, is rated to the land-tax at 1968 l.

Essex, at the time of his decease, in 1372, held two knight's fees in Little Bursted, that Sir Humfrey de Walden formerly held (l).

John Pikenham in 1377, had in Donton and Little-Bursted a certain maner called le White-Hall. His son — Robert Pekenham dyed in 1399. In his life-time this maner was granted for ever to Roger Folyot and John Grafton Clerk (m). [Concerning the Pekenham Family, see in the other Volume, p. 349. 491.]

From the reign of K. Edward IV. this Maner, and lands called Bodnecks, or Botley, have been in the ancient Family of Tyrell. For Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held this maner of White-hall, and 20 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 acr. of meadow, 40 of pasture, and 60 of wood, in Great and Little Bursted, Donton, Est-Horndon, Gynge Raufe, Downham, Ramsden Belhous, and Shenfeild, of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of the Duchy of Lancaster, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. (n). His grandson — Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1510, held the same: as did his son — Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed 3 April 1541 (o).

ST. MARGARETS, is named in records as another Maner in this parish. For Sir Thomas Tyrell, last mentioned, held the maners of Whight-hall, and St. Margarets, of the King, as of the Duchy of Lancaster, by the rent of 2 d. He left two Daughters, coheirs, Catharine seven years old; and Gertrude, only half a year old (p).

On the opposite side of the lane in which stands the House belonging to St. Margarets, there is another House belonging to an estate adjoining called SOUTH-FIELDS.

White-hall, St. Margarets, and South-Fields, belong to the heirs of the late Sir John Tyrell Bart.

The Walton family have been several years seated in this parish.

Thomas Walton of Nether-holm in the parish of Higham, and of Shapwick, in Somersetshire, Gent. married Anne, daughter of . . . Hutton, of Knolle in Wiltshire, and had by her four sons, Thomas; James, of Axley in Somersetshire; Andrew; and William. This last settled here, and married Anne, daughter of Henry Crooke of the Inner Temple Esq; He dyed 16 October 1640, aged 65; and she 11 June 1639, aged 48 years; leaving two children, Susanna, and—George, born in 1615, who by Elizabeth his wife, eldest daughter of Christopher Harris of Shenfield in Margaret-ing, had George; and Elizabeth, married to Sir John Poley of Boxford, Kt. He departed this life 16 July 1662, and she 1 March 1666. By her the estate of Shenfield came into this family.—George Walton Esq; the son and heir, married Sarah, daughter of . . . Hyde, merchant in London, and had by her two sons named George which dyed in 1663, in their infancy, William, George, Charles, commonly called Captain Walton. This Charles dyed 26 November 1714, aged 47 years; having had by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of John Cross, merchant in London five children; three of whom survived him, namely, one son, William; and two daughters, Poley, and Elizabeth. Poley was married to Richard Onslow Esq; General of his Majesty's Forces, younger brother of Arthur Onslow Esq; Speaker of the House of Commons.

William Walton Esq; dyed 11 June 1739, aged 74. His brother, the brave Sir George Walton, Kt. Admiral of the Blue, who dyed 21 November 1739, in the 74th year of his age, was an honor to this family, as well as his Country [X].

William-Cutts Walton Esq; departed this life 18 March 1746-7, aged 36 years; leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of William Ditch, of London, dry-salter, — George Walton Esq; his son and heir (q).

Mr. Richard Mayott; and Richard Carver, have also some lands here.

In this parish are three Alms-houses.

Twenty shillings a year are given to the poor at Christmasts by the Church-wardens from lands called Pancrasts money: and five shillings in bread at Whitsuntide.

The CHURCH stands obscurely, and is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. It hath a small spire shingled, in which are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along in the collation of the Bishops of London. It hath a Glebe of 31 acres, 3 roods and 7 perches.

Mr. William Dunbar, late Rector of this parish, left 20 l. a year to the succeeding Rectors, payable out of an estate called Braintrees near Braintree.

Little Burghsted is rated to the land-tax at 520l.

Adjoyning to the Burghsteds, on the North-east, are two contiguous Parishes of this name; known, at the time of the Norman Survey, only by the general appellation of Ramsden; but distinguished afterwards by the surname of their ancient possessors, the Families of Cray and Belhouse.

6. RAMSDEN CRAY, is the nearest of the two to Burghsted.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, part of it belonged to two Freemen; and one Siric enjoyed another part freely: Ravengar dispossessed one of them, and Robert son of Wimarc the other. At the time of the Survey, Odo Bishop of Baieux, and Ralph brother of Ilger, held the same.

There are two Maners in this parish; 1. The maner of Ramsden Cray. 2. . . . that of Tyled-hall, or Thill-hall.

The Maner of RAMSDEN CRAY.

The mansion house lies down in a bottom on the south side of the Church.

This maner is what belonged to Odo [X].

The earliest mention we have of this place, after the general Survey, is in the time of K. Henry III. but the Inquisitions do not distinctly [X] This brave intrepid Man signalized himself upon many occasions, particularly at the destruction of the Spanish fleet near Messina, in 1718. His letter upon that occasion to Sir George Byng can be equalled by nothing but J. Caesar's Veni, vidi, vici; being as follows; "Sir, we have taken and destroyed all the Spanish Ships and Vessels, which were upon the Coast, the Number as per margin. I am &c. G. Walton."

The Number was; Taken, four Spanish 60 gun ships, one of 54, one of 40, and another of 24; a bomb-vessel, and another laden with arms: Burnt, four, one of 54, two of 40, and another of 30 guns, with a bomb vessel, and fireship.

In 1262, Simon de Crei held the fourth part of a fee in Rammesden of the Honor of Earl Marefcal (r). — Simon de Crey held the same, of Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk and Earl Marshal of England, who dyed in 1305 (s).

John de Leiston, at the time of his decease in 1332, held in Ramsden-Cray certain lands and tenements of the heirs of Aymer de Valence Earl of Pembroke, by the service of the eighth part of a knight's fee; — John was his son and heir (t). [Concerning the Liston Family see in the other Volume, p. 320.] In 1363, Thomas, son of William de Liston, granted to Sir Thomas Tyrell of Est-Horndon, and his heirs, all his lands and tenements in Ramsden-Craye, with the Advowson of the Church (u). From the time of K. Edward IV. the Tyrells presented to the Living till 1630.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Crayes in Ramsden-Crays of the King in capite by the service of 8 d. per ann. [Z]. He had also 16 messuages called Wyndellond, in this parish; and 1000 acres of arable &c. in this and parishes adjoining. [See under East Horndon.] And held the maner of Tyled-hall in this parish also, of Henry Bouchier Earl of Essex, as of his maner of Barington, by fealty, and yearly rent of 12 d. (w). His son — Sir Thomas Tyrell, at the time of his decease in 1510, held the maner of Crayes, of the King, as of his Honor of Clare; the maner of Thill-hall; and the rest as above; wherein he was succeeded by his son — Sir Thomas Tyrell (x). He held the maner of Grays, alias Crays, of Catharine Queen of England, as of her Honor of Clare; and the maner of Tyled-hall, of the Lord Parr and Anne his wife, as of their maner of Barrington. He dyed 2 April 1541, and left only two daughters. — Henry, his brother, had the maner of Tyled-hall at the time of his decease, 20 May 1588 (y). — Sir John Tyrell, alienated these maners of Crays, and Thill-hall, to William Walton of Little Burghsted Esq; who presented to this Living in 1630. About the beginning of this century, — William Walton Esq; elder brother to the Admiral, sold this estate to seems to be the part, which belonged to Ralph brother of Ilger, at the time of the Survey [A].

Richard Earl of Scarborough; and he, 20 March, 1718, sold it again for 7200 l. to John Hopkins Esq; whose nephew, — John Hopkins Esq; is present Lord. See above, p. 64. 71.

The Maner of TYLED-HALL

Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, held it in 1372, by the name of one fee in Ramsden Creye, and Ramsden Belhouse (z). Under this family it was holden by John de Vere, Earl of Oxford; and by his son Thomas de Vere, Earl of Oxford, in 1358, and 1370 (a).

Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, was possessed of it in 1398, and Hamo de Chevre held it under him. Concerning this Chevre family see in the other Volume, p. 44.

It hath passed since, with the other Maner and Demesnes, to the Families of Tyrell, Walton, and Hopkins.

Mr. John Sachwell; Robert Watts; John Richardson; Christopher Woods; John Hawkins; George Leake, &c. have also some lands here.

The Church is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled [B]. The Belfrey hath on the top a spire shingled.

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner.

The Bishop of London, and Robert Gernon, were possessed of the lands in this parish at the time of the general Survey. One part called the Bishop's Fee had belonged, in the Confessor's reign, to Godric; and Gernon's to three Freemen. These lands were divided afterwards into the Maners, 1. . . . of Ramsden-Belhouse. 2. . . . of Ramsden Barrington, alias Barnton.

The Maner of RAMSDEN BELHOUSE.

The mansion house stands a little way north-west from the Church.

This is the part that belonged to the Bishop of London [C].

Reinfred de Bruer was possessed of it about the reign of K. Henry II. In the year 1200, K. John gave a confirmation of all the lands which the said Reinfred held in Essex, to Richard de Belbus (b). [Of this Family see a particular account above, page 78, and in the other Volume, p. 190.]—Sir Theobald de Belbus, son of Richard, had two sons, both made knights; Sir Richard, and Sir Thomas.—Sir Richard de Belbus, being possessed of the two Maners in this parish, and having only one daughter, Alice, He gave with her in marriage to Sir Nicolas Barrington, the maner that had been Gernon's; afterwards named from them Ramsden-Barrington: But he enfeoffed, in 1283, his brother and male heir,—Sir Thomas de Belbus, in the capital Maner of Ramsden Belbus; and a Fine was levied thereupon, in 1284 [D]. This Sir Thomas was Sheriff of Cambridge-shire from 1282 to 1289, which seems to have involved him in difficulties [E]. K. Edward I. constituted him Seneshal of Ponthieu; a province that had come to him in right of his Queen. By Floria, or Florentia, his wife, he had three sons, John, Nicolas, and William. [See above, p. 78.] John was seated at Stanway; and Nicolas at Alveley.—Sir John de Belbus, the eldest son, by Ifolda daughter of William Fitz-Warin, had Thomas, a knight; Ifolda; and John.—Sir Thomas, the eldest son, married Margery . . . but dyed without issue.—John, the other son, married Joanna . . .

Before we proceed any futher, we shall observe, That the Families De Legre, and De Watevile, had an interest in the capital Maner of this parish, which they made over to the Belhouse family. For, in the year 1325, Thomas, son of William de Legre, by fine, passed all his right in the maner of Ramsden-Belhouse, and Advowson of the Church, to Thomas de Belbous and Margery his wife. And in 1329, Robert de Watevile and John de Clavering did the same, to Thomas son of John de Belbous, and Joanna his wife (c).

Sir Thomas de Belhouse dyed in 1375, without issue as we have observed. Ifolda his sister was married to John Castelayn Esq; and had by him

Margaret, an only daughter and heir, which brought his estates in marriage to Robert Knivet Esq; second son of Sir John Knivet, Lord Chancellor. At the time of his decease in 1419 he held this maner, with the advowson of the Church, of the Bishop of London.—Thomas Knivet Esq; their son and heir, then aged 24 years (d), had two wives, first, Elianor daughter of John Doreward; next,—daughter of . . . Flemingles. By the first he had, John; and by the second Robert, and Margaret. He dyed in 1458.—John, his eldest son and successor (e), by . . . daughter of . . . Baynard, left his only son,—Thomas Knivet Esq; who, by Elizabeth his wife, second daughter and coheir of William Lunsford, of Lunsford in Suffex Esq; had Edward; and two daughters, Thomasine, married to Sir William Clopton, of Kentwell in Suffolk; and Margaret to Thomas Roydon, whose only daughter Elizabeth became wife of John Clopton, son and heir of Sir William.—Edward Knyvett Esq; the son, at the time of his decease 4 Febru. 1500-1, held this maner of Ramsden Belhouse, and also that of Stanway &c. His second wife, Catharine held them also at the time of her decease, 28 June 1535 (f). By Anne his first wife he left an only daughter

Elizabeth, born in 1490, and married to Sir John Rainsforth. She dying 4 February 1507, without issue, her aunt Lady Thomasine Clopton, then aged 40 years, and Catharine Roydon, aged 18, became her coheirs (g). But they did not come into possession till 1535, after the death of the said Catharine, when Lady Thomasine was upwards of 60, and Elizabeth, wife of John Clopton Esq; upwards of 40 years old. They held this Maner of the Bishop of London, by fealty, and yearly rent of a Rose on St. John Baptist's day, if demanded (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 190, 191.]

The Knivet Family presented to this living from 1388 to 1498; and the Clopton from 1546 to 1616 (i): which shew how long they were possessed of the capital Maner; and of the Advowson. The Inquisitions post mortem do not particularly mention this maner and advowson, after the year 1535.

William Clopton Esq; sold them to Sir Jacob Gerrard Kt. created a Baronet 16 August 1662, being of Langford in Norfolk.—Sir Thomas his son and heir, presented to the living in 1686. Upon his decease, Jacob his eldest son being dead before him without issue male, the estate came to Sir Nicolas Gerrard the second son who married Cecilia, daughter of Sir Edwyn Steed Kt. But having no issue, his estates descended to his heir at law,

Sir Jacob-Gerrard Downing, Bart. [For a further account of this family, see above, p. 15. 21. and The English Baronets, edit. 1727. Vol. II. p. 364.]

The Maner of RAMSDEN-BARRINGTON, or BARNTON,

is the other Maner in this parish; which, at the time of the survey, belonged to Robert Gernon [F].

It took the additional name of Barrington, from Sir Nicolas Barrington of Barrington-Hall in Hatfield-Broad-Oak: He had it in marriage with Alice, daughter of Sir Richard de Belbus, who gave the grand Maner of Ramsden to his brother,

Sir Thomas de Belbus, as mentioned above. By his wife Alice, Sir Nicolas Barrington had four sons; Nicolas, Thomas, Roger; and

Sir Philip Barrington; to which last he gave this estate. He married Margaret daughter of Sir William Tey, and had by her—Nicolas Barrington of Raleigh Park, Esq; [See in the other Volume, p. 504.]

This estate was then reputed a quarter of a knight's fee, as appears by a fine in 1220 [G].

After having passed from Philip Barrington to his descendents—Nicolas,—John, and another—John, who left only one daughter Thomasine (k), it came into the noble Family of Bohun. For Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex, who dyed in 1372, held the maner of Ramesden, with the Advowson of a certain Chapel there, of Thomas de Belhous (l). He left two daughters coheirs, Elianor, and Mary.

Elianor, the eldest, was married to Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester; and had by him

Anne, and two other daughters. But they having no issue, the whole half of the inheritance centered in Anne. She was married first to Thomas, and then to Edmund, both successively Earls Stafford, and afterwards to William Bourchier, Earl of Eu, by whom she had Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex.

Upon a partition of the Estates of Humfrey de Bohun, between this Anne, and K. Henry V. son of Mary the other daughter and coheir of Thomas of Woodstock; this estate fell to the share of Anne. Whereupon it was dissevered and disunited from the Dutchy of Lancaster, to which it had been annexed by K. Henry V. in 1414. [See in the other Volume, p. 452, 453.]

Henry Bourchier, son of Anne above-mentioned, Earl of Essex, dyed 4 April 1483; holding this maner of the Bishop of London. His son William being dead before him, he was succeeded by his grandson—Henry, Earl of Essex (m). At the time of his decease 13 March 1540, he left his only daughter and heir

Anne, married in 1541 to Sir William Parr, created afterwards Earl of Essex, and Marquis of Northampton. She dyed 26 Janu. 1570-1, without legitimate issue; possessed, among many other large estates, of this maner of Barrington-hall, alias Ramesden, and 30 messuages, 20 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, one Park (for there was then one here) 1000 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 400 of pasture, 40 of wood, and 5*l.* yearly rent; in Ramesden Belhouse and Crayes, Downham, Duddinghurst, South-Haningfeild, and Harfordstocke (n). [For a more particular account of the Bourchier family, See the other Volume, p. 149. 253.—255.]

reux Lord Ferrers, Qu. Elizabeth, 25 Novemb. 1570, granted him Barrington-hall, and Ramfden Park, among other estates (o) [H]. [See in the other Volume, p. 149. 252. &c. 396. 516.] He soon after sold Barrington-hall to Edmund Tyrell, of Beches in Rawreth Esq; For this Edmund, at the time of his decease 8 November 1576, held the maner of Barrington-hall, alias Ramfden-Barrington, of the Queen, as of her maner of East-Greenwich, in free socage. His four coheirs were, — Edmund Church, Gent. son of his daughter Mary; — Margaret, wife of John Daniel, — Thomasine, wife of William Playter; and Susan Tyrell (p).

Margaret took for her second husband Sir Francis Fitch, who in her right enjoyed this estate. At the time of his decease, 2 October 1604, he held the maner of Ramsden-Barrington; — William, son of Thomas his elder brother, was his heir, of full age (q). He was knighted 26 March 1608; and, some time after 1635, sold this estate to

Sir Edmund Wright, Alderman of London, of whom

Sir Thomas Cheek bought it in 1640. It hath remained ever since in his Family, and descended, as the maner of Pirgo, to Thomas Archer Esq; in right of his wife: now Lord Archer. See above, p. 61. 116.

In this Maner was a Free Chapel called Barnton-Chapel, which stood near a place called Numpbs-Green. It stood a long time, but is now demolished, and a cottage erected in its room. There was a dispute as long ago as K. Edward the First's reign, in 1281, between the Patron and Rector of Ramsden-Belhouse, and the Patron and Rector of Barnton-Chapel, which of them had a right to the Tythe of the lands in the maner of Barnton. This was decided by Richard de Gravesend Bishop of London, who awarded, that the Rector of the Chapel should have Tythes from the lands of the Lord's demesne, and the Rector of the mother Church from those of the customary tenants. Another contest on the same score arose about the year 1390, the determination of which is not preserved; and perhaps the Parties dropt it (r).

From the Book of Chantries it appears, 'That lands and tenements here were put in feoffment by sundry persons to find a Preist to sing masse in the Chapple of Ramsden-Belhouse, which ys distant from the Parish Church half a myle and more, and [was then] adjoining to the mansion-place of the Marquiss of Northampton. The said parish of Ramsden-Belhouse ys a great parish, and the most part upland. The yerely value does amount to 3 l.'

Unto this Free Chapel did belong a Chapel-house and sundry tythes; all which, amongst other things, K. James I. 18 August 1606, granted to Robert Morgan and Thomas Butler, and their heirs; who sold the premisses to John Cliff of Ingatstone, Esq; Edward Newport Esq; and William Stourton of Little-Sandford, Gent. And they afterwards, by indenture, dated 29 January 1610, sold them to Sir William Fitch of Ramsden-Barrington Kt.

Twenty shillings a year were given out of an acre and half of land joining to the Chapel-yard in Barnton, for finding bread and wine for the Sacrament.

Besides the persons above-mentioned, the following have some lands in this parish. John Salmon; John Unwin; George Kendall; Antony, Robert, and Thomas Bundock; John Richardson; Robert Watts; William Platt, &c.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands low, and is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled. The steeple hath a spire shingled.

This Rectory was appendent to the capital Maner of Ramsden Belhouse, but hath been alienated from it for some years past.

The Parish is rated to the land-tax at 763 l.

hath Ramsden-Belhouse on the west, and is bounded on the east and north by Chelmsford-Hundred. From the two Saxon words Dun, and ham, a village on an hill, is the name formed; answering to the high situation of the place, especially about the Church. It is not found in Domesday-book by name. One of these two reasons, as far as conjecture goes, may be assigned for it; first, that it was anciently a part of Ramsden-Belhouse, and was that land which Anschetil held of Robert Gernon.

Another reason for the omission might be, that this was a Soke, or particular jurisdiction, as appears by a Fine in the year 1209 [I]. If by Soke be meant a Liberty subject to some Lord by special privilege, exempt from Taxes, Dunham may be left out of Domesday-book, as the City of London is for that reason. It was indeed subject to livery and wardship, but that was an institution subsequent to the feudal tenures, and the grant of maners to the Normans. Nor was that the intention of collecting the names and possessions of all the lords of maners in that Book, because we find the Bishop's and Church lands there, who paid none.

In this parish are three Maners. 1. The maner of Downham. 2. . . . that of Berne-hall. 3. The maner of Tremnals, alias Hemnals.

The Maner of DOWNHAM.

Downham-hall lies in a bottom, a little way south-east from the Church.

About the reign of K. John, or beginning of K. Henry the Third's, it seems to have belonged to a family surnamed de Ramesden, and to William de Mandeville Earl of Essex [K].

It soon after came into the noble Family of De Vere, Earls of Oxford. For Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who dyed 16 December 1263, held this maner of Dunham, and Advowson of the Church (s). — Thomas de Vere held it in 1329, of the gift of his father Robert, the 6th Earl of Oxford (t). As did Sir Baldwin Butte-tourt for life, of the grant of John de Vere, 7th Earl of Oxford; it being then held of the King in capite, as parcel of the Earldom of Oxford: — Thomas de Vere the 8th Earl of Oxford, in 1370 (u). — Philippa, widow of Robert de Vere Duke of Ireland, in 1411 (w). — Richard de Vere the 11th Earl granted it to John Hende (x): — Alice Countess of Oxford held it in dower in 1451 (y). This noble Family lost it, with their whole estate, for their adherence to the House of Lancaster, as more particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 293. But they recovered it when K. Henry VII. came to the throne. — John, the 13th Earl, held it, with others, by the ser-jancy of being Great Chamberlain of England. And so did — John the 14th Earl (z). It continued in this family, till — Edward de

Vere, the 17th Earl, squandering his estates, as related in the other Volume, p. 293, sold, by license dated 7 Septemb. 1584, the maner of Downham, alias Dunham, with the appertenance, and 20 messuages, two mills, one dove-house, 20 gardens, 80 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 700 of pasture, 200 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, 5*l.* rent in Ramsden, &c. to

Henry Attflow Gent. son and heir of Edward Attflow M. D. Henry Attflow dyed 26 May 1622, possessed of this maner, and the advowson of the Church; and messuages called Sud-buries, Barons alias Barnes or Worthams, Hod-shells, Homecroft, and Addisland &c. — Edward was his son and heir, 21 years old (a). Helen, his daughter and heir, brought this estate in marriage to

Sir William Andrew Bart. He dyed 15 Aug. 1684, and was buried in the Chancel here, with an epitaph, leaving — Sir Francis Andrew his son and heir, who having obtained an act of parliament in 1698, sold this estate to

Francis Platt Esq; of the Victualling-Office. He dying 20 July 1714, without issue, his three sisters and coheirs, married to — Davis, Thomas Pratt, and Francis Machanefs, all of the County of Northampton, sold it to Osmond Beauvoir, of Balms in Hackney Esq; He was Sheriff of this County in 1742, and dying was succeeded by his son — [].

The Maner of BERNE-HALL, is supposed to be what occurs in Domesday-book under the name of Bertuna [L].

The first account we have of this maner, is in the year 1330.

John de Rochford then held the maner of Berne-hall of Edmund Earl of Kent, as of his Honor of Swanscamp, by the service of the fourth part of a knight's fee (b).

In 1337, Sir Thomas de Rochford, son and heir of Sir Thomas de Rochford, released to Adam, son of Geffrey de Dersham in Suffolk, and his heirs, all his right in the maner of Bernehall, and in a Park called Parkers-mead, and in all the lands in Downham, Wykford, Ronewelle, and South-Hanewfeld. And, in 1342, Thomas, son and heir of Robert de Rochford, granted to William son of Geffrey de Dersham, of Offe-

It came again to the Rochford family. For, Robert Rochford held a fourth part of a fee in Bernehall, of Joane wife of Sir John Grey, which dyed in 1425, or 1426. At the same time, John de Handlo held half a fee in Downham of this Lady (e).

In 1496, a fine passed between Edward Underwood and others plaintiffs, Sir John Gray of Wilton, and Edmund, his son and heir apparent, deforc', of the maner of Baronhall, alias Berne-hale, and lands in Downham, Ronwell, Wykeford, South-Bemflete, North-Bemflete, South-Hanningfeld, Ramsden-Belhouse (f).

William Latham Esq; who dyed 10 April 1558, held the maner of Berne-Hall of Henry Lord Burgavenny; — Thomas Latham of South-Okington Esq; was his cousin and next heir (g).

Sir Edward Sulyard at the time of his decease, 5 June 1610, held the maner of Berne-Hall of Antony Weldon Esq; [M] as of his maner of Swanscampe; and 123 acres of land called Garrolds; alias Worthams, Burrys, and Joyfes. — Edward, his eldest son and heir, was then 30 years old (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 42.]

We find it next in the Bayning or Banning Family, more particularly mentioned under Little Bentley; and in the other Volume, p. 49. 93.

Paul, Viscount Banning, left an only daughter and heir [N]; Anne, married to Albrey de Vere, the 20th and last Earl of that noble family. Upon her decease without issue, her noble inheritance came among her four Aunts.

Elizabeth, the youngest, was married to Francis Lennard, Lord Dacre; and had by him, Thomas, advanced to the title of Earl of Suffex, and — Henry Lennard Esq; who had this among other estates. He married . . . daughter of Timothy Haddock, of Carlisle, merchant, widow of George Usher, Rector of Arthuret; and, at the time of his decease, in 1703, left by her three daughters; Margaret, married to Col. Lanoye, by whom she hath a son, Charles, Lieutenant in the Guards; Catharine, married to . . . Jones Esq; by whom she had a son: and is remarried to Thomas Morgan Esq; Anne, married first to Jerom Tully of Carlisle, by whom she hath no issue, secondly to Capt. The Maner of TREMNALS, or HEMNALS.

The mansion house is a large old building, lying in a bottom, above a mile and a half north from the Church. 'Tis vulgarly called Frimnells.

There was an estate called Hemnales in Theydon-Gernon, and one called Thremhal in Stansted Montfichet, where a Priory stood: what was the occasion of these names nothing shews.

As to this maner, Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Hemnales; and 16 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 4 of wood, in Dounham, South-Hanningfeld, West-Hanningfeld, Wykeford, and Ramsden-Belhouse, of Henry Earl of Essex, by fealty and rent of 40 d. per ann^o (i). — His grandson — Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1510, held this maner of Hemenalis, alias Fremnalis, by the same services, and was succeeded by his eldest son — Thomas Tyrell, Esq; (k) He left only two daughters, in minority, whereof Catharine, the eldest, was afterwards married to Sir Richard Baker of Sifinhurst in Kent. — Sir Henry, his next brother, inherited the chief of his estates; and dyed 20 May 1588, whose eldest son — Sir Thomas departed this life, 25 Septemb. 1592; possessed of this maner of Hemnalls, alias Fremnalls, holden of the maner of Baringtons in Ramsden Belhouse (l). His eldest son — Sir John Tyrell of Herongate Kt. having no issue, sold, 18 July 1627, to Sir Henry Browne of Writtle, Kt. and Edward Balfrode of the Inner-Temple Esq; for their lives, and the longest liver of them, the maner and park of Tremnals, alias Hemenhales, and Ramsey-Tirrels, and the right of the Advowson of the Churches of Little-Warley, Stock alias Haverstocke, and of Bosworth in Springfield (m).

Afterwards this estate belonged to Sir Thomas Raymond Kt. one of the Justices of the King's Bench, who dying on the Circuit 14 July 1683, was buried here under an altar tomb, with an epitaph. His son Sir Robert Raymond, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, was created Baron Raymond of Abbots Langley, and dying 19 March 1732, was succeeded by his son, Robert Lord Raymond.

Soon after Sir Thomas Raymond's decease, Benjamin Disbrow Esq; seventh son of the famous Major-general Disbrow [* N], acquired this estate; and was made Sheriff of this County 27 April 1689. Departing this life 21 Febru. 1707-8; he was buried here. He had three wives; 1. Elizabeth daughter of . . . Armsted, of Torelby in Lincolnshire; 2. Sarah, daughter of Robert Norden, married before to Andrew Sam, and to Cornelius Vandenanker: She dyed 9 April 1692. 3. Mary Norden, youngest sister of his other wife. By the second he had no issue. By the first he had Cromwell. And, by the third, Mary, Sarah, two of the name of Elizabeth, and Jane.—Cromwell Disbrow Esq; the son and heir, married Cornelia, daughter of Cornelius Vanden Anker, by whom he had—Platt Disbrow Esq; the late possessor; who dyed 14 November 1741; and Charles, Benjamin, John, Nehemiah, another John, Cromwell, Samuel, Cornelia, Mary.

There are within this Hundred three Parishes named Horndon, distinguished from each other by the respective appellations of East, and West, and on the Hill; so styled from their situation. But those distinctions were not subsisting at the time of the general survey. The name is derived from the Saxon words Hopn, and Dun. i. e. Horn-hill. It is sometimes written Thorndon, in which case the first syllable would be derived from Thorn. And in records it is called otherwise Horninduna, Torninduna, Toren-duna.

(n) Inquis. 16 Ric. II.

[* N] Major-General John Disbrow, a man that rendered himself considerable during the unhappy times of confusion in the last century, was a yeoman, or gentleman, of about sixty or seventy pounds a year, at the beginning of the wars. But having married one of Oliver Cromwell's four sisters, 'he cast away his spade, took a sword, and rose with him in 'the Army;' being constituted Colonel of a regiment of horse; one of the four Commanders of the Fleet in the Dutch war; Commissary general of the horse; Major-general of several counties in the west of England, &c. He was also one of Oliver's Council, one of the Commissioners of his Treasury; one of the Lords of the Cinque Ports; of both the Committees of Safety, and a member of the Council of State; and of the Other House: Most of which were very profitable places: for he had, as one of the Council, 1000 l. a year; as General at sea, 1095 l. as Colonel of horse, 474 l. 10 s. as Major general of the western Counties, 666 l. 13 s. 4 d. in all 3236 l. 3 s. 4 d. per ann. He opposed earnestly Ol. Cromwell's taking the title of King; and persuaded Ric. Cromwell to dissolve his Parliament. For a more particular account, see 'Narrative of the Late Parliament; and a second Narrative of the Late Parliament,' &c. [i. e. Ric. Cromwell's,] both published in 1658. 4to. White-

John Scarle Clerk, and John Bette of Botulphes-Spene, had license, in 1392, to give 46 acres of arable, one of meadow, and one and a half of wood, in Downham and Ramsden-Belbous, to the Hospital of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, London (n).

Lady Cæsar, who it seems had the maner of Tremnals in 1635, gave for ever, payable out of it, 5 l. a year, to the poor of Downham, Ramsden-Cray, and East and West Haningsfeild.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, stands pleasantly on an hill, and is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled. At the west end there is a Tower, which seems to be of stone.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Downham-hall, and a long time in the gift of the noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford. After having passed through several hands, it came into the Beauvoir family.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 623 l. 3 s. od.

These lands were divided afterwards into these several Maners. 1. The maner of Heron, with Montfrith, and other parcels. 2. The maner of Fuchers, or Foulchers. 3. . . . that of Low Horndon, or Abbots.

The Maner of HERON, or HERNE, seems originally to have taken its name from a Heronry here, as was lately at Belhouse in Alveley. [See above, p. 78.] As for the family of Heron, that possessed it, and from whom it came by marriage into that of Tyrell, they undoubtedly took their name from this place of their habitation.

The mansion-house stands about a mile north from the Church. It is an old brick edifice, surrounded with a moat, on the outer side of which moat stand four towers detached from the rest of the building. Great part of it is as old as the time of K. Henry VI, or Edward IV.

Whether this Maner was part of Suene's, and when detached from it; or whether it was the Bishop of London's Fee mentioned above, we have nothing certain or decisive. Most probably it was, about the reign of K. Henry II. in a Family surnamed de Cornhull, mentioned below under the maner of Abbots: or in the Family surnamed de Thorndon, lords of Thorndon in the reign of K. John (o).

When the Tyrell Family became first possessed of it, we have no exact account. Unquestionably it was when Sir James Tyrell married Margaret daughter and heir of Sir William Heron; which happened in the reign of K. Edward II. or III. Thomas Tyrell had license, in 1363, to impark 400 acres of pasture and wood in Thorndon and Ingrafe (*).—John Tyrell one of the founders of the Chantry in Wivenhou-Church, in 1413, held the maner of Herne in Esthorndon, of the King as of the Castle of Rochester (p): the first time we find these names in Records. We shall give what occurs therein concerning this estate, and its owners the Tyrells, after having given some account of their Family.

They descended from Walter Tirel, who held the maner of Langham in this County, at the time of the general Survey. [See in the other Volume, p. 242.] Whether he was the same person who shot William Rufus in New Forest; or whether he did it at the instigation of Archbishop Anselm, through the persuasion of a fanatic monk, as is asserted by Alan de Insulis, we are not able to determine [P]. However, they were early persons of great consequence in this County; and one of the ancientest Families, at least, that hath subsisted till our days.—Thomas Tyrell was one of the Knights of the Shire for Essex, in Parliaments, 28. 31. 34. 38, 39. 43. 46, 47. of K. Edward III. and how often his successors were, the List of the Knights in the Introduction will shew. And the List of Sheriffs there, will also shew how frequently they served that office for this County: the first was John Tyrell of Herongate Esq; 2 Henry V.

Their Pedigree, now before us, stands thus. Sir Walter, — Sir Henry, — Sir Richard, — Sir Edward, or Edmund, — Sir Geoffrey, — Sir Lionel, — Sir Edward, who married Maud, or Anne, daughter of . . . Burgate of Suffolk; — Sir Hugh his eldest son, was governor of Carisbrooke castle in the isle of Wight, which he bravely defended against the French in 1377. He married Joane, daughter and co-heir of James Flamberd, and had by her — Sir James Tyrell of Heron, who by Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir William Heron, had Emma, wife of Richard Enefeld, and — Sir Walter: He took to wife Jane, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Swinford of Essex, by whom he had his son and heir, — Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, that married first Alice daughter of . . . D'adeleigh, by which he had no issue. But by his second wife, Elianor, daughter of John Flamberd, he had — Sir John Tyrell, Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1423, who served in the wars under K. Henry V. and was appointed by him surveyor of the carpenters of the new works at Calais, with the wages of 12 d. a day: he was also Treasurer of the household to K. Henry VI. (q). He married Alice, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Coggeshall, of Little Sandford, by Antiochia his wife daughter of Sir John Hawkwood, by whom he had six sons and four daughters; namely, Walter; Thomas, William senior, of GIPPING in Suffolk; John; William junior, of BEECHES in Rawreth; and John, Clerk. The daughters were, Alice, [P] It is far from being a clear point, that this Family was descended from the Walter Tirel who shot William Rufus; and as far as it is from being certain that he did it designedly. Mr. James Tyrell hath collected together, in his History of England, Vol. II. p. 108, the difference between Authors concerning the manner of that King's death, to which we beg leave to refer. As to Alanus de Insulis his story, the learned W. Baxter, (Præfat. ad Glossar. Antiq. Britannic. p. 12.) doth not appear to applaud or commend it. For an account of that Alanus, see Bp. Tanner's Bibliotheca.

Elizabeth,

Elizabeth, Alianor, and another. Their mother dyed in 1422, and is buried in this Church, with an epitaph (r) [2]. The second son and heir—Sir Thomas, of Heron, married Emma, daughter of Sir William Marney of Layer-Marney, by which he had four sons, Sir William; Thomas of S. OKENDON in Essex, and of Thornton in Buckinghamshire; Humfrey of Little WARLEY; Sir Robert of HORNDON on the Hill: and two daughters, Anne, wife of John Darcy of Toleshunt-Darcy; and Elizabeth, wife of Robert Darcy of Danbury, re-married to Richard Hawte.—Sir William Tyrell of Heron, the eldest son, married Alianor, daughter of Robert Darcy, by Alice Fitz-Langley, and had Sir Thomas, a Knight-Banneret; Alice, wife of John, or Robert, Rochester; and Maud, wife of Richard White.—Sir Thomas, the son and heir, married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Devereux Lord Ferrers of Chartley: secondly Beatrix, daughter of John Cokaine, of Derbyshire Esq; by Elizabeth Bovile. By this last he had Thomas; and Beatrix, wife of Antony, second son of Sir John Bruges Lord Mayor of London. He was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1460, and dyed in 1476 (s). The son and heir—Sir Thomas married Constantia, daughter, and at length heir of John Blount, Lord Mountjoy, and had by her six sons, Thomas, Henry, William a Knight of Rhodes, John, Thomas, Charles; and two daughters, Catharine, and Anne. He dyed in 1510 (t).—Thomas Tyrell Esq; the eldest son and heir, Sheriff of this County in 1517, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Browne, Lord Mayor of London; [re-married after his decease to Sir William Petre.] He dyed 3 April 1540; and having only two daughters, Catharine then 7 years old, and Gertrude but half a year (u), his next brother Henry inherited the chief of his estates. Catharine was afterwards married to Sir Robert Baker of Siffinhurst, in Kent.—Sir Henry Tyrell, his next brother, and successor, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1551. He married Thomasine, daughter of William Gounston of London Esq; by whom he had Thomas; Bennetta, wife of Edward Moone; Hawise, married first to John Daniell of Messing, afterwards to

Stephen Beckingham; Gertrude, to John Browne, of Fidelers in Writtle; Thomasine, to Francis Browne, of Radwinter; and Alianor, to Henry Palmer, of Dews-hall; and several other children. Departing this life 20 May 1588, he was succeeded by his eldest son—Thomas Tyrell Esq; then 40 years old (w); afterwards knighted. He married Mary, daughter of Sir John Sulyard of Wetheriden in Suffolk, and had by her, John; Thomas, of Ramsey-Tyrells; Anne, wife of John Cliffe, of Ingatstone; Hawise, wife of Francis Dacre of the north. He dyed 25 Septemb. 1592, and was succeeded by his eldest son—Sir John, then 20 years old (x). He married 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Croke, Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, 2. Jocosa, daughter of John Baker, of Siffinhurst Esq; but having no issue by either, his brother—Thomas succeeded him. By Margaret his wife, daughter of John Fillol of Old-Hall in Rayne Esq; he had John, born 14 Decemb. 1597, afterwards knighted; and Thomas, of Buttesbury, who, by Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Steward of Chelmsford, had John Tyrell of Billerca, married to Mary daughter of Giles Alleyn of Haseley, Esq;—Sir John Tyrell, married, 14 December 1624, Elizabeth, only daughter of George Evelyn in Wiltshire Esq; one of the Six Clerks in Chancery, by which he had Elizabeth, born 6 Octob. 1629; married to Humfrey Forster Esq; This first wife dyed of a consumption in the February following, and was buried at West-Dean. His second wife, to whom he was married in June 1630, was Martha, daughter of Sir Laurence Washington of Stonage in Wiltshire, Kt. Register in Chancery; by her he had, Laurence, born 1 November 1632 at Springfield, who dyed young, and John, born 14 March 1635. Their father, Sir John, was Batchelor of Arts of Wadham College in Oxford; knighted by K. Charles I. 27 Janu. 1627-8, put into the commission of the Peace in 1628, put out of it in 1641. He was a great sufferer for his loyalty to K. Charles I. having been once decimated, twice imprisoned, thrice sequestred and forced to compound for 600l. and many times plundered [R]. After the Restoration, he was elected in 1661, one of the Burgeses in Par-

[2] After Sir John Tyrell's decease she was re-married to John, son and heir of Sir William Langham of Pantfeild in this County. See the other Volume, p. 162. 406. 525.

[R] In the preamble of his 'Loyal Advice to K. Charles II.' he says, 'he had lost more than he had left (being no small matter) for his Loyalty and Love to his Majesty.'—And in the end, that 'he had lived in Purgatory' near 20 years, to the Honour of his exhausted Family.' From his MS. pocket Book, lent me by the late worthy Sir John Tyrell. In that and other MSS. Memoirs of his, lent me at the same time, I found the following anecdotes. 'It was the great fault of his Majesty's [K. Charles I.] Counsellors, to take all his Servants, except some in the greatest Offices, upon the recommendation of one or other of the Lords of the Council or Household; and they always preferred such as would give most, not regarding the Birth or Qualities of the Persons: so that such servants looked more upon those Lords than the King by whom they got their fortunes.'—As for Weston, a man set up by the cunning of the Jesuits, he privately borrowed 10,000 l. of a certain Lord of the same profession, to buy his place of Treasurer. And then insinuating himself into the King's favour, was all his time a cunning contriver, to put the King upon such strains, as proved the subjects regret, and a great upholder privately of the Jesuitical party, which was now become almost the only sect of all our English Papists, in which Religion this Treasurer at last professedly dyed. These Jesuits have been such cunning atheistical contrivers in all States, that I have heard some moderate Papists confess, that they have almost undone their Religion.'

liament for Maldon. He dyed in 1675, aged 82, and his wife Martha 17 Decemb. 1670, in the 90th year of her age; and are both buried in this Church with an epitaph. By this second wife, besides Laurence, and John, he had Thomas, and Charles, who both dyed without issue, and Martha wife of Sir Benjamin Ayloffe, of Great Braxted, Bart. Sir John, the eldest son, was created a Baronet 22 Octob. 1666, residing then at Springfeild. [See in the other Volume, p. 9.] But he dyed 30 March 1673 aged 36, before his father, having had three wives. 1. Lettice, daughter of Thomas Copping of Mercatsal, in Hertfordshire Esq; by whom he had his son and heir Sir Charles. 2. Anne, daughter of Richard Yeand of London, merchant: She dyed 24 April 1664. 3. Elizabeth, daughter of John Allen, alderman of London, remarried, after his decease, to Sir Thomas Stamp Kt. alderman and Lord Mayor of that city. By these two last he had no issue.—Sir Charles succeeded his grandfather in 1675. He married Martha, daughter and heiress of Charles Mildmay of Woodham-Mortimer Esq; and with her obtained that maner and advowson. They had one son, John; and a daughter married to Col. Windham of Suffolk. He dyed 3 Febru. 1714, aged 54, and she 27 March 1690, aged 27, and were buried in this Church, with an epitaph.—Sir John, their only son and heir, married, first, Mary daughter of James Dolliff Esq; knighted afterwards, and had by her Mary, wife of John Comyns Esq; [see in the other Volume p. 60.] Martha, married, 11 October 1737, to Sir Thomas Drury, of Overston in Northamptonshire, Bart. Anne; and Elizabeth. By his second Lady, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of John Cotton of the Middle-Temple Esq; descended from Antony Cotton of Pantfeild, Gent. [See in the other Volume, p. 406.] he had Charles; John; and another son who dyed young. Sir John Tyrell departing this life 21 June 1729, was succeeded by his eldest son—Sir Charles, who dyed in July 1735, at Felsted-school: Whereupon his next brother—Sir John, born 23 March 1725-6, inherited the title and estates. He married 26 June 1762, Miss Crispe, only daughter and heir of Thomas Crispe Esq; of Perbold in Lancashire, by whom he had two Daughters. But he dyed 5 January 1766. His affectionate and disconsolate widow, being overcome with her immoderate Grief at the loss of so kind a Husband, quite sunk under it, and followed him the 23d of September 1766 [S].

Having thus traced this ancient Family down to the present times, and supplied many omissions, as well as corrected several errors, which were in former accounts; I shall now shew what occurs in records concerning This and their other estates.

We have just observed above, That John Tyrell held this maner of Herne in Esthorndon in 1413. The next owner of it, by the name of Hyern, and of several other very considerable estates in this County [T], mentioned in the

* His [Ol. Cromwell's] end was thought to be hastened by the consideration of his vast Debts, and the open eyes, and general Desertion, of all the people, and by the cutting speeches of his dying daughter Cleypole, upon his last visit on her death bed.

* Cromwell's wife, commonly called Old Joane, with his complices, at the Restoration conveyed to the Thames side a great quantity of gold, and some of the best Goods belonging to the King and Queen, to be conveyed beyond sea, but they were found and seized by the Parliament. — Till then, she lived at the Cockpit at Whitehall, but had all her goods seized.—[In the Life of Ol. Cromwell by J. H. 1663, she is called his wife Elizabeth, alias Joan . . . viz. Boucher.]

Having observed above, p. 139. note Q. that J. Thurloe, Ol. Cromwell's Secretary, was born at Roding Abbess, of which his father was Rector, we shall add the following anecdote concerning him out of Sir John's Memoirs. 'It was wondered that Thurloe made not his escape sooner, but he presumed upon pardon; because he had Cromwell's Black Book, wherein were Cromwell's secrets, and others, discovering all the Plots and private Plotters and Traytors here, and also about the King, which he intended to present the King, but his man stole it from him, and carried it to the King before his coming to London, and that made Thurloe flee for it.'

[S] So that to her might be applied what was said before of Anne, wife of Thomas Barrington Esq; see in the other Volume, p. 504. note Q.

[T] Tho. Tyrell Kt. held the maner of Tyrell, in the parish of Bottisbery, of the Priores of Hakelynton; the maner of Whites, in the same parish, of Elizabeth Queen of England; 20 mess' 200 acr. of arable land, 40 acr. of meadow, 40 of wood, in Bottisbery, Ynggingberdlaundry and Herford-Stoke, of the Qu. as of the Duchy of Lancaster; the maner of Henmales, and 16 mess' 300 acr. of arable, 40 acr. of meadow, 100 of pasture, and 40 of wood, in Downham, Southaningfeild, Westhaningfeild, Wykford, and Ramsden belhous, of Henry Earl of Essex; half of the maner of Sampford magna, of the King in cap. by knight's service; and the other half of William Roos; the maner of Coggars in Coringham of Ric. Welles, as of the maner of Old-hall; a mess' called Hyern, 100 acr. of arable, 200 acr. of pasture, 60 of wood, and 40 of meadow, of the Queen of England, as of the Duchy of Lancaster; 3 parts of the maner of Springfeild, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne; the maner of Crayes in Ramsden-Crayes, of the King in cap. and his in anno 4 hominibus, & uno preposito; the maner of Tyled-hall in the same parish, of Henry Earl of Essex, as of his maner of Barington; sixteen mess' called Wyndellond, lying in Ramsden-Cray, 1000 acr. of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of pasture, 240 of wood in Esthorndon, Springfeild, Chelmsford, Mulham, Crayes, Bartlesden, Retyndon, Ingrave, Downton, and Little Burstled, of the Bishop of London; 1 mess' in Horndon, called the Swan, of Edw: Shaa; 32 acr. of arable in Horndon, called Whelers of Richard Duke of Gloucester; 1 mess' in Stanford in le Hope, called Bottons, 100 acr. of arable called Shermans, of Ric. Boteler, as of the maner of Caprons; 1 mess' 100 acr. of arable in Chaldewell and Little Thurrocke called Long-house of Hen. Torell; the maner of Fochers in Esthorndon, of the Qu. of England, as above; 200 acr. of arable called Clawdon, Kingeslond, Richers, Terylles, Machons, Charfowles, in Esthorndon and Yngrave, of the Qu. of England; 1 mess' called Nicholis White, a mess' called Hopkyns, another called Sprotts, another called Hayward, another called Wymbishe, of the Archp. of Canterbury, as of his maner of Ingrave; and 100 acr. in Esthorndon and Ingrave, of the Queen as above; 100 acr. of arable called Clobbers and Danyels, of the Queen, as above; a windmill, in Shenfeild; another mill in Stoke; 1 mess' and 60 acr. of arable in Stoke called Danyell, of John Lord Bouchier, as of his maner of Blunts; 4 acr. of arable in Springfeild; 1 tenement and 2 acr. there, called Lorkyns; of the Bishop of London; 1 mess' and 8 acr. of arable in Stoke and Buttisbury, of the Qu. of England; 5 acr. of arable in Ramsden Cray, of Henry Earl of Essex; 30 acr. of arable called Bacons in Bartlesden, of St. Mary's Hospital near Bishopsgate; 1 mess' called the Lion; 16 acr. of arable, and 6 of meadow, in Chelmsford, of New College, Oxon; and 1 mess' called the Tabard in Mulham, of the Abbot of Westminster; 20 acr. of arable, and 5 acr. of wood in Ramsden belhous, of the Bishop of

Inquisitions

Inquisitions, was—Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476 (y). His son—Sir Thomas, who departed this life in 1510, held also the messuage called Herne, with the same quantity of land belonging to it as mentioned in the note [T], only it was now called 60 acres of meadow, 40 of wood, and 40 of furze and heath. He held also the maner of Fowlches in this parish (z). His son—Thomas Tyrell Esq; held, at the time of his decease in 1540, this maner of Heron of the King, as of the Duchy of Lancaster, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6d. (a). His brother—Sir Henry Tyrell held also the maner of Heron, in 1588, of the Queen, as of her Honor of Mandevile, by one knight's fee; the maner of Foulchers, of the same Honor, by the sixth part of a knight's fee; and lands here called Mountfrith, Fingods Heron, and Poddesbrooke, by half a knight's fee (b). His son—Thomas held also the same in 1591 (c): From whom most of them passed to his descendents.

Fingods, and Poddesbroke, are now only the names of Woods belonging to Hérons.

The Maner of ABBOTS was so named because it belonged to Waltham-Abbey. And it is also called Low Horndon, because the House lies in a bottom below the Church.

Suene of Essex was possessed of it at the time of the Survey, as appears above, and upon the forfeiture of his grandson Henry de Essex, on account of his cowardise, it came to the Crown. [See under Raley, and in the other Volume, p. 166.]

K. Henry II. at the request of Peter de Goldington lord of this vill, which Gervase de Cornbull held under him, granted it to Henry son of the said Gervase, to hold of the King by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. In 1166, the heir of Henry de Cornhull held a fee in Thorndon of the Honor of Peverell of Nottingham. K. Richard I. confirmed to Henry de Cornbull the maner of Thorndon, with 100 acres of waste-ground (d).

Joane, daughter and heir of Henry de Cornbull, brought this estate in marriage to her husband Hugh de Nevill, about the year 1195. [See in the other Volume, p. 371. 515.] With the advice and good will of his son John Nevill, he granted this maner with appertenances, except the Advowson of the Church, to the Canons of Waltham-Holy Crofs, to pray for his soul, and the souls of his wife Joane, his heirs and successors (e).

They enjoyed it till their dissolution.

Half a knight's fee, parcel of what formerly belonged to Henry de Essex, and holden of the Honor of Rayleye, belonged to a family surnamed de Torndon.

Sir William de Torndon, or Torindon, held it about the year 1210 (f). He had a daughter named Desiderata, married to Robert de St. John; and they had a daughter, Agnes, to whom her grandfather Sir William gave some assart lands in this parish; which she granted to the Abbot and Canons of Waltham. This last, as far as we can judge, is the same as was afterwards called the Maner of Damhelins. This, as well as the former, at the dissolution of Monasteries, came to the Crown.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted, or sold them, by the name of the Maner of Est-Thornden, with appertenances, in Est-Thornden, and Damhelens, to Sir William Petre, and his heirs, to hold by the 100th part of a knight's-fee: together with 74 acres of wood and underwood, in the tenure of John Tyrell (g). He gave 411l. 13s. 6d. for them; and they were part of Anne of Cleve's jointure.

Pope Paul IV. confirmed them afterwards to him, by the name of the maner or lordship of East Borndon, [Horndon] with land called Dame Elyns.

Sir William Petre alienated the maner called Damhelines, and divers lands and tenements, to John Tyrell Esq; by license dated 28 October 1551.—John Tyrell of Little Warley Esq; at the time of his decease, 2 March 1585-6, held the messuage, and 20 acres of arable, 40 of pasture, 60 of wood, and 100 of furze and heath, called Dame Elyns, in Little and Great Warley, and Childerdiche: He left Mary Clynaton his daughter and heir, 30 years old, and upwards (b).

As for the maner of Low-Thorndon, by the name of East Horndon, it hath continued ever since, as far as we can find, in the noble Family of Petre (i).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, stands pleasantly on a rising ground, and consists of a body and two aisles. The Chancel hath a south Chapel, called the Lord Petre's Chapel, probably because it belonged to his maner of Abbots. At the west end there is a Tower of brick, embattled, containing 4 Bells.

This Rectory was a long time in the Neville Family, who, when they gave their Maner

Henry IV. to whom, as far as we can learn, it descended from William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, by means of his mother Mary, as Chicknal St. James, Wethersfeild, &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 79. 371.] K. Henry VI. 30 April 1442, granted it to Sir Thomas Tyrell, for his good services, and to his heirs; and it hath continued ever since in that Family.

By a composition between the Abbot of Waltham and the Rector of this parish, the Rector was authorized to receive 5s. a year, on St. John Baptist's day, out of the Abbey's estate, for small Tithes; upon his giving leave to the Abbot and Convent to build a Chapel here, within the bounds of their own Court, for divine service; on condition the mother Church was no way damnified ( k*). No traces of this Chapel are now remaining.

10. WEST HORNDON

lies West of the last, which occasioned the name. It is otherwise called in records Little Horndon.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, two Freemen were possessed of this parish; which Edmund son of Algot held at the time of the Survey.

A certain Deacon had here 30 acres, and the fourth part of the Church, and it lay to the King's alms. Goduin Gudhen had illegally taken two mansions, being part of the land which Hugh de St. Quintin held of the King. The same Goduin had also taken 3 virgates of land, belonging to a certain freeman [U].

There is but one MANER in this parish.

West-Horndon-Hall, the mansion house, stands in a Park on a rising ground, from whence there is an extensive prospect. Sir William Petre made it a noble pile, but it is rebuilding in a more magnificent manner by the present owner, the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

The next possessors of this estate upon record, after the general Survey, were the Families of de Thany, Brianzon, Drokensford, and Neville.

Of the heirs of Roger de Thany, this maner of Thorndon, with the advowson of the Church, were held by John de Brianzon, who dyed in 1315, and had, some years before, enfeofed Bartholomew de Weston in the same, in fee (l). Under his son — Laurence de Thany, who departed this life in 1317, John Brianzon held lands and tenements in Little Thorndon, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. His sister and heir,

Margaret (m), brought this estate to her husband John de Drokensford, as she did the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Chicknal St. James, &c. [See above, p. 77. 179. and in the other Volume, p. 79.]

Of them, William Noyle [Nevill] held this maner of West Thorndon, by the 4th part of a knight's-fee, viz. of 40s. 10s. whenever a scutage happened (n). At the time of his decease, in 1339, he held the maner of West-Thorndon, with the Advowson of the Church, besides thirty acres of arable in Chilterditch, of John de Drokensford of his maner of Stapleford-Tany, by service of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and a pair of gilt spurs, or 6d. a year; and the said 30 acres were holden of the Countess of Kent, by the service of 4s. a year, as of the Barony of Montchenfy. His son — John Noyl (meaning Nevill) held also three parts of a knight's fee in West-Horndon under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1360 (o) [W].

We have no account after this, for several years, of the owners of this estate [X]. At last it appears, in the reign of K. Henry VI. in a Family surnamed Lodowic John, not mentioned before in the records relating to Essex, and that had at once very large possessions in this County. In a pedigree of the noble Family of Mordaunt Earls of Peterborough (p), [one of whom, John Mordaunt Esq; in the reign of K. Henry VII. married Ela, or Ellen, daughter and heir of Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis,] we have this account of the origin of the Fitz-Lewis Family. According to that, they were derived from Lewis, Dauphin of France, afterwards K. Lewis VIII. who was invited over by the Barons in the reign of K. John. During his stay here, by an intrigue with a noble English Lady, not named, he had a son surnamed Fitz-Lewis. That Lady, and two sisters she had, were heirs to a great inheritance; and she afterwards was married to a nobleman, from whom are descended some of our greatest Families. Her natural son, Lewis Fitz-Lewis, married Margaret of Essex, and had by her—Sir John Fitz-Lewis, knighted in the first war with Scotland, but afterwards siding with Thomas Earl of Lancaster, against K. Edward II. he happened to be killed at the battle of Burroughbrigg, and his estates were confiscated. By his wife, Elizabeth de Harpden, he had his son—Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, to whom K. Edward III. restored his father's lands. He married Elizabeth le Baude, by whom he had—Sir John Fitz-Lewis, of West-Horndon: who dyed in 1442, possessed of this maner, and other large estates (q) [Y]. He is the same man who is called in the Inquisitions Sir Lodowic John. He married three wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Nevill, by which he had Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Wingfeild. 2. Alicia, daughter of John de Vere the twelfth Earl of Oxford, by whom he had two sons, Sir Lewis Fitz Lewis, and Sir Henry Fitz-Lewis.

The latter, a brave Knight, and strenuous in the interest of the House of Lancaster, married . . . Mary, second sister and coheir of Edmund Beaufort Duke of Somerset, and had by her Mary his daughter and heir, married first to Antony Woodville Earl Rivers, by whom she had no issue; afterwards to Sir John Nevill, a natural son of the Earl of Westmoreland, and had by him Anne, wife of Sir John Markham (r).

Sir John Fitz-Lewis's 3d wife was Anne, daughter of John Montacute Earl of Salisbury, and by her he had Lodowick, or Lewis, John. She had been first married to Sir John Hankford (s), and her third husband was John Holand Earl of Huntingdon, and Duke of Exeter. — Sir Lewis, son of Sir John Fitz-Lewis, by Anne Montacute, daughter of the Earl of Salisbury, appears to have had this estate. For K. Edward IV. in 1471, granted to his brother Richard Duke of Gloucester, afterwards K. Richard III, the maners of West-Horndon, Porters in Stebbing, Gyngrauf, Shenfeld, Cravenham, East-Tilbury, West-Tilbury, and Ames, all in Essex, part of the possessions of Lewis Fitz-John attainted (t), on account of his adherence to the House of Lancaster. [See above, p. 105.] He married Margaret Stonor, by whom he had—Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, his son and heir, to whom the father's estates were restored, and who took to wife Mary, or Alice, daughter and coheir of John Harleston Esq; They had one son, named John, and a daughter Ela, Ellen, or Elizabeth, for so many different ways is she called.—John Fitz-Lewis Esq; the son, married Anne daughter of Sir Robert Lovel; but he and his bride had the misfortune, on their wedding-night, to be consumed in the flames which destroyed West-Horndon-hall (u).

Ela Fitz-Lewis, his sister [Z], being a great heiress, Sir John Mordaunt gave K. Henry VII. 1300 marks for her wardship; and married her: her estate being reckoned 500 marks a year. At the time of her decease, 2 June, 1543, she had most of the estates that had been her great grandfather's Sir John Fitz-Lewis [A]. Wherein she was succeeded by her son—Lewis Mordaunt, then only 5 years old (w).

[X] It is said by the author of Magna Britannia, that it was anciently the possessions of the Fitz-Williams and Cogeshales, whose daughter and heir marrying Lodoick John, brought him the inheritance of this Town, anno 1438. . . . Essex, p. 684.

[Y] Namely, this maner of West-Thorndon, and that of Gynge Raufe with the advowson of the Church; which he held of Richard Duke of York; the maner of Dunton-Waylet, and advowson of the Church. [See under that parish.] the maner of Wokyndon Episcopi or Cranham. [See above, p. 105.] the maner of Bromfordes, in Newendon, with the advowson of the Church. In Dunton, Bulfan, Easthorndon, Bartlesden, and Ramsden Cray, 3 messuages, 1 toft, 105 acres of arable, 11 acr. of meadow, 53 of pasture, and 53 s. rent of assise. In East and West Tilbury, Horndon, and Little Thurrok, 6 messuages, 3 tofts, 148 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 42 of pasture, 80 of marsh, and 67 s. rent of assise: Also 2 tofts, 120 acres of arable, 52 of pasture, 80 of marsh, 28 s. 5 d. rent of assise, and a Fair beyond the water of the Thames from West-Thurrok as far as Grenehithe. In Stifford, 2 messuages, 32 acres of arable, 3 acr. of meadow, 9 of pasture. In Southweald, 4 messuages, 18 acres of arable, and 60 s. rent. In Chilterdiche, 1 toft, 26 acres of arable, 105 of pasture, 22 of wood. In Springfeild, and Sandon, 2 messuages, 1 fulling-mill, 240 acres of arable, 11 acres of meadow, 46 of pasture, 2 of wood, and a fishery; called Springfeild bernies and Sandon bernies; half the advowson of Springfeild Church, and 41. 4 s. 3 d. ob. rent. In Theydon Gernon, 1 messuage, 157 acres of arable, 10 acr. of the same, 10 of meadow, and 2 s. rent. Inquis. 21 Hen. VI.—Arms of Lodoick John. Sable, a chevron between three trefoils slipt, argent.

[Z] In more places than one she is called his daughter: But that could not be, unless he had been married before, which we do not certainly find he was; however he might have been so, for very little occurs in records concerning this wealthy and considerable family.

[A] Particularly the maner of West-Horndon, and several messuages and lands in East-Horndon, Childerditch, and the two Warley's, the maners of Gyngraaff, Craneham,

It was afterwards in the noble Family of Petre; but how early doth not clearly appear, it not being in the Inquisition taken after the decease of Sir William Petre, 29 May 14 Elizab. But his son—John Lord Petre, who dyed 11 October 1613, held the maner of West-Horndon, with Feild-house, of the maner of Swannescombe in Kent, by the rent of 4 s. a year (x). Of this noble Family some account is given in the other Volume, p. 63.

Sir William Petre married first Gertrude, daughter of Sir John Tyrell of Warley, by whom he had two daughters; one of whom was Dorothy, wife of Nicolas Wadham Esq; and the other, Elizabeth, married to . . . Gostwick Esq; His second Lady was Anne, daughter of Sir William Browne, widow of John Tyrell of Heron, Esq; by her he had—John his son and heir, knighted in 1576, Knight of this Shire in two Parliaments; 27 and 28 Elizabeth; and by K. James I. in 1603, created Baron of Writtle. He had to wife Mary, daughter of Sir Edward Waldgrave Kt.—William his son and heir, married Catharine, second daughter of Edward Somerset Earl of Worcester; by whom he had seven sons, and three daughters. He dyed 5 May 1627.—Robert his eldest son and heir, married Mary, daughter of Antony Viscount Montacute; and had 3 sons, and 2 daughters. Departing this life 23 Octob. 1637.—William, his eldest son, succeeded. He had no issue by his first lady, Elizabeth, daughter of John Earl Rivers; and by his second, Bridget, daughter of John Pincheon of Writtle, Esq; he had only one daughter. Dying 5 January 1683-4.—John, his next brother succeeded, and he dying unmarried, in 1684.—Thomas his younger brother inherited; and departed this life 4 June 1707. He married Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Clifton of Letham in Lancashire, Bart, by whom he had—Robert his son and heir, who married, 1 March 1711-12, Catharine, daughter of Bartholomew, and sole heir to her brother Francis Walmesley, of Dunkehalgh in Lancashire Esq; But he dyed of the small pox 22 March 1712-13, in the 23d year of his age, leaving his Lady big with child of a son born the 3d of June following, and named—Robert-James, a nobleman of great accomplishments. He married, 2 May 1732, Anne daughter of James late Earl of Derwentwater, by whom he had Catharine, Barbara, Juliana; and a son named Robert-Edward. Upon his decease in July 1742, he was succeeded by his only son—Robert-Edward, the present Lord Petre, who hath married Anne, daughter of the Hon. Philip Howard, youngest brother of the Duke of Norfolk, by his wife Henrietta, daughter of Edward Blount of Blagdon in Devonshire Esq;

Feild-house, which John Lord Petre dyed possessed of with this maner of West-Horndon, belonged, in the reign of K. Henry IV. to the family of Coggeshall. For, Thomas, son and heir of Thomas Coggeshale Esq; released to John Gladwyne, and Joane his wife, and their heirs, all his right in those lands and tenements called Feldhous, in West and East Thorndon, Chiltenditche, and Bulvan (y).

GING-RALPH, vulgarly INGRAVE, after having been many years a distinct Parish, was, by act of parliament, united to that of West-Horndon.

Ging, derived from the Saxon Ge-ing, a meadow or pasture, is explained in the other Volume, note W. p. 43. [B]. As for the addition of Ralph, it was taken from its owner at the time of the Survey, namely Ralph brother of Ilger.

The name is otherwise written in records, Ging-Raff, Ginges Radulfi, Ging ad Radulphum, Ingrave alias Ingraffe, Reng, or Rynge, Raufre, Yengrave.

Besides Ralph brother of Ilger, who held what had belonged to Oslac in Edward the Confessor's reign [C]; Odo, bishop of Bayeux, and Serlo, held lands here; which had belonged to one Freeman, and to Alfid [D].

These several parcels became very early united into one maner.

This

This lordship was held of the Barony of Swainscamp, by the family of Montchenfy [E]; and, upon failure of the male line of the eldest branch of this Family, about the reign of K. Edward I. [see in the other Volume, p. 35. 253.] that King gave it to his sixth son, Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent.

The Montchenfy family had a view of frankpledge here. For William de Montchenfy was called upon in 1284, to shew by what warrant, or authority, it was holden by him.

A Family, surnamed from it de Ginges, held it, or at least part, in K. Edward the First's reign; for that King, in 1281, granted license to Reginald de Ginges to impark divers lands in Ginges Radulfi, within the Forest of Essex (z). In 1314, a fine passed between John, son of Reginald de Ginges and Margery his wife, plaintiffs, and John Malegraf deforc' of the maner of Ginges Rauf, with the Advowson of the Church. And, in 1317, the said John, and Margery, passed the premises by fine, after their joint lives, to Richard Goffalin, and Alice his wife; who is said to have been daughter and heir of John de Ginges. They held them of Edmund aforesaid, Earl of Kent, in 1330 (a). And in 1332, they held them of his Countess, by the name of Rynges, Raufre, as of the maner of Swānescompe, which was of the Barony of Montchenfy, by the service of 2 s. per ann. and suit of Court from month to month. See under East and West Tilbury. Sir Richard Goffalyne dyed in 1332, and was succeeded by his son — Richard (b) [F]. He was dead befor the year 1353; for John Earl of Kent, who dyed that year, held half a fee in Gynge-Raufe, which Richard Goshalme lately held (c). — Robert Goshalme had this estate in 1388; He held it under Thomas de Holand, Earl of Kent, by the name of half a fee: and in 1398, under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, by the same title. The latter held here a view of frankpledge once a year (d).

The Goshalm family ceased here about the reign of K. Henry IV. or V. For, in 1420, William Fitz-William Esq; cousin of the late Robert Godfalm, released to Edmund Traunpour, and William Larde, Chaplains, and their heirs, all his right in the maner of Gynge Rauf, with the Advowson of the Church: and in lands and tenements in East and West Tilbury, Horn-don, Dounton, Chaldweil, and Little Thurock, which were once Robert Godfalm's (e).

John Godfalf had a Park at Gynge Ralf; in the name of Reginald de Gynge (f).

By the marriage of the heirefs of the Goshalm family, as it is said, this estate came to Lodowic, or Lewis, John; who presented to this Rectory in 1435, and jointly with Anne his wife in 1438, 1439, and 1441, being called a Knight in the two last presentations (g). See an account of him under West-Horndon. He dyed in 1442, possessed of this maner of Gynge Raufe, with the Advowson of the Church, which he held of Richard Duke of Yorke, by the service of 5 s. per ann. (h). His son — Sir Lewis Fitz-Lewis being attainted for his adherence to the House of Lancaster, this estate was given, with many others, by K. Edward IV. to his brother Richard Duke of Gloucester.

But the maner of West-Horndon, and the Advowson of this Church, were given to Thomas Bouchier, Archbishop of Canterbury, who presented in 1477 and 1480 to this Rectory, by reason of his Lordship of Thorndon. Upon Richard's being defeated and slain at Bosworth fight, all his estates coming to K. Henry VII. he restored these to Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, who presented to this Rectory from 1494 to 1519 (i).

Ela Fitz-Lewis brought them in marriage to Sir John Mordaunt. And of that family they were purchased by Sir William Petre, who dyed possessed of them 13 January 1571; and from whom they have descended to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

Mr. Joseph Swarder; John Trott; Benjamin Bucknall, &c. have also some lands here.

Robert Spencer, who was 48 years Rector of this Church, and dyed 26 September 1638, gave a House and Land, of three pounds a year, over against the great Pond on Ing-ralph Common, for the ornaments of the Church. It is called Church-house and Church croft.

The Poor have also a gift in bread.

And an Alms-house stands on the Green, for two dwellers.

The CHURCHES of West-Horndon, and Gynge-Ralph, being grown ruinous, an Act of Parliament was obtained for uniting those two Parishes: and the Churches being taken down, a new one of brick was built at the Charge of the Rt. Hon. the late Lord Petre [G]. It stands about the mid-way between the two ancient Churches, near the Mounts belonging to W. Horndon-Hall, whence an avenue towards Burntwood is made, with new plantations of trees, and a bason.

The Church of West-Horndon stood below the Hall; and that of Ging-Ralph above two miles north of the same, in a bottom. Each of them was dedicated to St. Nicolas, and there were in each three Bells.

The Rectory of West-Horndon was for some years in the gift of the Families of Fitz-William, and Coggeshale; then of Lodowic John, and Fitz-Lewis, and of Mordant; and ever since in the noble Family of Petre.

The Rectory of Gingrave is also, and hath been, in the same Families; but was at first in that of Goshalm.

II. HORNDON ON THE HILL, stands about four miles and a half south from the two others; and on a Hill, which occasioned the name. From hence is a very good prospect.

This Town has a small market on Saturdays: And a Fair on St. Peter's day, unless altered with the Style.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Uluric a freeman enjoyed this Parish: But Eustace Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant Garner, held it, at the time of the Survey [H].

It was divided afterwards into these Maners, 1. Ardern, or Arden, Hall. 2. The maner of Malgreffs. 3. . . . that of Withfield.

ARDERN-HALL

stands at the east end of the Town.

This is the largest Maner, but it formerly held of that of Malgreff.

After Earl Eustace, its ancientest owners were a Family surnamed de Ardern, from which it took the appellation of Ardern-hall.

In 1122, Thomas Ardern and his son Thomas, gave to the Monks of Bermondsey, the tythe of corn of their lordship in Horndon, which was this estate (k).

John de Lovetot, who dyed in 1295, held of Thomas de Ardern, in Horndon, by the service of one rose of yearly rent, one messuage, 500 acres of arable, three acr. of meadow, 17 pieces of mead, 17 acr. of pasture, a wind-mill, and a fourth part of a market there, 61 s. 8 d. ob. rent, perquisites of Court with a view of frankpledge;—John was his son and heir (l).

Next it was in the families of Fabel, Shaa, and Pooley. For Thomas Fabel of Hatfield-Peverell, at the time of his decease in 1353, held lands and tenements in Horndon, called Ardern-hall, of whom the jurors knew not; and the fourth part of the Market of Horndon belonging to Ardern-Hall, of the King of his Honor of Bologne (m). — John his son and heir granted to Robert de Marney Knight, all his Right in the maner of Ardern-Hall (n). Though the Jury did not know it, the following record shews of whom this Lordship was holden.

In 1360, Sir Thomas Maundevill, granted to Robert de Marney Kt. and his heirs, all his lands and tenements, which Bartholomew Denmars and Robert Pycot, and John Fabel lately held in Horndon (o). The same year, Robert Pykot released to Sir Robert Marney all his right in Ardern-hall. There are several Grants and Releases of this maner from the Family of Marney, in the time of K. Edward III. yet these seem to have been but for a time, and in trust, because we have proof of its being in their hands, afterwards. Sir Robert de Marney released to Robert de Burton and John de Shropham, and their heirs, all his right in the maner of Leyre-Marney and Advowson of the Chantry of the said village, and the maner of Ardern-Hall in Horndon, in 1369. And, in 1377, John Shropham, Chaplain, released to Robert de Burton, Parson of the Church of South-Wokynndon, and his heirs, all his right in the maners aforesaid (p). [See under Laver Marney. The same Robert de Burton granted to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Sergeaulx a yearly rent of twenty marks out of the maner of Ardern-Hall in Horndon for life (q). This was their way of marriage settlements; for Sir William Marney, who was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1402, had for wife Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Richard Sergeaux (r) [K].

This Sir William Marney dyed in 1414. At the time of his decease, he is recorded to have held the maner of Arden-hall in Horndon, of Thomas Malgrave; and one tenement with 100 acres of arable, called Horndon-House, in Horndon, of John de Cham's by the service of 15 s. 1 d. ob. rent;—Thomas was his son and heir (s).

This is the only time we find it said, that Arden-hall held of Malgrave, who had a lesser maner in this parish; but we give it as it is in the Inquisition:—Thomas, son and heir of Sir William Marney, was knighted; but having only one daughter, who dyed in her minority, he was succeeded by his next brother—John Marney Esq; father of—Henry, one of the Privy-Council to K. Henry VII. and created by K. Henry VIII. 9 April 1523, Lord Marney. But neither of them appear by the Inquisitions to have been possessed of this Maner; though they seem to have been lords paramount till

For, before the reign of K. Henry VII. it was in the Shaa Family, mentioned

Sir Edward Shaa, who dyed 20 April 1488, held the maners of Arden-hall, and Horndon-house, and other estates [L], wherein he was succeeded by his son—Hugh Shaa Esq; then aged 22, who, at the time of his decease, 20 March 1491, held also the maners of Horndon-house, and Arden-hall, with appertenances, of the King in capite, by the service of one knight's fee: also a tenement called Whelers, and Culverhouse croft, and Welde croft, in this parish. His wife's name was Julian. They left only two daughters, Margaret, wife of Thomas Rich [M]; and Catharine, wife of William Browne, of London, mercers (t).

Sir John Shaa held, next, the maner of Arden-hall of the Maior and Commonalty of London, by fealty, and the service of one pair of gilt spurs, if demanded; he held also the maner of Horndon-house, of Sir Henry Merney, by fealty, and the service of one broad arrow, in lieu of all services. In 1501, he and others, plaintiffs, and Henry Barnes, and wife, deforc'. levied a fine for 25 messuages, 10 acres of arable, and 100 s. rent, in Horndon super montem, and for a Market kept on Saturday every week, and

Fairs here on the Feast of St. Peter and Paul: This Sir John Shaa was son of John Shaa of Rochford in this County, and Lord Mayor of London in 1501. He dyed in December 1502, and was succeeded by his son—Edmund, or Edward (u); who held the maner of Horndon house of the heirs of John Lord Marney, and the maner of Arderne-hall, as before. And departing this life 24 March 1532, left his only daughter and heir

Alice, then four years old (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 484.] She afterwards brought this estate to her husband

William Poley Esq; a branch of the Poleys of Boxted in Suffolk. She dyed 7 March 1558, and he 7 December 1587. They both held the maner of Arden-Hall and Horndon-House, and Brismers, of whom not known; and the Maner of Horndon Market, with a Market and a Fair, and Shoppe-stall, of the Queen, in capite, by fealty. They had issue, John, William, George, Anne, Mary, Martha, and Alice.—John Poley Esq; the eldest son, then 30 years old, succeeded He was afterwards knighted; and, at the time of his decease, 7 December 1593, held the maners of Ardenhall, and Horndon-house, with Brymsfiners, and Limterdine, in this parish, Orfet, and Stamford, of the heirs of Lord Marney; and the Market and Fair as above. He was succeeded by his brother—William Poley Esq; (x). The Lady—Anne Poley enjoyed it in 1635. [See in the other Volume, p. 233. 484.]

It was afterwards purchased by the Kingsman Family, of whom the following lie buried in this Church, with Epitaphs. Jaspar Kingsman Esq; of this parish, and of the Middle Temple, who dyed 15 September 1704, in the 86th year of his age.—Jaspar, his eldest son, also of the Middle Temple, who dyed 24 June 1686, æt. 36.—Josiah, late of Burnham, executor of Jaspar the elder, who dyed 8 July 1719, in the 63d year of his age.—Josiah, son and heir of Josiah, who dyed 8 October 1735, in the 46th year of his age. The latter gave it to his younger son—William Kingsman Esq; who dyed in May 1745. It belongs now to—Benjamin Kingsman Esq; [N].

The Farm of the Tythes of the maner of Ardern-Hall, belonging to the Priory of Bermondsey, was lett to John Salmon and William Thanke, at the rent of 53 s. 4 d. Ardern-Hall and Horndon-Place paid great and small Tythes to a private Impropiator, now divided between two Sisters.

The Maner of MALGREFFS, or MALGRAVES.

The mansion house stands about a mile from this Town, on the left hand side of the road leading to Langdon-Hills.

It took its name from the ancientest owners of it upon record.

In the year 1200, Arnulph Malegreffe paid two marks to the scutage of Normandy.

And in 1210, Alured Malegreffe held one fee in Horminedone of the Honor of Bologne (y).

In 1254, John Malegreffe of Horndon held a whole knight's fee, as did John Fitz-Bernard, and Richard de St. Ouen, and were presented at the Pleas at Chelmsford; for that being of full age, they had not taken up the honor of Knighthood, therefore they were amerced (z). — John Malgreff, who dyed in 1286, held here of the King in capite as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of one knight's fee and suit at the Court of Witham, a messuage, 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, one marsh containing 100 acres, and a windmill, 20 s. rent. the fourth part of the toll and stallage of Horndon Market. — John was his son (a) — Thomas Malegreff, at the time of his decease in 1343, held this maner, in which there was one capital messuage, 300 acres of arable, 8 acr. of meadow, 24 of pasture, and 34 s. of rent. — Thomas was his son and heir (b). Another — Thomas Malgrave dyed possessed of the same in 1420 — Richard his son had a market and a fair at Horndon att Hill, in 1445. — Thomas his son had them also, and the maner in 1459. And — Richard, brother of this last, at the time of his decease, in 1467, held this maner by the 4th part of a knight's fee: and 80 acres called Hyldebrondes of the Priores of Higham: and 80 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 24 of pasture, &c. of the Bishop of London (c). — Elizabeth, wife of Richard Berners, and Agnes Malgrave, were his aunts and next heirs.

Sir John Tyrell, who dyed 28 Febr. 1540, held a messuage called Malgraves, and a field called Stony-hill, in Horndon, and Langdon (d). His son — John Tyrell Esq; purchased the maner of Malgraves of Henry Bernes, who had license 5 May 1550 to alienate it to him, with intention that they should hide or conceal it, [reconderent]. At the time of his decease 2 March 1585, he held a messuage and 400 acres of arable called Malgroves, and Stonehill, by the tenth part of a knight's fee. — Mary Clynton was his daughter and heir (e). [See above, p. 114.]

Edward Archer Gent. who dyed 27 April 1600, held this maner containing by estimation 350 acres, and Malgrave-mead 10 acres (f). Whether he married the heiress or not, nothing shews. He left a son — Henry, who dyed 16 Novemb. 1623 (g), and his son and heir was — Henry.

It has been since in the Family of Andrews; Anne, daughter of Mr. Thomas Andrews, citizen of London, brought it to her husband Thomas Cotton of Conington in Cambridgeshire, Esq; from whom it descended to their daughter and heir Frances, wife of Dingley Askham of Conington, Esq; present Lord. This estate pays a modus of 13 s. 4 d. to the Vicar.

The Maner of WYTHEFELD.

The mansion house is about a mile north from the Church.

This Maner was distinct from the two already mentioned as early as the time of K. Edward III. For, in 1337, Maud, wife of John de Handloe, of Wythefeild, held a view of frankpledge, 5 s. rent, and a moiety of the Market and Fair of Horndon, of Philippa Queen of England of her Honor of Reyley, by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee. — John Handlo, of Horndon, who dyed in 1348, held there of the King, as of the said Honor, 16 acres of arable; and one messuage and a moiety of another of Hugh Malegraff, by the service of 8 d. a year; and the moiety of a messuage of the Lord of Ardern-Hall; and six acres of arable and meadow of William Andrew; — Richard was his son and heir (b).

Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, had in 1372 a fourth part of a knight's fee in Horndon, which Abel de Withfeild held of him (i). From this person it was that the present Maner took its name.

Thomas Sampken Esq; held the maner of Little-Thurrock; and the maners of Whitfeilds and Fulks, with appertenances, and 20 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 100 of wood, 300 of marsh, and 7 l. 12 d. ob. rent, and the rent of five bushels of oats, in Horndon super Montem, and Barking, of the King (k). [See above, p. 5. 8.]

Tho. Sampken dyed without heirs.

This maner was afterwards in Christopher Chibborn Esq; In 1607 he paid 12 d. to the Sheriff's turne. [See in the other Volume, p. 177.] He sold it to Thomas Wright Gent. who settled it on his wife Esther for life, then on Simon his son and heir (l).

Geoffrey Tucker Gent. had it afterwards; and sold it to William Vernon Gent.

It was purchased by Jaspar Kingsman of the Middle-Temple Esq; who dyed in 1704, and gave it to—Josiah Kingsman Esq; from whom it came to his eldest son—Josiah Kingsman Esquire; upon whose death without issue, it came to—Jaspar Kingsman Esq; his brother, and continues in that Family.

Thomas Highbed, yeoman, who was burnt here for heresy in the reign of Qu. Mary I. 26 March 1555, had in this parish a messuage and 60 acres of land called Hornedon house; and a cottage. This last he held of Francis Clopton and Lora his wife, as of their maner of Ardern-hall. (m).

Daniel Caldwell Esq; who dyed 13 Novemb. 1634, held in this parish a Maner or capital messuage called Cantis, about half a mile south of the Church; and lands called Cantis salmonds, Sandholes, Bread and Checquer crofts, of the Bishop of London, of his castle of Stortford, by the rent of 6s. for Castle-guard: And of the Lady Anne Poley, as of her maner of Ardern-hall, messuages and lands called Dickers, Swann-crofts, the Little Goare oak, Reeves, with several other parcels. Of the King he held, as of the Honor of Clare, great Wheelers: and of Robert Earl of Warwick, as of the Honor of Raleigh, Potters house, Dame Joane's croft, Scabons, Skitts grounds, Wheelers, Rowleaze, Bushcroft, Butfeild &c. (n). He is buried in this Church with an epitaph [O]; from which we learn, that he was son of Laurence Caldwell of Battersey, and of the Middle Temple &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 220.]

Who has those lands now I do not find; unless it is some of these persons, George Stevens Esq; Mr. John Blatch; Samuel Waldo &c. who have estates in this parish.

The Monastery of Bromehale in Berkshire had lands here, which K. Henry VIII. 21 October 1522, granted to St. John's College in Cambridge (o).

The Abbey of St. John's in Colchester had Tithes out of several lands in this parish (p); by whom given doth not appear.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, stands pleasantly in the middle of the Town. The Church and Chancel are tiled; but a north aisle belonging to both, is leaded. A Tower of stone, embattled, hath on the top a spire shingled; and in it are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged to Berking Nunnery: to which the great Tithes were appropriated, and they had the Advowson of the Vicarage. In them they remained till their suppression, when they came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted both to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's London (q), in whom they have continued ever since.

The Vicarage was augmented, in 1719, by Bp. Robinson, with 225 l. to which were added 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Here has been a custom, time out of mind, at the Churching of a Woman, for her to give a white cambrick handkerchief to the Minister as an offering: This is observed by Mr. Lewis, in his account of the Isle of Thanet, where the same custom is kept up.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1026 l. 3 s. 0 d.

12. DUNTON,

stands between the Horndons, and has its name from the two Saxons words Dun and tun, i. e. Hill town.

It is otherwise written in records, Dantune, Donton, Dounten; with the addition of Wallet, Waylet, Weylot, Willet, or Wilate; which addition was as early as the reign of K. Richard

II. and probably from the name of a tenant under the Abbey of Bec.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, this parish belonged to one Priest, a freeman; and to Uluuin: At the time of the Survey, it was part of the large possessions of Odo, Bishop of Baieux; and Goduin Gudhen had seized the part that was Uluuin's [P].

This

This Parish was divided afterwards into the two maners, 1. . . . of Dunton-hall. 2. . . . of Frierne:

DUNTON-HALL

stands near the Church.

Upon Odo's being deprived of his possessions, as related above, p. 196. his half-brother, William the Conqueror, gave this estate to the noble Family of Albini, founders or benefactors to the Abbey of Bec in Normandy.

Negal de Albini gave to that Abbey 20 l. land in Dunton; which grant was confirmed by K. Henry II. And Nigel became a monk in that Monastery, where he was buried [2].

Maud de Walingford gave Great and Little Okeburne to this Abbey of Bec. These lay in Wiltshire, and the lordship of this parish was subjected to the Priory of Okeburn, which was a Cell to Bec Abbey. Bec had the additional name of Herlewin from its first Abbot so named [R].

In 1395, this Alien Monastery demised, by their Proctor, to John de Pykenham and Elizabeth his wife, the Advowson of the Church of Dounton Willett, and a yearly pension of 4 marks issuing out of this Church; and the whole portion of Tithes they had within the parish of Woodham Ferrers; to hold and enjoy for their lives: and also the reversion of the Maner of Dounton Waylett, after the death of Alice, late wife of Sir Thomas Tyrell (r).

Humfrey de Waleden, who dyed in 1331, held for his life this maner, the reversion being in Margery widow of John de Say, and her son Humfrey (s).

John de Vere Earl of Oxford held it of the Prior of Okeburne in 1358, and—Thomas his son in 1370, as half a fee (t).

Humfrey de Bobun Earl of Hereford and Essex, at the time of his decease in 1372, held one fee in Dunton near Hareward Stoke, which the Abbot of Waltham Holy Cross had; and he farther held the tenth part of a knight's fee in Dunton called Sterling shell, of the Prior of Okeborne (u).

This maner, belonging to a Priory Alien, was seized either by K. Edward III. or K. Henry V; but when and to whom immediately granted doth not appear. The Advowson was in the Family of Inglefield, who presented six times to the living, from 1422 to 1451; and therefore probably had a grant of the estate, at least of the Advowson (w).

In 1442, Sir Lewis John dyed possessed of this maner of Dunton-Weylot, with the Advowson of the Church, parcel of the possessions of the Prior of Okeburne (x). Most probably it remained in the Crown for a while, after its being confiscated in the reign of K. Edward III. Concerning Sir Lewis John, and the Fitz-Lewis Family, see above, p. 213.

About the year 1467, K. Edward IV. gave this Maner and Advowson &c. to Thomas Wilmot, Vicar of Asheleford, (now Ashford) in Kent, and his successors, to provide two fit Chaplains, and two secular Clerks, to pray in that Church, for the said King, and a few others, during their lives; and after their decease for their souls, and the souls of the near relations of that King, and of several of his friends slain at the Battles of Northampton, St. Albans, and Shireborn (y) [S].

By virtue of this grant, Thomas Wilmot presented to this Rectory from 1467 to 1479; and his successor William Sutton, Master of the College of Ashford, in 1496 (z).

Upon the suppression of all such Religious Foundations, the Crown became possessed of this Chantry, and all the lands belonging thereto.

Weever saith, that Our Lady's Chapel at St. Albans was filled with the nobility and others slain in the Wars of York and Lancaster. This Chapel stands east of the choir. There are Epitaphs for some of them, and for others at St. Peter's Church.

In 1550, John Ponet had license to alienate the Maner and vill of Dounton Waylate, with the Advowson of the Church of Dounton, to John Cheke (a).

But, before that, the Provost and Fellows of King's College in Cambridge seem to have been possessed of both. For they presented to the Church in 1532, and have ever since, as far as we can find, been possessed of the Maner and Rectory.

The maner of FRIERN

belongs to St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, and is lett out upon lease. Friern-hall, the mansion house, lies in a bottom, about half a mile north from this Church.

DUNTON-WAYLETT, a capital Messuage in this parish, above a mile north from the Church, belonged to George Drywood, Gent. who dyed 22 May 1603. He held also of King's College, in this Parish, 50 acres, called Sherebreds crofts, Primorlands, Barrefield, Russhenfeild; and a messuage called Scotts, or great Cannons, and lands named Riches, and Does: also 44 acres, called Hilbrands in Langdon. Besides several parcels in other parishes (b).

Mr. Thomas Weston; John Staples &c. have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands pleasantly on a rising ground, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. A wooden frame, with a Spire leaded, contains 2 Bells.

This Rectory was at first in the gift of the Albini family; then in the Abbey of Bec in Normandy; afterwards in the Inglefield family; and in the Masters of the Hospital or Chantry of Ashford; and ever since 1532 in King's College Cambridge.

Dunton Parish is rated to the Land-tax at 850l.

13. B U L F A N

lies south of Dunton, and hath on the west the Brook that runs down to Purflete. It overflows so much of the country here, as to make a Marsh at Orset, called Orset Fenn, and another here called Bulfan Fen. And from this Fenn and the word Bull, was the name of this Parish originally derived, qu. Bull's Fenn. There is a tradition, that the Tide used to flow so strong by Purflete up the Brook, that Boats could sail up to Orset-hall, or higher.

The name of this parish is otherwise written Bulvan; the letters f and v being easily convertible; and also Bulgeven.

It belonged of old to the Nunnery of Berking [T]: and the celerefs of that House received of the collector of this place 50 s. at Michaelmas, and 50 s. at Easter (c). The Maner, and Advowson continued in that House till the Dissolution of Monasteries.

Bulfan-hall stands near the east end of the Church.

The Wic, stands in a bottom.

In 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Bulvan, alias Bulfan-hall, with appertenances, and the Advowson of the Church, to Edward Bury, and his heirs, to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (d). He was of the Bed-Chamber to K. Henry; a Justice of Peace for this County; and son of—Bury, of Eastwood, by Alice his wife, daughter of John Strangman. The said Edward Bury, at the time of his decease in February 1582, held this maner; and Raileigh Park, and the great Lodge (e). He had two sons, Bradford, and Joseph, who jointly presented to this living in 1616 [U].

The 1st of March 1618-19, a license was granted to Joseph Bury, and Mary his wife, and Bradford Bury, Gent. to alienate, or acknowledge a fine, and suffer a recovery; in order to make a division of this maner, and of the advowson of the living: It was made accordingly, and the Hall farm was the share of Joseph and Mary his wife for life.—Joseph Bury dyed 31 August 1626. He held the capital messuage, or mansion house of the maner of Bulfanhall, with appertenances, a wind-mill, granary, and half the advowson of the Church. Mary Benold, wife of John Ballard, was his daughter and heir, 31 years old (f).—Bradford Bury Esq; the other brother, had a moiety and half a part of the maner of Bulfan-hall; a moiety of the advowson of the Church, and of a wind-mill and granary, which he held of the King in capite, by the service of the 40th part of a knight's-fee. He had also Railey Park, and the Lodge. All Inquis. 26 Elizab. But he had, according to the family's pedigree, two Sons, who certainly succeeded him in this estate, as mentioned above.

which he held at the time of his decease, 5 May 1630, and was succeeded by his eldest son — Edward, then aged 30 years (g). Besides this son, he had, by Anne his wife daughter of Sir Roger Appleton of South Bemflete Kt. and Bart. another son named Henry; and three daughters, Anne, Elizabeth, Catharine. — Bradford Bury, of Little Wakering-hall Esq; married Elizabeth, daughter of George Affer of Barling Gent. and had by her four sons, Bradford, Henry, Joseph, George; and two daughters, Mary, wife of Thomas Barnes, and Elizabeth, wife of Richard Blackmore. Bradford, and Joseph, dyed unmarried — Henry, the second son and heir, of this place, had four wives. 1. Mary, daughter of John Haft, of Herongate. 2. Sarah, daughter of Richard Oakely, of Upminster. 3. Elizabeth, widow of Richard Hemings, of Chingford. 4. Mary, daughter of Henry Stevens of Billerca. By the first he had Bradford, who dyed 10 July 1675, in the 48th year of his age, unmarried, and is buried in Little Wakering Church; Henry, and Mary. By the second he had Sarah, wife of John Lucy of Buers Gifford. And by the fourth, Joseph, William; Susanna, Elizabeth, Martha, and Henrietta. [Concerning the Bury family see more in the other Volume, p. 230.]

Henry Bury, Gent. presented to this living in 1661. — Henry Bury Esq; and Henry Bury, junior, Gent. in 1681. And Henry Bury, and Jasper Williams, [qre. Kingsman] in 1692 (b). The Maner and Advowson are shared between the Families of Bury, and Kingsman.

Mr. Samuel Bonham hath also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. In a wooden Belfrey, with a Spire shingled, there is one Bell.

This Church was in the gift of Berking Nunnery till its dissolution. Afterwards it came, with the Maner, into the Families of Bury, and Kingsman.

Bulfan parish is rated to the land-tax at 737 l.

14. ORSET.

The name of this parish is otherwise written in records Horset, Orsed, Dorfed, Orfedd, Orzed. It seems to have been originally Hopyrhæð, qu. Horse's heath: contracted afterwards into Orset, as Horsheath in Cambridge-shire is commonly pronounced Horset. By some of the Germans Hors is pronounced Ors. See Somner. The Normans did not much like to use the aspirate H, nor the final th. Here are some ancient intrenchments, or fortifications, inclosing four or five acres.

Before the conquest this parish belonged to the See of London [W]; but afterwards part of it was given to Eustace Earl of Bologne, which he enjoyed at the time of the Survey.

These made the two Maners of Orset-hall, and Loft-hall.

ORSET-HALL,

The Maner-house, stands a little way north-west from the Church. Roger Bishop of London, in 1229, passed by fine 2 carucates of his demesnes here, and the Church of Hackney, to Robert Harnigney (i).

In 1290, K. Edward I. confirmed to the Bishop of London a view of frank-pledge in his maners of Orset, Leynden, and Chelmsford (k).

Bishop Bonner had a House here, in which he sometimes resided: most of it is now demolished.

This Maner and Estate continued in the See of London till the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign. But a private Act of parliament being then made, enacting, 'That upon the vacation and avoydance of every Archbishoprick or Bishoprick, within this realm, it should and might be lawful for her Highness to elect and choose, and to take into her hands and real possession, as much and so many of any the Houses, Castles, Mannors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments, being parcel of the Possessions of any such Archbishoprick, or Bishoprick so being void, as the clere yearly valewe of all her Majesties Parsonages appropriate and yerely Tenths, within every such Archbishoprick or Bishoprick, shall yerely amount and extend unto (l):' By virtue of this act, upon Bishop Bonner's deprivation, that Queen authorized Commissioners to take into her possession the several Maners of Coppesford, Orset, Maldon, Rickmansworth with Pinchefeld, Rydmerley, Dabytot, Fanhope, Swell inferior, Knoll, Sewbury, and Stoke near Gildeford; and to settle in exchange the like value of Rents and Profits in the appropriated Rectories and Churches of Heston, East Bedfont, Great Dunmowe,

. . . Latham, Gent. had it in 1635.

Soon after it was in John Hatt, of London, City-Attorney; son of Giles, and grandson of Richard Hatt, of Leckhampsted in Berkshire, Gent. He had two wives. 1. Elizabeth, or Cecily, daughter of Thomas Pettitt of Kent. 2. Dorothy, daughter of Richard Piggot of London. By the first he had a son, John, who dyed before him; and one daughter. By the second wife he had seven sons, Richard; Charles, of Gingrave; John, of Stifford; William, &c. He dyed 19 April 1658, and was buried in this Church, with a Monument.—Richard Hatt of this place Esq; married . . . daughter of . . . Williams, and had by her Piggot; Catharine, wife of . . . Smith; and Mary.—Piggot Hatt Esq; by Honoria his wife, daughter of Thomas Luther of Suttons in Stapleford-Tany Esq; had Anne, Honoria, and Henrietta [X]. Anne was married to Richard Letchmere, of London, Gent. and Honoria to the Rev. John Lidgould.

Richard Letchmere, and his son Richard, being intituled in moieties to this Maner; as having purchased Mrs. Lidgould's part, Richard, the father, agreed, 31 March 1743, to sell a moiety of the Fines of this maner for the sum of 670l. to Richard Baker of Stepney causeway, Gent. February 16 1743, Richard Letchmere, the younger, agreed to sell a moiety of the demesne lands to Mr. Baker for the sum of 2900l. And, 18 April 1744, a moiety of the Maner.

Mr. Letchmere dying soon after, Anne his widow sold Mr. Baker the Quit-rents amounting to 44 l. a year, and an undivided moiety of the Maner for 1800l. The 23d of December 1746, Peter le Febvre of Walthamstow Esq; and Elizabeth his wife, in consideration of 2900l. sold the other moiety to Richard Baker Esq; and an Act of Parliament passed in 1746 for confirming the purchase. Mr. Baker dyed 22 April 1751.

LOFT-HALL, otherwise LOST-HALL, is the other Maner in this parish, being the part that belonged to Earl Eustace [Y].

The following persons are with great reason supposed to have been possessed of this estate.

Stephen de Bockton, who dyed in 1286, held in the Vill of Orzete of the King in capite, one messuage, 120 acres of arable, 25 s. rent of assize; Idomar wife of Thomas de Cotesdene;

Joanne wife of Ralph de Otingdene Knt. and Isende, were his daughters and heirs.

Stephen de Abyndon, at the time of his decease, in 1305, held here the same lands, and 24 s. 10d. in Orsett, which he purchased of John de Bevere, of the King in capite of his Honor of Bologne, and suit of court at Wytham from month to month (o). It paid 5 s. to the King's scutage when it happened.

In 1403, this Estate was given by Sir Gerard Braybroke jun. Edmund Hampden Esq; John Boys Esq; and Roger Albrighton Clerk, to maintain a Chantry, for one Chaplain to perform divine service at the Altar of St. Mary, under St. Mary's Chapel within the Bishop of London's Palace, joining to the Church of St. Paul, to pray for the good state of Robert Braybroke Bishop of London. The said Gerard and Edmund had remaining the maner of Danbury, Boys the maner of Tolles-shunt-Tregoz, and Albrighton the maner of Twinsted (p).—Sir Gerard Braybroke seems to have been of the Family of Bishop Braybroke, Chancellor of England, who dyed 27 August 1404. Whether he purchased this estate to settle thus, or had it by grant of the Crown; doth not appear. It is plain, that for some time it held of the King of the Honor of Bologne.

After the suppression of Chantries, this maner lately belonging to the Chantry of the low Chapel within the Bishop of London's Palace remained in the Crown; till Qu. Elizabeth, 29 November, 1559, granted it to Edward Baesh Esq; and Henry Parker, to hold in socage (q) [Z].

Owen Clunne, citizen and draper of London, who dyed 2 Septemb. 1563, held this maner or lordship of Loft-hall, and Loft-hall lands, of the Queen, as of the maner of East-Greenwich, in fealty: and messuages in this parish, called Skeltons, Hochesons, Friends, with several parcels of land.—Anne, wife of John Sheppard of Balcote in Shropshire, was his heir (r).

Frances Downes Esq; held the maner of Orsett in 1616.

Loft-hall belongs now to a person at Stratford. It is but a small thing.

Mr. William Goodeere of Nottingham; Mr. Joseph Berney; Gabriel Bale; John Jefferies; Richard Wood, &c. have also some Lands here.

Daniel Caldwell Esq; held, in 1634, Le Frith, and Curry mead, being 70 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, in Orsett, of the King, of his maner of East-Greenwich, in free and common socage by fealty (s).

[Z] Edward Baesh was a considerable man under K. Henry VIII. &c. and seated at Stansted Abböt in Hertfordshire. See Sir Henry Chauncy, p. 194.

SABUR, or SEBOROW-HALL, is said to be in the three parishes of Orset, Mucking, and Chadwell. It stands on the right hand side of the road leading from Horndon on the Hill to Chadwell. Anciently it belonged to the Hospital of St. Mary's without Bishops-gate London. K. Henry VIII, in 1543, granted this maner of Sabur-hall to John Wiseman of Felsted (t). [See in the other Volume, p. 146.] Afterwards it was in — William Strangman Esq; and, if we are not misinformed, hath been purchased for the Rector of Lime-house Church in Middlesex.

CRONDON, a considerable parcel of land, tho' above 10 miles north from Orset, and between the parishes of Stock and Margaret-ing; is yet a Hamlet in this parish of Orset. It was formerly a Park. This has been for some years turned to farms, all belonging to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre, except a small part lately in Mrs. Tabor. The Lord Petre pays the Rector of Orset for the Tythes of his lands here 16*l.* per ann. clear of all taxes, in pursuance of an award made by Bishop Compton, 3 May 1707, upon a reference to his Lordship from the Court of Exchequer, for determining a controversy then depending in the said Court concerning those Tythes. Crondon pays to the Poor rates of Orset. That part which lies in the parish of Stock pays Tythes to the Rector of Stock.

I take Crondon to be what Tidbaldus and others held at the time of the Survey.

Charities.

In the year 1495, Thomas Hotofte of Orsett gave by will to the Parishioners a parcel of land in Horndon on the Hill called Goldwell, containing by estimation forty acres; to bear out the common Fine of Orsett for ever. The Churchwardens for the time being to make yearly accounts before the parishioners of Orsett for the yearly profit of all the said land called Goldwell to the behoofe of the said Parishioners of Orsett. The common Fine was 20*s.*

Ambrose Gilbert of Orsett, S. T. B. by his will dated 6 May 1642, gave the Poor of Orsett five pounds yearly; to be paid to them, 50*s.* on Christmas day in the Church before morning Prayer, and 50*s.* more on Easter-day in the Church before morning Prayer; out of a House and Lands in the parish of Dovercourt or Harwich, known by the name of Pantries alias Pentrix. In 1683, there was a suit in Chancery for the recovery of arrears and for the payment of this 5*l.* per annum (u).

There is another clause in Ambrose Gilbert's will which concerns this parish, viz. 'Item I bequeath Marsh-house in St. Offeth Essex, with all the lands and woods belonging thereunto to the founding of a Fellowship and ' Scholarship in St. John's College Cambridge, and do appoint to be capable of those places, first, the Gilberts, next the Torkingtons, then Colchester-Schol, lastly Orset in Essex.'—His sister Margaret was married to Laurence Torkington.

Alice wife of Isaac Heminge, by will dated 9 Mar. 1643, gave certain Lands in Orset, particularly a tenement with its lands and appurtenances called Little Bagge; and two closes belonging to it containing by estimation five acres lying in Orsett, to Edward Rawson and Ellen his wife, to provide a maintenance for her son John Sharpe during his life, and to several others in case they should refuse to make such provision, remainder after the said John's death without issue to them the said Edward and Ellen, and to the issue of the said Ellen. And in default of such issue to the use and behoofe of such persons as then shall be Churchwardens and Overseers of the poor for the time being of the said parish of Orsett; and Chadlington in the County of Oxford respectively; and of six or more of the ablest Parishioners of each of the same several parishes, such as the said Churchwardens and Overseers in each of the said parishes respectively shall enfeoffe in the premisses, equally to be divided between the said parishes, provided they pay out of the lands aforesaid one quarter of the rents issues and profits of the same messuages lands and tenements yearly for ever for and towards the setting and maintaining of a Lecture in the parish Church of Orsett for every Lord's day in the afternoon: And one other quarter thereof to the poor of the parish of Orsett. And the third part for and towards the setting and mainteyning of a Lecture in the Chapple of Chadlington for every Lord's day in the afternoon; and a fourth quarter to the poor of Chadlington.—This benefaction fell upon the death of Mr. Rawson to the parish, and has been commonly called Rawson's Benefaction. The particulars of it now in the hands of the two Parishes, and employed as by the will of the said Alice Heminge directed, are: A Tenement and about 20 acres of land adjoining, lett for 12*l.* per ann. A close called Pye Corner containing 5 acres lett for 3*l.* per ann. A large house and orchard commonly called the parish house situate over against the Church, lett for 7*l.* per ann. and 2 other tenements adjoining to the said house with a yard and orchard belonging to them, lett for 3*l.* 10*s.* per ann. all in the parish of Orsett and copyhold. And 4 houses in Northumberland-Alley in Fenchurch-street London, lett for 40*s.* per ann. The copyhold lands of this benefaction belonging to Orset were enfranchised in 1738, at the expence of Dr. Francis Astrey, the late Rector.

The 21 of March 1605, two tenements in Baker-street in this parish with the outhouses &c. to the same belonging, were purchased of John Bretton, with 32 pounds, left by Peter

Castle of Orset to the parishioners for this purpose. The rents to be received by the officers, and by them distributed to the Poor of this parish. They are now Alms-houses.

There are also other Alms-houses adjoining to the Church-yard.

Gaspar Kingsman by his will dated Janu. 1700, left to the poorest indutereft persons in the Parish of Orsett ten six penny loaves of wheaten bread every week for ever, to be delivered every sabbath-day in the morning, immediately after Divine Service and Sermon, to ten of the poorest and most indutereft persons by his executor or his assigns successively for ever. And for want of payment of the said poor of the said Parish, Then his will is that they or their assigns shall have full power and good authority to enter upon all his lands in Curingham in this County and receive the rents issues and profits thereof until they shall be paid the arrears and charges thereof for ever. This will was proved 30 Sept. 1704. and is to be found in the Prerogative-Office Ash. 214.

John Blatch of Orsett by his will bearing date 7 Oct. 1721 gave to the poor labouring men and poor widows of this parish forty six penny wheaten loaves, to be distributed upon the first day of May in every year for ever; to be paid for out of the rent and profits of his lands called Swaines which ly in this parish near the Town.

Besides these Charities, there is another to the poor of Orsett, called Slade's-hold; consisting of a tenement and four peices or closes of land containing in the whole ten acres. The donor, and time when, unknown.

There is also a farm in this Parish consisting of a messuage and about 100 acres of copyhold land, given by Sir John Weld to the Curate of the Chapel of Southgate in the parish of Edmon-ton in Middlesex.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Giles and All-Saints, stands pleasantly in the Street, is large, consisting of a double pace. The Chancel hath north and south Chapels: the whole tyled. A brick Tower, with a spire of wood, contains 3 Bells, besides a smaller one.

The Patronage of this valuable Rectory appears by the Registry to have been in the Bishops of London till the time of Queen Elizabeth. Mr. Newcourt finds a Rector presented by K. Edward I. and another by the Bishop of London; between whom there was a contest. The matter was referred to Ralph de Baldock Bishop of London, who decreed it, 13 March 1307, to belong to the Bishop. To understand this, we must suppose the Dispute to be of two Years standing, and that Mondon, in whose Favour the Decision had been, was presented by Gravesend, Predecessor to Baldock. This Baldock was Lord Chancellor, in virtue of which office he probably determined. Qu. Elizabeth presented thrice, reviving the pretension of the Crown in K. Edward's time, because she styles herself in the presentation the original patroness. She, or K. James I. granted it to Sir Robert Cecill, who exchanged it with the Bishop of London for the Advowson of Cheshunt, where Sir Robert's House of Theobalds stood, which estate was afterwards exchanged with K. James for Bishop's Hatfield in Hertfordshire. For the change of these Advowsons an Act of Parliament passed in 1603, which was a confirmation of Sir Robert's title to Cheshunt; yet the Earl of Salisbury, in 1674, would have unjustly presented to this Church. The Lord Keeper Finch awarded for the Bishop.

The Rector pays a pension of 6 l. a year to the Chancellor of St. Paul's, probably in lieu of such Tythes as were settled on the office of Chancellor of that Cathedral by Bishop Richard Fitz-Neal, in the time of K. Richard I. (w).

Thomas Hotofte, above-mentioned, founded a Chantry in this Church, and endowed it so well, that at the suppression it was valued at 7 l. 16 s. 8 d. In the certificate of Chantries it is said, That this 'Towne of Orsett ys a populous 'towne having in yt by estimation 400 of house- 'ling people.' The Hotofte Family flourished long at Knebworth in Hertfordshire. K. Edward VI. granted 11 July 1548, to Clement Sisley the Endowment of this Chantry; being Lands called Raynolds, Cowpers, Camberlaynes, Raysons, Ruffels, Baringtons, Genyns, Speades crofts, and Requyres Crofts; and lands, tenements and hereditaments in the several tenures of Henry Frauncys, and John Baldwyn, in Orsett (x).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1840 l.

15. LITTLE THURROCK is one of the three Thurrocks that are in this County, along the side of the River Thames.

The two others are in Chafford Hundred; and This lying east of them, is therefore called East Thurrock as well as Little Thurrock. The meaning and derivation of the name is explained above, p. 91.

Uluuin, a freeman, held this estate under Edward the Confessor.

At the time of the general Survey it was styled the Fee, Feudum, of the Bishop of London [A], by that name distinguished from Terra Episcopi

(w) Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 454.

* M m m

Londoniensis,

Londinensis, the Bishop of London's land; the first of these being, as I apprehend, his private estate, distinct from what belonged to the See. Of this part styled Feudum, some lands I find descending to his successors, others absorbed into other maners, and losing their primitive name. [See above, p. 104, note K.]

The value of the one Maner here, at the time of the Survey, is set so low; [namely 30s. 4d.] that, to make three Maners, as in time there were, it must have been but little improved, or some parcels out of the neighbouring two other Thurrocks, or adjoining Parishes, taken in. One part of it seems to have continued in the Bishops of London down to the reign of K. Edward III: the rest to have been held of the Crown very early, by grand Serjeancy.

Three Maners are now in this Parish. 1. The maner of Little Thurrock. 2. . . . that of Torells-hall. 3. . . . that of Berewes.

The Maner of LITTLE, or EAST THURROCK.

The mansion house stands near the Church.

There is no Inquisition for a while to be found relating to this first Maner, which gives one reason to believe it was not in lay hands, whence livery and wardship would have accrued. Then about the time of K. Edward II. or III. it was in a Family surnamed de Gravesend.

In 1338, a Fine passed between Thomas Gravesend and Joane his wife, plaintiffs, William Attwell, Chaplain, and Richard Pope deforc' of the maner of Little Thurrock, except the Advowson of the Church; the right of the said William, who granted it to Joane Gravesend, in fee-tail (y). This Joane, after the decease of her husband in 1371, held this maner of the Bishop of London (z). Thomas de Gravesend seems to have had a grant of it from his kinsman Stephen de Gravesend, Bishop of London, who dyed in 1338, and whose heir the said Thomas was found to be. Sir John Grey had mortgaged the maner of West-Thurrock to the Bishop (a).

In 1372, there was another Fine levied between Nicolas Carren, or Carew, plaintiff, John Merelaw, and Thomas Ferrers, deforc' of the Maner of Little-Turok and Advowson of the Church; the right of the said Nicolas; who granted it to John and Thomas for the life of Nicolas; remainder of a moiety to the daughter and heir of Sir Thomas de Gravesend, in tail; remainder of the other moiety to Joan de Cosington, cousin and heir of the said Thomas (b).

For some time this estate was in the Family of Carew, who presented eight times to the living: Namely, Nicolas de Carrow in 1372. Nicolas Carrew from 1383 to 1386: And the feoffees of Nicolas Carrew from 1388 to 1393.

William Skreen, and others, presented in 1408, John Berdefeld, and others, in 1429, and 1437 (c). From which it is probable that they were also possessed of the Maner.

In 1539, Thomas Sampson, or Sampken Esq; as he is called in the Inquisition, held the maner of Little-Thurrock with appertenances, and 4 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 40 of wood, 200 of marsh and 6l. 17s. 1d. rent in Thurrock-Parva, and the Advowson of the Church (d). [See under Hendon on the Hill.] The feoffees of Thomas Sampson presented to the Church from 1444, to 1459. Sir Thomas Urswick, and other feoffees of the maner, presented in 1475, and 1504. And the feoffees of the maner, un-named, in 1517, and 1532 (e).

This Maner was afterwards in the Crown, and granted by K. Philip and Qu. Mary, in 1558, to Sir Thomas White and others (f). The letters patent call it parcel of the possessions of St. Botolph's, Colchester, and of the late Lord Audeley. Mr. Newcourt also, from Grimes's Collections, finds lands here belonging to St. Botolph's Priory, and Stratford Priory. But I have no evidence of this [B].

This maner was again in the Crown in Qu. Elizabeth's time, who presented to the Living from 1567 to 1597. — Sir John Lewes held it in 1596.

K. James I. 9 February 1603-4, granted the maner of Little Thurrock, with appertenances, and the Site of the said maner, and all the demesne lands, and Thurrock lands, to Robert Stratford, to hold of the maner of East-Greenwich, in socage; without a syllable of St. Botolph. In K. James's patent is mention of lands exchanged with Audeley, which seems to have occasioned the calling these St. Botolph's lands, granted to Audeley. And Audeley perhaps had some lands here in exchange for the other.

Sir Thomas Lake presented to the living in 1605. Sir Lancelot Lake Kt. in 1661. Sir Thomas Lake in 1670. Abraham Fothergill Gent. in 1681. Sir Robert Dashwood, Bart. and others, in 1697.

[B] It is possible that when people came about the Throne to obtain proling patents, they, either through ignorance or design, represented things differently from what they were; and from abundant care that nothing should be lost for want of words comprehensive enough, have puzzled posterity and made work for the lawyers. This was done remarkably by Chancellor Audeley, as I have observed in numberless instances. And there being in this grant several parcels belonging to St. Botolph's Priory, the clause, 'quondam parcell' possession' nuper Prior Sc'i Bothi, & postea dei Tho. Dni Audeley,'—was repeated after Thurrocke, as it is done several times in this patent; though visibly a mistake here.

Afterwards,

Afterwards, this estate was mortgaged to—Newburgh, of Ireland Esq; and of him purchased by Francis Hayes, of the Temple Esq; whose nephew, and heir,—Charles Hayes Esq; sold it, in 1743, to

Mr. James Green, corn-factor in London: and he sold it again, with the Advowson, to Ebenezer Mussel, Esq; who dyed 3 October 1764.

This Maner holds no Court: And out of it is paid a fee-farm rent of 18 l. 10 s. 0 d.

stands by the side of the road, near the Pound.

This maner was derived from the other; and in the Torell family as early as the reign of K. Henry II. (g). It must have been new granted from the Crown since the Bishop was Lord here; because the Serjeancy by which it was held could not be performed by a Bishop. That grand Serjeancy was, of being Napperer to the King, or having the care of the King's Nappery, or Table-linnen, on the day of his Coronation.

The Torell, or Torrell, family hath been pretty fully mentioned, above, p. 92, and in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. — William Torell held this estate in the time of K. Henry II. as we have just observed. — Amauri Torrell was one of the great men that accompanied K. Richard I. to the Holy Land (h). — William Torell, in 1266, held in Little Thurrock 80 acres of arable, 20 acres of meadow, a salt marsh worth 8 s. per ann. 30 acres of wood, 50 s. rent assize, and owed suit at the King's Court of Barstable every three weeks. He dyed in 1290, and is then said to have been possessed of one capital messuage, 60 acres of arable, 32 of meadow, 60 of pasture, here, with pleas of Court, which he held of the King by Serjeancy, and payment of 10 s. in the Exchequer at Michaelmas (i). [See above, p. 92.] His son John Torell, who dyed before him in 1282, held here of the King, in capite, one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, pasture for 200 sheep, and 22 s. rent. He was succeeded by his son — John; who, at the time of his decease in 1329, held in Little-Thurrock 80 acres of arable, 14 acr. of meadow, pasture, and marsh, 26 s. 8 d. rent assize, of the King in capite, by the Seajeancy of being the King's Napperer in his household, and by the service of 10 s. per an. paid at Michaelmas into the Exchequer, and 11 s. to the Hundred of Berstaple, called Ward-silver, then in the hands of Edm. Plantagenet, Earl of Kent. — John was his son. — Christiana, widow of John Torell, held this estate in dowry, paying to the Exchequer at Michaelmas 10 s. and to the Hundred of Berdestaple, then the Earl of Kent's, 2 s. called Ward-Penies [C]. — Thomas was her son (k). — Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Torrell, held, for term of her life, as joint feoffee with her late husband, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of pasture and marsh, in Chaldwell and Little-Thurrock, and 3 l. 16 s. 8 d. rent assize, of the King in ca. by the 4th part of a knight's fee, viz. to be the King's Napperer in his Household, and also by the service of paying 2 s. a year called Ward-silver, to the Hundred of Berstaple then in the hands of the Earl of Kent. She dyed in 1375, and was succeeded by her son and heir — Richard, then 21 years old (l). At the time of his decease, in 1404, he held this maner in Little Thurrocke called Torells, of the King in capite, by the service of petit serjeancy, viz. of being the King's Napperer on his Coronation-day. He had also two parts of the maners of West-Thurrock, and Shelwe. [See above, p. 92. and in the other Volume, p. 476.] Alice his widow held a third part of the same in dower, by the service aforesaid. She dyed in 1417 (m). — Thomas, her son had it next: He departed this life in 1442, leaving — John his son, then 19 years old (n); who by Emma his wife, sister and coheir of John Raynesford, had — Henry Torell. He dyed in 1480, and — Humfrey, his son and heir, was then but one year (o). — Thomas Torrell Esq; was the next who held this maner, by grand Serjeancy, viz. by the service of being the King's Napperer on his Coronation-day: and departing this life 7 February 1516, was succeeded by his son — Henry, who held the same, at the time of his decease 7 January 1525, with several other estates (p). — Humfrey, his son held also the same by grand Serjeancy, and dying 12 September 1544, left his only daughter and heir, Anne Torrell, then only two years and 40 weeks old (q). [See above, p. 92. and in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. 478.] [D]. She was [C] This will explain what seems wanting in the account of the Ward-Staff of Ongar Hundred, given above, p. 126. The Maners there mentioned were charged with the service of finding Wardsmen to secure the peace of the Hundred: This seemed hard upon them, to be every year upon duty whilst others watched not at all. We find here that other estates paid money instead of personal service, into the hands of him to whom the King gave the Ward-Staff.

[D] We have no regular Pedigree of the Torell Family, only this account of their intermarriages, which are not quite exact. Humfrey Torell married . . . daughter of John Flemynge. — William, . . . daughter of . . . Frevil. Antony, Mabel daughter of John Fitz-Osborn. — Sir Humfrey . . . daughter of . . . Mortimer. — Thomas . . . daughter of Roger Tilbury. — John, . . . daughter of Thomas Montfort, of Beaufort. — Richard, Ursula daughter of Thomas Nanton. — Humfrey, Elizabeth daughter of George Bartlett. — Robert, . . . daughter of John Tyrell. — Brian, . . . daughter of Humfrey Barrington. — Humfrey, . . . daughter of Gilbert Bassingborn. — John, . . . daughter of Thomas Clapham. — Thomas, . . . daughter of Roger Beauchamp of Bletso. — John, Emma sister and coheir of John Raynesford. — Henry, Anne daughter of William Mordaunt, of Roding-Berners. — Humfrey, Alice daughter of Thomas Leventhorp.

afterwards

afterwards married to Henry Jocelyn Esq; fourth son of Sir Thomas Jocelyn of Hyde-hall, and had by him six sons, and four daughters. He was buried 25 August 1587, and the 30 May 1589. — Sir Thomas Jocelyn, the eldest surviving son and heir, by license dated 2 Septemb. 1595, alienated this estate to

Sir Thomas Leveson (r). It belonged afterwards to Nicolas Grice Esq; and being sold, by decree in Chancery, to pay his debts, was purchased by

Col. Henry Cornewall of Bradwardin castle in Herefordshire. From whom it descended to his son — General Cornewall, brother to Velters Cornewall Esq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Hereford. He dyed some years ago, and left this estate to a Gentlewoman that had lived with him several years. After the General's decease she married Mr. Moore of Ireland, to whom at her death, which happened not long after, she bequeathed this estate: And he surviving her but a little while left it to his brother — Blunden Moore Esq; the present owner.

The office of the Nappery was claimed, at the Coronation of K. George II. by the Lord of the Maner of Ashele in Norfolk, but not allowed.

The Maner of BEREWES, now called BARONS, is also derived from the maner of Little-Thurrock. The House is on the left hand side of the road leading to Chaldwell, into which parish this Maner extends.

We have but the following imperfect account of this estate: Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, who dyed in 1360, had one fee in Little Thurrocke, called Berewes, which William Squery held of him. — John Squery held the same under Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March in 1398, and under Joane, widow of Sir John Grey, in 1425 (s). — And it seems to have been the same knight's fee, which John Surey held under John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, in 1352 (t).

Thomas Springe, who dyed 13 June 1523, held the maner of Barrowe, with appertenances in Little Thurrock and Chaldwell, and Hodipole marsh, and 4 d. yearly rent, in this parish, of Henry Torrell Esq; as of his maner of Little Thurrock. He held also of the same 3 messuages, 3 tofts, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 30 of wood, 100 of marsh, 200 of furze and heath in Little and West Thurrock (u). [See in the other Volume, p. 185. 284.] [E].

In Hilary term 1567, Clement Syseley, and Anne his wife, and Agnes Kiddermister, widow, were enjoined to deliver possession to Joanna Laxton of the maner of Barrowe, with appertenances, and of two messuages, 200 acres of arable, 200 acr. of meadow, 100 of pasture, 50 of wood, 200 of marsh, and 6 l. rent, in Little Thorock and Chawdewell (w).

This estate belongs now to John Russel, of North-Okendon, Esq; See above, p. 103.

Mr. William-Westbrook Richardson; Richard Wotton; William Adams; Piggot Ince; John Crow &c. have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace, and almost of the same width, with the Chancel; the whole tyled. In the south wall of the Chancel on the inside are Arches, supported by pillars of the Tuscan order. Such arches in other places have effigies or statues of Founders, some as large as the life, and some less.

This Rectory seems to have been chiefly appendent to the Maner of Thurrock-hall. Who presented to it all along hath been already mentioned above.

The name of this parish is otherwise written in records Caudewell, Chaldwell, and Celdewell. And if not derived from St. Chad, mentioned above, p. 76, and Welle, qu. Chad's Well; it might be from the Saxon Lealc, cold, and Welle, a Well, or spring. Some derive the first part of the name from Lealc, chalk, thinking it occasioned by the great Chalk Wells, or Pits; from which Chalk was originally dug, or which were made to serve for Granaries to the ancient Britans. The Danes are vulgarly reported to have used them as receptacles or hiding places for the plunder and booty which they took from the adjoining inhabitants during their frequent piracies

[E] There was a donation of Thurrock to the Church of Canterbury, very ancient; but which of the three it was cannot be discovered, for it is not mentioned in Domesday-book. It was in these words, Ego Wistanus cognomento Wilde and descents upon this island; and hence they have been styled Dane or Dene holes.

Mr. Camden hath given a sketch of them in his Britannia (*), with the following account. "Near Tilbury are several spacious Caverns in a chalky cliff, built very artificially of stone to the height of ten fathoms, and somewhat straight at the top." The learned and ingenious Dr. Derham, late Rector of Upminster &c. who was a curious observer of every thing that was remarkable in his neighbourhood, gave the following description of them, in a Letter of his, dated 17 February 1706. — "I myself measured three of the most considerable Holes, and found one of them fifty foot six inches deep; another seventy foot seven inches; another, in the Wood northward, eighty foot; the depth of the western Hole, near the road, fifty-five foot six inches; on the same side the road is another seventy foot seven inches; on the other side of the way, in Hang-Man's Wood, is another Hole of eighty foot four inches. A Cow fell into the Hole fifty-five foot six inches, not killed nor much hurt, drawn up by a carpenter who went down and put ropes about her. The bottom is a soft Sand on which the Cow alighted and was saved. Over the midst of the Hole is an Arch of two hundred feet of chalk. These Holes lie near the highway, within the compass of six acres of ground, leading from Stifford to Chaldwell." Some of them are within the bounds of the parish of Little Thurrock. And in East Tilbury there is a field called Cave-field, in which there is a horizontal passage to the Cavern.

Tradition will have it that here were the famous King Cunobelin's Gold mines. Upon the strength of this notion, countenanced by a passage in Dr. Plot's Natural History of Oxfordshire, one of the Bubbles, or pernicious Projects, set up in the year 1720, was for extracting Gold, or Silver, out of the soil here; with this title, 'For improving a Royalty in Essex.' The passage in Dr. Plot, is as follows (y). 'From a fair shining Blue I judged the Mine-Chamber not to be far off. Which I rather guess to be of Silver, because of the alabastrine or sparlike substance mixed with it, which, saith Mr. Webster, was in some places intermixt also in the best Silver Mine ever yet found in England, the ore whereof held about 66 lb. per ton. From all which it may be concluded that 'tis probable at least that here may have been formerly such a Mine, stopt up as I first thought by the aboriginal Britans, upon the arrival and conquests of the Romans or Saxons, who not being able to recover their Country within the memory of man, it might be lost like the Gold mine of Glas-Hitten in Hungary, when Bethlem Gabor over-ran that country; or the Gold mine of Cunobeline in Essex, discovered again temp. Hen. IV. as appears by the King's letters of Mandamus bearing date May 11, an. 2. Rot. xxxiv. directed to Walter Fitz-Walter concerning it, and since that lost again.'

From this passage of Dr. Plot there seems to have been a received doctrine, That Silver Mines have been in England. We can scarce imagine there were any when Julius Cæsar wrote his Commentaries, for the Britans would not then have used only plates and rings of iron or copper, for Money (z). Nor do the Roman Historians mention any here; yet I cannot but wish it true, that it may explain the difficulty under which we are about paying the large Danish tributes, or Danegelds, imposed upon this Kingdom [F].

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the several owners of the lands in this Parish, were, Aluric a King's Thegn; Edwolt that King's Sheriff; and Godman, a freeman. At the time of the Survey, the Bishop of London held the chief part under the title of his Fee; Odo Bishop of Bayeux had the next considerable share; and Grime the Sheriff, and Hubert de Port, another. The Bishop of London's under-tenant was Hugolin; and Odo's the son of Turolde [G].

Those lands were divided afterwards into these several Maners. 1. The maner of Chadwell. 2. . . . that of Ingleby. 3. . . . that of Longhouse. 4. . . . that of Biggin.

The Maner of CHADWELL.

Chadwell-hall, the maner-house, stands near the Church.

The earliest account we find of this maner after the Survey, is about the year 1250, when a family furnamed de Wokindon [concerning which see above, p. 102.] held it under the Bishop of London; and also the Advowson of the Church [H].

Nicolas de Halughton, heir of Joane, daughter and heir of Sir Nicolas de Wokingdon, claimed Free-warren in Wokindon, Braxstede, and Chaldwell. Sir Nicolas de Halton [Halughton] presented to this Church in 1336. At the time of his decease in 1339, he held this maner of the Bishop of London; — Margaret, and Joane, were his daughters and heirs (a). Yet he seems to have had a son and a grandson, who most likely dyed without issue, and made way for the daughters: or at least some of the same name and family had an estate in this parish in 1357; which is confirmed by a release of Thomas son of Sir Thomas de Halughton, or Halgeton as he is there called [I].

Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Nicolas de Halughton, seems to have had three husbands, Sir Roger de Northwood, John Barry, and Walter Grey. Sir Roger de Northwood presented to the Rectory, in her right, in 1362. Margaret Barry, then widow of John Barry, in 1389, and Walter Grey, lord of the maner, and Margaret Barry his wife, lady of the maner of Chaldwell, presented five times, from 1389 to 1407. Margaret, in 1385, when she was the wife of Sir John Barry, granted to Richard Rikedon of Witham, and others, the maner of Chaldwelle and all her right and title in the maner of Little-Braxted, and in 6l. 10s. rent in Tierlyng and Crikesheth (b). — Joane de Halughton, the other daughter, was married to Thomas de Asheton. [See in the other Volume, p. 143.]

John de Bois had this estate afterwards, which he held of the Bishop of London, and presented to the Living in 1409.

Nicolas de Rykhill presented in 1422 (c), and therefore unquestionably had also the Maner. [Concerning this last Family, see in the other Volume, p. 136.]

The Maner and Advowson were afterwards in Philip Malpas, citizen and draper of London, who presented to the Rectory in 1450 and 1461.

Elizabeth, his only daughter, and heir, was married to Sir Thomas Cooke, of Geddy-hall. At the time of her decease in 1484, she held this maner, and advowson of the Church, of the Abbot of Stratford Langthorne [K], by fealty, — Philip Cooke, her son, succeeded her (d), — John, his son, held it of the same Abbey; and dyed possessed of it 20 August 1486. — John Cooke, his brother, was then 34 years old; who departing this life 10 October 1515, left — Antony, his son and heir, 11 years old (e). He was afterwards Præceptor to K. Edward VI. and knighted. At the time of his decease, 11 June 1576, he held this of the maner of Great Burghsted. As did his son — Richard, who dyed 3 October 1579 (f). And — Sir Antony Cooke, his son and heir, who departed this life 28 December 1604. — Sir Edward Cooke Kt. his eldest son and heir (g), held it also in the same manner. He left only two daughters coheirs, Anne, married to Sir Edward Sydenham, and Vere to Sir Charles Gawdy, of Crowshall in Suffolk. [See above, p. 66, 67.] The latter had this estate, and presented to the Living from 1663 to 1683.

Then it was in Thomas Velley Gent. who presented in 1690 and 1692 (h). Soon after it was purchased by Sir Robert Smyth, Bart. who was succeeded by his son — Sir Robert, and his great grandson — Sir Trafford Smyth, Barts. [See above, p. 14.] Sir Trafford 14 March 1748-9, sold this maner, estate, and advowson, for the sum of 3250l. to

Mr. Richard Hyder, of Greys Thurrock; who since parted with the advowson.

The Maner of INGLEY.

The mansion-house is demolished; it stood near the two Trees where the Court is held. But there are some Buildings belonging to the demesnes, near the Ferry.

This was originally part of the Bishop of London's Fee. Stephen de Gravesend, Bishop, in 1337, passed by Fine lands in Chaldwell and Southminster to William Vigerons, and others, who granted them to the Bishop for his life; remainder to Hugh Nevill for life; remainder to Thomas de Gravesend, in tail; remainder to Thomas, son of Henry le Chamberlaine (i). — Thomas de Gravesend held this, as one fee in Chaldewell, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of

But, as it was originally the Bishop of London's fee, and not part of the Estate of his See, he might grant it away. However, it is not mentioned as holden of that Abbey till 1484. And possibly it might be a mistake for the maner, or part of the maner, of Bigging. — I shall take an opportunity of supplying here an omission, above, p. 66. col. 2. l. 15. after Geddy-hall, add, — 'dyed 20 August 1486, and was succeeded by his brother — John, then 34 years old. Hereford and Essex (k). In 1364, Joane, widow of Sir Thomas de Gravesend, holding this in dower, released all her right in the same to

Thomas de Ingelby (l). And from that Family it took the name of Ingleby.—John Ingleby, who dyed in 1438, held 1 marsh, and 12 acres of arable in Chaldwell of Anne Countess Stafford, by the service of one Sparhawk yearly at Michaelmas. And of her son, Humfrey Earl Stafford, he held the maner of Inglebies entirely, by the service aforesaid; as of his maner of Fobbing; together with a messuage called Tholmodys, and divers tofts named Hampsteds.—John Ingelby, his son and heir, was then 4 years old (m).—Sir William Inglebye held this maner of Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, as of his maner of Fobbinge. He dyed 4 December 1501, leaving —John, his son, 24 years old: who departed this life 28 August 1502.—William Ingleby, his son, then 8 years old, was his heir (n).

The next possessor upon record was Peter Simonds. At the time of his decease, 26 July 1587, he held the maner of Ingleby, alias Ingelbies, and divers lands and tenements in Chaldwell, of the Queen as of her maner of Fobbing, by fealty, and yearly rent of 7s. His nephew —Richard, son of his brother John, was his heir (o). The said Peter Simonds gave by will 20s. a year to the Poor of this parish; but the lands are not known which were charged with the payment.

This estate now belongs to the Poor of Winchester.

The Maner of LONG-HOUSE, otherwise Chadwell Place, is not mentioned in records till the reign of K. Henry VI.

Sir William Skrene, who dyed in 1430, held jointly with Alice his wife the maner of Long-House in Chaldwell, with appertenances in Orfete, West-Tilbury, and Little-Thurrock. His heir was the son of his son John, named also —John. This John dyed 4 July 1451, possessed of this estate, and of the maner of Chambers in Epping, leaving by Philippa his wife, who survived him, —John his son and heir, one year and a half old (p). He was afterwards knighted: And, at the time of his decease in 1474, held not only this Maner, but also those of Chambers, Berwicks and Cadnes; especially Skrenes in Rokeswell, which from him took its name (q). Concerning this ancient Family of Skrene, see more above, p. 50. 155. and in the other Volume, p. 70. 97.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, at the time of his decease in 1476, held 1 messuage and 100 acres of arable in Chaldewell and Little-Thurrock, called Long-house, of Henry Torell, by fealty and rent of 6d. per ann. (r). His descendents do not appear to have enjoyed it: Nor do we find who did, between him and the present possessor John Russel, of North-Okendon Esq; [See above, p. 103.]

The word signifies a habitation, or maner-house, from the Saxon Bigange.

It belonged to the Abbey of Stratford Langthorn: And undoubtedly arose from the following Grants.

In 1338, Reginald Gobion, and his son John had license to give to that Abbey 1 messuage, 9 acres of arable, and 31 acres of marsh in Chaldewell. And, in 1400, William Ford and Edward Mille obtained a license to give them 1 messuage, 100 acres of arable, 4 acr. of meadow, and 200 of marsh in Chaldewell, East and West Tilbury, and Little Thurrok (s). These constituted the Maner of Biggin.

Sir Ralph Joffelyn held it in 1478 under the Abbot of Stratford, as of his maner of Great Bursted. The Abbey had free warren here (t).

After the suppression of the Monastery, K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted this estate to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's in London in pure alms (u). They have enjoyed it ever since. And it has been leased out by them to Mrs. Goram, of Ratcliff-cross; —to Edmund Hutchins; —and, in 1744, to Mr. John Crutchfield of London.

COWPERS is mentioned as another Maner in this Parish. Roger Tasker, who dyed 29 Septemb. 1595, held it; and tenements called Shepherds, Mots, Slepers, Tholmans, and other parcels on Orset-heath in this parish (w). Who hath it now, or whether it is not incorporated in the other Estates, I cannot find.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands on the side of a hill, and is of one pace, and almost of the same breadth, with the Chancel; the whole tyled. At the west end there is a Tower of stone, of considerable height, in which are three Bells.

This Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner of Chadwell-Hall. But hath been alienated.

This parish is rated to the Land-tax at 737 l.

When Tilbury Fort was enlarged by K. Charles II. the road was turned into Chadwell, being that part which comes in at a Gate, and goes on the west side of the present Fort.

The inhabitants of Chadwell were indicted for not repairing so much of the road as lay in their parish: But, upon a tryal at the Assizes at Chelmsford, 8 July 1741, the inhabitants were acquitted, Because it appeared, that the Governors of the Fort had kept the road in repair, out of the profits of the Ferry, from the time it was turned into this parish, and therefore it was adjudged they ought to do it still now.

TILBURY

There are in Essex three Parishes of this name; two of them contiguous, and lying near the river Thames; and the other in Hinckford Hundred, styled near Clare, because it is within a few miles of that Town. The name is derived, either from the Saxon Tilia, a husbandman, or Tigel, a tile; and bupg, or buph, a city, town, castle, court, or house. Probably, because here was anciently a Town, or Fortification, one of the first tiled in this island: Or a strong place, which served for retreat to the country people in case of invasions.

17. WEST-TILBURY

lies West of the other by the side of the river Thames, which is the reason of the name. Whether these two were originally but one Parish is not easily determined, and indeed is of no consequence. More certain it is, that here was in the seventh century a considerable Town, though now reduced to a poor Village. For when Cedd, Cedd, or St. Chad, came and converted again the East-Saxons to Christianity, and was consecrated Bishop of this Diocese, he fixed one of his Episcopal sees at Tilaburg, and the other at Ythancestir (x).

At the time of the Survey, Suene and his under-tenants Osbern and Ralph, two Frenchmen, held this Parish; which, in the Saxons time, had belonged to Aluric a Priest, a freeman [L].

It was divided afterwards into the Maners, 1. . . . of West-Tilbury; and 2. . . . of Condovers.

The Maner of WEST TILBURY.

West Tilbury-Hall, the maner-house, stands a little way north-west from the Church.

Suene's grandson, Henry de Essex, hereditary Standard-bearer, lost his estates through his cowardise, as related above, p. 156.

A later possessor took his name from this place: Namely Robert de Tilbury who was here about the reign of K. Henry II. and held this maner, of the Honor of Raleigh [M]. — Richard de Tilbury succeeded him, and had a Fair granted him here, and a Market (y). He held the maner of Tylleber' in capite, of the King, worth 20 l. and dying before 1285, left — Robert his son, under age, and in the King's custody: who for the sum of 200 l. granted to Constance, the widow of Richard, and mother of the said Robert, his wardship and marriage till he came of age; and she bequeathed it to one William de Stowe (z). — William de Tillebery, who dyed in 1304, held this maner; and tenements near Tilbury, Chiltendiche, and Elteney, which were members of the same, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the service of 2 knights fees, and a quarter: and 160 acres of land in Orseth, of Hugh de Nevill (a). — John was his son and heir, who granted it, in 1319, to Richard Abell, with the Advowson of the Church, and Chapel of this maner; and Joane his widow, by fine, passed it, in 1320, to him with the Advowson of the Church and Chapel, reserving in it her own life (b).

John de Chavent, cousin and heir of Sir Peter de Chavent, granted, in 1344, to Thomas Lodewave and his heirs 4 l. of yearly rent, which William de Tilleburg, brother and heir of Robert de Tilleburg, had granted to Sir Peter de Chavent his uncle, and Agnes his wife, to be received out of his maner of Tillebury (c).

In 1348, John Charteney, citizen and merchant of London, released to Sir William Vaughan, and Joane his wife, and the heirs of the said William, all his right in the maner of West-Tilbury. — Sir Thomas Vaughan held this maner of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reyley, by the service of one knight's fee; and dyed possessed of it in 1362. — Sir Hamo was his son and heir, who sold the fee, with the Advowson, to Edward Chambre and others, but the King's licence was not obtained (d). This Advowson could be only West-Lee Chapel, for the patronage of the Church was many years before given by John Poulteney to his Chantry in the Church of St. Laurence Poultney lane, London (e).

After this the estate went amongst female heirs, and was subdivided. Margaret, wife of Sir Richard Mutton, had a sixth part, at the time of her decease in 1420.—William was her son and heir; who conveyed his part to Nicolas Fulke. The same year,—Philip Bokilton Esq; had a sixth part; Isabel, wife of John Fulk, was his sister and heir (f).

In 1422, John Fulke, and Catharine his wife, passed by fine a moiety of the third part of this maner to John Harpur, of Hereford. And in 1436, Nicolas son of John Fulke, and Catharine his wife released all their right in this maner to the said Harpur (g).

Margaret, wife of Sir Baldwyn Straunge, held a third part, of Richard Duke of York, of his maner of Raleye. She dyed in 1427.—Elizabeth, wife of Robert Molineux, was her daughter and heir (h).

Thomas Hethe, who had a moiety of this maner, and the Advowson of the Chapel, passed them by fine, in 1457, to John Harpyr of Rapsnale Esq; and Alianor his wife, in tail. And Cecily Josselyn, widow, who had a moiety of this maner, together with another moiety of the same in the tenure of William Harper, departed this life 7 July, 1503, leaving—Nicolas Josselyn her son and heir (i).

Joane, wife of Thomas Smith, that dyed 14 August 1536, held a moiety of a moiety of this maner, and the Advowson of the Free Chapel of St. Nicolas in West Tilbury, of the King as aforesaid, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. Her sister—Elizabeth, wife of Edward Smith, Gent. was her heir (k).—Thomas Smith alienated the 4th part of this maner, 5 Novemb. 1560, to

John Throgmorton (l). This estate was next in Richard Jenoure Esq; of Bigods in Great Dunmow. [See in the other Volume, p. 425.] He dyed in 1548; and Wiburga, his widow, was remarried to Sir Richard Weston, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas; who, in her right, held one messuage; a moiety of this maner, with appertenances, and of 300 acres of marsh, and 60 s. rent, in West and East Tilbury, Chaldwell, Greys and Little Thurrock; and the moiety of the Passage or Ferry, and also the moiety of the Advowson of this Church.—Sir Kenelm Jenoure, Bart. succeeded his grandfather: and at the time of his decease, 20 August 1629, had this maner, and the Passage called

West-Tilbury Ferry (m); which he gave to his daughter

Anne, first married to—Dell Esq; Secretary to Archbishop Laud, and afterwards to Sir Richard Hatton, son of Robert Hatton Esq; Serjeant at Law. Sir Richard dying 28 January 1677, without issue, his brother—Sir Robert succeeded him, and dyed 13 May 1684. He married Anne, daughter of Sir John Garrard Bart.—Thomas, his son and heir, had to wife Mary, daughter of Thomas Lambert of Sevenoak in Kent, Esq; [N]. He sold this estate to

Mr. John Kellarway, who dying 17 September 1737, his widow Elizabeth had it after him, and sold it to

Richard Mickelfield Esq; late an East-India Captain. From whom it is come to his nephew

Richard Hunt Esq;

The Maner of CONDOVERS.

The mansion house stands on a Green, near the Parsonage.

The first mention we find of this maner is in the time of K. Henry VIII.

Edward Baker Esq; who dyed 3 April 1535, besides the maner of Bowres-Gifford, &c. held one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 100 of pasture, 200 of marsh, with appertenances called Condovers, in East, and West, Tilbury, of Sir John Mordaunt, of his maner of West Tilbury, by fealty and rent of 13 s. 4 d. per ann. being of the yearly value of 10 l. His son—James Baker Esq; (n) at the time of his decease, 6 January 1569, also held the maner or messuage of Quindovers, alias Condovers, with appertenances, in East, and West, Tilbury, and Mucking, of William Strangman Esq; and Joane his wife, as of the maner of Goshalmes in East Tilberry, in free socage, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 4 d.—Henry Baker, his son and heir, was 22 years old (o).

The estate was afterwards in Philip Howard who sold it to John Brewster, and it descended from him to John Brewster Esq; of the Curstors Office, whose grandfather was Francis, fourth son of Francis Brewster of Wrentham-Hall in Suffolk, Esq; [See above, p. 8.]

Thomas Nuthall, Esqre. and Mr. William Ashwell; Thomas Lamb; John Price &c. have also estates here.

Lands in this parish called le Wyke, alias Courtwyke, are part of the endowment of Chelmsford-School. See in the other Volume, p. 5.

Here is only one Charity of 20 s. a year to labouring men, distributed at Easter.

The Fort

was built at first by K. Henry VIII. being then only a kind of Block-house (p). After the Dutch had come up the river in 1667, and burnt our Ships at Chatham, K. Charles II. caused it to be much enlarged, and made a regular fortification. It has a Governor, and a number of matrosses.

When the Spanish Armada was alarming our Coasts in 1588, and threatening descents in various places, Qu. Elizabeth had a Camp here in order to secure this coast and the city of London against their attempts. The Camp was where the Wind-mill now stands, and there are some traces of it still visible. That truly great Heroine's behaviour upon that occasion, like another Boadicea, and her excellent Speech to her Troops, may be seen in the Account of the Spanish Invasion which I drew up, in order to accompany Mr. Pine's Engravings of the Tapestry of the House of Lords, p. 19. and in Cabala, p. 373. See also Thamesis Descriptio, in Pine.

Within the lands belonging to the Maner of West-Tilbury a famous Medicinal Water was discovered, in 1727, by Mr. John Kellaway, who made there a Well in 1734. The springs lie about 12 feet deep from the surface of the ground, which is a Hill at least above 30 feet above the marshes, in a hard gravel. About the depth of 13 feet there is a bed of sand at least 30 feet deep, which lying between the Spring and the marshes prevents any communication that way, and the Well is within 40 yards of the extreme point of the hill (q). The Virtues of this water made it come into great Reputation from abundant Experience. It has been found beneficial in all kinds of Hæmorrhages, in Diabetes, Scurvy, and Loss of Appetite. It will bear carriage to the East-Indies and home again; and is the only Alterative Water of its kind found in this part of England.—Dr. John Andree of London, has published a Treatise of Experiments made by himself and Mr. White, by appointment of the Royal Society; to which he has added a History of Patients relieved by it, as given by themselves, with the Method of using the Water. Printed in 1740.

Experiments on Tilbury-water by Chr. White.

1. The Tilbury-water was found much heavier than the Thames or any other Spring-water he had tried. 2. It lathers very indifferently un-boiled; much better when boiled, better than spring-water, yet no so well as river-water. 3. When boiled, it turns milky; a fourth part of Mountain-wine fines it immediately; a very small proportion of vinegar will do; also juice of limons and other acids sooner according to the strength. 4. Oyl of tartar per deliq. poured into the water when boiled, makes a white precipitate; a little oyl of vitriol, spirit of salt, or any strong acid, makes it as clear as the water was at first. 5. Spirit of salt armoniac, hartshorn, and sal volatile oleos. poured into the water cold, gives a white precipitate. The afore-mentioned Acids make them all clear again. 6. The water cold turns syrup of violets green in about a quarter of an hour; when warmed in a less time; when boiled hot, in about one minute. 7. The water being boiled and put into a glass, in one night's time there will fall to the bottom a whitish substance. When the liquor is decanted from it, you discern a saline taste; and it turns syrup of violets green as soon as the boyled water. 8. The water being boyled with an equal quantity of milk doth not curdle. 9. The water does not tinge with galls any more than with common water. Put in a little solution of galls on the water, it gives in a little time a yellow precipitate.

Experiments on the Salts.

1. Two pounds of Tilbury water being put into a retort and distilled to a dryness, there was left behind 60 grains of substance of a colour like unto Jesuits bark, of a saltish taste. After the water is half distilled, it appears in the retort as if some drops of oil were floating on the surface. 2. What was left in the retort was two parts salt, the third an insipid earth of the colour of yellow ocre, the salt much whiter than before it was separated. The salt being put on a burning charcoal caused a very small hissing: what was left on the charcoal was of an ash colour, tasting as hot and fiery as salt of tartar on fixed nitre. 4. Spirit of vitriol, spirit of salt, aqua fortis, and other acids, poured on the salt, cause an ebullition. 5. Oyl of tartar per deliq. and other alkalies being put to the salt make no ebullition. 6. The salt turns syrup of violets green. 7. The salt put to sal armoniac finely powdered opens the body of it in a small degree, so as to discern it has a little volatile smell. 8. A strong solution of the salt in spring water immediately precipitates mel saturni of a pale yellowish colour. 9. Neither the salt nor water will precipitate solution of sublimate.

This salt comes nearest of any thing to a salt Mr. White formerly got from distilled crabs claws, and oyster shells, which he takes to be compounded of sea-salts with a small quantity of fixed salts.

The Church, dedicated to St. James, stands pleasantly at the end of a Green, on a rising ground that affords a large prospect towards the Thames and the Channel. Both Church and Chancel are tiled. At the west end is a wooden Frame with a spire shingled, in which are five Bells. Here was formerly a Tower of stone, very high, which served for a Sea-mark, till it fell down.

(p) Lambarde's Topographic. Dictionary.(q) From a Letter of Mr. Kellaway's to Smart Lethieullier Esq;

On the north side of the Church was an aisle; which, upon rebuilding of the Church, was omitted, except so much as makes the north Porch. In that aisle lay a Grave-stone, in the shape of a coffin, with crosses on it; made now a stool to one of the windows.

This Rectory was at first appendent to the Maner.

July 1 1345, John de Poulteney obtained the King's licence to give the Advowson of it to the Master or Warden of the Chantry founded by him to the honor of Corpus Christi, in the Church of St. Laurence in Candlewick-Street London, and to the twelve Chaplains. They presented only once, in 1384; The Crown has had the Patronage ever since.

18. EAST-TILBURY.

This parish lies, as the last, by the river Thames, against Tilbury Hope.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, it belonged to one freeman: At the time of the Survey, Tedric Pointel, and his under-tenant Hunald, held it [O]. And though it made then but a small appearance, and contained only one Maner, it was afterwards branched out into these five Maners. 1. The maner of East-Tilbury. 2. . . . that of St. Clere's. 3. The maner of Gobyons. 4. . . . that of Southall. 5. . . . that of Goffalms.

The maner of EAST-TILBURY.

The mansion house stands near the Church, on the West.

This estate was, in the reign of K. Henry III. in the Kamesek, or Kewseck, Family; which had also the maners of Camseys, and Great Sandford in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 417, 418. and 525, or 526.]

There was a fine, in 1258, between Edmund Camek, plaintiff, and Margery, wife of Henry Kemesek, petent, about the allotment of her dowry in Ixning in Suffolk, and Tillebury in Essex. She had the Passage here and the Ad-ground. This Chapel was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; the founder is not known, but supposed to be of the Family of Tilbury.

Sir Thomas Vaughan, who dyed in 1362, held the maner of West-Tilbery, with the Free Chapel there, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, in which one Chaplain was to officiate for ever for the souls of the King's predecessors, and for his ancestors souls; to receive out of the said maner 112 s. 8 d. rent: Which Chapel was founded in the time of St. Thomas the Martyr. [See under Hockley.] Sir Thomas Vaughan had presented, in 1335, Nicolas de Hall to this Chapel (r).

The return in the Book of Chantries saith, that this Chapel was a mile and more from the Parish Church. The yearly value was then brought in but 53 s. 4 d. not half what it once was.

Five acres of land were given for two Obits in this Church: And one acre and a half for a Lamp; now unknown.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 625 l.

vowson of the Church. Edmund complained she had too much (s).

This Edmund Kemseck, or Kewseck, dyed in 1288. He held in Tilbury one messuage, 72 acres of arable, 16 of meadow and pasture and marsh, and 10 l. rent-assize, of the Earl of Hereford in capite by the service of a knight's fee;—Edmund was his son and heir (t), who held it, and after him—Joane his widow. She presented to this Living in 1321, and 1327 (u).

At the time of her decease in 1331, she held here in capite, of the Earl aforesaid, 1 messuage, 36 acres of arable, and 29 of marsh and pasture, 47 s. rent assize, and a Passage. Her next heir was

William son of Philip de Welle (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 525.] At the time of his decease in 1349, he held the maner of Est-Tilbery, with the Advowson of the Church, and the Passage there, of the Countess of Hereford, Joane was his daughter and heir (x). She was married to Sir Henry de Coggeshale, and brought him the estate at Gr. Sandford, but we hear no farther of them here. Sir Henry presented to the Living of Tilbury in 1368, and 1371.

This estate was purchased, together with Sabury-hall, as an endowment of the Rectory of St. Anne at Lime house, with 3500*l.* granted for that purpose, in 1729, by act of Parliament; the Church of Lime-House, being one of the Fifty new Churches in and about London.

Sir Charles Inglefield had it some years ago; and sold it to Thomas Grant; and Grant in 1716 to Sir William Humphreys of Berking, Bart. in whose Family it now is or lately was.

was so named from its ancientest owners upon record.

In 1266, William de Sancto Claro, or St. Clere, held in the village of East-Tilbury 140 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, a marsh for feeding 200 sheep, 50*s.* 2*d.* rent assize, and a wind-mill. In 1301, Robert de Sancto Claro held one fee in East-Tilbury; and Ralph de Rothing another fee there, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex (y). [Concerning this Family of St. Clere see more in the other Volume p. 28.]

It seems to be one of the three knights fees in this parish holden under Humfrey Earl of Hereford and Essex, who dyed in 1372 (z).

This maner was afterwards in a Family sur-named Musle or Moseley. For, in 1457, John Musle of Berking, Gent. son and heir of John Musle and Christina his wife, granted to John Shopman, citizen and upholder of London, and to Margery his wife, for life, their maner called Sencleres in East Tilbury (a).—Robert Mosele, who dyed in 1475, held the maners of Seynt Clers and Oldhall, 500 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of wood, in East and West Tilberry, Coringham, and Stanford le Hope, of Anne Duchefs of Buckingham, separately, as of her maner of Writtle; — Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Broket, was his cousin and heir, as being daughter of Elizabeth sister of Christina mother of John Mosele, who was father of the said Robert. Thomas Brockett Esq; at the time of his decease in 1477, held the maner of East-Tilbury called Seint-Cleres, and 1 messuage, 60 acres of arable, and 6 marks of rent, in this and parishes adjoyning, of the Priorefs of Ashby yielding a red rose, on St. John Baptist's day. — Edward Broket, his brother and heir, was 50 years old (b).

Next; Sir John Scott, at the time of his decease, 18 October 1484, held the maner of St. Cleres, alias Estylburye; in East-Tilburye, Coringham, and Stanford in le Hope, of the Prior of Gtle.—William, his son and heir, was then aged 26 years (c). He, or his son, dyed 22 January 1588 possessed of the same, leaving—William, his son and heir. The Queen at this time was lady of the maner of East-Tilbury; and this was holden of that maner, by fealty, and rent of 30*s.* per annum (d).

The Maner of GOBYONS of which the mansion house stands a mile north from the Church, near the river, was so named from a knightly Family, which have left their name to several places in this County. [See above, p. 63. and in the other Volume, p. 96. 361. 369.]

Sir Thomas Gobyon held a knight's fee in East-Tilbury under the noble family of Bohuns, Earls of Hereford and Essex, holden afterwards by Edm. Kemefek (e).

Sir Richard de Sutton who dyed in 1395, held the maner of Gobyons of Joane Countess of Hereford (f).—Sir Richard de Sutton, and Ralph Aynell Parson of the Church of Little Ocle, in 1387 constituted Richard Heyns and Peter Weltwoode their Attorneys, to deliver to Thomas Byrdeford of Hertford the full possession and seisiq of the maners of Pelham-Furneux and Thedrisham, with the Advowsons and Collations of the Chantries; to have them in exchange for the maner of East-Tilbury, and for the marshes and other lands and tenements formerly Thomas Bedeford's (g). The name of Sutton is not mentioned by Sir Henry Chauncy, nor that of Byrdeford, so that neither of them was at Pelham for any considerable time. An Epitaph in this Church, proves one William de Bardefolde to have been here; which most probably meant the same as Byrdeford and Bedeford; and this estate of Gobyons seems to have gone for some time by his name, or something very near it; as appears by the Clause rolls in 1445 [P]: wherein John Kendall released to John Somerset, Sir William Drury of Suffolk, and others, all his right in the tenements and lands called Berdevyles in East Tilbury, formerly belonging to Walter Scarlet. And, the next year, John Scarlet of London Peyntour, Son of Walter, released to Somerset, Drury, Shopman, and Petard, &c. all his right in Berdevyles in East-Tilbury. We need not wonder at the variety in writing Byrdeford's name, if we observe that almost in the same line here we meet with Kendall written Kendale.

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, at the time of his decease 10 March 1512, held this maner of Gobyons; and so did his brother—John, the 14th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 14 July 1526 (h).—Edward the 17th Earl, most probably sold it, as he did the greater part of his estates.

Edward

Edward Lawrence Esq; who dyed 8 April 1606, held the maner of Gobbions in East-Tilbury and Mucking, of the King of his Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of one knight's-fee. — John his ſon held it alſo of the ſame Honor, and dying 17 December, 1617, left — John, his ſon and heir (i).

This eſtate was lately in Champion Branfill of Upmiſter-Hall, Esq; and is now in his ſon.

The Maner of GOSSALYNE, or GOSSALME.

The manſion houſe is about three quarters of a mile north-weſt from the Church.

This maner took its name from an ancient Family mentioned above under Ging-Ralph, or Ingrave, p. 215.

Richard Goſſalyne, and Alice his wife held in the villages of Eſt, and Weſt, Tilbury, one meſſuage, 150 acres of arable, 120 of marſh, and 100*s.* yearly rent, of William Barentyne, William de Welde, Hugh Fitz-Simon, the Prior of Okeborn, and William de Vaughan [Q]. — Richard ſucceeded his father who dyed in 1332 (k). And in 1354, — Robert, ſon and heir of Sir Richard Goſſalm, releaſed to John Merlawe and his heirs, all his right in lands and tenements in Weſt and Eſt-Tilbury and Mokkyng, which Maud de Attewell formerly held after the death of John de Attewell, as of her inheritance (l).

Before that, Robert Godſalme, and Margery his wife, had granted ſome lands in Eſt and Weſt Tilbury to John de Marton, and John de la Pole; which Marton releaſed his right in to De la Pole in 1341 (m).

We hear no further of this eſtate till the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign, when William Strangman and Anne his wife held it by the name of Goſhalmes.

Sir Thomas Wiſeman held it in 1635 of the Honor of Mandeville.

The Maner of SOUTHALL, is in the ſouth part of this pariſh. The Pound belonging to it ſtands near the Church; but the Maner Houſe was a great way off, in the marſhes: It is now down.

Edmund ſon of Simon, held a knight's fee in Eaſt-Tilbury of the Earl of Hereford, who dyed in 1372 (n). Whether this be that fee, nothing ſhews; but as it was holden of the Earl of Hereford, it ſeems to have been once in the Gobyon Family, as well as the former.

This eſtate goes now to the Repair of Rocheſter Bridge: when, and by whom given, we do not find.

The following perſons have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh. Mr. Thomas Crump; William Towers; Edward Skinner; William Fordham; Henry Hide, &c.

A gift of twenty ſhillings a year for ever to the Poor, out of a farm here called the Folly, is diſtributed amongſt them at Chriſtmas and Midſummer.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Catharine, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle, all which with the Chancel is tiled. At the upper end of the aiſle there is an incloſure to all appearance for a Chantry, which we ſhall preſently mention. The Tower, which was of ſtone, and embattled, ſtood on the ſouth ſide near the weſt end of the Church. In our wars with the Dutch in the laſt century, ſome of their Ships-guns beat it down; its height having given them offence. There is now an humble wooden Frame, with two Bells.

This Church was originally a Rectory, and a Sine-cure; with a Vicar under it as early as the year 1325, The Patronage of the Rectory being in the Lords of the Maner of Eaſt-Tilbury, viz. the Families of Kemſek, Wells, and Coggeſhale; and the Rector preſented to the Vicarage, till the year 1389. Then, John Lord Cobham got it appropriated to his College at Cobham by authority of a Bull from Pope Urban VI. to maintain two Chaplains to ſay maſs daily for the ſouls of Sir John de la Pole and his lady Joane, daughter of Lord Cobham, for Sir William de la Pole and his lady Margaret, for John Lord Cobham and his lady Margaret, &c. The Biſhop of London got then for his See from the College a penſion of 6*s.* 8*d.* and 40*d.* for the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and for the Archdeacon 40*d.* (o).

K. Richard II. gave the Lord Cobham liſenſe to appropriate the Rectory to the Maſter and Chaplains of his ſaid College at Cobham; and they continued Patrons of the Vicarage till their ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

A Chantry was founded in this Pariſh [R] about the year 1328 by Sir Thomas Gobyon;

[Q] What he held of William Barentyn was 1 meſſuage, 30 acres of arable, 20 of marſh, and 60*s.* rent, by the ſervice of 10*s.* a year: — of William de Welde, 7 acres of arable, 15 of marſh, and 15*s.* rent, by the ſervice of 9*s.* a year: — of Hugh Fitz-Simon, 30 acr. of arable, 10 of marſh, and 9*s.* rent, by the ſervice of 12*s.* — of the Prior of Okebourne, 83 acres of arable, 60 of marſh, and 61*s.* rent, by the ſervice of 25*s.* a year: and of William de Vaughan, 15 acr. of marſh, and 5*s.* rent by the ſervice of 6*s.* a year. Inquiſ. 6 Edw. III.

[R] It doth not plainly appear, whether this Chantry was in the Church, or adjoining thereto. For in the Book of Chantries it is ſaid, that the 'Preiſt was to ſay divine ſervice in the Chapple of Eaſt Tilburye, . . . and that it 'was no Pariſh Church, but there was divine ſervice in the ſaid Chapple. In the London Regiſtry it is ſtyled, 'Cantur' in Eccleſia de Halywell in Capella Gobyon infra parochiam de Eaſt Tilbury.'

who endowed it with a messuage, 20 acres of arable, and 30 of marsh, in Est-Tilbery, for one Chaplain to perform divine service daily at the Altar of St. Catharine in this Church. At the suppression of Chantries it was valued at 12 l. 4 s. 4 d. yearly: And the lands belonging thereto were granted to Thomas nephew of the Lord Chancellor Audeley (p).

Here was another Chantry, valued at the suppression 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. per annum: and the endowment belonging to it was granted to William Sholdham, Gent.

In this Parish was the ancient Ferry over the Thames. The famous Higham Causeway from Rochester by Higham, yet visible, points to the place of the old Ferry. And this is with great reason supposed to have been the very place where the Emperor Claudius crossed the river Thames in pursuit of the Britans; as related by Dion Cassius, l. 60.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 967 l.

19. MUCKING.

This parish borders, as the two last, Southward upon the river Thames.

The name of it is otherwise written in records Mocking, Mokking, Muchinga, and Mucinga: and seems to be derived from the Saxon words Mucg, an heap, or Mucel, great, and ing, meadow, or pasture.

Before and after the Conquest this Parish belonged to the Nunnery of Berking [S].

The Celereffe of that Nunnery was to receive of the Collector of Mocking, at Michaelmas and Easter, 4 l. And also of the termes there, at the said two termes, 50 s. (q).

At the suppression of Monasteries, the state and value of this estate was thus.

Humfrey Tirrell Farmer of Mucking-Hall, and two water-mills, one in Corringham, and the other in Mucking, paid 5 l. and 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. for other lands there. Rent-afize of the free and customary tenants, 16 l. 1 s. 3 d. Rents of moveables 6 s. 8 d. Perquisites of Courts 10 l. 13 s. 1 d. sum of all the allowances and 26 l. 16 s. 1 d. (r).

This Lordship was early divided into two Maners: 1. that of Mucking-hall, which seems to have remained in the hands of the Nunnery till K. Henry the VIIIth's reign. 2. . . . that of Waltons.

As to the latter, it was as early as the reign of K. Edward III. in a Family surnamed de Walton. For, in 1341, there was a Fine passed between John, son of John de Walton, and Margery his wife, plaintiffs, and Griffin de Sutton, and Richard at Doune, Parsons of the Churches of Tendring and Theryton, deforc' of two mills, 540 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 17 of wood, 160 acres of marsh-land, 120 s. worth of land in Mokking, Est-Tilbury, Purle, &c. and the Advowson of the Church of Stowe near Fambrigge; the right of the said Griffin and Richard; who granted the premisses to John Walton and his wife, and their heirs (s). Hence arose the maner of Waltons in this parish and Purley.

The Maner of WALTONS, belonged afterwards to the noble Family of Vere Earls of Oxford. For John de Vere, the 13th of Oxford, who dyed 10 March 1512, held the maner of Waltons in Mocking of Elizabeth Abbess of Berking, by the service of one knight's fee, and yearly rent of 10 shillings; suit at the Court of the said Abbess's maner of Mocking-hall; and payment after the death of every tenant that dyed seized thereof, one of the best beasts for an Herriot.—John, son of his brother Sir George, was his next heir, and successor. He dyed 14 July 1526, holding this estate by the service of one knight's fee, paying 100 s. 1 d. per ann. to the Lady Abbess of Barking, and by the rest of the like services as above (t).

Of the same Abbess were holden in this parish, by the Shaa, and Browne Families, lands and tenements called Frodmans, Brokis and

After the suppression of religious Houses, K. Edward VI. in 1547, granted the maner of Mocking, alias Mocking-hall, with appertnances, lands there called Waltons, and Formanland, and the Rectory, and Advowson of the Church of Mucking, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their successors (w).

Mucking-hall stands on the south side of the Church.

Tillington, and other parcels of land in this parish, belonged to Philip Travers, in 1636 (x).

Within this parish in the way leading from Orset to Stanford le Hope, in a bottom, is a large House called Jenkins; that belonged to Mr. Price, of Horndon on the hill.

20. STANFORD LE HOPE

lies east of the last described Parishes and of Orset; bordering south-ward on the Thames. The name of Stanford hath been explained above on Stanford-Rivers: p. 153: and was probably occasioned by a stone, or paved, Ford, where is now a Bridge; over the Rivulet which is chiefly a boundary to Stanford, Mucking, and Horndon on the Hill. Half the Arch north and south is maintained by Stanford, the south-west quarter by Mucking, and the north-west by Horndon.

Le Hope is added, to distinguish this Parish from that other Stanford; and is the Bay or Reach at the winding of the River, where Ships often ride, whether inward or outward bound. Seamen have given it the Name of Hope, because they find it a safe anchoring Place, after they are passed the Dangers of the Goodwin and other Sands near the Thames mouth; and can here safely cast their Anchor, which with the Cable they call in their Sea-terms the Anchor and Hope.

(y) From the monument and epitaph in this Church.

[T] Hope, according to the learned Mr. Camden, signifies the side of an hill; but, in the north of England a low ground amidst the tops of hill. . . . Remains, ed. 1674, p. 146.—Upon which Mr. Antony Hall makes the following observation. 'We remember no such word now used in the North in that sense, and are therefore willing to believe that Mr. Camden, notwithstanding his mother was related to one of the best families in Cumberland, in this case took the Saxon p for a p. and indeed they are not easily to be distinguished in ancient writings. If there be any thing in this conjecture, then Hope will melt into Hope, and so will be the same as How or Hoo, which sometimes signifies a high place, as well as low one; and so it answers to altus in Latin.'

We have not hitherto met with any other satisfactory Account of that name [T].

This parish seems to consist of lands anciently in two distinct vills, one named Stanford, the other Haffingbroke. That it is so, is the more probable, because here was, besides the parish church, a Free Chapel, the Advowson of which went along with Abbots Maner, the estate belonging to Waltham Abbey.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, sixteen Freemen; Lesttan, another Freeman; and Alric, and Uluuin, were the possessors of the lands in this parish: At the time of the Survey, those that held them, were Odo, bishop of Bayeux; Suene of Essex: whose under-tenants were Turoid, and Turoid's son [V]. And Saffelin held the part which had belonged to Alric and Uluuin.

The lands were divided afterwards into these three Maners. 1. . . . that of Haffingbroke. 2. . . . Cabourne's. 3. . . . Abbots-hall.

The

is the chief Maner in this parish; so named from the Brook running by.

Hassingbroke-hall stands about three quarters of a mile north from this Church, and is an old stately edifice, built by Cuthbert Fetherston Esq; in the reign of K. James I.

After Turolde, and his son, the next possessors of this estate upon record, were the Montchenfy family, more particularly mentioned, under their capital Maners of Haningfeilds, and Halsted; in the other Volume, p. 35. 253.—William de Montchenfy had it about the year 1255. And there was an extent of this maner of his in 1267 (z). His sister Joane was married to William de Valence Earl of Penbroke. He left a son named — William de Montchenfy, who dyed without issue: and a daughter Dionysia, wife of Hugh de Vere, second son of Robert, the 5th Earl of Oxford, who in her right was Baron of Swainscamp in Kent; and had a charter for Free Warren in his maners of Hassingbroke and Phanges in 1299. Both he and his Lady dyed in 1313, without issue. Whereupon Adomare de Valence, son of the Lady Joane de Valence, her cousin and next heir, and Earl of Penbroke, just mentioned above, came into her estates. At the time of his decease 23 July 1323, he held this maner of Hassingbroke of the King in capite: with the advowson of the Church of Stanhowe, and the advowson of the Church of Fange, which was a member of Hassingbroke (a). Though he had three wives, namely, Beatrix daughter of Ralph de Nele, Constable of France; . . . a daughter of the Earl of Bar; and, Mary daughter of Guy de Chastillon, Count of St. Paul; yet he dyed without issue 23 June 1324. [See in the other Volume, p. 138. 342.] His last wife, who had this maner in dowry, enjoyed it many years, till 1376 (b), having continued a widow 53 years.

Isabel, one of her husband's sisters, was married to John de Hastings, Lord Bergavenny. And Elizabeth, another sister, to Gilbert Talbott. Their posterity inherited successively this estate.

John de Hastings, Lord Abergavenny, dyed in 1324.—Laurence, his son, Earl of Penbroke, in 1348.—John, his son in 1375. And—John de Hastings, Earl of Penbroke, in 1389, being the first of this family that enjoyed Hassingbroke after the death of Margaret of St. Paul. He dying without issue in January

1389 [W], this maner of Assingbroke in the Hope came to

Sir Richard Talbott (c); who had summons to Parliament from 1383 to 1393. He dyed 7 Septemb. 1396, possessed of this maner, leaving — Gilbert, his son and heir; that departed this life 19 October 1419, having only one daughter — Ankaret: and She dyed 11 December 1421 (d). [See in the other Volume, p. 35. 138. 226, 227. 342, 514.]

It seems after this to have come to Reginald de Grey, of Ruthyn, son of Reginald, son of Elizabeth, daughter of John de Hastings and Isabell, Sister of Adomare de Valence above mentioned. [See in the other Volume, p. 138. 514.] [X].

And, like Wallbury in Great Hallingbury, was in Richard Rede, and Alice his widow in 1434. And, in 1436, in — John Rede; then in — Robert, son of Philip, brother of the said Richard, father of John (e).

Next, in 1457, William Wetenhale, citizen and Alderman of London, held the maners of Hassingbroke and Fanges, with the Advowson of the Churches, of the King in capite, by the service of one silver Needle of the price of 2 d. ob.— William, was his son and heir. They held also Wallbury (f).

Roger de Ross, the King's Taylor, held Wallbury in the reign of K. Henry III. by the like service. [See in the other Volume, p. 514.]

In 1488, William Wetenhale had a license, to alienate this maner and that of Fange, to James Crouner and others. But this seems not to have taken effect, because in 1520 leave was granted to William Wetenhale and Reginald Peckham Esq; to alienate them to Sir George Nevill. Whether this was for a settlement or otherwise, does not appear, but after this the estate was in Wetenhale; for George Whetenhale Esq; had licence, 30 March 1554, to alienate the premises to

Richard Champion and Margaret his wife, for which a Fine was levied (g). This Richard was son of Richard Champion of Godalming in Surrey; citizen and draper, and Sheriff of London in 1530, again in 1558, and Lord Mayor in 1565; knighted in 1565, and dyed 30 October 1568 (b).—He is buried at St. Dunstan's in the East, with an Epitaph; by which it appears that he left no child.—Richard his nephew succeeded him, and dyed 27 January 1599: He seems to have had a son — Richard, because one of that name was Patron of the Living in 1618; and a mutilated Epitaph mentions such a man [Y].

It was next in the Fetherston Family, descended from Cuthbert Fetherston who sprung from the Fetherstons of Hetherye-Cleugh in the parish of Stanhope in the Diocese of Durham: They were of great antiquity in the north of England. Cuthbert was, for 35 years, usher and cryer of the King, in the King's court before his Majesty wherever he was in England [Z]. He built Hassingbroke-hall, where was his effigies as big as the life in the habit of his office, but now mutilated. Having lived above forty years in wedlock with his wife Catharine, he departed this life 10 December 1615, in the 78th year of his age, and she in November 1622, aged 85, and were buried in the Church of St. Dunstan's in the West, London; leaving three sons; Ralph, who dyed in 1631, without issue; Henry; Edward: and one daughter, Mary, wife of Francis Hutton.—Henry Fetherston Esq; the second son and heir, had no issue by his first wife, Mary, daughter of Mr. Gaynes Newman: but by his second, Catharine, daughter of Michael Heneage of London Esq; he had, Grace, married to William Barker, Esq; and — Heneage, his son and heir, born in 1628; who during the civil wars adhered to the Royal cause, and was created a Baronet 4 Decemb. 1660, being styled of Blake-sware in Hertfordshire; which maner he purchased, and sold again to Sir Thomas Leventhorp (i). He was Sheriff of this County in 1666, and by his wife, Mary, eldest daughter of Sir John Bennet of Babraham in Cambridge-shire, had three sons [A], and six daughters. Having lived together in Wedlock about 60 years, she dyed 12 June 1710, aged 77 years, and he 23 Octob. 1711, 84 years old; and were buried in this Church. — Sir Henry Fetherston, his second but eldest surviving son, succeeded. He married Anna-Maria, sole daughter of James Williamson of London, Merchant, but she dyed 6 March 1689, leaving no child. Sir Henry continued a widower till his decease, 17 October 1746, in the 92d year of his age: And having no issue, he bequeathed his large possessions, which were said to amount to 400,000l. to

Matthew Fetherston haugh, of Fetherston Haugh in Northumberland Esq; a descendent from the same Family: One of whom, Sir Timothy, lost his life in the service of K. Charles II. Sir Matthew was created a Baronet was so called because it belonged to Waltham Abbey. Abbot's-hall, the mansion house, stands about a mile north-east from the Church.

In 1465, Richard Walsh, and Richard Pigge, Gent. released to William Henifey, of London, grocer, all their right in this maner of Cabournes with appertenances. And in 1607, this maner of Canvers, alias Camborne, belonged to Reginald Hallingworth, Esq; (l).

This Maner is what Alric, and Uluuin, and afterwards Saffelin, held by the name of Stantmere, and Winthelle [C].

William de Septem Molis, or Semeles, gave it to Waltham Abbey, with the Advowson of a Chapel here, but the grant in the Chartulary of Waltham hath no date. And Jonn Ayleward gave the pasture of his Marsh of the fee of William de Septem Molis, which paid him 6d. per ann. and this 6d. per ann. was by Septem Molis given to the Abbey; but Roger de Beauchamp, lord of the fee, opposed the gift, till the Abbot agreed to pay a relief to Roger and his heirs. And in compensation of the detriment which the said Roger might receive by loss of wardship, the Abbot and Convent gave him 40 marks of silver, for the increase of his estate, and the bettering of his condition.

At the suppression, this estate was farmed by Robert Pake at 20l. a year. The rents of assise were 5l. 6s. 3d. ob. Perquisites of Court 40s. 3d.

In 1543, K. Henry VIII. granted this, by the name of the maner of Stanford Hoope, to Waltar Farr, alias Gillingham, and his heirs.

K. Edward VI. made a grant of the same to Robert Curſon, and his heirs (m). But Walter Farr remained in possession, till his decease 30 April 1590. He had secured this maner, by license dated 1 January 1574, to—Richard Farre; who dyed possessed of it 3 July 1595, leaving—Henry, his son and heir, 16 years old (n). And he had it also at the time of his decease 15 December 1608, leaving—Henry his son (o). [Concerning this family of Farre, see above, p. 197, and in the other Volume, p. 50.]

This estate was afterwards in Thomas Aleyn, D. D. Rector of this parish, who dyed 3 January 1677. He left it to his son—John Aleyn, Esq; whose daughter and heir brought it in marriage to William Ashby, of Breakspear in Harefeild in Middlesex, Esq; William Ashby Esq; had it in 1736. After that it came to the Rev.

Thomas Aleyn, Vicar of Cookham in Berkshire. [See above, p. 85.] [D].

In this Maner was a Free Chapel, dedicated to St. Nicolas, endowed with Fourteen acres of glebe, and with the tythes of Abbots-hall, and of Cory, or Curr, marsh. Here I believe once stood the Church of Stanford distinct from that of Haffingbroke, which the Monastery of Waltham, in whose patronage this Chapel was, for their own convenience named a Free Chapel, though we find it endowed with glebe and tythe as a Parish Church. However, in 1548, Novemb. 12, the messuage and tenement called St. Nicolas Free Chapel, with all the premisses, were granted to Thomas Golding and Walter Cely (p) [E].

The original grant is now in the Chapel of the Rolls, which determined a law-suit, begun in 1712, between the lessee of St. Nicolas Chapel, who claimed tythes from other farms in this parish than those specified in the Grant, and the Rector of Stanford, when the latter recovered the right upon producing this Authority.

This free Chapel, with appertenances, lately belonged to John May; who, jointly with his wife, passed them by Fine, in Trinity-term 1744, to William Bland of Wenington.

Mr. Alexander Master; and Mr. Joseph Wotton, have also some lands here.

In 1413, William Sautre held divers lands and tenements in this parish, of John Earl of Hereford.

And, in 1476, Sir Thomas Tyrell held here, 1 messuage called Bottons, and 100 acres of land called Sherman, of Richard Boteler, in right of Elizabeth his wife, as of their maner of Caprons, by fealty, and 12 d. rent (q).

A Field in this Parish, called Horndon-Field, as lying next to Horndon on the Hill, has been judged in that parish, and tythable to the Church of St. Paul; but, upon a dispute, given up to Stanford.

Charities.

To the Poor of this parish, a tenement and orchard in Fobbing, lett at 3 l. per ann.

From Earls-Hope-Marsh in the maner of Ca-bourns, 20 s. per ann. to the Church, and 20 s. to the Poor.

Well-House and half an acre of land lett to the Officers for their pensioners at 40 s.

Ten shillings a year to the Poor out of Old-Jenkins, and 10 s. out of New-Jenkins, both in Mucking. These sums go to those who are industrious and not pensioners.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, stands pleasantly on a rising ground, being a Green where several ways meet.

It consists of a body and two aisles; the body, north aisle, and Chancel, are tiled; the south aisle leaved. On the north side of the Church stands the Tower, in which are 5 Bells. This situation of the Tower is not common; the like is at West Thurrock.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Haffingbroke.

In Stanford le Hope was formerly a Chapel called St. Mary's Chapel; whether adjoyning to the Church or not, we cannot find. However it was for a Chantry: and granted, as well as St. Nicolas's Chapel, to Thomas Golding.

In the windows of this Church were several Coats of Arms, in the last century [F].

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 978 l.

[E] In the survey of the Chantries, it is said, that the Chapel of Stanford le Hope was no Parish-Church, nor was there divine service in it. It was then valued at 40 s. per ann. There was a dispute, in 1284, about the Tithes of this Chapel, between the Abbot of Waltham and William Haste, Parson of Stanford. Placita Jur. & Assis. 13 Edw. The rest are well known.

21. CORRINGHAM.

This parish lies east of the last, abutting southward on the Thames.

The name is otherwise written in records Currincham, and Curringham. Ing, signifying a meadow, or pasture ground; and ham a habitation, are well-known Saxon words. From whence Corr, or Curr, the first syllable is derived, I am not able to determine. Sigar, a freeman, was owner of this parish in Edward the Confessor's reign: At the time of the Survey, it belonged to the Bishop of London, and his under-tenant William. Odo, the Bishop of Bayeux, had taken away from it half a Hide [G]; which probably he joined to his maner of Haffingbroke in Stanford.

These lands were divided afterwards into three Maners, namely, 1. The maner of Corringham, and Dungefyll. 3. . . . that of Oldhall. 3. . . . Coggars.

The Maner of CORRINGHAM.

Corringham-Hall stands near the Church, and hath a pleasant prospect over the Thames into Kent. The Family of Baud are the first possessors we find here under the Bishop of London. Verstegan observes, that though the name of Baud be now of ill signification, and given to the promoters of dishonest matches (r), or rather of lewdness, yet it had not originally that meaning; and was the surname of a noble Family, of Bade, or Baden, in Germany, from whence probably these were derived: We find them at Corringham as high as K. John's reign. And I am apt to believe the William, mentioned in Domesday-book was one of the Bauds, because we find likewise in the same Record, one William holding under the Bishop at Hadham in Hertfordshire: Now Baud held both these maners under the Bishop of London; nor have we any possessor to be found by name at Hadham-Hall, till Baud in the time of K. Henry III.

The first of the surname of Baud we find mentioned, was Simon de Baud, a valiant Knight, who took on him the cross and dyed in the Holy land in 1174.

The next was—Nicolas de Baud a famous Knight, who fought against the Saracens in Spain, and dyed in Gallicia in 1189 (s).—Sir Walter de Baud his successor if not his son, dwelt at Corringham, and dyed there, about the year 1216.—Sir William, his son and heir, dyed here in 1270.

To—Sir Walter his son, K. Henry III. granted free-warren in his lands in Hadham; which his father had purchased. He was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1307, and departing this life in 1310, was buried here with an Epitaph in French, now imperfect. His son, —Sir William de Baud, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1328, and in half of the year 1334. He dyed here in 1343.—Sir John de Baud attended K. Edward III. in his expedition to Gascogne in 1346, and dyed there [H]. —Sir William de Baude was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1372, Knight of the Shire for the county of Hertford in 1373, and departed this life in 1375, at his maner house in Hadham, being the first of the Family who fixed his residence there.—Walter, or Thomas Baude Esq; dyed 13 January 1420. His son—Thomas Baude Esq; of Corringham, was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1446, 1447. and dyed at Hadham in 1449 [I]. At the time of his decease he held this maner of Corringham of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and the maner of Dungefyll, of others. He was succeeded by his son—Ralph Baud, Esq; (t) who served the office of Sheriff for the two Counties in 1470; and, at the time of his decease in 1483, held, jointly with his wife Margaret, the maner of Corringham of the Bishop of London as of his maner of Stortford; and the maner of Bawds, alias Downfells, in South-Weald—Thomas, his son and heir, was then 13 years old (u). He was afterwards knighted, and presented to this living in 1502, and 1506 (w). The time of his death doth not appear.—John Baude Esq; dyed at Corringham in 1550. And another of the same name presented to this living in 1558, 1563, and 1599; being, as far as we can find, the last of this Family here [K].

[H] This Sir John de Baud obtained a grant of a Fair and a Market, and free Warren, in his Maner of Corringham.

[I] In the Church of Little Hadham are Grave-stones, three of them defaced, one of which is supposed to have been for Sir William who dyed in 1375; because two Epitaphs that are legible are said to be for his sons Walter, and Thomas. Walter succeeded Sir William, and dyed 4 Febru. 1420. Thomas, I presume the son of Thomas second son of Sir William, succeeded upon Walter's dying without issue; because in the infeoffment of lands and woods called Plantings, in the parish of Stortford, settled by this last Thomas, for a Priest to sing in the Chapel of Hadham-Hall, these only are named to have their Souls prayed for, Sir William Baud, and Alice his wife, and Thomas Baud the elder, and Mary his wife; which Mary's name is mentioned in the same Epitaph with Thomas. She dyed 15 August 1422, and her husband Thomas 3 March 1430. We have not one word of Walter, who therefore, as is presumed, was uncle and not father.

[K] Arms of Baud. Originally, Gules, 3 eagles claws or. Afterwards, gules, 3 cheveronels, argent. Crest. A Black-moor's head couped at the shoulders, proper, with a pair of dragons.

In 1375, Sir William le Baud granted to the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's in London, a fat Doe, and a fat Buck, yearly, as a consideration for 12; or 22, acres of their Lordship of Westlee, adjoining to his Park, which they gave him leave to inclose within the same. The Buck and Doe were offered at the high Altar of St. Paul's Cathedral, with very particular ceremonies (x) [L].

Though persons of the name of Baude continued patrons of this Rectory till 1599, yet the Maner seems in the mean time to have been in other hands. For George Blaverhasset Esq; was possessed of it in 1540 (y).

John Birde in 1555. John Brewode Esq; in 1559 (z).

Sir Henry Anderson, who dyed 13 April 1605, held this maner of Curringham, alias Corringham, and 500 acres of land thereto belonging; and the Advowson of the Church.—Richard Anderson Esq; was his son and heir (a).

Sir Edward Spencer Kt. had it in 1637, and presented to the Church in 1644.

It came soon after into the Family of Bidolph, or Biddulph, of Ledbury in Herefordshire; who have presented to the Rectory ever since the year 1669; namely, Robert; Antony; Robert.

The Maner of OLD-HALL.

The mansion house, which stands about a quarter of a mile from the Church, was new-built some years ago. Richard Welles, in right of Agnes his wife, enjoyed it in 1476. Thomas Fisher was owner of it in 1508. And

All that we find further concerning this estate, is, That, in 1553, a Fine passed between Thomas Docra, plaintiff, and William Scot, deforc'. of the maner of Old-hall, and lands in Curringham, Fobbing, East-Tilbury, Stanford le Hope, and Chadwell. In 1554, Thomas Docwray, and Mildred his wife, passed the same by Fine, to Thomas Crawley (b): who held a Court here 15 October 1573.—Francis Crawley; Gent. had it in 1607.

William Moxon Gent. Secretary to Sir William

Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York, was owner of it afterwards.

The Maner of COGGARS.

The House stands by the side of the road leading from Corringham to Stanford le Hope.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held this maner, of Richard Welles above-mentioned, as of his maner of Old-hall, by fealty, and yearly rent of 4 d.—Sir Robert Tyrell, at the time of his decease 1 July 1508, held this maner, and Daniells land, of Thomas Fisher, Gent. by fealty, and rent of 20 s. per ann. (c).

George Peale had it afterwards. His son—William married Elizabeth Pocher, by whom he had, George; William; and other children. —George, the eldest son, by Rebecca his wife, daughter of Tobias Moore of Fobbing, had his son and heir—George.

Marshes here called Swilnesse, Hanford, Wadewick; Southland wic, and great Ilward, belonged to John Petre Esq; in 1622.

A tenement and marsh, here also called Ose, alias Warwick, was alienated by William Badley to William Cooke, and others, by license dated 20 May 1567. It belonged in 1622 to John Petre Esq; (d).

Forty acres of marsh called Borrifatts, alias Baddifatts, and the Royalty of fishing and fowling of half Ruggard Creek in this parish, were sold 29 April 1687, by Thomas Foster to Erasmus Norwich of London, merchant.

There is an Almshouse here for two dwellers, endowed with about two acres of land.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands on a Green, and consists of a body and a north aisle. The Chancel hath a north Chapel, for a Chantry. The north aisle of the Church is leaved, all the rest tiled. In the Tower, which is a large low building with a Spire shingled, are 3 Bells.

The Patronage of this Rectory was many years in the Family of Baud. From 1391, to 1408 Sir Thomas Morwell, and his widow Alice, presented; by what right doth not appear. Except a few turns, it hath been ever since in the lords of Corringham-hall.

[L] The Doe was offered, January the 25th the day of the Conversion of St. Paul; and the Buck June the 29, the day of the Commemoration of St. Paul; in the following form. The Buck, and Doe, were brought on these several days, by one or more of the fitting servants of the Family, and not the whole Family, at the hour of procession, and through the midst thereof, and offered at the high Altar; after which the persons that brought the Buck received of the Dean and Chapter, by the hands of their Chamberlain, 12 d. sterling, for their entertainment, but nothing when they brought the Doe. The Buck being brought to the steps of the high Altar, the Dean and Chapter apparelled in copes and proper vestments, with garlands of roses on their heads, sent the body of the Buck to be baked, and had the Head and Horns fixed on a pole, born before the Crofs in their procession round about the Church, till they issued out at the west Door; where the Keeper that brought it blowed the death of the Buck; and then the Horners that were about the City, answered him in like manner: For which they had each of the Dean and Chapter 4 pence in money, and their dinner: And the Keeper, during his stay, meat, drink and lodging, and 5 s. in money at his going away, together with a loaf of bread having on it the picture of St. Paul. This ceremony continued till Qu. Elizabeth's days. See Dugdale's Hist. of St. Paul's, p. 17, &c. Camden's Britannia, in Middlesex. Stow's Survey, edit. 1720. Vol. I. book. 3. p. 164, 165.

A Chantry was founded in this Church by William le Baud, about the year 1328, the endowment of which was, 1 messuage, 100 acres of arable, and 30 s. rent in Coringham, Fobbing, Stansted [or Stanford] Eftlee, and Westlee; holden of the Bishop of London, by the service of bringing at the high Altar of the Church of St. Paul's London, one buck, and one doe yearly (e).

lies north-east of Corringham; having the Thames on the south, into which opens a Creek called Fobbing-Creek, the mouth of which is called Hole-haven, near Shell-haven, and Ridham-gap.

The name is otherwise written Phobinge; but, except the well known termination ing, I cannot account for the name.

Brictmar, a Thegn of Edward the Confessor, was, in his time, possessed of this Maner; After the Conquest it was one of the many lordships given to Eustace Earl of Bologne. Turol, had taken from it 30 acres, and added them to Odo's fee. And Ingelric had made a considerable addition to this maner [N].

The Maners in this Parish are two. 1. The maner of Fobbing. 2. . . . that of Hawkesbury.

The Maner of F O B B I N G.

Fobbing-hall stands near the Church.

The oldest account that we have after Domesday-book, is that Thomas Camvill held of the Honor of Bologne two Fees in Fobbing, and Senefeld, out of which he was to pay 20 l. to the Monks of St. Winer; and afterwards, by the King's command, to Eustace the Monk [O].

In 1204, a Fine passed between Richard the Monk, petent, and William de Clovile, tenent, for 100 acres of marsh, with appertenances, in Fobbing.

The Camvill family seems to have made over their right to K. Edward I. For, in 1279, a Fine passed between that King, and Alianor his Queen, plaintiffs, and Robert de Camvill deforc', of the Maners of Fobbing and Shynefeild in Essex; the right of the King and Queen. Hugh Fitz Otto held the last Maner for term of years (f).

Afterwards, it was in the noble Family of Bobun, Earls of Hereford and Essex. [See above, p. 193.]

Humfrey de Bobun, who dyed in 1298, held the maner of Fobbing of the King in capite, of the Honor of Mandeville, by knight's service (g). So did—Humfrey de Bobun, the 7th Earl of Hereford and Essex, at the time of his decease in 1372 (h).—Joane, his widow, enjoyed it after him.

Elleanor, their eldest daughter and coheir, wife of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, inherited this Maner among other great estates. Their eldest daughter,

Anne, at length sole heir to a main part of the Bohun estate, had this, upon partition with K. Henry V. it being then valued at 43 l. 14 s. 5 d. ob. By her marriage with Thomas, and Edmund, successively Earls of Stafford, she brought the maner of Fobbing into that family (i).—Humfrey, son of the latter, created Duke of Buckingham 14 Septemb. 1444, was slain at the battle of Northampton 27 July 1460, fighting on the part of K. Richard III. on the throne; but, endeavouring to pull him down again, lost his head; and his estates were confiscated. He left Edward, his eldest son and heir; two other sons; and two daughters, by Catharine his wife, daughter of Richard Widevil, Earl Rivers, sister to Elizabeth, Queen of K. Edward IV. She was remarried to Jasper Tudor, surnamed of Hatfield, half-brother to K. Henry VI. Earl of Penbroke, and Duke of Bedford. After the accession of K. Henry VII. they enjoyed this estate, and he presented to this Living in her right.—Edward, eldest son of Henry Duke of Buckingham, being restored to his title and estates, enjoyed them till 17 May 1521, when he was beheaded through the artifices of Cardinal Wolsey; and this forfeited. K. Henry VIII. 24 April 1522, granted this maner and the Advowson of the Church, to Sir Thomas Bullen, and his heirs male (l). He was created afterwards Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond. His son—George being beheaded 17 May, 1537, this estate was given to the Lady

Mary, afterwards Queen, who had it in 1549; and Qu. Elizabeth after her (m).

George Tyrell was possessed of this maner in 1559, and 1565 (n).

In the reign of K. Charles I. the Maner, and Demesne Lands were separated.

After that, Sir George Whitmore, Kt. Alderman of London, purchased the Maner. He sold it, about 1682, to

Sir Thomas Davall senior, who dying in 1712, left it to his son—Thomas Davall Esq; knighted 19 June 1713: but he departed this life in April 1714. He married Lydia-Catharine Van-Hattem, by whom he had two sons that dyed in their infancy. She was remarried to Henry, Duke of Chandos, and dyed 18 November 1750. By virtue of a marriage-settlement she had her whole jointure of 800*l.* a year allowed her for ever: Part of which was this Maner of Fobbing, and estates at Greys-Thurrock, Vange, and Buers-Gifford. As far as we can learn, this belongs to

Sir John Van-Hattem. [See above, p. 95, 96.]

The Court is kept at the Hall, but upon courtesy.

As for the Demesne Lands of this Maner, they belonged in the last century to John Wood; then to . . . Lawson; and next to John Goffe. The latter sold them to Henry Saunders, who farmed the Hall. He married Sarah, daughter of John Tomlins of Upminster, Gent. and had by her, John, and Samuel, that dyed without issue: and 3 daughters, Sarah, wife of Peter Willoughby, of South Okendon; Mary, wife of Beretinus Chadwick; Judith, of Nathanael Bisby, of London. Mr. Willoughby bought the shares of the others.

This estate was purchased afterwards by Mr. Robert Johnson, of Low-Leyton. He dyed in 1749.

The Maner of HAWKESBURY

Did belong to the Abbey of Berking: and, at the suppression, the farm of it was 10*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* and the rent of assise 22*s.* 9*d.* ob.

K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted it to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their successors for ever in pure alms (o). They have enjoyed it ever since.

Some Trees here have been a Sea-mark, called Hawksbury-bush.

Mr. John Green; George Unwin; John Bosworth; William Stratford, &c. have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, stands pleasantly on a rising ground, from whence is a large prospect over the marshes to the River. There is a south aisle belonging both to Church and Chancel; all tiled. And a square Tower of stone embattled with 5 Bells.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Fobbing-hall; and continued in it till the attainder of Edward Duke of Buckingham, when it came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Bullen; but, upon his decease, it reverted to the Crown, in which it hath remained ever since.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 741*l.*

23. F A N G E, or V A N G E, stands north of Fobbing; and up to it runs a Creek out of the Thames.

The name seems to be derived from the Saxon Fang, a taking; but what should give occasion to it, we cannot even guess. Unless the Creek there should have been a receptacle for the captures and booty taken upon the inhabitants of these parts by the pirating Saxons or Danes.

It is written in records these other various ways, Fang, Fange at Noke, Fanges, Fangy, Fenge, Fung, Fhanges, Phenge, Vunge, Wy-inge.

The lands of this Parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to three Freemen: At the time of the Survey, they were divided into two parcels, or maners; Odo, bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Turol's son, held what had belonged to two of the Freemen: and Ralph Peverell, with his under-tenant Serlo, held the Maner that had belonged to the third Freeman [P].

They were very early united into ONE MANER.

Vange-hall, the mansion-house, stands about half a mile north from the Church; and is pleasantly situated on a Hill.

This Estate for many years went along with Haffingbroke in the neighbouring Parish of Stanford-le Hope: and from about the year 1280 to 1577, was in the Families of Montchensy, Vere, de Valence Earl of Penbroke, Hastings also Earl of Penbroke, Rede, and Wetenhale (p). To avoid repetition, we shall beg leave to refer the Reader to Stanford-le Hope, p. 239.

What Adomar de Valence, Earl of Penbroke, held here in 1323, was 1 messuage, 70 acres of arable, 4 acres of meadow, . . . pasture, or marsh, and 33 s. 2 d. rent of free and customary tenants (q).

Thomas Wetenhale, son of George, had license in 1577 to alienate this maner to

Thomas Newman, of Quendon, Gent. who dyed possessed of it 19 Febru. 1585, leaving — Anne, his only daughter and heir (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 581.]

In the mean time, we find, in 1565 and 1572, William Tanfield Esq; mentioned as lord of the Maner of Fange at Noke, and Fange-hall (s).

John Baker Esq; who dyed 13 April 1606, held the maner of Vange-hall, alias Vange at Noke, in the parishes or fields of Vange, Fobbing, Basildon, and Pitsey, of the King, as of his maner of Berking, in free socage, by fealty only. — Sir Richard Baker was his son and heir (t). This latter is recorded to have been possessed of the maner of Vange at Noke in 1625. At the same time

Charles Tooker, who dyed 26 August that year, is said to have then held the maner of Fange, alias Vangehall, with appertinances, and the Advowson of this Church, of the King in capite. And he held of Sir Richard, as of his said maner of Vange at Noke, Merrick Barnfeild, Butt-mead, Apes-croft, Staves acre, or Kenes croft, Foxborough, Little London, Gospel Bush feild, Morris acre, Drivers, Salt marsh, and 40 acres more, in this parish, East and West Tilbury, and Hadley. — Robert Tooker was his son and heir (u). He presented to this Living in 1639, and Christiana Tooker in 1668, and 1669.

Hereby it appears that the Maners here were then severed.

Paul Viscount Banning had the maner of Vange at Noke in and compounded with the Crown for the disafforesting of it, together with a tene-ment called Paprills thereto belonging, and the lands &c. containg 280 acres, rented at 100 l. a year.

This estate is now parcelled out. Two thirds of the maner and advowson came from the Tookers to — Godfrey Thacher Esq; He sold the same to — James Marrener, who by will gave it to his wife Ann for life, and then to his two daughters, Anne married to John Wingfield; and Rebecca to Charles Smith Esq; of Croydon, in Surrey: He purchased Anne's part.

The other one third is, or lately was, in William Aylett, of Stifford.

Felton Neville Esq; and Mr. Richard Barnard, have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, stands on a rising ground, and is one of pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a wooden Frame, with a shingled spire, there is one Bell.

This Rectory was always appendent to the Maner. Only, after Wetenhale it was for one turn in John Osborne in 1557; and in William Wiseman in 1581, and 1609; by what right doth not appear.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 392 l.

LANGDON.

North of Fange, and of Corringham and Horndon on the Hill, are two contiguous Parishes named Langdon. The name Lang dun, signifies Long-hill, the chief part of these two Parishes standing high; nay some have fancied that this is the highest spot of ground in this County. But the ingenious Mr. John Lee of Danbury, having surveyed it, found that it is not so high as Danbury by a pretty many feet. The reason of Langdon Hill's being thought so high, is partly owing to a deception not well observed by every body; for on the north side leading to it the ascent is easy, and not much perceived, but to the south, south-east, and south-west, it opens with such a descent into so fine and large a Vale that extends quite up to London, being twenty miles or more; affording a noble Prospect of that great City, with the River Thames, and all its shipping and craft of every sort, and Tilbury Fort; as also all the coast of Kent to the Medway, if not further, and is from east to west near 40 miles, perhaps more: So that Essex, all things considered, may justly boast here of the grandest Prospect in England.

The common name of these two Parishes is otherwise written in records, Laingdon, Laindon, Laundon, Langenduna, Legniduna, Leionduna.

24. LANGDON-HILLS

is the most southern of the two. By way of distinction from the other, the word Hill's is added, ignorantly, by those who knew not that don signifies the same. But it is by a like redundancy as Mersea-island. The most significant distinction is that of Langdon with the Church of Westley.

Alric, a Thegn of K. Edward the Confessor, had this Langdon before the Conquest: Suene of Essex, and his under-tenant Walter were possessed of it at the time of the Survey [2].

Suene's grandson, Henry de Essex, lost all his possessions through his cowardise, as is related above, p. 156. and more particularly under Raley:

We find this parish afterwards divided into the Maners, 1. . . . of Langdon. 2. . . . of Gouldsmiths.

The Maner of LANGDON.

The mansion stands near the Church, on the side of the hill.

After Suene's grandson, the next possessors of this estate were a Family surnamed de Langedon. For, in K. Henry the Second's reign, John de Langedon held one fee in Langedon, of the Honor of Reyleye (w).

But the knightly Family of Sutton seems to have been lords paramount. For Robert de Sutton gave in frank marriage with Margaret his daughter, among other things, the suit of all his Lands at Langedon, with the Advowson of that Church, to William, son of Hugh Bigod, first of that Christian name, Earl of Norfolk; which grant was confirmed by K. John in 1209 (x).

John Ewell, the King's Escheator, seized into the King's hands, the maner of Langedon, by reason of the death of John de Langedon without issue, about the year 1382 (y). Which shews how long persons of that surname continued, and when they ceased, here.

Since this Parish has been united with West-Lee, what was held here from the Church of St. Paul is reckoned into that maner.

The Maner of GOLDSMITHS.

The mansion house of this stands higher than the former Maners, and on the other side of the Church towards the south.

It was so named, I presume, from some owner, and seems to have gone for several years with that of Malgraves in Horndon, to which it is contiguous.

John Malgreff, in 1320, held 50 acres of arable in the vill of Langedon of the Priores of Hegham, by the service of 11 s. a year.—Richard Malgrave, at the time of his decease in 1445, held the maners called Langedon and Orset of the King in capite by the service of the fourth part of a knight's fee;—Thomas his son and heir, at the time of his decease in 1459, is said to hold Malgraves maner lying in the vills of Hordon, Langedon, and Orset (z).

Afterwards

Afterwards we find this estate in Tyrell, as Malgrave's was. Sir John Tyrell held the maner of Gouldsmiths with appertenances in Langdon; and 2 tenements called Stone-place, and Leyfings; and a messuage named Malgraves, and Stony-hill; in Langdon, Horndon, and Fobbing, of the Bishop of London, and of the King. He dyed 28 February 1540, leaving — John Tyrell Esq; his son and heir 26 years old (a).

Edward Archer Esq; had also this estate, as well as Malgrave's.—Then—Thomas Andrews Esq; whose daughter

Anne was married to Thomas Cotton Esq; and their only daughter and heir, Frances, brought it in marriage to

Dingley Askeham Esq; [See above, p. 218.]

WEST LEE a parish about a mile from Langdon towards Vange, was united to Langdon in 1432. The poverty of both Places was alledged as a reason for the Union, and the people of West Lee have ever since resorted to Langdon Church, their own being down (b). Where it stood, is at present quite unknown.

West-Ley, signifies the west pasture, which it was in respect of another called East-Ley in the other Langdon.

This West Ley belonged, at the time of the Survey, to the Canons of St. Paul's Church in London, and hath continued in them ever since. It was held in Edward the Confessor's reign by Edeva [R].

West-ley-hall is situated on the side of a Hill, about three quarters of a mile from this Church.

K. Edward II. in 1313, granted to this maner the following immunity, That no purveyor of the King's should take any corn within its precincts (c).

Fletchers, and Nightingales, two farms in this parish belong to John Henniker Esq;

Here are also two Farms settled by Thomas White D. D. as an endowment for the Professorship of Moral Philosophy at Oxford, founded by him in 1621; being 100 l. a year. He gave besides, out of these farms, to 5 Scholars, or Exhibitioners, of Magdalen-Hall in Oxford 8 l. a year a-piece: and 4 l. per ann. to the Principal of that Hall (d). This munificent person was the founder of Sion-College in London.

Mr. Harry Blunt hath also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, stands on the western side of the hill; and is of one pace with the Chancel, except that the Chancel hath a north Chapel; they are both tiled. A wooden Belfrey, with a spire shingled, contains 2 Bells.

The Patronage of the Rectory of Langdon-Hills was in Bileigh-Abbey till 1432. Then, upon the union of this Church with that of Westley, the Abbey reserved to themselves two turns, and the third was allowed to the Church of St. Paul's. But, ever since the dissolution, the whole right of patronage hath been in the Dean and Chapter of the said Church.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 574 l.

25. LANGDON with BASILDON is north of the other. By way of distinction from it 'tis called Langdon-Clay, such being the nature of the soil.

In this Parish are two Maners. 1. The maner of Langdon. 2. . . . that of Gobions.

The Maner of LANGDON

belonged, before the Conquest to a certain woman named Alfered; 2nd, at the time of the Survey, to the Bishop of London [S], and hath ever since continued in his see.

One Ralph held a part, which Ulmar had possessed in Edward the Confessor's reign.

In 1290, K. Edward I. confirmed to the Bishop of London a view of Frank Pledge in the maners of Leyndon, Orsette, and Chelmsford. The year after it was certified, that the Bishop had inclosed his Wood in Leyndon called The Fryth, with the demesne lands adjacent, and had made a Park, within the bounds of the Forest of Essex (e).

* S s s

This

This Frith was the Maner-house, where Courts are kept. For the meaning of the word Frith, see the other Volume, p. 228. Note.

GOBYONS

took its name from an ancient knightly Family, who had also estates at Havering, Great Lees, Topesfield, and other parts of this County. See above, p. 63. and in the other Volume, p. 96. 361. 369.

The maner house, is about a mile west from the Church, near Dunton.

In 1334, Thomas Gobyon jun. and Elizabeth his wife, held 20l. in land and rents in Langdon, of the King in capite, by knight's service (f).—John Gobyon held, in 1396, the maner of Leyndon of the Countess of Stafford, as of her maner of Fobbing by knight's service. And the maner of Sturmynes of the Bishop of London as of his maner in Leyndon by the service of 1 d. a year.

Margaret, his only daughter and heir, was married first to John Aspell, afterwards to John Symond. And Joane daughter of this last, brought it in marriage to

William Gaynesford, whose son — Richard Gaynesford dyed possessed of it 20 May 1484, leaving — John, his brother and heir (g). [See in the other Volume, p. 359. 369.]

To whom this estate now belongs we cannot learn.

Mr. David Archer hath some lands in this parish, besides what hath been particularly mentioned.

Charitable Gifts.

John Puckle of this parish, by Will dated 6 May, 1617, gave all his Copy-hold lands for maintenance of a School-master to teach a competent number of poor Children of Basildon and Langdon.—This was revived by a Commission for Charitable Uses. The farm is there said to be 16 l. per ann. Ten pounds to the Master.—40 s. to the Poor of Great-Burghsted;—13 s. for a Sermon on St. John Baptist's day;—the rest to the Poor.

Sept. 11 1703, the Officers of the Parish, by virtue of her Majesty's Commission for Charitable Uses, had a full hearing against John Dod and Thomas Gray, concerning the gift of 4 l. per ann. from Lands lying in the parish of Fobbing, and recovered the right by Decree of these Commissioners; Sir Ch. Tyrrell, H. Everard, Barts. J. Comyns, W. Bramston, R. Cary, R. Rogers.

The Church, dedicated to St. Nicolas, stands on a rising ground, and consists of a body and a south aisle; but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. It hath a steeple of timber, with a spire shingled.

This valuable Rectory hath been all along in the collation of the Bishops of London.

The Parsonage-house lies in a bottom, betwixt Langdon-Church and Basildon; and, by the form of the chimney, seems to be a very ancient building.

A well-endowed Chantry was founded in this Church, in 1329. That year, K. Edward III. granted licence to Thomas de Berdefield, to give one messuage, ninety-five acres of arable, and 13 s. 4 d. rent in Leyndon and Est-Ley, to a Chaplain to celebrate mass for his soul for ever, at the Altar of the Virgin Mary and St. Thomas the Martyr in the Church of Leyndon.—These were held of Thomas Gobyon, Richard de Goshalme, and Thomas de Vere (b). In the Book of Chantries the yearly value is 8 l. 11 s. 8 d. Rents resolute to divers lords above-mentioned 14 s. 7 d. and to the Bishop for copyholds 2 s. 4 d. which shews it to have been in this Langdon.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 758 l.

is a large Hamlet belonging to Langdon. When it was first united to it we cannot find.

The name of it is written in records these various ways, Bacclesdon, Barthesdon, Bartlesdon, Bartsdon, Batlysdon, Belesduna, and Berlesduna.

In this Hamlet are the following three Maners.
1. The maner of Bardestaple, or Barstaple-hall.
2. The maner of Belesdun, or Botellers. 3. . . . that of Bartlesdon, or Battleswick. To which add Eastlee.

ces in Essex. Rot. pat. Norm. 6 Hen. V. Whether it was any publick Building here, we are not able to determine.

That

That the Hundred took its name from this Barstable-Hall, is what I have observed above, p. 190.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, a Freeman was possessed of this Maner; which, at the time of the Survey, belonged to Odo bishop of Baieux, and the son of Tuold was his under-tenant [T].

The pretent Maner-house of Barstable-Hall is a forlorn weather-beaten edifice on a rising ground, deserted for another house in a lower situation with good water, where the Farmer now dwells.

After those mentioned in Domesday-book, we meet with no owner's name here till K. Edward the Third's reign; and after that time, very often, the lord of this maner held also the Hundred under the King. Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, seems to have been lord here. For, Humfrey Waldene held the maner of Berdestaple of Edmund Earl of Kent, who was beheaded 19 March 1330, as of his maner of Swanscamp, by the service of one knight's fee.

And under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1399, Humfrey de Walden held half a fee, and Saykina de Berdstaple another half-fee, in Berdstaple (i).—John Walden, at the time of his decease in 1401, held jointly with his wife Elizabeth, the maner called Berdestaple-hall in Leyndon, partly of the Countess of Kent, part of the Bishop of London, and part of John Gobyon.—Sir Alexander Walden, his son, dyed in 1408.—John Walden, dying in 1419, without issue, was succeeded by his two sisters,

Catharine, wife of John Barle, jun. and Margaret wife of Henry Langley (k). [Concerning the Walden Family, see more in the other Volume, p. 497. 570. 582, 583.] Henry Langley held this maner, and 400 acres of land in Bertlesden, Leyndon, Eastlee, Newingdon, Fange, and Shenfield, of the King as of his Dutchy of York. And so did his wife Catharine, who dyed 18 October 1511. They left an only daughter

Catharine, wife of John Marshall, born in 1475 (l). She held this maner of Barstable-hall of the King, as of his maner of Swanscombe, by fealty and rent of 6 s. a year. She departed this life 15 February 1517, as did her husband 19 February 1520. They had only two daughters, coheirs, namely, Elianor, wife of Henry Cutt, son of Sir John Cutt of Thacsted: and Mary, wife of John Cutt, son of Richard Cutt (m). This Mary, at the time of her decease 14 July 1521, is said to have held this maner of Berstable, and lands in Brydlesden, by the same tenure as above.—Peter Cutt, her son and heir, was then 21 years old (n).

Elianor aforesaid dyed 20 June 1537, at which time she is recorded to have also held the maner of Barstable, alias Barstable-hall, by the same tenure as above; which maner is said to have extended into the Vills or parishes of Bertlesden, Lyendon, Eastleigh, Newendon, Fange, Shenfeild, and Fobbinge [U]. Her son, Henry Cutt jun. was then 4 years. But her husband enjoyed this estate till his death 14 January 1573.—Henry, their son and heir, was afterwards knighted, and dyed 12 December 1603, without issue (o).

Peter Cutt Esq; above-mentioned dyed 22 October 1547, possessed of this maner of Barstable, and of a marsh in Fobbinge; and was succeeded by his son—Richard, who, at the time of his decease 4 April 1607, held a moiety of this estate—William, his brother and successor was then 46 years old. For a more particular account of this family see the other Volume, p. 583. 589, 590.

It belonged lately to Istleworth Esq; and now to Coleman, of Charles Brown, Gent.

Little Barstable is mentioned as a maner in this parish; which William Sandell held in 1562, of the maner of Swanscombe: He held also a messuage and lands here called Bacons, of the maner of Barringtons; and Longlande, alias Waldens, of the maner of Fobbing (*).

The Maner of BELESDUN, or BOTELERS.

Suene of Essex held this maner, and the adjoining one of Battlewick, at the time of the Survey: Botelers had belonged in Edward the Confessor's reign to Lefftan, and the other to one Goda, a freeman [W].

The mansion house of Botelers stands a little way south from the Church, and is moated round.

From the Dutchy-rolls it appears, that this maner consisted of one capital messuage, or farm called Butlers in Bartlesdon, a capital messuage called Edgcotts in Crayes; and messuages called Onvants, Somers, and Reames, holden of the Honor of Mandevill by knight's service.

The most ancient accounts we have, make both these estates to have been in the Family of De Vere. In the Fines that have been passed, one of these, or both, have been called the Maner of Langdon, which makes it impossible to shew regularly the several owners.

As to Botelers, the Feodary of the Honor of Castle-Hedingham shews, that Wido de Bertlesdon held it in the time of K. Henry III. Then Adam de Bertlesdon; and William, his son and heir, in 1274.

Robert Travers, and his heirs, held it under John de Vere Earl of Oxford, about the years 1350, and 1358. After Thomas de Vere, who dyed in 1370 (p), it came to the Family of Cornwallys. John Cornwall, or Cornwallys, who dyed in 1536, held of the Bishop of London as of his Castle of Stortford, by knight's service, one messuage called Bertlesden, which was formerly Robert Travers's, and now called Botelers.

—Thomas Cornwallys, at the time of his decease, in 1484, held, of the Bishop of London, as aforesaid, by the service of 18 d. per ann. this maner of Botelers in Batlysdon, with other lands and tenements thereto belonging in Leyndon, Newingdon, Ramesden, and Fobbinge.

—John, his son, held also of the Bishop this maner of Bertlesden, and 200 acres of arable, 200 of pasture, and 40 of meadow, with appertinances, in the parishes above-mentioned; and tenements of Somers and Battellond, Onysaunts, Tylers, Wyndells, &c. [X]. He departed this life 17 Septemb. 1506, and was succeeded by his brother and heir — Edward Cornewallis, 40 years old (q). — Sir Thomas Cornwallis, at the time of his decease 27 Decemb. 1559, held this maner of the Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaster, by knight's service, leaving — Sir William his son and heir.

Sir Charles Cornwallis sold it to

Sir Robert Wroth, who, at the time of his decease 27 January 1606, held the reversion of the maner of Barthlesdon, alias Battlesdon, or Basteden, with appertinances in Bartlesdon and Crayes. — Sir Robert his son and heir sold it to

Henry Atkins M. D. from whom it came to Martin Bowes late of St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, Esq; and afterwards to his three Daughters, one of which was married to Philip Broke Esq; was anciently called Bartlesdon, though the names are often confounded.

The Maner of BATTLESWICK

The mansion house stands not far from the Church.

The owners of this also are traceable only from the Feodary of the Earls of Oxford. Thomas de Fering held half a fee in Langdon which Humfrey de Welde held afterwards of the Honor of Hadley and Raleigh. — Ralph de Gynges held half a fee in Bartlesdon and Langdon.

John de Vere who dyed in 1421, held the maner of Langdon of the Honor of Raleigh, by knight's service. He held also lands and tenements called Amys, in the several parishes of Leyndon, Bartlesden, Dunton, Bulfann, East and West Horndon, and Ramsden Cray, of the Countess of Stafford, as of her maner of Fobbing. — John de Vere Earl of Oxford, son of Richard de Vere brother of the said John, was his next heir (r). This Family being deprived of their noble estates by act of Parliament in 1472, for their adherence to the House of Lancaster (s), K. Edward IV. gave them to his brother Richard Duke of York, afterwards K. Richard III. who, in the first of his reign, granted to John Howard Duke of Norfolk the maner of Langdon, that had been the Earl of Oxford's who was attainted. But K. Henry VII. having reinstated that Family into their estates, — John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, dyed possessed of the maner of Battlewick in 1512 (t).

These two last Maners hold no Courts.

EAST-LEE, or LEY, so called in contradistinction to West-Ley in the other parish, is about a mile from Langdon Church.

It was formerly called a Maner, and belonged to the Bohun family, but is now only a Farm house situated on a rising ground.

This is a distinct place, and pays no tithes either to this parish or Langdon-hills.

We find very little account of it in records. Only, that Sir Brian Tuke, who dyed 26 October 1545, held the maners of East-Lee, and of Thorpe and Thorpe-hall in South-Church; and the Advowsons of Churches, Vicarages, Chantries, Chapels, and other ecclesiastical Benefices to the same Maners belonging, to hold of the King as of the maner of Writtle, in socage, by fealty and rent of 18 d. per ann.

And the messuage of Reams in Layndon and Fobbing, partly of the maner of Fobbing by the rent of 9 s. part of the maner of Little Barstable by the rent of 3 s. and part of the maner of Great Barstable, by the rent of 3 s. 4 d. per annum; and all the above in socage. Inquis. 22 Hen. VII. & 2 Eliza.

Qu. Elizabeth granted, in 1591, the maner of Eastlee, with appertenances, and advowsons there, to Henry Best, and John Wells.

John Lord Petre, who dyed 11 Octob. 1613, and John Petre Esq; who dyed 2 January 1622-3, held the maner, lands, and tenements called East-Lee (u).

It belonged lately to William Petre, of New-House, in Writtle Esq;

Here was anciently a Chapel, now demolished, but the site of it is still visible. It was either built originally for a Chantry, or one was founded there afterwards.

The return of this Chantry, in the Certificate of Chantries given in K. Edward the VIth's reign, is, That 'lands and tenements were here 'put in feoffment by divers persons to the maintenance of a Preist, the said Preist to sing mass 'in a certain Chaple called East Lea Chaple, in 'Laindon, distant from the parish Church a 'mile and more.—The yerely Value of the 'same doth amount to the some of 4l.'

July 11 1548, K. Edward VI. granted to Clement Sisley this whole Chantry, and a messuage and tenement called Grumsbeys in Newendon; a messuage, tenement, and lands called Cuttelers in Childerdich, and other lands in the same parish; a parcel of land called Dycks in Horndon on the Hill; nine acres of land in Est

Tilbury, [given by Sir Richard Sutton;] messuages and lands called Fancrofts and Turks in Bulvan and Orsett; all belonging to this chantry; and which shew what the Endowment of it was; to hold of the King, as of the maner of Est Greenwich, by fealty only, in free socage (w).

John Petre Esq; above mentioned held this Chapel, and 10 acres of land, and all the Tithes belonging to this Chapel, and the Tithes of a mill (x). [Concerning him, and his descendants, see the other Volume, p. 65. 80. 460.]

Pierce Galliard Esq; and a few others, &c. have also some lands in this place.

The CHAPEL of Basildon is a Chapel of ease to Langdon. It stands on a rising ground about two miles from the mother Church; a valley lying betwixt them, in which the Parsonage-house is situated.

This Chapel is a neat building, and in good repair, of one pace with the Chancel; all tiled. It hath a Tower embattled, with a short spire, in which are Bells.

Basildon is rated to the land-tax at 456l.

Here is a Fair on Holy-rood day, September 14, and one day more, to which is great resort; and it is said, that one much more considerable has dwindled to this.

26. NEWENDEN.

This parish lies in a bottom, which is the reason of the latter part of the name, den, signifying a valley: and the first part is derived either from the Saxon word Nepe, New; or, according to W. Lambarde, from Nipel, low.

If the Saxons first settled in this part of the country, this might be one of the New Settlements wherewith they enlarged their quarters.

The name is otherwise written in records Neutenden, and Nezenden.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the lands in this parish were in three parcels, belonging to Aluuard Dore; Tovi, a freeman; and to Aluvin, under the name of Lohou. At the time of the Survey, Roger Mareschall held the first; Haghebern the second; and R. . . . the third [Y].

There are in this parish two Maners. 1. The maner of Newenden, or Little Bromford. 2. . . . that of Frerne, or Fryern.

The Maner of BROMFORD,

of which the mansion stands near the Church, is reckoned the chief in this parish, and so named probably, from some owner: for here is no Ford, from which it could derive its name. We have seen in the neighbouring parish of Downham a Fine levied in 1209, to which one Richard de Browford was a party (y), who held the Soke of Downham.

We find it first mentioned by the present name of Bromfords in 1419, when John Sumpter of Colchester delivered to John Tyrell, John Cornwallys, and others, a moiety of the Maner of Bromfords in Neuenden, with the Advowson of this Church [Z]. And it seems at this time to have been divided in order to settle Part of it upon the Hospital of St. Mary without Bishopsgate, in which it continued till Sir Lodowick John who dyed in 1442, held the maner of Bromfords, with the Advowson of the Church, of Humfrey Stafford Earl Stafford, by the service of 8s. per ann. and other lands in this parish.—Henry Fitz Lewys Esq; his son (z), at the time of his decease in 1480, held the maner of Bromfords in the parish of Newingdon, and the moiety of 800 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, and 12 of wood, in this parish and Wickford, with the Advowson of the Church of Newingdon; and Okefeild, Short-croft, and other parcels here; and 70 acres of arable, and 60 of meadow and marsh, in Vange, called Bigewody's.—Mary, wife of Antony Widevile Lord Rivers, was the daughter and next heir of the said Henry, fifteen years old (a).

A Fine passed, in 1485, between Robert Cornwallys and Robert Smyth plaintiffs, and Richard Fitz-Lewes and his wife deforc', of the maner of Brumfordys, and the Advowson of the Church of Newyngdon, and of lands in Newyngdon and Wykford.

In 1522, William Fitz-Lewes, and Anne his wife, passed this estate, by Fine, to William Berdeford; being described as the maner of Little Bromfordys with appertenances, and 2 messuages, 2 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 140 acr. of meadow, 100 of pasture, 10 of wood, and 4l. rent, in this parish, Ramsden Cray, and Belhouse, and Wykford.

And again, in 1537, by fine it passed from Ralph Symonds and Elizabeth his wife, to Sir John Mordant (b).

Ela, daughter, or sister, of John Fitz-Lewes Esq; and wife of Sir John Mordant, at the time of her decease, 2 June 1543, held a moiety of this maner of Bromfords, and other lands and tenements with appertenances, in Neuendon, of Thomas Audeley Esq; as of the monastery of Prittlewell, by fealty only.—Lewis Mordant, her son and heir, was 5 years old (c).

The Sheriff's accounts in 1607, shew that John Lord Mordant then held the maner of Bromefeld or Bromford; in Newingdon. [Concerning the Families of Fitz-Lewis, and Mordant, see above, p. 213. and in the other Volume, p. 349. 558.]

Richard Robotbam, Gent. was lord of this maner in 1610 (d).

Three closes, of 30 acres, called Uppergayne-hill, Middlegayne-hill, and Lowergayne-hill. Suthfeld, or Dryvers, 26 acres. Bourfeld, and Alwynslond, 42 acres. It belongs now to Joshua Blackmore Esq;

The Maner of FERNE, or FRYERNE.

This seems to have been taken out of Bromfords about the time of K. Henry V. as observed above; and given to the Hospital. After its dissolution, K. Henry VIII. granted, 13 January 1546, the maner of Ferne in Newenden, part of the possessions of St. Mary's Hospital without Bishop's-gate, and all the lands, meadows, pastures &c. thereto belonging in Downham, Ramsden, Runwell, and Wikeford, to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, to be held of the King of his maner of Greenwich, in free socage by fealty (e). It did not continue long in them. For, 2 June 1563,

William Dunch and Henry Coddendam had licence to alienate the maner of Ferne in the Parish of Newenden, parcel of the late new Hospital of St. Maries Spital without Bishop's-gate, to Sir William Petre: who, at the time of his decease, 13 January 1571, held this estate by the name of the maner of Great Bromfords (f). His son—John Lord Petre held also, at the time of his decease 11 October 1613, this tepeement and farm of Bromfords; and lands and tenements called Fryerne, and Wasketts, of the King, in capite.—Thomas Petre Esq; had it next (g). By the presentations to the Living it seems to have been in the Families of Wakefield, and Hoare, from 1662 to 1678.

This estate was afterwards in Joshua Galliard, of Thavies-inn, Gent. and is now in his son—Pierce Galliard, Esq; Counsellor at law.

Mr. Thomas Milbank; and Abraham Bell, have also some lands here.

The Chantry, Chapel, or Hospital, of Melton, or Milton, near Gravesend in Kent, had the chief of its endowment in this parish. It was considerable, and granted by K. Henry VIII. 1 August 1524, to Sir Henry Wyatt [A]. John Dygon Master of that Hospital, dyed 6 March 1524.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled: In a little wooden Belfrey there is one Bell.

This Rectory is said to have been appendent to the Maner (b): Upon examination it appears to have been at first appendent to the Maner of Little Bromfords, and never to that which belonged to the Hospital. But, since the year 1574, it hath been in the gift of the lords of the Maner of Great Bromfords, or Frerne.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 324*l*.

27. WICKFORD

lies in a nook of this Hundred between Newenden and Downham; and is bounded on the north by part of Chelmsford-Hundred, and on the east by part of Rochford's.

From a Ford here through the river Crouch, near a Wic, [a Saxon word signifying a castle, village, dairy-farm, or the winding of a river,] is the name derived.

It is otherwise written in records, Wiceford, Wickfort, Wikford, Wygeford, Wykeford.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Wicford comprehended no less than four Maners; besides four other parcels; which were possessed by Læsttan, freely; Briçteva, a freewoman; Godwin, a King's Thegn; Dot, a freeman; Godric, a freeman; Eduuin Grut, freely; and seven other Freemen, not named. At the time of the Survey, the land-holders in this place, were Suene of Essex; Odo bishop of Bayeux; William, son of Odo; Mainard; Moduin; and Ilbodo [B].

There was afterwards a great alteration in these estates, and some of them must have been united to the neighbouring Parishes: For now here are only two considerable estates; namely, 1. Wickford-hall. 2. Stilemans. The latter holds courts, but the former doth not.

stands near the Church.

This was part of Suene's lands, and the subsequent tenants accordingly held this of his Honor of Raley.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, Suene's grandson, Wiceford remained in the Crown, till K. Richard I. granted it to Uric, or Ulric, Balistarius, commander of his cross-bow-men (i). Richard Orric, at the time of his decease in 1247, held in Wickford 320 acres of arable, 35*s*. rent of assize, the rent of Kenedon or Kewdon 46*s*. one pound weight of cummin-seed, and the work of the men of Wickford, 15 acres of meadow, 12 of pasture, and Wickford mill. Item, A grove of two acres, pasture for 280 sheep in Kenedone marsh: The said lands, tenements, rents, marsh, and homage were held in capite of the King, by the service of the third part of one knight's fee;—Isabel and Maud were his sisters and heirs; and between them was this estate divided. Maud seems not to have married; for in the Inquisition taken after her death she is called Maud de Urry; and the part she had of this estate was 160 acres of arable, pasture, and meadow, worth 15 s. 4 d. a year: rent of assise in Wickford and Kanedon 65 s. 5 d. from the work of the villans 11 s. 4 d. ob. a year, the moiety of a mill; holden of the King by a quarter and a half of a knight's fee.—Isabell, her sister and heir, was 40 years old. She took the surname de Wykeford, as did her son John. The part she had, was 130 acres of arable, 5 acr. of pasture, three and a half of meadow, 2 and a half of wood, and half of the mill. And she gave her son, out of her sister Maud's share that had descended to her, 150 acres of arable, 12 acr. of pasture, and 5 of wood, the half of the mill, 10 hens rent, and out of the frank-pledge 12 d. yearly (k).

They seem to have dropped the surname of de Wykeford, or else the estate came into another branch of the Urry Family. For Gilbert Urry, who dyed in 1300, held two parts of this maner of the King in ca. by the service of three parts of a knight's fee.—Nicolas, his son, was succeeded by his son—Nicolas, who at the time of his decease in 1307, held here, of the King, in ca. a Hall with other houses, 105 acres of arable, 2 acres and a half of meadow, 16 of pasture, 4 of wood, the half of a wind-mill, 9 d. rent of assise, with view of frank-pledge.

... Rodland, son of Robert Rodland, was his cousin and heir (l). He was of Merlaw.

John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, who dyed in 1352, had the fourth part of a fee in Wykeford, called Dernhall, which William Dersham then held (m).

In whom this estate was after this till the reign of K. Henry VIII. we do not find.

Elizabeth, widow of Sir John Pound, that dyed 14 August 1511, held the maner of Wickford, with appertinances, of the King as of his Honor of Rayleigh late parcel of the Dutchy of York, by the tenth part of a knight's fee.—William her son and heir, was then aged thirty-seven years. He departed this life 5 July 1525, leaving,—Antony, his son and heir, twenty-three years old (n) [D].

This estate was next in Sir Henry Radcliffe, and Honora his wife, who alienated it to Arthur Harrys Esq; and the latter, by license dated 5 April 1566, alienated it again, by the name of the maner of Wickford, and 20 messuages, 200 acres of land, &c. to—Christopher Harris (o). At the time of his decease 26 December 1571, he was succeeded by—Edward; and he by—Sir William Harrys of Shenfield in Margaret-ing. [Concerning this family see more in the other Volume, p. 54.]

In the last century, Edmund Godwin of Hooks-Hall in Surrey, Esq; sold this estate to

is the other considerable estate in this Parish.

The mansion house stood about half a mile north west from the Church, on the north side of the River, near Runwel; but hath been taken down about 36 years. Here Courts Leet are kept, and near it stands a Pound. At the Court they chuse two Constables.

Which of the above estates mentioned in Domesday-book This was, we cannot with certainty affirm: Neither have we any account of its owners till of late.

Mr. Robert Chester gave this estate to

Mr. John Moore his sister's son, who married Frances daughter of Capt. Craven, and had by her Chester Moore, and Sarah, wife of Jehu Hall of Poplar, Gent.—Chester Moore Esq; the son and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Thomas Stephens of Lee, Chirurgeon [E], and had by her Chester Moore, and Elizabeth that dyed young. In case of his son's dying without issue, he settled this estate by will on his sister's son Jehu Hall, Gent. Elizabeth his widow was remarried to the Rev. John Pulley, Rector of Fordham.—Chester Moore Esq; the son and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Admiral Aylmer, and leaving no issue, this estate came to the Hall family, in pursuance of the settlement.

Jehu Hall above-mentioned, by Sarah Moore his wife had several sons, Jehu, Henry, John, Thomas, and William.—Jehu, the eldest son, succeeded his cousin Moore in this estate: and by Martha his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Richard Brittridge of New-house in Sutton Esq; had—Chester-Moore Hall, Esq; Counsellor at Law, the present possessor: and Martha, unmarried [F].

A Maner in Wickford, part of the possessions of Henry de Essex, was granted by K. Henry III. in 1226, to Hubert de Burgh, when he created him Earl of Kent (p). But who had it after him, and in whom it is now, I cannot learn.

[E] Mr. Stephens had two other daughters; namely, Anne wife of Sir Edward Whitaker, Kt. Admiral, and Mary wife of Samuel, a brother of Sir Edward.

[F] Arms of Hall. Argent, 3 talbots heads erased, between 9 crosses crosslets, sable. Crest. A talbot's head.

Henry Fitz-Lewys, in 1480 held in Wikeford a pasture called Grenelese, and St. Mary mede, of the Duke of Buckingham, as of his maner of Fobbing (q).

And, in the reigns of K. Henry VII, and VIII, Robert Sharpe, Thomasine Hopton alias Loufeworth, Richard Allen, and Thomas Bonham Esq; had lands of considerable extent in this and parishes adjoining (r).

Mr. Levi Bell; and Richard Wise, &c. have lands in this parish, beside the Estates above-mentioned.

The CHURCH, stands pleasantly on a rising ground, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a wooden Belfrey, with a spire shingled, are 2 Bells.

This Church was given by Robert de Effex, son of Suene, to the Priory of Prittlewell, founded by him [G].

The Priory presented to this Rectory, (except at such times as their Revenues were seized by the Crown as belonging to a Priory alien;) and 28. PITSEY.

This parish abuts south on the river Thames, which running up the land in two arms forms here a kind of Island, or peninsula; and in the western branch is Pitsey-Creek. This situation gave occasion to the latter part of the name, the Saxon ig, or ea, signifying an island, or water. And the first syllable may be derived from Pit, a pit, or Pice, pitch; for, besides Pitsey and Pitsea, the name of this place is usually written in records Pichesea, Pecheseye, Picheseya, Picheseye, and Pycheseye. As for the name of Pichesford given to it in the Monasticon only, it is a mistake [H].

Ulueva, wife of Phin, had this estate before continued possessed of the Advowson till their dissolution. K. Edward VI. granted it away before the year 1551; and, through several mean conveyances, it is come to the lords of the maner of Stilemans.

Wickford is rated to the Land-tax at 558 l.

Belonging to this Parish are two Geldables. They are joined in the Taxes with Wickford, and bear a third part in the King's Tax; which they pay to the Collectors of this Parish. One third part of the Constables rate is also paid to them; and they have nothing further to do with this parish. The Geldables extend into the neighbouring parishes of Rawreth, Runwell, and South-Hanningfeild.—The word Geldable signifies liable to pay tax or tribute, from the Saxon word Leib, tax: And is thought to be that land or lordship which is under the distress of the Sheriff's Court. What quantity of land these Geldables contain I find no where specified: But Rawreth Hamlet is rated to the land-tax at 134 l. and Runwell Geldable at 98 l.

the Conquest, and no other possessor is named in the general Survey [I].

Soon after, it belonged to Eudo Dapifer, Steward to William the Conqueror, [mentioned particularly under Colchester, and in the other Volume, p. 95. 568. 572. 581. 588.] He made it part of the Endowment of his Abbey of St. John's at Colchester: Excepting out of the Grant, in Pichef' the Fee of Ralph de Mondon, and the Lands of Ailwin the Sokeman, and one Marsh formerly belonging to Lille Cherche, then adjoining to Pichef' [K]. What he gave St. John's Abbey was afterwards The Maner of Pitsey-hall: And the part he excepted, was undoubtedly The Maner of Chalvedon.

[H] That unusual name, which is given to this place as I say in the Monasticon only, p. 892, 893, is plainly a mistake. I could not account for it, till, through the Favor of the Hon. Philip Yorke Esq; now the Right Hon. Earl of Harwick, I had, in 1747, the perusal of the curious Register-book formerly belonging to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, from whence the Foundation-Charter printed in the Monasticon was copied. There I observed that the name of this Parish was written more than once Pichef, and never Pichesford. The unskilful transcriber taking the s for an f, and imagining it must be an abbreviation of ford, made of it that uncouth and unusual name Pichesford.—The like mistake he made in Mondon, as I shall shew under that parish.

PITSEY-HALL,

The mansion house of this, lies down at the bottom of the hill below the Church, towards the Channel. A Creek comes up to the door. Near it stands a Pound.

In the exemption Charter of K. Henry II. this is styled, 'In the Hundred of Bardestable ' six hides in Pichefey.'

The Abbot and Convent held this Maner in pure alms (s); till the general Dissolution of Monasteries.

In the Valuation of that Abbey's Revenues, the State of this Estate stood thus. Rent of assize, 21 s. 4 d. Rent of such as held by copy of Court-roll 6 l. 12 s. 1 d. ob. The Farm of the demesne lands 39 l. 6 s. 8 d. Sum of the allowances and liveries, 7 l. 6 s. 8 d.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted, among many other things, the maner of Pichefey, and the Advowson of the Church, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (t). Upon whose attainder, in 1540, they reverted to the Crown, and were assigned and appointed for the maintenance of the Princess Mary, afterwards Qu. Mary I. before she ascended the throne.

The 12th of February 1562, Qu. Elizabeth granted this maner of Pithefay, alias Pichefey: and all Lez Hopes lying in the same part of Wells Pit, one called Knolfoote, the other Anteleche, and the third Willes Pit, in this place and Canwey; and a tenement or parcel of land called Holfeild, to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk (u). Upon his execution in 1572, this estate descended to his eldest son by his first Lady Mary daughter and heir of Henry Fitz-Alan Earl of Arundel, namely to—Philip Howard, Earl of Arundel. He by license dated 12 March 1581, did alienate Pitsey-Hall maner, with appertinances, and 30 messuages, 30 tofts, one mill, two dove-houses, 30 gardens, 500 acres of arable, as many of pasture, 60 of meadow, as many of wood, 200 of furze and heath, 400 of marsh, 9 l. 10 s. 6 d. with the Advowson of the Church, to Roger Townshend Esq; and Edward Cook Gent. Roger had licence, 1 Febr. 1582, to alienate the premisses to Edward Cooke and Bridget his wife; and two years after, Philip Earl of Arundel, Thomas Lord Howard, and William Lord Howard, all three sons of the late Duke of Norfolk, joined in conveying the estate to the said Edward and Bridget, by license 2 January. Sir Edward Cooke Kt. held the maner of Pitsey in 1618; and presented to the Living in 1629 and 1630.

We find the estate afterwards in Mr. Samuel Moyer, an eminent merchant, who presented to the Rectory in 1664. His son—Samuel Moyer Esq; a rich Turkey merchant, was Sheriff of this County in 1698, and created a Baronet 25 March 1701. Departing this life 27 April 1716, he was buried in the Church of St. Stephen's Walbrook, of which parish he had been an inhabitant 40 years. He married Rebecca, sister of Sir William Jolliff Kt. It was this Lady that founded the Lecture called by her name. They had only two daughters, Mary, wife of Charles le Barre, of Northamptonshire Esq; and Elizabeth married to . . . Jennings Esq;

Laurence, brother of Sir Samuel Moyer, was of Low-Leyton, and also a merchant. By Martha his wife, daughter of William Boothby of Tottenham High-crofs Esq; he had two sons, Benjamin; and John, who married Frances, daughter of Edward Brewster Esq; also three daughters, Martha, wife of Thomas Thorpe Esq; Lydia, of Peter Hartop Esq; and Catharine.—Benjamin Moyer Esq; the eldest son, succeeded his uncle Sir Samuel in this estate [L].

The Maner of CHALVEDON, OF CHANDEWELL, is otherwise called in records Chalverton, Chaluton, Celdon, and Chelvedon, hall.

The mansion house is old and large, and lies in the bottom between Pitsey-street and Newenden.

This seems to have been the land excepted out of Eudo's Grant to St. John's Abbey in Colchester. The first account to be found of it is in 1284, or 1285 (w). After that, we find, that the Prior of St. Mary's Hospital without Bishops-gate held the moiety and fourth part of a fee in the Vill of Chalvedon, under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328. And—Walter Lord Fitz-Walter held the same estate, at the time of his decease in 1386, which the said Prior held (x).

It does not appear how much, or whether all of it was in the Prior of Bishops-gate, and so forfeited at the Suppression.

K. Henry VIII. granted this maner of Chalwedon, alias Chaluedon, with the other, to Thomas Lord Cromwell.

After his attainder it reverted to the same King, who assigned it as part of the maintenance of his daughter the Princess Mary before she came to the Crown.

In 1562, Febr. 12. Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner and lordship of Chalvedon and Pichefey, with appertinances; and also the site, farm, and capital messuage, of this maner; and an acre of wood in South-Bemflete called Priors-hill, to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, above-mentioned (y). It reverted after that Duke's attainder to the Queen. But 9 October 1601, she gave it to his son by his second Lady, namely — Thomas Lord Howard, under the name of Chaluton, alias Chalvedon-hall: And K. James I. confirmed it to him by the name of Chalverton-hall; to hold by the same tenure as before (z). He was created Earl of Suffolk, 21 July 1603, and held this estate in 1618 by the name of Chandwell-hall.

It came afterwards into the Prescot Family of Thoby-Priory in Mountney's-ing, of which be pleased to see an account in the other Volume, p. 46.

This is a noble estate.

29. B U R E S, or B U E R S, G I F F O R D.

This parish is distinguished by the name of its ancient owners, the Giffards, from the other Buers in Lexden-hundred in this County, called Mount Buers.

It is otherwise written in records Bura, and Bowers.

The lands of this Parish were in several hands before and after the Conquest; namely in St. Peter's Westminster; in Alestan, a free-man; &c. at the time of the Survey, in Ralph Piperell, or Peverell; in Walter the Deacon; and Grime, the Sheriff, or Bailiff [M].

These Lands seem to have been all in one hand, at least for some ages, first in Leyborn, then in Sutton, then in Bigod, then in Giffard.

Afterward, they were divided into the Maners, . . . of Buers-Giffard. . . . of Earl's, or Eagle's, Fee.

The account we have of them, whilst united, is as follows.

In the reign of K. Henry II. Robert de Liburne held Bures, and Robert de Sutton under him, by the serjeancy of scalding the King's hogs (a).

Mr. Heaman Prescot; and Benjamin Powell, have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, stands high; and so do most of those which are dedicated to that Archangel. From thence is a delightful prospect. It is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. A Tower of stone, with a Spire shingled, contains 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Pitsey-hall: many years in the gift of St. John's Abbey in Colchester; and ever since of those who have enjoyed that Maner.

Pitsey is rated to the land-tax at 527l.

This Robert de Sutton gave in frank marriage with Margaret his daughter, to William, a younger son of Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, all his lands in Sutton, and in Bures, with the Advowson of this Church; as also the Serjeancy of the Hundred of Berstaple, and suit of all his lands at Langedon, with the Advowson of that Church; which grant was confirmed by K. John, in 1209 (b). And, in 1227, Roger de Layborn passed by fine to William Bigod, and Margaret his wife, the Advowson of this Church, and the Marsh of Shepehope Ritherneffe in Bures, the right of the said Margaret (c). This William Bigod was found to hold, jointly with his wife, the vill of Bures, by the serjeancy of the Eschauderie, the said vill, or town, being then worth 100s. And the Hundred of Barstable of the King in capite, by 18l. a year payable into the Exchequer (d). [See above, p. 190.] — Hugh Bigod succeeded William (e).

Under them it came, about this time, to be held by the ancient family of Giffard, descended from Walter Giffard, son of Osbern de Bolebec, and Aveline his wife, sister to Gunnora Duchess of Normandy, great grandmother to the Conqueror; and created by him Earl of Buckingham (f).

In 1253, a Fine passed between Roger, Abbot of Meldon, plaintiff, and William Giffart and Gundreda his wife, of the Advowson of the Church of St. Margaret de Bures (g).

In the Pleas at Chelmsford in 1255, the Jurors found, That William Gyffard held to himself 100 s. of land in Bures, by the serjeancy of making the King's lard, or bacon, wherever he was in England.—That he held this Hundred of the King for 16 l. and 1 mark, and used before to pay to the King 18 l.—That William Gyffard, the Abbot of Westminster, and all the Sheriffs of Essex, for the time being, held pleas of Naam unlawful.—And farther, that the Bishop of London, the Abbot of Westminster, and Nicolas le Butiller, would not suffer the King's Bailiffs to enter their lands to seize for the King's debts (h).

In 1281, K. Edward I. in exchange for the Bailihip of the Hundred and a Half of Berstaple, confirmed to William Giffard, and Robert his son, and Gundred wife of the said Robert, in fee, his maner of Bures, quit and exempt of the ancient fee farm: Reserving view of frankpledge and other liberties in the same; reserving also to the said Robert the Fairs and profits of his Market of Horningdon and of his tenants there; with some other exemptions; and free-warren (i) [N].—Gundred Gifford dyed in 1300.—Robert Giffard, her son and heir, held, among other things, a certain maner called Bures in the Hundred of Berd staple of Hugh Bigot, by the yearly service of a pair of gilt spurs. This Robert had free warren in North-Beamflete, Pycheseye, and Bueres near Pichesey (k).—John Gifford, the last that we meet with of the family, had a Park at Buers; and held this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, with lands of Up-hall, and the Marshes of Rattefcote and Utwyke, of the Warden and Chaplain of Thele [O], by the rent of 10 l. per ann. He held also Shephop marsh of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the service of 10 s. per ann. and homage and fealty: And the marsh of Westsheplop, with part of Horsnell marsh, of Richard de Dover; by the service of 20 s. a year; the other part of the last marsh he held of the Priores of Clarkenwell, by the service of 40 s. per ann. And the marsh of Stepnesh, with 50 acres of arable, he held of the Earl of Oxford, by the service of a pair of gilt spurs of the value of 6 d. yearly. He dyed in 1348, and

The Gifford family failed here soon after.

For John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, seized 50 acres of arable, 1 marsh, and rents, in Bures Gifford, for want of heirs after the death of John Gifford of that place, who held them of the said Earl as of his maner of Gelham, or Yeldham, by knight's service (m). And Thomas, the 8th Earl, who dyed in 1370, had here 40 acres of arable; and a marsh called Tympenasse; that had escheated to him after the death of Robert Lord (n), mentioned in Note [N].

So that the Earls of Oxford were Lords paramount here.

The two Maners were divided some years before. We first find mention of the Maner of in Bures Gilford, about the year 1346.

It appears by the Feodary of the Earls of Oxford, that Robert Travers held it in 1347, and—John Gerard from 1349 to 1351. By the London Registry we find, that a Family named St. Nicolas presented to the Living, or some other acknowledging so to do in right of St. Nicolas, from the year 1392 to 1463. Then Henry Baker presented in 1494; and the right of Presentation continued in the Baker Family till the time of K. James I. when the Estate went away amongst female heirs. It is observable in the Registry, that the Earls of Oxford presented twice, in 1537, and 1541, by reason of Guardianship, during the minority of James Baker, which shews Baker to have held under those Earls the Maner of Buers-Gifford, to which the Patronage was appendant.

Henry Baker, Gent. who dyed 10 June 1510, held this maner of Bowreshall of John Earl of Oxford, by the 4th part of a knight's fee.—John, his son was then 17 years old.—Edward Baker, at the time of his decease 3 April 1535, held also this maner of Bowresgifford; and the maner of Condovers in West-Tilbury; with other lands in Great Bemflete, and Wakering, Hockley, Shobery, &c. (o).—James, his son and heir, then aged upwards of 20 years, held afterwards this estate of Edward Earl of Oxford as of his Honor of Hedingham castle; and one messuage with divers parcels of land here containing 340 acres, called Grynsteeds and West Chepe-hopes: also one messuage with several parcels of land called Garrardes, Prowdes, and Antiloppes, of the maner of Pitsey-hall, with other very considerable estates in neighbouring parishes [P]. He dyed 6 Janu. 1569.—Henry Baker Esq; his son and successor (p), held this maner of Elizabeth, Countess of Oxford, as of her Honor of Hedingham. But he very much diminished his patrimony, having at the time of his decease 8 April 1611, besides this maner, only the maner of Kents in Shobery, and Blunts and Palmers in Hockley. By Abigail his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Saltonstall of Ovington, Kt. he left three Daughters, coheirs; Abigail, 10 years old; Judith, 8; and Anne, 4 (q), amongst whom his inheritance was divided, 30 November 1631, and each was to have their turn in the patronage of the Living, according to seniority.

Abigail, the eldest, was married to William Boughton of Lawford in Warwickshire Esq; created a Baronet 4 August 1641. She dyed 21 February 1635, leaving three sons, Sir Edward; Sir William, and Humfrey.

Judith, the second daughter, was wife of Thomas Boughton, of Bilton in Warwickshire, Esq; brother to Sir William. He presented in 1641 Edward Clark to the Rectory. And, at the Restoration K. Charles II confirmed Dr. Clarke in the Living, which is in the Registry said to have been vacant by lapse.—Thomas Boughton, son of the last mentioned Thomas Boughton who had married Judith, gave 10 Decemb. 1652, his third part of the Advowson of the Rectory to his younger brother, Richard; having only one daughter Lucy, wife of George Wale of Radwinter in this County, Gent. Richard, by will, 7 November 1678, gave to William, his brother all his real and personal estate, who was succeeded by — William Boughton, his son and heir.

Anne, the youngest daughter of Henry Baker, was married to Sir Thomas Bendish of Steeple-Bumpsted, Bart. from whom Edward Cockain of London purchased one turn of the Advowson.

Sir Edward Boughton, Bart. son of Sir William abovesaid, on the 17th of October 1662, for the sum of 3000l. and upwards, sold Bowers-Giffard-hall, with appertenances, and the third part of the Advowson of the Rectory to Edmund Lewen Esq; And he, by will dated 5 August 1681, devised the premisses, and a third part of the Advowson, to his younger son — Martin Lewen, of Gray's-inn Esq; City-Marshall. He sold them to

John Slaughter, or Slater, of East-Smithfield, London, who thought he was purchasing the whole Advowson, when it was only every third Vacancy. At his decease he left this estate to his wife for life, [who was remarried to Mr. Richard Meakins, wine-merchant,] and, after her decease, to his son — John Slaughter, Gent. It is an estate of about 160l. a year.

Buers-Giffard-hall, the maner house, stands near the Church. It is a new timber-house erected for the tenant, in the room of the old one, which was large, and moated round.

was so much of this Parish as remained the Fee, or Estate, of the Earls of Oxford, after they had granted Part of it to under-tenants.

The mansion house, which is far better than Buers-hall, lyes down in the Marshes, a quarter of a mile below the Church, on a Creek where vessels of good burthen may come up.

The Earls of Oxford had this estate as early as the reign of K. Edward III. But it is not mentioned in records by the name of Erlesfe, or Earls fee, till 1513 (r). Alberic de Vere the 10th Earl of Oxford, held here, in 1399, fifty two acres of land, and marsh, of the King in capite, by knight's service. And — Richard, the 11th Earl of Oxford, held also of the King, 40 acres of arable and 100 acres of marsh, in Bures Gifford (s); which was undoubtedly this estate. — John, the 13th Earl, held in 1512, the maner of Erlesfe, with appertenances, of Sir Roger Wentworth (t), who had married Anne daughter of Humfrey Tyrell, of Little Warley Esq; [See above, p. 114.] And — John de Vere, the 14th Earl, held also the same, in 1526 (u).

Alberic de Vere, second son of John, the 15th Earl, was possessed of this estate in 1569; for James Baker Esq; then held of him, as of his maner of Egles fee, by the service of a clove-gilly flower, 1 messuage, and 1 marsh called Horswell or Orcell, with appertenances in this parish (w).

It was next for above a hundred and thirty years in the Read Family. John Reade, who dyed 23 November 1627, held the maner and farm of Earls-Fee and 37 acres of Land called Earls-Croft, alias Earls-Fee, with appertenances in Buryes-Gifford, otherwise Bowers Gifford, of the heirs of Roger Wentworth: and of the King, in capite, a marsh of 180 acres called Northstines. — Roger was his son and heir, whose posterity enjoyed the estate till 1747, when — Henry Reade sold it to George Montgomery Esq; (x).

Muffells an estate here of about 120l. a year, belongs to Jaspar Kingsman Esq;

[P] Besides the above-named, he held, in this parish, a messuage, a garden, and 20 acres of land, called Cham-bells, of the maner of Basseldon: and Moushold marsh; and a messuage called Owtings, and Northlands. — In Thundersley, Kickax wood. In Hockley, Blunts 130 acres; and Palmers, 15 acres. In the two Shoberies, Much and Little Napiltons; Kents, &c. In Canvey-island, several marshes. Inquis. 12 Eliz. nu. 33.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. The Steple, which hath a spire shingled, contains 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Buers-hall. It was at first in the gift of the ancient lords, the Giffards. Afterwards it was in the gift of the Fitz-Nicolas Family from 1392 to 1463; and in that of Baker from 1494 to 1631, when the Right of Presentation was divided between the three co-heireffes. The right of the eldest is now in the lord of Buers-Giffard-hall. The right of the second was purchased by John Laws, who sold it to Francis Clark L.L.D. that gave it to his sister, wife of Joseph Mayer. And the right of the third passed from Edward Cockaine of London, Chirurgion, to Jaspar Kingsman Esq; is the name of two contiguous Parishes here, lying North and South from each other; and so distinguished.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 7311.

It is otherwise written in records Beanflet, Benflet.

Bem the first part of the name is derived from the Saxon Beam, a beam, a tree, a post, or stock; the place being, when first discovered and fettled, woody [2]: Or else it might be derived from Bana, a murderer, or Bena, a beggar; and plect, a bay, or gulf: This being an usual landing place for the pirating Danes, when they infested these coasts in the ninth century. Hæsten, the Danish rover, built, about the year 893, a Castle, or Fortification, at Beam-fleet, wherein he used to lay up his plunder, and kept a large garrison [R]. But, in 894, K. Ælfred drove away the garrison, demolished the Castle, and took Hæsten's wife, and two sons, prisoners, with all the booty, and carried them to London. They also broke up, or burnt, most of the Danish ships which they found there; carrying the rest to London and Rochester (y).

These two Parishes were not then divided, but went by the common name of Bemflet.

30. NORTH BEMFLET

belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Earl Harold, afterwards King; to one Freeman; and to Aluvin another Freeman: At the time of the Survey, the chief part was in William the Conqueror's hands, and kept for him by Ralph Besides North-Bemflet, it is sometimes called Little Bemflet.

It was divided, in process of time, into these three Maners. 1. The Maner of North Bemflet. 2. . . . that of Cocksaies. 3. The Maner of Berdfelds.

The Maner of NORTH BEMFLET.

The mansion house stands near the Church.

This Maner is what belonged to Earl Harold, and at the Survey to the King. The other part that was then held by Suene, and afterwards under him by a Family surnamed Cocksaie, or de Coggeshall, made up The MANER OF COCKSALES, or COGGESHALLS, which hath been long swallowed up in the other, now called The MANER OF NORTH-BEMFLET, alias COGGESHALLS.

The earliest account we have of its possessors, after the King, was in the reign of K. Henry III. when it was in a Family surnamed de Bemflett.

In 1263, Alexander Bemflett held in Bamflet of the gift of St. Martin le Grand one hidate of land.—John was his brother and heir (z).

But the chief part was then in a Family surnamed de Plumberg, of the neighbouring parish of Hockley. Barbata daughter of William Garrey held of the King in capite in Bemflete, 200 acres of arable, 20 of wood, 4 of meadow, and six marks and a half of rent; and of the Fee of the Abbot of Westminster, 46 acres of arable, and 3 s. rent; and of the Fee of the Prior of Bishop's-gate, 14 acres of arable and 10 s. rent; and of the Fee of the Lady Maud de Bemflete one acre: The whole she held was by the service of one knight's fee and a quarter, paying 6 s. 10 d. ob. to the Abbat of Westminster, 7 s. and 11 d. to the Prior of Bishops-gate, and 2 d. to the Lady Maud de Bemflete.—Laurence was his son: whose father Martin held this estate for life, by the courtesy of England (a).

This estate was next in the considerable Family de Coggeshall, mentioned under Paklesham, and in the other Volume, p. 162. 372. 375. Ralph de Coggeshall, who dyed in 1305, held a messuage, 40 acres of arable, and 4 l. rent in Little-Bemflete for the term of his life through the concession of Laurence de Plombergb, who held the same of the King, by the service of one knight's fee, of the Honor of Reyley, and suit at the Court there from three weeks to three weeks: And 60 acres of arable of Peter de Brus, by the service of 20 s. per ann. And 300 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 12 of pasture, 20 of wood in the same, of the Abbot of Westminster by the service of 3 s. per ann.—John de Coggeshall, his son and heir (b), at the time of his decease in 1319, held here a capital messuage, 106 acres of arable, and 13 s. 6 d. rent of assise, by the same tenure as above: And 10 s. 9 d. rent of the Prior of Bishops-gate, in socage, and by the service of 6 s. per ann. He held also lands of the Abbot of Westminster lying partly in Little and partly in Great Bemflete, as will be specified under the next parish. His son—Sir John de Coggeshall, who departed this life in 1361 (c), was succeeded by his son—Henry, that held the maner of Bemflete at the time of his decease in 1375 (d).—William Coggeshall, his son, left four daughters coheirs. [See above, p. 208, and in the other Volume, p. 162. 373.]

Alice, one of the daughters, brought to her husband, Sir John Tyrell, of Heron, this estate and that of Jervais in South-Bemflete.—William Tyrell Junior Esq; of Beches in Rawreth, his fifth son, had this estate; which his son—John Tyrell Esq; dyed possessed of, and of the Advowson of the Church, in 1494.—Edward, his son held the same at the time of his decease 16 June 1541. and—William Tyrell Esq; the latter's brother and heir, who dyed 28 September 1543 (e). To whom succeeded—Edmund Tyrell Esq; son of Jasper younger brother of John, father of the said William. He dyed 8 November 1576, leaving Edmund Church son of his eldest daughter Mary; and his three daughters Margaret, wife of John Daniel Esq; Thomasine, wife of William Play-

Sir Ralph Wiseman, of Rivenhall, Kt. who dyed 26 August 1608, held the maner of North-Bemflete-Hall, alias Coxhall, with all the messuages, lands, &c. thereto belonging, of John Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Raleigh; by the fourth part of a knight's fee.—Sir Thomas Wiseman his son and heir (g), was succeeded by his son—Sir William Wiseman, created a Baronet 15 June 1660. [For a more particular of this Family see the other Volume, p. 146, 147.] Sir William alienated this estate to Edmund Godwin Esq; mentioned above, p. 254. Mr. Godwin, sold it, 30 July 1694, to John Wilmer of London, merchant, descended from the Wilmers of Northamptonshire. It hath continued ever since in that family; and is now in—John Wilmer Esq; [T].

The Maner of BERDFIELDS

otherwise called Bradviles, Boadvills, and now Browfords.

The account we have of this maner is but imperfect.

Richard Lee Esq; who dyed 26 September, 1497, held the maner of Bardfeilds with appertinances in North-Bemflete, of the maner of Coxsale, by rent of 17 s. per ann. And a tenement called Lewes: Also Blofoms-mead, and 30 acres called Pickerells in Newindon; and Bigwoods in Vange.—Richard Lee his son and heir was then 24 years old (b).

Thomas Wiseman, of North-end in Great Waltham Esq; at the time of his decease 15 July 1584 held the maner or farm of Boadvills, alias Bradviles, with appertinances in North-Bemflete, Neuington, and Wickford.—Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiseman, were his daughters and coheirs (i). [See in the other Volume, p. 88.]

In 1615 George Pomfret held the maner, or lordship, of Bradfeild, alias Beardfeild, with appertinances, of Sir Henry Appleton Kt. and Bart. as of his maner of North Bemflet; and some lands in Great Dunmow, parcel of the maner of Newton-hall. He dyed 3 April that year, leaving—Thomas his son and heir (k).

Fan-hall, another Maner here, about a mile north from the Church, belongs to John Russel Esq; of Stubbers in North-Okendon. See above, p. 103. and in the other Volume, p. 573.

The Right Hon. Ralph Earl Verney, and Mr. William Bavin, have also some lands here.

3L. SOUTH BEMFLET

lies south of the other, as the name imports; being parted from Canvey-island by a Creek, which from its passing by Hadley is called Hadley Ray, the latter being derived from the old French word Rie, or Rive, i. e. shore, coast, or bank.

It is otherwise called Great Bemflet.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, part of this parish belonged to St. Mary at Berking; but William the Confessor took it from that Nunnery, and gave it to Westminster-Abbey [U]. Another part, which Aluvin a freeman had possessed in the Confessor's reign, Suena held at the time of the Survey [W].

From these arose afterwards three Maners. 1. The Maner belonging to Westminster-Abbey. 2. The Maner of South Bemflet. 3. . . . that of Jarvis.

The Maner of The ABBEY

had an addition to its demesnes by several donations.

In 1353, license was granted to John Peché to give 100 acres of marsh in Bemflete; to Roger Basset of Sutton, to give 32 acres of arable, in this parish and Raurethe; and to Richard de Rok, to give some lesser parcels; to the Abbot and Convent of Westminster, which lands were held of the said Convent by the service of 5 s. 10 d. per ann. and fealty.—And, in 1392, John Thurston, Thomas Aston, and Simon Barton, Chaplains, had licence to give to the same Abbey one messuage, and 142 acres of arable, in South-Bemflet and Thunderfle, and forty of marsh in Great Benflet within the Isle of Canewe; holden of the Abbey by the service of 6 s. rent, as part of the revenues of this maner, and by suit of court (m). These three last seem to have been feoffees to settle some private man's benefaction to the Convent.

This Maner and demesnes continued in that Abbey till its suppression, when they came to the Crown.

And when it was converted into a foundation for a Dean and Prebendaries, K. Henry VIII. made the maners of Bonvyles and Benflete, alias South Beymflete, part of their endowment (n): Which, notwithstanding the successive alterations in that Church, have continued in it ever since. Qu. Elizabeth confirmed to them, 21 May 1560, the Maners of Benflete, alias South Benflete, Monkeflete, Shereswicke, Hoppeswicke, and Sanderwicke; adding, at the same time, the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage (o).

Dr. Francis Clerke had a Lease from the Dean and Chapter.

The Maners of SOUTH-BEMFLET, and JARVIS, are that part of the parish which was Suene's.

These have been frequently in the same hand, but are not known to have been constantly so. And the owner of these also held part of the estate of the Abbey of Westminster as tenant.

South-Bemflet-hall stands on the north side of the Church; and Jarvis-hall about a mile north of the same. The latter was anciently called North-mayes, alias Jarvis-hill, it being situated on a hill.

The ancientest owners of this estate after Henry de Essex, were a family furnamed de Woodham.

William de Woodham, who dyed in 1280, held the maner of Great Bemflete, in these several parcels; viz. of John de Baton' 1 messuage with edifices, and 30 acres of arable, by the service of 12 s. and 10 d. and half of an acre of wood by the service of 1 d. and he received 4 s. 7 d. of rent of assise, and a pound of pepper. Of John Nevill he held 7 acres of arable, and a marsh containing 60 sheep, by the service of 20 s. per annum. Of Stephen Sere 12 acres of arable, by the service of 18 d. Of William de Shobyry 2 marshes containing 500 sheep. Rent for one marsh to the Prior of Merton, 5 marks and a half yearly, and to William de Shobyry for another marsh, 2 marks and a half, and a quarter of wheat, and the same of rye. And of Reginald de Ginges one marsh containing 500 sheep, by the service of 5 s. — Thomas de Woodham his son and heir (p), held one Hall in Bemflete, and 17 acres of land of Margaret Nevill, in socage, by the service of 20 s. per ann. — of Oliver Boun, by the service of 12 s. 9 d. per ann. 41 acres of pasture and wood, and 28 s. 7 d. of rent of assize; — Clenemans-Croft, 4 acres, of Thomas Handlo, by the service of 1 lb. of pepper; — North-Mershe by the service of two marks per ann. and — West-Mershe by the service of 73 s. 4 d. per ann. — William was his son and heir (q).

We hear no more of this Family here: They held also in Chigwell a Hall, and some lands of the maner of Barringtons.

The next possessor of this estate upon record, was John de Coggeshall, mentioned in the last parish, and in the other Volume, p. 162. 372. &c. He held of the Abbot of Westminster in socage, 106 acres of arable, and 13 s. rent of assize; also, by the service of 19 s. 8 d. per ann. and suit of court at this maner of Great Bemflete, 47 acres of arable, 10 of pasture, and 1 of meadow; and 40 acres, with 42 s. 2 d. rent, in Hadleigh: And of John de Bohun, by the service of 8 s. 2 d. a year, 18 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow: And of Thomas Woodham by the service of 20 s. yearly, 30 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 2 of pasture, and 6 s. 8 d. rent. His son — Sir John de Coggeshall held this maner; and 8 acres here of the King, as of his Honor of Bologne, by knight's service. — Sir Henry, his son, succeeded him in 1360: and dying in 1375, was succeeded by his son — Sir William de Coggeshall (r); who left four Daughters coheirs.

Alice, the second, was married to Sir John Tyrell of Heron's. [See above, p. 208. Joice, daughter of Sir Robert Tyrell, brought this estate in marriage to her husband Thomas Appleton Esq; Their son — Sir Roger Appleton, of Bemflet, at the time of his decease 26 February 1557, held, in this parish, of the Queen, as of the maner of Chalwedon-hall, one messuage; another messuage called Estmans, with 140 acres of arable meadow and pasture, and 100 of wood; another estate called Redes containing 80 acres of land; and Morfes tenement, with 20 acres of wood: Of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster he held the following tenements; Hadley Corfes, and 30 acres of land; Bloshams, and 8 acres of land; North-mayes, and 20 acres of arable and pasture, and 100 of wood; North-howe, alias Boynes, and 80 acres of land; Bartholomews, and also 80 acres with it; Adgors, West-croft, and the Downes, 12 acres: And of Henry Earl of Suffex, as of his maner of Norton in that County, the following tenements; Connons, and 30 acres; Hopes, and 30 acres; Hooles crofts, 12 acres; and Mennes. He had also very large Marshes in Canvey, as will be shewn under that island (s). By Anne his wife, daughter of John Sulyard Esq; he had, Jane married to John Wentworth, and afterwards to Sir William Gargrave; and — Henry Appleton, Esq; his son and heir: He married Margaret, daughter of John Roper of Kent, Esq; by whom he had Roger; and Margaret, wife of John Ufflet Gent. — Roger, the son and heir, by Agnes his wife daughter of Edward, or Walter Clarke, of Hadley, had 5 sons, Henry; William, of Kettlebaston, in Suffolk; Roger; John; Edward: and 5 daughters, Mary, wife of Richard Ward; Alice, wife of Henry Barney; Anne; Agnes; and Margaret wife of Peter Loone. — Henry, the eldest son, married Faith, daughter of William Cardinal, of Great Bromley, Gent. and had by her Roger; Edith; and Edward. He held the maner of South-Bemflete, with all its services, and appertenances, and a capital messuage, or mansion house, called Northmayes, alias Jarvis-hill, in this parish, and Thundersley, and much the same estates as Sir Roger above-mentioned (t). — Roger Appleton Esq; the eldest son, held also Jarvis-hill, and the same estates as his father (u). He was created a Baronet 29 June 1611, and departing this life 16 January 1614, left, by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Mildmay of Moulsham-hall [remarried after his decease to John Paschall of Great Badow Esq;] — Sir Henry Appleton Bart. his son and heir, and one daughter. Sir Henry married . . . daughter of Ralph Sheldon, of Beoley in Worcestershire Esq; and had by her — Sir Henry, father of another — Sir Henry. The latter had — Sir William Appleton Bart. who dyed 15 November 1705, aged 77, as did his lady, Dorothy, 16 December 1719, aged 84. They had three sons; William who dyed 28 April 1685, aged 28. Henry; and John, who departed this life 25 July 1689, in the 19th year of his age (w). — Sir Henry, the second son and heir, leaving no issue, his sister

Elizabeth Appleton, heiress of the last Sir William, brought this considerable estate to her husband Richard Vaughan, of Shenfeild-Place Esq; He was succeeded by his son — John is the last parish in this Hundred, abutting on the east upon that of Rochford.

32. THUNDERSLEY

There is another parish in this County, very nearly of the same name; viz. Thundersley, now united to Wimbish in Utlesford Hundred.

The name, derived from the two Saxon words, Dunþep, and ley, denotes Thunder's pasture-

Peter Day Esq; Mr. Robert Matthews; Robert Lowten; Samuel James; Nicolas Cooper, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Rich-marsh here, since called Richneffe, was the endowment of a Chantry founded in the Cathedral of St. Paul 2 July 1239, by Martin de Pateshull, Dean of that Church. After the suppression, it was granted, in 1549, to John Hulfon, and Bartholomew de Brokesby, who alienated it the same year to John Preston (x).

We find mention of a Maner here called Le White Halle, and lands and tenements styled Poyntantes, which Robert Blofme released to William Trusbit Esq; in 1412 (y).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, stands in the street on a rising ground, and is a handsom and lofty edifice, consisting of a body and two aisles; with pillars of the Tuscan order: The aisles are leaded, and all the rest tiled. The Tower is of stone, with a spire shingled, containing 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, to Westminster-Abbey, by William the Conqueror, as hath been mentioned above. The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to that Abbey, and a Vicarage ordained, of which they continued Patrons till their Suppression; when they came to the Crown. But they were both granted by Qu. Elizabeth to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster; in whom they have continued ever since.

Dr. Francis Clerke, Lessee here of the Estate of the Church of Westminster, who dyed 31 October 1734, paved handsomly the Chancel of this Church with marble; and ordered by his will an Organ to be erected, with a salary of 30*l.* a year for an Organist. He is to be nominated and appointed by the Corporation of the sons of the Clergy.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 824 l.

ground; but what the occasion of it was, we cannot discover.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Godric one of the King's Thegns was owner of this lordship; which, at the time of the Survey, was part of Suene's large possessions [Y].

Afterwards it was divided into these two Maners. 1. The maner of Thundersley. 2. . . . that of Busches.

The Maner of THUNDERSLEY.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north from the Church.

Upon the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, as mentioned before, p. 156, this estate became vested in the Crown.

About the reign of K. Henry II. it was in a Family turnamed Fitz-Barnard. For then Ralph Fitz Barnard, or the son of Barnard, held a fee in Tuneresley of the Honor of Rayleye (z).

— John Fitz-Barnard, who dyed in 1260, held the maner of Tunderley of the King by the service of one knight's fee, of his Honor of Reyley; and thirty acres of Christian de Plumbergh, by the 40th part of a fee (a). He was presented, as holding this maner by the service of keeping one of the King's goshawks; but he pleaded he did not (b) [Z]. — Robert Fitz-Barnard, who dyed in 1299, held the maner of Thundrisley of the King in capite of his Barony of Reyle, by homage, and the service of coming twice a year, once at Hadley, and once at Prittlewell, to the Court of the said Barony (c).

In 1313, Thomas le Fitz-Bernard passed this estate by Fine to Bartholomew de Baddlesmere (d). And the latter gave it to K. Edward II. in exchange for the maner of Bourn in Suffex [A].

K. Edward III. in 1329, granted this maner to John Le Sturmy, and his heirs for ever, by the service of half a quarter of a knight's fee. He enjoyed it at the time of his decease in 1343. And held also a messuage called Pyefnest, with 140 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 12 of wood, in Waltham-Holy-cross, of the Abbot. — Robert de Sturmy his son and heir (e), held 2 parts of this maner, with the reversion of the 3d part of the same after the death of Maud widow of Sir John Sturmy, by the service of half a knight's fee: and dying in 1345, was succeeded by his son — Donewald Sturmy (f), afterwards knighted. In 1361, he conveyed by deed, to K. Edward III. and his heirs, this Maner of Thunderle, with a Park. And, in 1367, Isolda his widow released to the King all her right in the same (g) [B].

The Crown seems to have purchased this, or given some equivalent for it, for the sake of laying it to Raley-Castle then in the Royal Family, for which this Park lay commodious.

In 1390, K. Richard II. granted in special tail to Edmund Duke of York 5th son of K. Edward III. and his heirs male the Honor, Village, Fair, and Market of Rayley, the Maner of Tunderle, and the maners of Estwood and Newport. He held them at the time of his decease in 1401; — Edward his son succeeding him in Thundersley maner and Park, during his life. Then Philippa, his Dowager, held the third part of it in dowry till her death, in 1422 (h).

This Estate continued in the Crown till K. Edward VI. granted the disparked Park of Thunderley to William Parre Earl of Essex and Marquis of Northampton; who was attainted for taking part with the Lady Jane Grey. — But before his Attainder he granted away this Park to Edward Bury and Kenelm Throckmorton Esq; — Throckmorton, by licence dated 26 April 1550, conveyed it to Thomas Gesting (i), and — Richard Gesting, probably son of the last, at the time of his decease 1 July 1612, held the Park of Thundersley in capite, leaving — Nicolas his son and heir, sixteen years old (k).

As to the Maner of Thundersley, it continued in the Crown from 1422 till 1553, when K. Edward VI. granted it to Susan Tonge, widow of Thomas Tonge, Clarencieux, and her heirs. Qu. Mary I. to whom she was first Lady of the Bed-Chamber, ratified the grant of this Maner, and of a wood called Caverhill, Bowdons grove, Kingswood and Sopers grove: adding the Advowson of this Church, to which she presented in 1554 and 1558 (l). [See above, p. 195, and in the other Volume, p. 41.] Her nephew and heir

George White, of Hutton Esq; who dyed 13 June 1584, held the maner of Thundersley of the Queen in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee, and the Advowson of this Church. — Richard White his son, and Catharine his widow, 2 April 1595, alienated Thundersley-hall maner, and 2 messuages, 2 gardens, 2 orchards, 120 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 20 of wood, and 20 s. rent to

Francis Fitch, Gent. (m). Who were the subsequent owners for several years we do not find: But, if we can judge by the presentations to the Living, it was

Robert Wiseman Esq; in 1619. — Robert Smyth Esq; in 1644, and 1646. — Thomas Dawling, Gent. from 1676 to 1689. and — John Dawling Esq; in 1700.

John Ange, of Upton Esq; sold it, 26 August 1720, for the sum of 4600*l.* to

Robert Surman, Esq; Cashier of the South-Sea Company; it being then of the yearly value of 160*l.* After Surman's forfeiture, the Directors of the South-Sea Company sold it to

Edward Montgomerie Esq; He dying 18 January 1746-7, was succeeded by his elder brother

—George Montgomerie Esq;

The Maner of BUSCHES, otherwise Burfhes, was so named probably from William Busch, whose wife Lettice, that dyed in 1309, held in Thunderfley, of Alice Beamond, forty acres of land by the rent of 1*d.* ob. toward the Hidage;—Beatrix, daughter of the said Lettice, and William Martyne, her nephew, were her next heirs (n).

It appears by a Charter, that in 1267 William Saundon, the King's Cook, had free Warren in Thunderfley, probably in this Maner, because the chief maner was in the hands of other great men.

This Maner of Burfe did afterwards belong to the new Hospital of St. Mary without Bishops-gate; and, upon the suppression, coming to the Crown, was granted, with 16*s.* rent, to John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, and Dorothy his wife, 9 April 1545, to hold by the tenth part of a knight's fee (o).

John Warner, Gent. who dyed 21 September 1552, held the maner of Burces, alias Burches, of the King in capite, by the service of the 40th part of a knight's fee, and 16*s.* rent.

island, lies against Bemflet and Hadley, being encompassed by branches of the river Thames. There is a passage to it over the Strand at low water. It is about 5 miles in length and 2 in breadth, and contains 3600 acres. Of itself it is no Parish, but pays Taxes and Tithes to the following Parishes, South, and North-Bemflet, Bures-Gifford, Pitfey, Fange, Langdon with Basildon; and to these three Parishes within the Hundred of Rochford, Lee, Prittlewell, and Southchurch. There are about 50 dwellings in the island.

Mr. Camden justly supposes this Island to be the Convennos, or Kwvno, mentioned in Ptolemy's Geography.

The ancient possessors of Lands in this Island

—Henry, his brother and heir, was then aged 60. Upon whose death, 4 March 1556, this estate went to

Thomas Newdigate, son and heir of Anne Warner, and to Elizabeth Thomas, and Margaret Thomas, daughters of Thomasine Warner (p). Robert Kemp and Thomas Newdigate fold it to

Henry Songar Gent. and Elizabeth his wife, 20 May 1557, and they, with Thomas Philips, fold it 4 April the next year, to Bartholomew Averell Gent. He dyed possessed of it 14 May 1562, leaving Mary wife of Sir John Sammes; Grace; and Elizabeth, his daughters and coheirs (q).

It was since in Capt. Crowder, of Goodman's-fields, London.

Mr. William Solby; Michael Collinson; James Hardy; and John Muzzard, have also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, stands on an eminence, from whence there is a fair prospect. It consists of a body and two aisles; but the Chancel is only of one pace: the whole tyled. In a Spire shingled are 2 Bells.

This Rectory belonged to the Priory of Prittlewell till its suppression. It then coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. presented in 1537, and K. Edward VI. in 1550. Qu. Mary I. granted the Advowson with the Maner to Susan Tonge in 1554: and they have since passed together to the Families of White, Wiseman, Smyth, Dawling, Ange, Turner, and Montgomerie.

upon record, were, Edward Baker Esq; who in 1543, held of Nicolas Wentworth Esq; three Marshes in Canweye, called Knightwyke, Southwyke, and Attnashe. In 1569,—James Baker Esq; held 500 acres of Salt marsh here (r).

In 1557, Sir Roger Appleton held in this isle, a marsh called North-marsh, alias Northwicke, containing 400 acres of arable and pasture; and a marsh called West-marsh, alias Westwicke, containing 300 acres. In another place, it is said, that he held of the maner of Bowchiers-hall, a marsh of 300 acres called Chaffett, by the yearly rent of 13*s.* 4*d.* And of the maner of Cockfalls in Little Bemfleete, a marsh called Fatherwicke containing 200 acres (s). His great grandson, Sir Henry Appleton, besides the above, held here, in 1604, a salt marsh called Autliche and Wolspittle, and another marsh called Shornam (t).

This Island being subject to be overflowed by high Tides, Sir Henry Appleton, and others then owners of the lands here, agreed by Deed dated 9 April 1622, to give one third of the lands in fee simple to Joas Croppenburgh, a Dutchman skilled in the making of Dikes, in consideration of his sufficiently inn-ing and recovering this Island, then usually overflowed at every spring tide [C], at his own costs and charges. This agreement was by consent made a decree of the Court of Chancery 27 February 1622-3. The third of these lands now goes to the repairs of the Sea-walls.

A timber Chapel was built here for the use of the Dutch inhabitants employed in draining the isle. It being decayed, another was built at the charge of Mr. Edgar, an officer in the Victualling Office, and consecrated 11 June 1712. This being also decayed, a new one was built about the year 1745, partly by a contribution of the inhabitants, but mostly by a benefaction of the late Daniel Scratton Esq; owner of considerable estates in Prittlewell. He also gave part of the Tithes to trustees, to pay ten pounds a year to the Vicar of Prittlewell, the better to enable him to perform divine service here: And ten pounds a year more to the Minister or Curate, duly appointed, to preach twenty Sermons in St. Catharine's Chapel in this Island. About 17 l. a year is paid to the said Minister, by the Incumbents of the Nine Parishes that receive Tithes out of this place.

Here is a Fair on the 25th of June.

[C] It is still subject to inundations at some particular high tides. One of the most remarkable was 16 February 1735-6, when about half of the Cattle were drowned. A cow and five hogs then happening to stand on a dung-hill, were carried with it near a mile over a deep creek, and luckily preserved from being driven into the rapidity of the stream, by the dunghill's being stopped by a high bank.

IS bounded on the West by that of Barstable; on the South by the mouth of the River Thames, and the Sea; on the East by part of of the German Ocean; and on the North by the river Crouch.

In its greatest length from west to east it is about eighteen miles long; and from north to south where broadest about nine miles wide.

It takes its name from the Town of Rochford: that stands about the center of the Hundred. 'Tis one of those that have been stigmatized with the denomination of The Hundreds, Dengey being the other: But the Country being greatly cleared of the woods that obstructed the free circulation of the air, and the lands thoroughly cultivated, they are less unhealthy than they formerly were; bating the unavoidable steams and damps that arise in the parts near the water. The worst circumstance, is a scarcity of good Springs; which the Rains in some measure supply, but with no small inconvenience towards the end of the summer. The land is tolerably fruitful, and much improved of late years by manuring with chalk rubbish, which they have easily by water-carriage. It bears good Wheat, and other Grain, except Barley; so that they are forced to get their Malt chiefly from other parts.

This Hundred was originally in the King's disposal, and granted to Suene. Upon the forfeiture of his grandson Henry de Essex it reverted to the Crown; and continued in it, till K. Henry III. granted it to Hubert de Burgh Chief Justice of England, whom he created Earl of Kent 11 February 1226 (u). He dyed in 1243. His last wife — Margaret, sister of Alexander II. King of Scotland, had this Hundred at the time of her decease in 1260. She dying without heirs, — John de Burgh, Earl of Kent, her husband's son by his first wife, succeeded (w). But, in 1274, he passed it by fine to K. Edward I. with the maners of Rayley, and Estwood (x). In 1340, K. Edward III. granted it to — William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton, and the heirs male of his body. He dying 16

September 1360, it descended to his son — Humfrey, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton; who, at the time of his decease, 15 January 1372, leaving only daughters, it reverted to the Crown (y). Thomas de Staple, who dyed in 1372, held for life the Baylyship of the Hundred of Rochford, paying 23l. a year into the Exchequer. In 1380, K. Richard II. granted the Bailywick of this Hundred to — Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life; upon condition that he should, at his own costs and charge, keep up the fences and lodges of the King's Parks of Reyleigh, Hadeley, and Thundersley, in repair. — Edmund de Langley, Duke of York, 5th son of Edward III. succeeded him in 1400, having the remainder in fee-tail (z). — Edward, Duke of York, his son, had it after him in 1402. and he departing this life in 1415, — Philippa, his widow, held the third part of it in dower (a). — Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, father of K. Edward IV. nephew of Edmund of Langley, had it next. By that means it came again to the Crown.

Richard Lord Rich obtained a Grant of it from K. Edward VI. and, at the time of his death 12 June 1566, held the Hundred of Rochford, Turn, Court, and Liberties within the same, of the Queen, in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee: as did his son — Robert Lord Rich, who dyed 27 February 1580-1 (b). In that noble Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued till 1673.

As to Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, this Hundred is within the Archdeaconry of Essex.

This Hundred contains twenty four Parishes, of which I treat in the following order.

1. ROCHFORD.

This being the chief Town in this Hundred, and what gave name to it, and to the Deanery, I therefore begin with it, according to my usual method. It stands by a little stream, that runs into the great Creek which opens into the river Crouch. Here being a Ford is what occasioned the latter part of the name. As to the first syllable Rock, it was most probably from the fish Roche, [Saxonice, Dreoce] which abounded in this water. It could not well be from the French Roche, Rock, because it bore that name before the Norman Conquest, and this place is not rocky. I shall not dispute whether it might not come from Rodesford, or Radesford, being the principal Road of the Hundred. The name is written in Domesday-book Rochefort, according to the French pronunciation.

This Town is 40 miles from London; hath a Market on Thursday; and two Fairs, on Easter-Tuesday, and the Wednesday after September 29.

It giveth a Title to the Nassau Family. See under St. Osth.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, a Freeman was possessed of this Lordship: At the time of the Survey, Suene held it, and under him one Alured, a Saxon by the name [D].

Of Suene I shall give a particular account under the next parish of Raley, which was his chief Seat and Barony. His grandson Henry de Essex forfeited this, with the rest of his estates, through his cowardise.

In this parish are the following Maners. 1. The Maner or Honor of Rochford. 2. The Maner of Grested.

The Maner of ROCHFORD.

Rochford-Hall, the mansion house, stands near the west end of the Church. It is a large and stately building, and for some time the seat and place of residence of the Families of Rochford, Boteler Earls of Ormond and Wiltshire, Sir Thomas Bullen, and Richard Lord Riche;

[E] John de Rocheford succeeded his Uncle Guy. He was summoned by a Quo Warranto to appear before the King's Justices Itinerant at Chelmsford in 1285, to shew, by what Right he claimed Wreck of Sea, tumbrell, emendation of Assise of bread and beer, broken &c. in Rochford &c. He appeared and answered, As for wreck of sea; That one but is now much decayed. It had a large Park.

K. Henry II. gave this Maner and estate to a Family, surnamed from hence de Rochford; of which we find the following pedigree. Eustace the Norman had three sons, Eustace; Pagan; and William de Say.—Eustace, the eldest son married, first, the heiress of the Barony of Haulton in Cheshire; and, to his second wife, the heiress of Vesci, Baron of Malton and Alnwick in Northumberland. From Richard Fitz Eustace his eldest son descended the Earls of Lincoln of the surname of Lacy; and the Lords of Warkworth in Northumberland, and of Clavering in Essex.—Pagan, the second son was lord of Ewyas in Wales in 1136. His son—Guy de Rochford was father of — Pagan, who living in 1204, had two sons, Guy, and John.—Sir Guy de Rochford, the eldest son and heir, had a Market and a Fair at Rochford, in 1247 (c).

At the time of his decease in 1274, he held of the King in capite, as of the Elcheat of the Barony of Reyley in the town of Rochford, one messuage, with a garden, 168 acres of arable; 120 of marsh in Foulnes called Nessewyk; a Park containing 32 acres of wood; 5 l. 12 s. 8 d. rent of assize, 7 acres of meadow, with the Advowson of the Church of Rochford. And he held of John de Burgh, in the Hundred of Rochford, three marshes in Foulnes, and a wind-mill in the town of Rochford. He held also the Maners of Elsenham and Berden.—John Rochford, son of Maud, sister to Guy, was his cousin and heir (d). He held this maner, with the marsh of Foulness called Estwood-wick, and departed this life 1309 (e).—Robert, his son and heir, presented to this Living in 1321, and 1324. He held, jointly with Ifolda daughter of William Fitz-Warin, probably his wife, the maners of Rochford and Berden, and 1100 acres of marsh in Rochford, with the Advowson of this Church, of the King as of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of three knights fees, and 6 d. yearly to the hidage; and by suit to the Court of the Barony of Reyle from month to month, and suit to the Hundred of Rochford from three weeks to three weeks. He held also for life, a tenement in this parish called Uphalle, of Sir John Nevill, by the service of three pounds of pepper, and 7 d. to the hidage of the Honor of Reyle.—Sir Thomas de Rochford was his son and heir [E]. In 1342, he released to John de Burgh senior granted to Guy de Rochford his Uncle, whose heir he was, All his Marshes with the appertinances, (excepting to the said John and his heirs the collation of the tythes of the said marshes which he had in Fughelness in the Hundred of Rochford, tam forinssecos quam intrinsecos) together with all his Marshes as well within the Wall as without, To have and to hold the said Marshes with all the appertinances in waters, sands or washes, shoves, wrecks of the sea, wayes, pathes, drifts, warrens, and all other liberties to the said Marshes appertaining, which Grant Edw. now King of England by his Charter confirmed, which Charter he then produced. As for tumbrell, emendation of Assise of bread, and beer, broken &c. He said, King Henry, Father of the King that now is, granted and by his Charter confirmed to the aforesaid Guy de Rochford and his heirs, one Market at his Maner of Rochford, every Week upon Tuesdays, and one Fair yearly

John,

John, son of John de Newington, all his right in those lands which he had in the Hundreds of Rochford and Berdestaple of the inheritance of Joane, formerly his wife, the youngest daughter and common heir of Peter de Suth-Cherche (f).

The Heir-general of this Family failing, K. Edward III, in 1340, granted this maner to William de Bohun Earl of Northampton; who, at the time of his decease in 1360, held the maners of Rochford and Foulness of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyle, by knight's service. — Humfrey his son and successor, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton, Baron of Brecknock, and High Constable of England, dyed 17 January 1372. Joane his widow, daughter of Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, presented to this Living in 1395, and 1397. They had only two daughters, Elleanor married to Thomas of Woodstock, and Mary to Henry Earl of Derby. [See above p. 203. and in the other Volume, p. 453. 460.] (g). The share of Thomas de Woodstock fell to the Crown, upon his being declared guilty of treason; that of the Earl of Derby was incorporated into the Duchy of Lancaster.

Joane, widow of Humfrey de Bohun above-mentioned, having had for her second husband William de Beauchamp, Lord Begavenny, took for her third James Boteler 4th Earl of Ormond; and had by this last 3 sons, James, John, and Thomas. She dyed 7 April 1434 (h). — James, the eldest son, 5th Earl of Ormond, was created, 8 July 1449, Earl of Wiltshire; and being strongly attached to the House of Lancaster, obtained this estate, and presented to the Church in 1454 and 1455. But being taken after the battle of Towton, he was beheaded 1 May 1461, and his estates were confiscated to the Crown. His next brother — John, the 6th Earl of Ormond, was indeed restored in blood, and to most of the estates, but not to the Maner and Hundred of Rochford (i).

For, K. Edward IV. gave it to his sister Anne, Duchess of Exeter; and she presented to the Church from 1462 to 1468. His father-in-law, Richard Widvile, Earl Rivers, appears possessed of it in 1469. And, after his tragical death in 1469,

Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset, son in law to K. Edward IV. and then his brother — Sir Richard Grey (k). Upon that King's demise,

Thomas Boteler, next brother to the last Earl of Ormond, petitioned K. Richard the third for these estates: There being some defect in the petition, it was set right by that King's Writ of Right, or Charter of pardon [F]. The Earl of Ormond's attainder being reverted upon the accession of K. Henry VII. Thomas Earl of Ormond recovered this estate; and enjoyed it till his decease 8 August 1515; being summoned to the English Parliament, 14 October 1495, by the title of Sir Thomas Ormond de Rochford. He left only two daughters, coheirs, Anne, wife Sir James St. Leger, and

Margaret, wife of Sir William Bullen, of Blickling in Norfolk. These had an only son and heir — Sir Thomas Bullen, who attained to great honors. He was employed in several Embassies, and Affairs of consequence; constituted Treasurer of the King's Household; Lord Privy-Seal; Knight of the Garter; created Viscount ROCHFORD, 18 June 1525, and Earl of Wiltshire to the heirs male of his body; as also Earl of Ormond to his heirs general, 8 December 1527. He dyed in the year 1538, having had, by Elizabeth his wife daughter of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, George, Viscount Rochford, who was beheaded 17 May 1535, falling a sacrifice to K. Henry's jealousy; Anne Bullen, second Queen of the same brutish tyrant, who was sacrificed to his lust; and Mary, married, first, to William Carey Esq; and, afterwards, to Sir William Stafford. She departed this life 19 July 1543, leaving, by her first husband, — Henry Carey, Esq; then 17 years, 15 weeks, and 5 days old. At the time of her decease, she held the Maner, or Barony, of Rochford of the King, in capite, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. Also the maners of High-Roding, Great Holland, Legghall, Wakering, Hawkewell, Docketts, alias Doggetts, Upwyke, COMBES near Rochford, Baggotts marsh, Pakelsham, Est-hall, Southall, Foulness, and Rochford; and divers lands, hereditaments &c. (l) in those several parishes, and places [G].

The Carey Family was originally of Cockington in Devonshire. William Carey of that place Esq; by his first wife, Anne daughter of Sir William Paulet, had a son from whom descended the Carey family of Cockington. By his second wife, Alice daughter of Sir Baldwin Fulford, he had — Thomas, who left two sons, Sir John; and — William. Sir John had issue

Sir Edward Carey, father of Henry created Lord Viscount Falkland, and made Lord Deputy of Ireland; whose son was the excellent Lucius Carey, Lord Viscount Falkland, Secretary of State to K. Charles I. and slain at the battle of Newbury 20 September 1643.

William Carey Esq; youngest son of William above-named, who married Mary Bullen, dyed in 1528, having had by her Henry; and a daughter, Catharine, wife of Sir Frances Knolles, Knight of the Garter.—Henry Carey Esq; the son and heir, being first Cousin to Qu. Elizabeth, was knighted by her, soon after her accession to the Crown; advanced to the title of Baron Hunsdon 13 January 1558; and employed in offices of the greatest moment. By Anne his lady, daughter of Sir Thomas Morgan, he had four sons, George; John; Edmund; Robert, created Earl of Monmouth: and three daughters, Catharine married to Charles Howard, Earl of Nottingham; Philadelphia to Thomas Lord Scrope; and Margaret to Sir Edward Hoby, Kt. Departing this life 23 July 1596, aged 71, he was buried in Westminster-Abbey. Henry Lord Hunsdon, his great grandson, was created Earl of Dover 8 March 1627-8 (m).

But Henry the first Lord Hunsdon very early parted with this Maner and estate, though he kept the neighbouring one of Raley. For, Richard Lord Riche had the Maner of Rochford in 1555, and 1558 [H]: and resided at Rochford-hall, where he dyed 12 June 1566, holding that Maner, then valued at 90l. 11s. yearly; and the same lands and demesnes as lady Mary Carey, or Stafford, enjoyed at the time of her decease, as set down above: all which premisses the Lord Rich held of Henry Lord Hunsdon, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (n).—Robert Lord Riche, held the same at the time of his decease 27 February 1580-1 (o). As did his son—Robert, created Earl of Warwick 6 August 1618: and his descendents—Robert,—Robert, and—Charles, successively Earls of Warwick. [For a more particular account of this noble Family, see the other Volume, p. 101. 418.]

After the death of Charles, the last Earl, in 1673, and of his Lady in 1678, the great Estates of the Warwick Family being divided among the coheirs, the Maners of Rochford, Hadley-castle, Leigh, Prittlewell, Astringdon, Packlesham and West-hall, were allotted to

Sir Henry St. John, Bart. who had married Mary, niece to Charles the last Earl of Warwick; and was created 2 July 1716, Baron of Battersea, and Viscount St. John. His eldest son—Henry, created Viscount Bolingbroke, July 1712, sold this estate to Sir Richard Child, afterwards Earl Tilney; and it is now in his son—John Earl Tilney.

GRESTED

or CRISTELL-HALL, stands about a mile west from this Church.

All we find concerning this estate, is, That Roger Darcie, who dyed 3 September 1508, held the maner of Grested hall, with appertenances, of the Earl of Ormond, as of his maner of Rochford (p). [See under Canewdon, and in the other Volume, p. 24. 28.]

William Harrys, in 1556, held this maner of Cristell-hall of the Lord Riche, as of his Maner or Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee (q).

DOGETT, or DOCCET, another reputed Maner here, took its name from an ancient Family.

In 1305, Robert Dogett and Alice his wife held here, 1 messuage, and 26 acres of arable, purchased by Beatrix Dogett; and 60 acres purchased by John Rocheford; holden of the King, as of the Honor of Reylye, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. And John de Rocheford held 20 acres, of the same Honor, by the service of one knight's fee (r). We find mention of Great and Little Doggett.

COMBES is also mentioned as another Maner near Rochford; and belonged to Mary Carey above-mentioned.

Doggetts, Combes, Upwicke, and other parcels, belonged to Robert Earl of Warwick, in 1619, as appears by the Inquisition then taken.

Mr. John White; John Rennefon; Daniel Dale; William Watts; Thomas Warner; Arthur Tooke &c. have also some lands here.

or Alms-houses of brick, for six poor People, stand pleasantly at the lower end of this Town. They were built by Robert Rich, the first Earl of Warwick of that family; who, in his will dated 15th September 1617, and proved 8 May 1620, sets forth, That, according to the intention of his father and grandfather, he had built a Mansion and a place convenient for certain poor Almsmen and poor people for ever; viz. Six poor people, of which five shall be aged poor lame or impotent, and such as have lived painfully and orderly, and shall by age, or otherwise by the hand of God, become unable to live of themselves: and the sixth to be an ancient poor woman, fitt and able to attend and keep the others as well in sickness as in health. He wills that sixty pounds per annum be distributed and disposed to the said Almsmen and poor people in manner following; viz. To each of them three shillings and four pence every week; and twenty shillings and eight pence yearly against Christmase upon a Gown for their wearing. And he further wills, that every one of the said Almsmen and poor people shall every year for ever have two good loads of wood out of

is a whimsical Custom in this parish, of which the origin is unknown.

It is kept at King's-hill about half a mile north-east of this Church, in the yard of a House once belonging to . . . Crips, Gent. and afterward to Robert Hackshaw, of London, merchant; and to Mr. John Buckle. Here the Tenants kneel, and do their homage. The time is, the Wednesday morning next after Michaelmas-day, upon the first cock-crowing; without any kind of light but such as the heavens will afford. The Steward of the Court calleth all such as are bound to appear with as low a voice as possible, giving no notice when he goeth to execute his office; howsoever he that gives not an answer is deeply amerced. They are all to whisper to each other. Nor have they any pen and ink, but supply that office with a Coal; and he that owes suit and service thereto, and appears not, forfeits to the Lord double his rent every hour he is absent. A tenant of this maner forfeited, not long ago, his land for non-attendance; but was restored to it, the lord only taking a fine. The Court is called Lawless, because held at an unlawful or Lawless Hour, or quia dicta sine lege: the Title of it runs in the Court-rolls to this day according to the form below (s) [I]. There is a tradition, that this servile attendance was imposed at first upon certain tenants of divers maners hereabouts for conspiring in this place at such an unreasonable time to raise a commotion (t). This Court belongs to Robert Bristow, Esq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a large stately fabrick, about half a mile from the Town, near the Hall; It has north and south aisles, and the Chancel a north Chapel, leaded; all the rest of the Church and the Chancel tiled. At the west end is a lofty Tower with one Bell. The Tower or Steeple is said to have been built by Lord Riche, but Boteler's Arms being upon the Stones, give reason to believe that the Family of Ormond erected it: Most likely, the Lord Riche repaired it, and added to its height.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

In 1219 a Vicarage was instituted here; but remained happily so a very little time; and hath ever since been a very good Rectory.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 940 l.

is the next considerable Town in this Hundred, and formerly was the most considerable, being the Head of a great Honor or Barony: to which belonged great privileges.

The name of it is otherwise written in records, Regeneia, Ragheleia, Ragley and Ragleigh, Ralegh, Raylee, Raylegh, Raylil.

It seems to be derived from the two Saxon words Raa, a roe-buck, or wild goat; and ley, pasture.

This Town is 35 miles from London, and consists of a handsome wide street; but is grown much ruinous and decayed. The Market is on Saturdays [K], and here is a Fair on Trinity monday.

It is one of the fifty five Lordships which Suene had in this County at the time of the general Survey [L]. He held it then in demesne, together with another Maner, which did belong to a Freeman in Edward the Confessor's reign. Suene had built a Castle here [M].

This Suene was settled in England before the Conquest, (his father having the maner of Eastwood,) and is by some called a Saxon, but seems to me by the name to have been of the Danish breed; and retaining some of the natural antipathy that had prevailed between the ancient Saxon inhabitants and the Danish invaders, He therefore readily joined the Norman invader William the Conqueror, who either confirmed him in the possession of his lands, or restored them to him. This lordship is reasonably supposed to have been part of those lands, because no former possessor is mentioned in Domesday-book, as is universally done. Suene's father was named Robert, [see above, p. 155, note H,] and his grandfather Wimar. — Henry de Essex succeeded him. He is called his son and heir; but it is more probable that — Robert de Essex was his son, and Henry his grandson. However, this Henry being hereditary Standard-bearer to K. Henry II. in an expedition made by that King into Wales about the year 1163, this man behaved himself so unworthily; that throwing down the Standard royal, and running away, the Welshmen were thereby animated, and the English so discouraged, through a sudden apprehension of the King's being slain, that the whole army presently fell into confusion, and was utterly routed. For which high misdemeanor being charged with treason by Robert de Montford, and in a solemn tryal by battle clearly vanquished, he ought to have suffered death by the law; but the King spared his life, and caused him to be shorn a Monk, in the Abbey of Reading, the combat having been performed in that town. His mother's name was Cecily; and by his wife Alice, sister to Alberic de Vere the first Earl of Oxford, he had two sons, Henry, and Hugh (u).

This most valuable inheritance being thus forfeited through Henry de Essex's cowardise, came to the Crown.

It was an Honor, that is a more noble Seigniorie or Lordship on which other Lordships and Maners depended by performance of several customs and services. For an explanation of that word, and an account of the chief Honors in England, see in the other Volume, p. 106. note [D].

What a great number of Knights Fees depended upon this Honor and Lordship, or were held of it, appears by the List of them below [N], given in about the year 1210; 12 and 13 of K. John.

By an inquest or extent taken of this Honor, and of the Maners of Reyleigh and Estwood in 1340, it was found, That there were belonging to this Honor divers Frank Pledges holden in several places, and a certain Court kept at Reyleigh from month to month, belonging to the said Honor. The following Knights Fees belonged to this Honor: The heirs of Ralph Perot held half of the maner of Hakerwell by the service of one knight's fee. Edward St. John held the maner of Prittlewell, by the service of one knight's fee. John de Nevill held lands and tenements in Little-Wakering, by one knight's fee. Edmond Fitz-Simon held in Little-Skobury lands and tenements, by half a knight's fee. Edward de Wodham, Edmund Fitz-Simon, the heirs of William Gyne, Thomas le Barber, and the heirs of Adam Sare, held in Little-Skobury lands and tenements by half a knight's fee. Petronilla de Banysted held in Great-Stambridge, lands and tenements, by one knight's fee. William de Bohun Earl of Northampton held the maner of Rockford, by one knight's fee and a half. William Cofin held in Sutton, lands and tenements, by one knight's fee. William Vaughan and his part-

This account shews where the lands lye that held of the Barony of Rayleigh. And, by the very great Extent of them, and the large Number of Vassals and Dependents belonging thereto, one may judge of the great Power which the ancient Barons had; such indeed as, when united, was able to make head against the Crown.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, as above-mentioned, this Lordship remained in the Crown till K. Henry III. granted it to Hubert de Burgh Lord Chief Justice, whom he created Earl of Kent: The Knights Fees given him as belonging to this Honor, were, Hadlee, Watlee, Merefle, Kenewode, Oswode, Wichford, and Purle; and the Hundred of Rochford: The Maner of Haganet, with the constabulary and knights fees thereof. He fell into the King's displeasure, and was stript of the greatest part of his estate: However, the reversion of this was in his eldest son.

After his death, which happened in 1243, Margaret, his widow [O], Countess of Kent, held the maner of Reyle, by the service of one knight's fee; and the Hundred of Rochford, and maner of Estwood. She dyed in 1260, without heir of her body [P], and was succeeded in the Hundreds of Rochford, and in the maners of Reyle and Estwood, by her husband Hubert's eldest son—John de Burgh (w). He sometimes bears the title of Earl of Kent (x). In 1274, he granted to K. Edward I. in fee, the Maners of Raleigh, and Estwode, with the Hundred of Rochford, in Essex; the maners of Whateley in Nottinghamshire; Le Weylond (Nayland) in the Counties of Essex and Suffolk; Causton in Norfolk; Soham in Cambridgeshire; Camel and Kingesbury, with the Hundred, in Somersetshire; Wynford in Dorsetshire; Bansted in Surrey, except 100s. worth of land given to Anselm de Gyse; and Crumpton in Warwickshire. In lieu of these Lordships, the King granted him for term of life, the Custody of the Tower of London, and of the Castle of Colchester, and Hundred of Tendring. A Fine passed between the King, plaintiff, and John de Burgh sen. deforc' of the Maners of Estwood and Reley, and the Hundred of Rochford, the right of the King; who, in the room of them, released him from a debt of 1200 l. and gave him, besides what is mentioned above, the maner of Middleton in Kent (y). By Hawise, daughter and heir of William de Lanvally, he had John, who dyed in 1280; without issue male, leaving only two daughters; Hawise married to Robert de Grelle, and Devorgill to Robert Lord Fitz-Walter. Thus this Lordship and Maner came again to the Crown.

Out of the great MANER OF RALEY there seem to have been erected, about this time, the Three other Maners of HARBERGES, WHATLEYS, and DOWN-HALL.

The Maner of RALEY

continued in the Crown, till 1340, when K. Edward III. granted the maners of Estwood, and Reyleigh, with the Honor of Reylegh, and Hundred of Rochford, to William de Bohun Earl of Northampton, and the heirs Male of his body: He dyed 16 September 1360, leaving one only son—Humfrey, Earl of Essex, Hereford, and Northampton, and Constable of England, who dyed 15 January 1372; As he left only daughters, the estate devolved to the Crown again (z). For a more particular account of this noble Family of Bohun, see in the other Volume, p. 62. 83. 451, 452.

In 1380, K. Richard II. granted to Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life, the Honor, Fee, Fair, and Market of Raleigh, with the profits of the herbage of Raleigh Park, and the maner of Estwood. He dyed possessed of them 23 April 1400. But the same King, in 1390, had granted the reversion of them to York, 5th son of K. Edward III. in special tail, namely to his heirs male (a). He held them at the time of his decease 1 August 1402 [2]; And his son—Edward, Duke of York, who was killed at the battle of Agincourt 25 Octob. 1415, held also the Honor of Raley with its rents and revenues; the town, fair, and market of Raley, with Raley Park; a mill; and all rents, services, tolls, customs, view of frank pledge, courts, franchises: Also the maner of Estwood, and the maner and park of Thunderlee (b).—Philippa, his Duchess, held a third part of them till her decease in 1431 (c).

From that time it remained in the Crown till the year 1535, when K. Henry VIII. granted to Thomas Bullen, Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, and to his son George Bullen Lord Rochford, the Honor and Maner of Ralegh; and the Maners of Estwoodbury, Thunderley, and Loveden, parcel of the said Honor, for thirty years (d): but the Lord Viscount Rochford being beheaded 17 May 1535, and his father the Earl of Wiltshire dying in 1538, this Honor and Estate came again to the Crown.

In 1553, K. Edward VI. granted the Honor of Raleigh with appertenances, and the lordship of Raleigh, to Richard Lord Riche, and his heirs: who going into Qu. Mary's measures, enjoyed them during her reign (e). But when Qu. Elizabeth came to the throne, she granted them to her cousin,

Henry Carey, Lord Hunsdon, who presented to the Living in 1593, and was possessed of the premises at the time of his decease 22 July 1596. —Sir George Carey, his son, then aged upwards of 50 years (f), dying 9 Septemb. 1603, left only one daughter: Whereupon he was succeeded by his next brother—John Lord Hunsdon; whose son and heir—Henry, Lord Hunsdon, did, by indenture, 5 May 1621, convey, upon some consideration, to Sir Thomas Wroth and others, in trust for

Robert Riche, Earl of Warwick, the Honor and Maner of Raleigh, the Hundred of Rochford, all messuages, pastures, feedings, and hereditaments, to the said Honor and premises belonging, and the Advowson of the Church of Raleigh, and lands and wood called Hoggesland and Kingswood, and all other lands and hereditaments in Raleigh, Estwood, Rochford, Lee, Prittlewell, Shopland, Great Sutton, North, and South, Shoebury, Pagleham, Hackwell, South-Fambridge, Asheldon, Rawreth, North-Bemflete, Langdon, Horndon, Alvethley, Stapleford-Tany, Warely-Franks, alias Waller, Canewdon, Hockley, Great and Little Stambridge, Great, and Little, Wakering, Barling, South-Church, Sanfleet, Canvey, Effingham, Beardfeild, Wickford, Hallingbury, East-Mersey, Sutton, Hadley, West-Tilbury, Elmsted, Boxted, Frinton-Parva, Asheldam, West, and Little, Thuroc, and Wiston.

This Robert Riche, second Earl of Warwick of that family, had by his first lady four sons, Robert, Charles; Henry, and Hatton, which two last dyed without issue: and three daughters, Anne married to Edward Earl of Manchester; Lucy to John Lord Roberts; and Frances to Nicolas Earl of Scarsdale. He dyed 19 April 1658. —Robert, his eldest son, third Earl of Warwick, had by his first lady, Robert who married Frances, daughter of Oliver the Protector, but dyed 16 February 1657-8, without issue. By his second lady he had three daughters, Anne married to Thomas son of Sir John Barrington, Bart. Mary to Sir Henry St. John; and Essex to Daniel Finch, Earl of Nottingham. Dying without issue male 19 May 1659, —Charles, his next brother succeeded him in title and estates. And he departing this life 24 August 1673, without surviving issue; after his Lady's death, which happened 12 April 1678, the great Estates of the Riche Family were divided among the six coheirs, or their heirs; And this Honor, and Maner, &c. came to the share of Daniel, Earl of Nottingham. He sold them to Robert Bristow Esq; whose son, — Robert Bristow Esq; married Sarah, daughter of Sir John Ward, Alderman of London, and Lord Mayor in 1719. —Robert Bristow Esq; his son and heir, is present lord. He hath several considerable estates in this Hundred.

The Maner of HARBERGES

Lies toward Rawreth: The mansion house is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

It took its name from the ancient owners, the Harberge, or Haverburgh family, and is sometimes called Harberts.

In 1284, William, Son of Warine, and William de Haverburgh, held one fee of the King, in capite, in the town of Reylegh, of his Honor or Barony of Reylegh (g). William de Hareburgh, who married Helen, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir John Hardel, held here, in 1304, of the King, as of his Honor of Reylie, by the service of 4d. per ann. to the King's hidage, one capital messuage, forty acres of arable, and two of meadow; —Adam was his son and heir. He, and Ifolda de Belbous, in 1340 held lands and tenements in Releigh by the service of one knight's fee of the Honor of Reyleigh (b). This Adam Haverberge, at the time of his decease in 1372, held one messuage, 120 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of wood, and 3s. 4d. rent in Reylegh, of the King as of his Honor of Reylegh, by the service of three parts of a knight's fee; and they were parcel of lands called Lieftane-Stone Fee, that owed suit at the Hundred Court; John was his son (i).

John Baud Esq; who dyed in 1422, held this messuage of Haverberge, with the same quantity of land, but the rent was only 2s. 3d. He held also one toft called Ekkemed in this parifh and Raureth, of the Honor of Reyleigh, in which were 120 acres; and 80 acres of Auguftin Waleys, in focage. He had alfo Beches in Raureth, lands in Hokkeley, South-Fambridge, and Affyndon, South-Church, Prittlewell, and Mark-hall in Latton.—William, his fon and heir, was married to Elizabeth, daughter of William Rokefburgh of Stanfted-Abbots (k).

Afterwards, lands in Rawreth and Hockley were annexed to this Maner, which increafed the number of acres. For

Thomas Lawrence of Tollefhunt Knights, who dyed 20 December 1551, held the Maner of Harbards in Rayleigh, Rawreth, and Great-Hockley, of the Honor of Rayleigh, confifting of one meffuage, one cottage, 300 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 40 of wood, and 4 s. 4 d. rent.—John was his fon (l). [See the other Volume, p. 204.]

John Wincoll Esq; who dyed 24 Decemb. 1576, held the maner of Harberts, lately Thomas Lawrence's, of the Lord Hunsdon of his Honor of Railegh; He had alfo Twinfled maner. [See the other Volume, p. 271.]—Isaac was his fon and heir (m).

Thomas White, D. D. had it in 1623.

Of Thomas Clutterbuck Esq; Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. purchafed this maner 29 May 1719.

The Maner of WHATLEY.

The mansion houfe of this ftands about half a mile north-weft from the Church.

It is now divided into Great Whatley, which is about 86 l. a year, and Little Whatley about 50 l.

This maner belonged to John de Burgh, above-mentioned. He granted it to Sir John Hardel, who gave it in free marriage, with his daughter Alice, to William Fitz-Warin, then Valeffus, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, to K. Edward I. [R].

Sir John Hardel married the Lady Alice Beaumont, and had by her two daughters, Alice and Helen; Helen was married to William de Hareburgh, as we have feen; Alice was wife of William Fitz-Warine, who had by her Ifolda and Alice, co-heirs. Alice was wife of Sir John Dagworth, and had Nicolas, who dyed without issue;

Ifolda, the eldeft daughter, was wife of Sir John Belbous of Stanway. They had two fons, Sir Thomas Belbous, who dyed without issue; and —John. This latter, by Alice Baynard his wife had—Sir Thomas, his fon and heir, and—Ifolda.

Sir Thomas married Alice daughter of John Berners, but dyed in 1375; as did his daughter Joane fhortly after.

Ifolda, heiress to her brother, became the wife of

John Castelayn Esq; They had one daughter

Margaret, who was married to Robert Knivet Esq; fecond fon of Sir John Knivet, Lord Chancellor. He held this maner of Whateleghe in the town of Reylegh of the Abbot of St. John's in Colcheſter [S]: alfo that of Dounhall: and 20 acres of arable, and 12 of wood in Thundersley of Richard Duke of York, by the ſervice of finding one bayliſſ to ſerve ſummons and attachments for the Court of the Honor of Reylegh: and departing this life in 1419, was ſucceeded by his fon —Thomas Knivet Esq; then 24 years old (n). He married, fiſt, Eli-anor daughter of John Doreward; and afterwards . . . a daughter of . . . Flemingles. By the fiſt he had John; and by the ſecond Robert, who dyed without iſſue; and Margaret wife of . . . Tey. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1458, he held this maner of Wetle; and that of Dounhall, and the reſt as above.—John, his eldeſt fon and heir (o) held alſo this maner of Wheteley of the Abbot of St. John's in Colcheſter; that of Dounhalle of the King as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the ſervice of 40 d. per annum; &c. and dyed in 1480 (p). He married . . . daughter of . . . Baynard and had by her—Thomas Knivet Esq; his only fon, who, by Elizabeth ſecond daughter and coheir of William Lunsford, had, Edward; and two daughters, Thomasine, married to Sir William Clopton of Suffolk; and Margaret, to Thomas Roydon, whoſe only daughter, Elizabeth, became wife of John, fon and heir of the ſaid Sir William Clopton. —Edward Knivet Esq; ſucceeded his father in this maner of Whetley, and dyed 4 February 1500. He married Catharine, ſiſter to Henry Lord Marney of Layer Marney, by whom he left Elizabeth his daughter and heir, eleven years old. She held the maner of Whatley, with appertenanceſ, of the Abbot of St. John's Colcheſter, and was married to Sir John Rainsford, but ſhe dyed 4 February 1507, without iſſue:

Elizabeth Clopton, aged 18 years; Thomasine Clopton, aged 40 years; and Catharine Roydon 15, were her next heirs (q). But Catharine Knivet, mother of the ſaid Lady Rainsford, remarried, after her huſband Edward Knivet's deceaſe, to Thomas Bonham, and John Barnabee, Eſquires, of Stanway, held this eſtate till her deceaſe 28 June, 1535, when the three coheireſſes above-mentioned ſucceeded (r).

Thomasine abovesaid was ſecond wife of Sir William Clopton;—William Clopton Esq; dyed 17 Auguſt 1562, poſſeſſed of the maners of Whetlie, and Downe-hall, leaving his fon and

And the Families of Belhous, Knivet, &c. had also the maners of Belhouse in Alveley, Ramsden-Belhouse, Stanway, &c. See above, p. 78. 202, and in the other Volume, p. 190,

This estate was afterwards in Antony Bramston Esq; who sold it to Thomas Cheke Esq; and his granddaughter,—Anne Lady Tipping, sold it again; 14 March 1718, to Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart.

The Maner of DOWN-HALL lies, as well as Hardeberges, towards Rawreth; and the mansion house is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

It doth not appear at what time This was severed from the capital Maner; nor by whom; whether by William de Bobun; or John de Burgh; or by a grant from the Crown. 'Tis most probable that it was done by John de Burgh, because he erected here the foregoing Maner of Whatley, which he granted to Sir John Hardel.

This was at first, as well as that, in the Belhous family. Sir Thomas Belhous, who dyed in 1375, had rents and tenements in this parish; which he held of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Reyley, as parcel of the maner of Dounehalle; the whole maner being holden of the King, as of the Honor aforesaid, by knight's service.—Joane, his daughter and heir, was then only three years old (t): and survived him but a little while.

Ifolda, his sister and heir, had by John Castelayn Esq; an only daughter

Margaret, who brought this estate to her husband Robert Knivet Esq; together with Whatley-hall. He held it, in 1419, of Richard Duke of York, as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the service of one knight's fee (u). And by Thomas-fine Knivet it came into the Clopton Family. In 1514, there was a Fine between Thomas Alen, plaintiff, and John Clopton, and Elizabeth his wife, deforc' of the Maner of Down-Hall in Reyly, Hadleigh, and Thunderfley; when it was agreed, that John Hastings Esq; should hold this maner for life; the reversion to the said Elizabeth, and her heirs (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 190, 191.]

Some years ago it belonged to Mr. Downes, an Attorney in London, of whom it was purchased, 22 March 1719, by

Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. [See above, p. 4.]

RAYLEY-CASTLE

is a famous piece of antiquity, erected by Suene

before the Conquest, as appears from Domesday-book. It stands at the entrance into the Town from London; and is partly natural, and partly artificial. The top of it is very lofty, and yields an agreeable prospect all over the country. It is surrounded with a deep Ditch; and all of earth, as Castles were in the times of the Saxons and Danes. If there was any fabrick of stone, with a mixture of brick; on the top of it, all is gone. It comprehends some acres; and belongs to Chester-Moore Hall Esq;

A large Park belonged to this Castle and Honor: and the Park-keeper had a very good Salary.

The Park, and lands disparked, and a capital messuage called The Great Lodge, were held by Edward Bury, who dyed in February 1583.—Robert Strangman was his heir.—Bradford called Gilbert, alias Bury, Gent. had license, 2 May 1590, to alienate this estate to Edward Rawlins, and Thomas Rawlins (x).

The Honor of Rayley had its peculiar Stewards, that were persons of note.

In 1285, William Fitz-Warin held 24 acres here, by the serjancy of finding a man to keep the Court of the maner of Reylegh (y). In 1370, Geffrey de la Rokele was Steward of the Honor of Rayleigh and Hundred of Rochford. In 1373, Geffrey de Dersham was Steward of this Honor, and of all the King's lands within the Hundred of Rochford (z).

Some lands were holden by the following Tenure, That the owners provided a Bayliff, to attend at the Court of this Honor to serve summons, attachments, and executions, &c.

William Leyre, who dyed in 1366, held of the King in capite as of his Honor of Reyle; one messuage, 60 acres of arable, and six of wood in Reilegh, for the term of his life, jointly with John son of John de Belhouse deceased, by the service of finding one Bayliff to serve all executions in the Court of Reileigh: and 40 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 3 of wood, and 5 s. 6 d. ob. rent, of the King, by the 16th part of a knight's fee, for which he paid suit every three weeks at Rochford Hundred Court; also 1 messuage, 180 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 15 s. 9 d. ob. rent, by the service of three pence scutage, when levied in England; and 30 acres of the Abbot of Colchester and Robert de Teye, by the service of 6 s. 4 d. per ann.—Thomas, son of John de Belhous, was his next heir (a).

Robert Knyvet Esq; who enjoyed Whatlegh and Down-Hall, held 20 acres of arable and 12 of wood in Thunderfley, as just mentioned above, by the service of finding a Bailiff to serve summons and attachments at the Court of this Honor (b).

A Lawless-Court was anciently kept here, and divided into Great and Little Lawless Court: the Quit-rents of which appear, by the account of George Dearlie in 1647, to have been thus.

Barringtons was a house here, so called from its being the residence of a Branch of the Barrington family, formerly Keepers of the King's Park at Raley. Sir Philip Barrington, youngest son of Sir Nicolas Barrington of Hatfeild Broad-Oak, by Alice his wife daughter and heir of Sir Richard Belhouse of Ramsden, married Margaret daughter of Sir William Tey, and had by her—Nicolas Barrington, of Raley Esq; curteys Parker of the Fee of Raley Park, who, by Margaret his wife, daughter of William Clovill Esq; had—John Barrington Esq; that married Thomasine. . . . He dyed 8 November 1416, and the 15 September 1420 (c). They left one daughter,—Thomasine, that had three husbands, 1. William Lunsford Esq; 2. William Sidney of Stoke Daubernon, in Surrey. 3. John Hopton Esq;

William Lunsfortbe Esq; at the time of his decease 3 May 1531, held Barringtons in Raighley, of the King, in free burgage, as of his Burgh of Rayleigh, by the service of 5 s. a year: and two parcels of land called Pannefeildes, and Lunsforth medes, by the same tenure, and yearly payment of 6 s. 6 d. Also a parcel of land called Parkers, in this parish, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Temple, by the rent of 15 s. 7 d. The whole then worth 9 l. a year.—John Lunsforde, his son and heir, was then 12 years old (d). They had also Lambornes in Canewdon.

Mr. Pinderman Allison; Thomas Waite; Samuel Brown; John Crofier; Thomas Walker; Joseph Waylett; John Spurgeon; Joseph Trotter; John Ing, &c. have also some lands here.

Holly-tree house, with some lands adjoyning, belong to Thomas White, Gent.

Charitable Gifts.

One House given to maintain twelve poor Children at school to read; but the rent is so fallen, that the number is reduced to six.

Another House given, to bestow a certain quantity of bread to six poor widows every sabbath-day, but this is decayed, and the rent fallen.

An House to maintain the Bell-ropes, now down.

Three Houses for poor men and women, without endowment.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stately building on a rising ground at the upper end of the Town. It consists of a body and two aisles, the length both of Church and Chancel. The body of the Church and Chancel is tyled, the aisles leaded. At the west end there is a lofty Tower, with a Spire shingled, and a ring of 5 large Bells. The South Chapel of the Chancel is repaired by the owner of the Castle [T].

This Rectory being appendent to the capital Maner, was given by Robert de Essex, son of Suene, to the Priory of Pittlewell of his foundation; in whose gift it continued till the suppression of Monasteries. Then it coming to the Crown, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Henry Lord Hunsdon, who presented in 1593. His younger son Henry conveyed it with the Maner, in 1621, to Robert Riche Earl of Warwick. From him it passed to his successors Earls of Warwick: and then to one of the co-heirs, Daniel Earl of Nottingham; who sold both Maner and Advowson to Robert Bristow Esq;

Here was a Chantry, of which we have this account in the Certificate of Chantries: 'Lands and Tenements there put in feoffment by divers and sundry persons to find a Priest to sing masse and to help serve the Cure there, and to teach a Free-school, and to instruct yowth; which said Town of Raileigh ys a very great and populous Town, having in it about the number of three hundred houseling People, and far from the Church: Yerely valew 10 l. 12 s. 2 d. ob.'

There was a Chapel in this Parish, but where I find not; by K. Edward the Sixth's Grant of the lands belonging thereto, it seems to have been also for the use of the Chantry Priest: The contents of the Grant were, The site of the Chapel of Raleigh; four acres of arable and pasture in Estwood belonging to that Chantry; messuages and lands called Potters, alias Potters Hoghouse, Holmans, Bromsons, Emeris-mead, Yongs, Mountlovers, Gromvynes-grove, and other messuages, with appertenances. K. Edward VI. granted them in 1549 to Edward Bury, and his heirs (e).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1130 l.

lies between Raley and the Thames.

The name seems to be derived from the Saxon words, Head, high, raised, and ley pasture.

It hath borne the name of Hadley ad Castrum, or Hadley-Castle, ever since the reign of K. Henry III. when Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, with the King's leave [U], built a Castle here. The ruins of it still extant shew its ancient grandeur. It is a little mile south from the Church, and about three quarters of a mile from the road, facing the Channel, or Canvey island. As it is situated on the brow of a steep Hill, there is from thence a delightful prospect a-cross the Thames into Kent. It is built of stone, almost of an oval form: The entrance is at the north-west corner, between two Towers; and there are also two Towers at the south-east and north-east corners, which are embattled, and have loop-holes on the sides. The walls in the bottom of the Towers are nine feet thick, and the rest five feet. And, on the north and south sides, the Walls are strengthened with buttresses. The cement, or mortar, which is almost as hard as the stones themselves, hath in it a mixture of shells of Sea-fish &c. At the entrance, the earth lying very high near the Towers, a very deep ditch is cut behind them, which runs along the north side of the Castle. The ruins are now greatly over-grown with bushes (p).

There was a Park belonging to this Castle, or else to Hadley-bury, which lyes near. And lands were held by the Serjeancy of keeping up the fences and lodges of this Castle, as well as those of Reyle and Thunderfle Castles (g).

As Hadley is not mentioned in Domesday-book, nor in the Red Book of the Exchequer, it was most probably comprehended in Raley; and then Raley parish extended to the Ray or Water of Hadley.

The large Park belonging to the Honor of Raley might take up the greatest part of what is now Hadley, except the Forest and Waste Ground that belonged thereto.

Hadley going along with the Maner and Honor of Raley, which, as we have seen above, belonged to Suene; his grandson Henry de Effene forfeited both to the Crown, through his cowardise.

K. Henry granted it with Raley, and we presume as a part of it, to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent: who built the Castle here. From that time it is mentioned in records as the Castle and Park of Hadley, and not for a while as a Maner.

Upon Hubert's disgrace, in 1232, this estate was again seized by the Crown: and granted at different times to the greatest Persons.

By an Inquest taken, in 1250, of what lands and tenements appertained to the Castle of Hadleigh, it was found, that there were belonging to this Castle 140 acres of arable ground; and pasture for 180 sheep; and a water-mill (b).

In 1268, K. Henry III. committed the government of this Castle to Richard de Thany (i). [Concerning this very considerable Family of Tany, or Thany, see above, p. 179, and in the other Volume, p. 79. 487.]

Hugh le Parker of this parish held four shillings rent here, in 1284, by the Serjeancy of keeping the Park of Haddeleggh (k) [W].

In 1299, K. Edward I. assigned to his Queen Margaret the Castle, village, and Park of Haddeleggh, with appertenances, then valued at 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. (l).

In 1327, Roger de Estwyke, and Alice his wife had 12 acres of land in this parish, together with the Custody of the Park, of the inheritance of the said Alice, and of the gift of Geoffrey de Pertico and Maud his wife, formerly lords of the Castle and village of Hadley: Which land and custody were holden of the King as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the service of keeping the Park aforesaid (m).

Albrey de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 23 April 1400, held for his life, of the gift of K. Richard II. the Castle and Maner of Hadlye, with appertenances, and a water-mill, in capite; reversion of the same to the King and his heirs (n).

Edmund Plantagenet, Duke of York, had the premises at the time of his decease 1 August 1402, but only for life (o).

In 1452, K. Henry VI. granted to his uterine brother Edmund of Hadham, Earl of Richmond, the Castle, and Lordship, or Maner, of Hadley, with all letes, courts, rents, services, mills, fisheries, and other appertenances whatsoever; the Advowson of the Church; and a Market here on Wednesday in every week; and the return of all writs and precepts, and executions on the same (p).

After that, They remained in the Crown, till K. Henry VIII. granted them in 1539, to the Lady Anne of Cleve, his forsaken Queen, for her maintenance (q).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. gave the Maner and Park of Hadleigh ad Castrum; and the farm there called Hadleigh, with a separate Fishery, and the Advowson of the Church, to Richard Lord Ricke, and his heirs; To hold by the 40th part of a knight's fee. And, in 1553, he got from the same King the following Marshes in this parish, Les Fleets, Rushhalls or the Priors-marsh, and Clerkenwike or the Abbots marsh; and all other messuages, lands, &c. in the tenure of Edward Strangman; to hold in socage (r). From him they passed to his noble Descendents the Earls of Warwick, as Rochford, Raley, Lees Priory &c. [See above, p. 275. and in the other Volume, p. 101, 102. 418, 419.]

Upon the partition of the Warwick estates between the six coheirs, This fell to the share of Henry St. John, Esq; afterwards a Baronet, and Viscount St. John. See under Rochford. His eldest son—Henry, Viscount Bolingbroke, sold this estate to

Sir Francis St. John, of Longthorp in Northamptonshire Bart. whose daughter and coheir, Mary, brought it in marriage to her husband

Sir John Bernard, of Brampton in Huntingdonshire Bart. He was succeeded by his son—Sir Robert Bernard, Bart. Knight of the Shire for the County of Huntingdon.

Here formerly resided a Family of good account, surnamed Strangman. They had lands in this parish, and maners at Paglesham, Hawkswell, and other parts of this County. William, the first that we meet with, lived in the reign of K. Edward III. His successors were—William, who dyed in 1410.—Richard in 1480.—William, married Alice, daughter and heir of Thomas Hooe, and had by her—John, who by . . . Fauntby, his wife, had—John, that married . . . daughter and heir of . . . Sandford, and had by her three sons, John; Thomas, of Rayley; and Edward: and Anne wife of Henry Boad. Edward had a son Francis, who dyed 6 August 1557 [X], leaving 6 daughters, Mary wife of John Cooke; Jane wife of John Blyatt; Philippa wife of Lewis Whetnall; Joane wife of John Bode; Margaret, of John Biggen; and Alice, of John Pilborowe (s).—John Strangman Esq; the eldest son and heir, by Mary his wife, daughter and heir of Robert Ingow, left, William; John; and three daughters.—William Strangman Esq; the eldest son and heir, married, first, . . . daughter of Sir William Kempe; secondly, Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Barnardiston. By the former he had only Thomasine; and by the latter he had Bartholomew; James: Anne, wife of William Latham; and Martha, wife of George Wiseman of Felsted. He dyed 8 Decemb. 1573, leaving—Bartholomew his son and heir, who dyed in 1580, and was succeeded by Robert, and James. This James was a great Collector of Antiquities for this County, to whose diligence and sagacity are owing many discoveries mentioned in this Work. There was a Volume of his writing deposited in the Cottonian Library, relating chiefly to Monasteries [Y].

Mr. Reginald Heber; John Armstrong; and the heirs of the late Mr. John Spurdan, &c. have also lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. James, is of one pace with the Chancel; tyled. The east end of the Chancel is semicircular, as that of Copford. In a spire shingled is one Bell.

This Rectory was all along in the gift of the Crown, till K. Edward VI. granted it to Richard Lord Riche; from whom it descended to his posterity: But hath been sold, and is now in unknown hands.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 405 l.

4. L E E.

This parish is east of Hadley, and the Town lyes in a bottom near the Thames.

It is otherwise written in records, Lega, Legra, Legh, Leighe, Lighe, Lye, Lygh: and is derived from the Saxon leag, or leah, otherwise legh, and ley, signifying The Pasture, or The Place, by way of eminence.

If it was at any time part of Raley, it was parted from it before the Conquest, and possessed by one Freeman: At the time of the Survey it was held by Ranulph Piperell, or Peverell [Z].

Here is but one MANER.

The mansion-house, or Hall, stands near the Church on the top of the Hill, whence is a fine prospect of the Channel; the Town lies below.

Except

Except the entry in Domesday-book, we find nothing upon record concerning this Place till the reign of K. Edward II. and then it was in Apton, of Apton-hall in Canewdon.

In 1316, there was a Fine between Ralph de Cokthorp, Parson of the Church de la Legbe, and Adam Sar, plaintiffs, and John de Apton of Legh, deforc' of the Maner of de la Legh, and of the Advowson of the Church of this parish (t). De Cokthorp, and Sar, I presume were trustees acting for the family of Apeton. John de Arpeton presented to this Church, as Lord of Lega, in 1326. 1329. and 1331 (u). In the old Register of Bishop Baudoke, he is styled de Dippetone. Of the same John de Apetone, lord of the maner de la Legb, John Haddock of this place, who dyed in 1327, held 12 acres with one messuage, and a certain marsh in common with his partners, by the service of 2 s. ob. per ann. and suit at the court of the maner aforesaid (w).

From the year 1337 to 1673, it appears to have been in the same hands as the Maner of Rochford; namely, in the Families of Rochford, Bohun, Boteler, Bullen or Boleyn, and Riche.

Robert Rochford, at the time of his decease in 1337, held jointly with Ifolda, daughter of William Fitz-Warin, the maner of la Legb, and the Advowson of the Church, of Sir John d. Peyton and Elleanor his wife, by the service of 6 lb. of silver per ann.—Sir Thomas Rochford, his son and heir, dyed without issue, and the estate came to the Crown (x).

K. Edward III. in 1340, granted this Maner, with that of Rochford &c. to

William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton; He departed this life in 1360.—Humfrey his son and heir, Earl of Hereford, Effex, and Northampton, Baron of Brecknock, and High Constable of England, at the time of his decease 17 January 1372, had the reversion of this Maner of Lye, which Laurence Ware held of him for the term of his life (y). By Joane his wife, daughter of Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, he left two Daughters, coheirs, Elleanor, married to Thomas of Woodstock sixth son of K. Edward III. Earl of Buckingham, and Duke of Gloucester; and Mary, to Henry Earl of Derby, son of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, afterwards K. Henry IV. What was the share of Thomas of Woodstock, fell to the crown upon his tragical end.

Joane Countess of Hereford, and Northampton, widow of Humfrey de Bohun aforesaid, married to her second husband William de Beauchamp Lord Bergavenny; and surviving him, married to her third husband James Earl of Ormond, whom she outlived, and had by him three sons, James, John, and Thomas. She dyed 7 April 1434. Her eldest son,

James Boteler, 5th Earl of Ormond, presented to this Living in 1451, having been created Earl of Wiltshire 8 July 1449. But being beheaded, 1 May 1461, on account of his attachment to the House of Lancaster; This Estate was confiscated to the Crown.

K. Edward IV. granted it to Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset, his son-in-law, whom his Queen had by Sir John Grey her first husband; and he presented to this Rectory in 1480.

Sir Thomas Boteler, of Ormond, brother to James, petitioned K. Richard III. in 1484, for restitution of the Maners called de Ly alias de la Legh, Rochford, Foulness, and Packletham; but it doth not appear that they were granted him. Upon the accession of K. Henry VII. he was restored to his Estates, and to the title of Earl of Ormond. He left only two Daughters coheirs, Anne wife of Sir James St. Leger; and

Margaret, wife of Sir William Bullen of Blickling in Norfolk; who had by her Sir Thomas Bullen, created Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk, he had George his son, Viscount Rochford, and two daughters, Anne, Queen to K. Henry VIII. and

Mary, who on the beheading her brother and sister became sole Heir to her father. She was first married to William Carey of Devonshire Esq; by whom she had Henry her son and heir, afterward Lord Hunsdon. Her second husband was Sir William Stafford. This Family presented several times to the Rectory (z). [See above under Rochford.]

Henry Lord Hunsdon alienated this estate, as well as Rochford, to Richard Lord Riche; who, at the time of his decease 12 June 1566, held the maner of Ligbe, alias Ligbe-Hall, and the Advowson of the Church (a). It continued in his posterity the Earls of Warwick; and, upon the partition of their estates, it came to

Henry St. John, Esq; afterwards Lord Battersea. Of his son,—Henry Viscount Bolingbroke, it was purchased by

Francis St. John Esq; from whom it descended, as Hadley, to — Sir Francis St. John Bart. His daughter and coheir Mary was married to

Sir John Bernard, Bart. who had this estate, and Hadley, in her right; in which he was succeeded by his son

Sir Robert Bernard, Bart.

A maner, or messuage, in this parish, called Lieth and Triggs, with lands holden of the maner of Leighe-hall, belonged to William Harrys Esq; in 1556. He held also here, a wood and pasture called Burned-oke, and divers lands called Somers, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of South-Church-hall (b).

And John Cock held here, in 1574, lands called Beltons, Jennett Misters, and other messuages and lands, of the maners of Leigh, and Chalkwell (c).

Mr. William Johnson; Robert Austin; David Harwich; Isaac Rolfe; Wilmer Willet; John Spurgeon, &c. have also some lands here.

Charities.

Captain Lawrence Moyer of Milton-Shore in Prittlewell, son of James Moyer of the same place, in commemoration of a deliverance from Shipwreck in Leigh Road, his ship being driven on the flats and sands, gave 100 l. to pay Five pounds per ann. for ever to the Town of Leigh; viz. to Twenty poor seamens widows on August 6, on which day a Sermon is preached and 20 s. paid for it. This 100 l. was left to the Masters of the Trinity-House, to see it paid, but on their refusal his descendents see it constantly paid.

Mr. James Moyer, who lies buried in this Church, gave fifty pounds to the Poor of this parish.

Sir Samuel Moyer, Bart. erected a Free-school in this Town for instructing Children in the Principles of the Christian Religion.

Here is a Fair on the second Tuesday in May.

5. EASTWOOD lies between the last described parish of Lee, and those of Rochford and Raley. It received that name on account of its situation with respect to the Woods and Parks of Raley and Thundersley.

Suene's father was possessed of this lordship in Edward the Confessor's reign; and at the time of the Survey, it was one of the many Estates Suene had in this County [A].

His grandson, Henry de Essex, forfeited it to the Crown in K. Henry the Second's time, as is more particularly related under Raley.

The first to whom it was granted after that, was a Family which from thence took the surname de Eastwood. For, in 1210 and 1211, Robert de Eastwood held one fee of the Honor of Raleigh (e).

It coming again to the Crown, K. Henry III. granted it in 1226, to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, with the Hundred of Rochford, and Honor of Raley. [See above, p. 275.] Margaret his widow, Countess of Kent, dyed possessed of it in 1260, and was succeeded by — John de Burgh (f); who, in 1274, granted it to

K. Edward I. as is related above under Raley (g).

The Church, dedicated to St. Clement, is pleasantly situated on the top of an hill, facing the Channel called Lee-road. It is spacious; the Church and Chancel consisting of a body, and north and south aisles, all tiled. In the Tower, which is pretty lofty, are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was from the first appendent to the Maner; and in the gift of the Families of Apeton, and other Lords above-mentioned. Upon the partition of the Warwick estates it came to Daniel Earl of Nottingham; and he gave it, with Prittlewell, to the Bishops of London, in exchange for the Vicarage of Okeham in Rutlandshire within which parish his seat of Burley on the Hill stood; and which Vicarage belonged to the See of London. See Statute 9 of William.

In this Church and Church-yard are more Monumental inscriptions than in all the Hundred besides; and mostly of Sea-faring people; particularly of the Haddock, Whitaker, and Salmon families.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 783 l.

It continued in the Crown till 1340, when K. Edward III. granted it to William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton, and the heirs male of his body. He dyed possessed of it 16 September 1360, as did his son — Humfrey, Earl of Essex, Northampton, &c. 15 January 1372. And leaving only two Daughters, this Estate devolved again to the Crown (b).

In 1380, K. Richard II. gave it to Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life. But, before his decease, which happened 23 April 1400, the same King granted the reversion of it to his uncle, Edmund de Langley, Duke of York, in special tail (i). He had it at the time of his death, which happened 1 August 1402: as had also his son — Edward Duke of York, that was killed at the Battle of Azincourt 25 October 1415. — Philippa, his widow, enjoyed the third part of it till her decease in 1431 (k).

Richard Duke of York, nephew of the last Edward, and father of K. Edward IV. is said to have had it afterwards; by which means it came to the Crown.

There it remained, till K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted the maner of Eastwood-bury, alias Eastwood, to Richard Lord Riche, and his heirs (l). He transmitted it to his descendents, Earls of Warwick: And, by one of the coheiresses of that noble Family, it came to Daniel, Earl of Nottingham, who sold it to Robert Bristow Esq; grandfather of—Robert Bristow, Esq; the present possessor.

EAST-WOOD-BURY, the Maner house, stands near the east end of the Church.

BARROW-HALL,

otherwise named Breg-hall, is another Maner in this parish. The mansion house stands about half a mile north from the Church.

It is called West Barrow-hall in contradistinction to the other Barrow-hall in Great Wakering.

A Family seems to have taken their surname from this place. For Stephen de Berwes held, in 1279, 1 messuage and 80 acres of arable in Rocheford &c. of Sir John de Rocheford (m).

This Sir John de Rocheford held, in 1297, half a fee at Berghes, of Richard Fitz-John (n); justly supposed to be this estate.

Philip Perdriz, of Sutton, who dyed in 1313, held, in Eastwood, a capital messuage, 80 acres of arable, 3 acres of meadow, and 3 acr. of wood, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Reilie, by the service of the eighth part of a knight's fee; and suit at the Hundred of Rocheford and at the Barony of Reyley.

John Heveningham was his heir (o).—Philip de Heveningham, who dyed in 1321, held 1 messuage, 140 acres of arable, 6 acr. of meadow, and 13 s. rent, in Eastwood, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Reyley, by the 6th part of a knight's fee, suit at the Hundred of Rocheford; and suit from month to month at the Court of the Honor of Reyley, &c.—John was his son and heir (p). He was afterwards knighted, and at the time of his decease in 1374, held 2 messuages and a carucate of land in Eastwood, and Sutton, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyley, and one suit at the Court of Reyley from month to month. Joane his widow held the same till her death in 1394.—John, their son, born in 1359, succeeded (q). He dyed in 1425, possessed of this estate, leaving—Sir John Heveningham his son and heir (r); who held this maner of Breghall of the King, as of the Honor of Raylie. [See under Sutton, and Goldhanger.] Departing this life 10 May 1499, he was succeeded by his son—Thomas Heveningham, or Henningham, Esq; then 40, or 50 years old (s).—Sir John Heveningham, who dyed 4 August 1536, held also two messuages, and one carucate of land in Eastwood.—Sir Antony, his son and successor, then aged 29 years, is said to have been possessed at the time of his decease 22 November 1557, of this maner of West Barrow hall, with appertinances, which he held of the Honor aforesaid, by the service of half a knight's fee, and rent of 6 s. 8 d. and 6 d.—Henry was his son (t). But Sir Antony before his death, namely in 1547, had passed this estate by Fine to Richard Smart, of Ipswich; and likewise Flete-Hall in Sutton. This Richard, had both these estates at the time of his death 28 August 1560.—William was his son (u).

Thomas Emery, Gent. who dyed 3 July 1618, held this maner of Barowe-hall, and 230 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and wood in Eastwood, Lee, Hadley, Ashden, Showberry, Hawkwell, Canewdon, and Rochford, of the Honor of Raileigh, by the 40th part of a knight's fee: Also Alford nashe marsh, containing 180 acres, in Wallet island within this parish. He had likewise the maner of Ruffehams, and other lands and tenements in Little Badow, Danbury, &c. [B].—Thomas was his son (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 25.]

Afterwards this Estate was in Mr. Perkins, who resided here. His son sold it in parcels; namely Barrow-hall to Mr. Gilbert Macmordy, of Rochford: and what lay in Wallet, or Wallasea, island, to Mr. Ralph Coker, of Burnham.

Wallasea-island partly belongs to Edward Codd, of Maldon, Gent.

East-wood-Lodge stands on a hill, about two miles west from the Church.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence and All-Saints, consists of a body and two aisles; and the pillars are of the Tuscan order. The Chancel is only of one pace. In the Tower, which hath a Spire shingled, are 4 Bells [C].

This Church is supposed to have been given to the Priory of Prittlewell by its founder Robert son of Suene. At least, they were possessed of it in K. Henry the Second's reign; at which time this Church was only called a Chapel to Prittlewell. However, it soon became a Rectory, presentative by the Prior and Monks of that House. About the year 1390, they procured the Pope by his apostolical authority to appropriate it to their House; But it being done without the King's consent, or the knowledge of the Bishop of the Diocese, they were forced to obtain a license from K. Richard II. in 1394, to appropriate the Churches of Eastwood, and North-Shoebury, to their own use; and, by way of composition with the Bishop of London, to agree, 2 December 1398, to pay him and his successors 6s. 8 d. yearly (x). remained possessed of the Advowson of this Vicarage till their suppression, when it came to the Crown; and hath continued in it ever since.

The great Tithes of this parish belonged to Sir John Spencer, Alderman of London, who dyed 3 March 1609 (y).

The Abbey of St. German de Flay, in the Isle of France, had a portion of Tithe-corn, out of the assarts of the whole fee of Margaret Countess of Kent in this parish. That Abbey gave this portion, in 1246, to the Bishop of London, to dispose of as he pleased: and the Bishop and Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, left them, in 1248, to the Rector of this parish and his successors, in perpetual farm, for 24 s. a year: which was reduced to 20 s. in the reign of K. Edward I. This sum is still paid from the lands anciently belonging to the Countess of Kent in Wallasea-island, lying within this parish. Mr. Perkins, whilst he had that estate, and the owners of it since, have been yearly served with a summons out of the Exchequer to pay this 20 s.

East-wood is rated to the land-tax at 1047l.

6. RAURETH.

This parish is the north-west Corner of this Hundred; bounded on the west by Wicford; by Raley on the south; the river Crouch on the north; and Hockley on the east: and is of considerable extent. Battle-bridge over the river Crouch, is partly in it; and further east is Hull-bridge.

Besides Raureth, and Rawreth, the name of it is written in records Ragel, Raree, Raurehith, Raurere, Ragerin. From whence it is derived cannot be easily determined. The Saxon word Raa signifies a roe-buck, and wild-goat; pape, small roots; papan, to roar, or bray: but how applicable to this place I do not perceive: As for the latter part of the word, it is from hæð, heath, contracted to eth. It might possibly be derived from Ravengar, the Saxon owner of Beches, qu. Ravengar's-heath.

In Domesday-book no mention occurs of Raureth, from whence some have been led to imagine, that it was erected into a Maner after the general Survey, by Odo bishop of Bayeux. He had lands on both sides, at Wicford, and Beches; and we find several inferior lords mentioned in Domesday-book under Wicford, who must have held of Odo, because the rest are expressly said to hold of Suene. The lands of these inferior lords it is probable he made bold with, as we have seen him do in many places. For he was a man eminent in the practice of Partition, which is, adding to the stock of the great ones by robbing the little ones. He, or whoever else erected this Maner, chose for some reason to transfer his power hither, perhaps from the neighbourhood of Suene, two such Great Men not having elbow-room enough in the same Parish of Wicford.

Whensoever it was erected, we find it distinct in K. John's reign; who granted it to Hugh de Bernevall, by the name of 15l. in land. And — Henry de Barnevall had free warren in Ragerin, anno 1253 (a).

So likewise had William Sanndon, the King's Cook, in 1266 (b).

RAURETH-HALL,

the Maner-house, is about three quarters of a mile south-east from the Church.

William Gofford, or Gifford, in 1284, held one fee in Raree of the King, in capite, of the Barony of Rayleigh (c). — Gundred, widow of Robert Gifford, at the time of her decease in 1299, held 120 acres of arable, 4 acr. of meadow, 2 of wood, and 8 s. rent, in the vill of Raurere, of the King as of his Honor of Reyle, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and was succeeded by her son — Robert (d). [Concerning this Gifford family, see more under Bures Gifford, above, p. 258.]

K. Richard II. in 1385, confirmed to John Doreward, son of William, and to Catharine his wife, in general tail, remainder to the said John, this maner of Raureth with appertenance, to hold of the King by knight's service [E]. The Doreward family was possessed of this maner before that year; for Infemia de la Beche held the other maner here partly of William Doreward, in 1361 (e). John Doreward, abovesaid, at the time of his decease, 12 November 1420, held the maner of Raureth-Hall of the King, in capite, by the service of one knight's fee; and two tenements called Dela-mares, and Borells, with 200 acres of land belonging to them in that village; Borells took its name from William Borel, attainted for felony in 1352, who held a garden, and one croft of land containing three acres of arable, in Wickford, called Westernest-Croft of the fee of Sandones in Raureth, by the service of 2 s. per ann. (f). — John Doreward Esq; succeeded his father; and by his marriage with Blanch, eldest daughter of Sir William de Coggeshall, obtained a considerable addition to his estate. He was Speaker of the House of Commons in 1413, and departed this life in 1462. or 1465. leaving four sons, and one daughter. — John, his eldest son had this estate after him; and dying in 1476, was succeeded by his son — John, who dyed in 1480, without issue: Whereupon his uncle — William Doreward Esq; inherited. He had a son named — John, who at his death, in 1495, left no issue [F]: — and a daughter

Elizabeth, married to Thomas Fotheringbay, Esq; These had three daughters, that became coheirs to the Dorewards Estates; namely, Margaret, wife of William Beaupre; Elena, first wife of Henry Thursby Esq; and next of Thomas Paleman Esqrs. and Christian, wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (g). [For a more particular account of the Doreward family, see in the other Volume, p. 147. 192. 384, 385.]

Margaret Beaupre, the eldest daughter, is recorded to hold this maner at the time of her decease 10 February, 1513, and — Edward Beaupre was her heir (h).

But this maner seems to have been parcelled out. For Elena, and her second husband Thomas Paleman Esq; held a moiety of this maner in 1519, Christian, the youngest sister dying without issue (i).

Andrew Edmonds Esq; at the time of his decease 23 June 1523, held also a moiety of this maner. — Christopher, his son and heir was but a year and a half old (k).

Of Mr. John Edmonds, or his executors, this moiety was purchased, in 1525, by St. John's College in Cambridge, with money left by Mr. Hugh Ashton a private founder [G].

How any part of this estate came to the Crown, we do not find. But K. Henry VIII. in 1525, granted the maner of Rawreth, among many others, to Cardinal Wolfey (l), upon whose præmunire, it reverted to the Crown. Though this is called in the grant, The Maner, it could be only a moiety.

George White of Hutton, Esq; was possessed of this moiety, at the time of his decease 15 June 1584. — Richard was his son and heir (m). This moiety was purchased some years ago, for the use of private foundations, by St. John's College in Cambridge, which hath now the whole Maner.

The Maner of BECHES

lies near the river Crouch. The mansion house is about a mile north-east from the Church, between Battle-bridge and Hull-bridge: It is moated round, and part of it seems very ancient.

Bacheneia, from whence Beches came to be formed, was the name it bore at the time of the Survey: It then belonged to Odo, and before him to one Ravengar [H].

From that time we have no account of this maner till the reign of K. Edward III. It then belonged to a Family surnamed De la Beche. Edmund de la Beche married Eufemia, one of the two daughters and coheirs of Edmund Comyn. She had by him a son that dyed without issue, and a daughter Elizabeth. After his decease, she was remarried to John de Walkefare, who, at the time of his decease, in 1345, held a certain tenement called La Beche in Raurethe, of Richard le Chamberleyne, by the service of 7 d. per ann. (*). Eufemia herself, at the time of her decease, in 1361, held 1 messuage, 140 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 10 of wood in Raurethe, of Henry de Coggeshall, William Doreward, Roger Hendeman, Hugh de Peyton, and Richard by the yearly rent of 12 s. 6 d.

Elizabeth abovesaid, her daughter and heir, was then wife of Richard Elmerugge. The next year they settled it by fine (†). See in the other Volume, p. 315. 624.

John Baud Esq; mentioned above under Raley, p. 275. and in the other Volume, p. 488. held this estate by the law, or custom, of England, after the death of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Sir William Berland [I]. He dyed in 1422 (n), — William his son succeeded him.

It was afterwards in William, fifth son of Sir

It was undoubtedly for this purchase that the following Pardon of Alienation was granted. Rex 4 Julii concessit Pardonem alienationis Johanni Smyth Clerico, & Rogero Ashe Clerico, pro acquisitione Medietatis Manerii de Rawreth, ac medietatis 50 acrarum prati, 200 acrarum pasturæ, 200 acrarum bosci, 200 acrarum jampn' & bruer' & 10 l. redditus in Rawreth, Ronewell, Reyley, &c. [I] The site of this maner, and these several lands were held of John Retour, in socage; 20 acres in Perynfeld, 42 acr' in Tweypettefeld, 20 acr' in Bradfeld, 2 and a half in le Brook, 21 in the Midlefeld, 12 in the feild towards the Fanne, 15 in Stonydowne, 80 acr' of wood, and 4 marks and 2 shillings rent of assise; besides 10 acr' in Stitledland, in this parish; and Ekkmed here and in Raley: and 98 acres in Hokkele &c. Inquis. 1 Hen. VI.

John Tyrell, of Heron, by Alice Coggeshall above-mentioned, p. 208. We do not find the time of his death. He married two wives, namely Anne, daughter of William Fitz-Simon; and Philippa, daughter of John Thornbury. By the first he had, John; and by the second, Jasper.—John, the eldest son and heir, held this maner of Beches, with a certain rent in Rawreth and Thundersley, called Colman-rent, of the Honor of Raley: He had also the maners of North-Bemflet, and Scotts in Canewdon; and divers lands in Hockley. By Catharine his wife, daughter of John Walden, Alderman of London, he had two sons, Edward, and William: Departing this life 25 October 1494, he was succeeded by his eldest son—Edward, then 18 years old (o). He married Alice Clovill [K], but dying 16 June 1541 without issue, he was succeeded by his brother—William Tyrell, Esq; then above 54 years old; who had to wife Elizabeth daughter of William Cromer of Kent: but he dying 28 September 1543, also without issue male [L].—Edward, or Edmund Tyrell, Esq; son of his uncle Jasper above-mentioned, by Anne, daughter of . . . Goring, inherited this and the rest of the Estates (p), among the rest, pastures called Stonedon, and Styfted, in this parish; Beaches wood in Hockley and Rayley; and lands called Gowles and Russells in Leigh &c. He dyed 8 November 1576, and was buried in the south aisle of this Church, with a monument. Having married Susan, daughter of . . . Cooke of Geddy-hall, he had by her four daughters; Mary, wife of John Church; Margaret, wife of John Daniel; Thomasine, wife of William, second son of Sir Henry Tyrell, remarried to William Playter; and Susan, wife of Charles Cutler (q). See above, p. 204.]

This maner belonged next to Thomas White, D. D. the munificent Founder of Sion College in London; who settled it upon that foundation, in which hath continued ever since. He dyed 1 March 1623-4 (r).

BEKE-HALL is mentioned as a maner in this parish. It is on the left hand side of the road from Raley to Wicford.

The first mention we find of it is in 1526, when a Fine passed between John Baker, John Wyfeman, and others, plaintiffs, and John Sandys and Elizabeth his wife deforc' of the maner of Beke-hall, with appertenances, one messuage, 40 acres of arable, 60 of pasture, 10 of meadow, and 5 of arable, in Rawreth and Thundersley, the right of Richard Wyfeman.

Sir Edward Boteler, Kt. at the time of his decease, 1 November 1627, held this maner called Beake-hall, with appertenances, of George Foster, by fealty only (s).

TRINDEHAY is another maner, or hamlet, in this parish. In 1210, and 1211, Robert de Trindeho held one knight's fee of the Honor of Raley, that had been Henry de Essex's (t). A view of frank pledge was here in the reign of K. Edward I.

In 1300 Robert Giffard, of Bures, enfeoffed Peter Savery, and Margery his wife, in this maner of Trindehey, described as one messuage, with a close, 120 acres of arable, 3 acr. of meadow, 1 of pasture, 1 of wood, and 17 s. 10 d. ob. rent, holden of the King in capite, of the Honor of Reylie, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee; payment of 2 s. 6 d. a year to the King for hidage; and suit at the foresaid Honor, and at the Court of Reylie. And, in 1305, John de Arderne enfeoffed the same Peter in 10 acres of wood in Reylie, belonging to this messuage (u). He dyed in 1305, leaving—William Savery his son and heir.

Roger Darcy Esq; of St. Clere's in Danbury, held this maner of Tyndhay at the time of his decease 3 September 1508.—Thomas was his son and heir (w). [See under Canewdon, and in the other Volume, p. 24. 28.]

Robert Trapps held also this maner of Tryndas, in 1571, then lett for 20 l. a year clear.—Robert was his son and successor (x). Through whose hands it hath since passed we do not find.

In Bp. Andrew's funeral sermon, at the end of his Works, it is said, That 'he was born 'in London of honest and godly parents; who, 'besides his breeding in learning, left him a 'sufficient Patrimony and Inheritance, which 'descended to his heir, at Rawreth in Essex.' What that was I have not been able to discover.

Chichester's-hall, a farm in this parish, belongs to Thomas White, Gent.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, hath a south aisle belonging to the lord of Beches maner, who is to keep it in repair; the Chancel is tiled, the Church leaded. In the Tower are two Bells.

This Rectory was in the gift of Prittlewell Priory, to whom it was undoubtedly given by their founder Robert de Essex; till it was seized for belonging to a Priory alien, that of Lewes. But those Priories being naturalized by statute 47 Edw. III. the Priory recovered this Advowson: and it continued in them till the suppression of Monasteries, when it came to the Crown.

K. Edward VI. 28 March 1550, granted the Advowson of this Rectory to Richard Fermor (y). See in the other Volume, p. 585. It was obtained next by Dr. Lancelot Andrews, scholar, and afterwards fellow, and master of Pembroke-hall in Cambridge, and bishop of Winchester, who gave it to the Master and Fellows of that Hall; besides 1000 l. for founding two Fellowships. The patronage hath remained in them ever since.

Raureth parish is rated to the land-tax at 431 l. and Raureth-hamlet at 132 l. besides the Geldables mentioned under Wicford.

lies east of Raureth. In records it is divided into Great and Little Hockley; and is written these other different ways, Hacheleia, Hocheleia, Hockele, Hokkele, Hokeley, &c. Which name seems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Hoc, mallows, and ley, pasture.

It is also called Hocklie super montem, on account of its high situation.

Berking Nunnery had, before and after the Conquest, the capital Maner in this parish. Robert son of Wimarc had another, which belonged at the time of the Survey to Suene; with another here. And William de Warenn held then a parcel of land, that had been the property of a Freeman. So that here were then three Maners; parcelled out afterwards into four or five; namely, 1. The Maner of Hockley; and, subordinate to it, 2. . . . the maner of Blunts; and 3. . . . that of Bawdwyns. 4. Lower Hockley-hall. 5. The maner of Plumberow.

H O C K L E Y - H A L L,

the maner-house of the first, stands on the south side of the Church, on high ground.

This estate continued in the Abbey of Berking [M] till the Suppression, when it came to the Crown. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell; upon whose attainder reverting to the Crown, Qu. Mary, 4 July 1557, granted it to

Sir Richard Riche (z). And, in his posterity, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the death of Charles Earl of Warwick in 1673, when it was allotted to one of the coheirs; namely Daniel, Earl of Nottingham; who sold it to Robert Bristow Esq; and from him it hath descended to—Robert Bristow Esq; the present owner.

Under this were two Estates, called also Maners, namely, Blounts, and Bawdwyns, both probably named from some ancient occupiers: One of them, but it does not appear which, might be Bursigni's, which was holden under the Abbess.

B L O U N T S.

The mansion house of this is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

We find it first mentioned in 1453, when Richard Pakelesham, lord of Pakelesham-hall, held the maner of Bluntes in Great Hokkele, of the Abbot of Berking (a). See under Pakelesham.

James Baker Esq; who dyed 6 January 1569, held this messuage with 130 acres of land called Blunts, by the yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. and 15 acres called Palmers, by the rent of 2 s. a year; all of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Hockley, by fealty, and suit of court.—Henry Baker Esq; his son and heir, held the same at the time of his decease, 8 April 1611, and left three Daughters coheirs (b). [See above, under Bures Gifford.]

B A W D E W Y N S.

The mansion house lyes in a bottom by Hullbridge, above a mile north of the Church.

Of this the name first occurs in 1500, when Robert Ingoe Gent. who had lands also at Hawkswell, held one messuage and lands called Bawdwyns in Hockley of the Abbess of Berking; by fealty, and yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d.

Mary, wife of John Strangman of Hadley, was his heir (c).—William Strangman Esq; their son, held the maner or messuage called Bawdwyns, containing 100 acres of arable, and as many of marsh, of the Lord Rich, as of his Maner of Hockley, by fealty, and yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. worth 12 l. a year.—Bartholomew his son and heir, left—Robert Strangman Esq; and James (d). [See above, under Hadley, p. 280.]

Dudley Fortescue Esq; dyed 12 Septemb. 1604, possessed of this messuage called Bawdens, alias Bawdwins, in Hockley, leaving—Daniel, his son, aged 14 years (e).

It belonged afterwards to—Richard Hopper and then to Thomas Holt, Esq; and now to his nephew Thomas White Gent.

Suene's grandson, Henry de Essex, through his cowardice forfeited his Estates to the Crown, as I have frequently observed, and This among the rest.

Who had it first after that, I do not find; unless it was John de Kokeham. For he held, in 1274, of Amabilia, wife of Thomas Fitz-Aucher, 360 acres of arable and marsh in Hokele, in fee-farm, by the service of 6 l. and 40 s. rent of assise, and suit at the Hundred-court of Rochford, and 18 d. yearly for hidage.—Laurence de Hardell was his cousin and next heir. He held here 30 acres of arable of John de Sandon; by the service of a clove gilliflower; and of Ralph de Estling, 180 acres of arable, 3 acr. of meadow, and 10 of pasture, in Hockle, by a fee-farm of 9 marks — Nicolas was his son (f).

Johanna Ingaldsthorpe, at the time of her decease, 21 June 1495, held this maner of Hokeley, of the King by the service of the 7th part of a knight's fee. Isabella her only daughter and heir that was dead before her, left five daughters, who were her coheirs (g). See above, p. 77, 78.

Elizabeth Scrope, married first to Thomas Lord Scrope, and afterwards to Sir Henry Wentworth, had this estate at the time of her decease 30 September 1515. Her heirs were her two sisters Margaret Mortimer, and Lucy Browne; and Anne wife of Adrian Fortescue, and John Huddleston (b).

This was one of the Estates which K. Henry VIII. assigned to his cast-off Qu. Anne of Cleve for her maintenance (i).

Sometime ago it belonged to . . . Thickness, and came among his five daughters, one of whom was married to the Rev. Mr. Hotchins of Romford.

It belongs now to Robert Bristow Esq;

The Maner of PLUMBEROW, otherwise named Plumbergh, and Little Hockley, is another Maner, and a considerable Hamlet or Village in the southern part of this parish, Plumberow-hall stands on the left hand side of the road leading from Rochford to this Church: and is commonly stiled Plumberow-mount, being situated on a rising ground.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, these lands belonged to Robert son of Wimarc, and to one Freeman: At the time of the Survey, they were held by Suene, and William de Warenn [O].

An ancient family, residing here, took from hence the surname de Plumberg. In 1210 and 1211, Thomas de Plumberg held two fees in Plumberg and Sutton, of the Honor of Raley (k). These two fees comprehended 410 acres of arable, 10 s. rent of assise, 2 marshes, 8 acres of wood; besides which, he held at the time of his decease in 1247, the marshes of Great-Rugeward, de Beken, and Lovedon, and the wood of Langleigh; — Laurence his son and heir, at the time of his decease in 1253, held in the vill of Plumbergh, of the heirs of William de Schobery, 80 acres of arable, and 12 s. 4 d. rent of assise; of the fee of Richard de Riely, 110 acres, and 3 s. 6 d. rent of assise; and of the King, in capite, 180 acres: wherein he was succeeded by his brother Thomas's son — John de Plumbergh (l).

John de Stodham, who dyed in 1264, besides the maner of Great Sutton, held in the vill of Plumbe 67 acres of arable, and 12 of wood; — Roger, his brother and heir, held the same in 1268; and also half a knight's fee, being 120 acres, in Plumbergh, of Luke de Habindon. — Thomas was his brother and heir (m).

In 1304, William Cosyn and Emma his wife are recorded as holding this Maner. But two years after, John de Stodham enfeoffed

John Abell, and Margaret his wife in this maner of Plumberoe, which was holden of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyley, by the service of one knight's fee, payment of 2 s. to the hidage, and suit at the Hundred of Rochford, and court of Reyley (n). He had three daughters, Joane, Margaret and Catharine.

Joane was married to William Le Vaghan, who, in 1350, had two parts of this maner in her right: and the third part was passed to him by fine in 1357, he being then a knight (o). — Sir Thomas Vaghan, at the time of his decease in 1362, held this maner of Plumbergh, of the King as of the Honor aforesaid, by the service of one knight's fee — Hamo, his son and heir, was then but 44 weeks old. He dyed in 1394, leaving — Alianor, his daughter, 6 years old (p).

In the mean time the maner of Plumb-hall in Rochford Hundred, supposed to be this, was in Reymond Heryng; who, at his death in 1373, left — Robert, his son and heir, a minor, and the King's ward; and he dying in 1384, his sister — Margaret Heryng, then 20 years old, became his heir (q).

Sir John Cutt, sufficiently mentioned under Thaxted in the other Volume, p. 439. held this maner of Little Hockley, at the time of his decease 4 April 1520, wherein he was succeeded by his son—John Cutt Esq; who dyed 1 July 1528 (r). They held it of the King, as of the Honor of Raley.

Next, Edmund Tyrell of Beches Esq; held this maner of Plumberowe with appertenances, in Hockley and Hackwell, of the Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of two knight's fees. Edmund Church his eldest daughter's son, and his three other daughters, were his coheirs (s). See above, p. 286.

It belonged afterwards to George Cheveley, of Roxwell, Gent.

Thomas Sly, Esq; Mr. Charles Phillips; Robert Hurst; John Stonard; William Webb; &c. have also some lands here.

An Alms-house for two dwellers stands near a house called Whitebreads, but hath no endowment.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, stands on a hill, the most conspicuous part of the parish. It consists of a body, and a north aisle, between which are pillars of the Tuscan order. The Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. In the Tower, which is octogon, and topped with a shingled Spire, are 4 Bells.

This Church belonged to Berking-Abbey, and they presented to it as a Rectory till about 1384; when the great tithes being appropriated to them, they presented to it as a Vicarage, and continued to do so till their suppression; and then both Rectory and Vicarage came to the Crown. Decemb. 22, 1606, K. James I. granted the great Tithes to Edmund Newport, and others, to hold of the maner of Greenwich (t). Soon after, the Advowson of the Vicarage was given to Wadham-College in Oxford, who first presented in 1619.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 962 l.

8. HAWKSWELL

lies between Hockley and Rochford. The name of it is otherwise written in records Hacwell, Hachewell, Hackwell, Hechwell, Heckwell, Hawkewell, Hawkeswell: derived most probably from the two words Hawk, and well, or spring.

Ulmar, a freeman, in Edward the Confessor's reign was possessed of this parish; which, at the time of the Survey, Eudo, and his under-tenant Pirot, held: and Suene had also lands here, which were contiguous to his maners of Rochford, or Hockley [P].

In this parish are now two Maners. 1. The maner of Hawkswell. 2. . . . that of Clements.

HAWKSWELL-HALL,

the maner-house of the first, stands near the west end of the Church.

Pirot's name and successors continued at this place as low as the year 1340. For, in that year, when an Estimate was taken of the knight's fees belonging to the Honor of Reylegh; Ralph Perot held a moiety of the maner of Hakewell by the service of one knight's fee (u).

Sir Robert de Bayouse presented to this Living in 1323, and Sir Richard in 1330, but no other proof of their having lands here is seen.

Sir John de Coggeshall, who dyed in 1360, held the maner of Hakewell of the King of the Honor of Reylegh.—Henry, his son, departing this life in 1375, was succeeded by his son—Sir William de Coggeshall (w), who dyed in the beginning of K. Henry the Sixth's reign, leaving four daughters coheirs, Blanch, Alice, Margarer, and Maud. [See above, p. 263. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 373. falsely printed 371.]

Blanch the eldest daughter, brought this estate in marriage to John Doreward, of Bocking Esq; She dyed in 1460, and he 30 January 1462, or 1465. Their eldest son and heir—John, was succeeded by his son—John Doreward Esq; who at the time of his decease in 1480, held the maner of Hakewell, with the advowson of the Church, of Thomas Bouchier, Cardinal, and Archbishop of York, and his joint feoffees. Having no issue, he was succeeded by his uncle—William Doreward Esq; (x) that had a son John, and Eli- zabeth wife of Thomas Fotheringhay Esq;—John the son and heir, held this maner of the King as of the Honor aforesaid, in fealty, and by the yearly rent of 2s. but dyed in 1495, without issue; whereupon the three daughters of his sifter

Elizabeth Fotheringhay inherited the large estates of the Doreward family. They were, Margaret wife of Richard Beaupre; Elen wife of Henry Thursbie; and Christian, of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (y). [See above, p. 284. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 385.]

Margaret, widow of the last John Doreward, was remarried to John Hobart Esq; who presented to this living in 1502, and seems to have enjoyed the maner in her right (z).

But, for want of male heirs, it fell to the Crown, and was granted to Thomas Boteler Earl of Ormond, who presented to the Rectory in 1506; and dyed 8 August 1515. From Margaret, one of his daughters and coheirs, wife of Sir William Bullen, it descended to her son,

Sir Thomas Bullen, Viscount Rochford, and Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, who dyed in 1538, [of whom see a more particular account above, p. 270.]

Mary, his then only surviving child, was married first to William Carey Esq; and afterwards to Sir William Stafford. They jointly conveyed this Maner, by license dated 16 April 1541, to William Nevill (a).

It was afterwards in Richard Lord Rich, and descended to his successors co-heirs, one of which was wife to

Daniel Earl of Nottingham, who sold both maner, demesnes, and advowson, to the grandfather of Robert Bristow Esq; present owner.

The Maner of CLEMENTS, took its name from a Family surnamed Clement, to which it belonged.

The mansion house stands half a mile west from the Church.

In 1440, Philip Clement, enfeoffed in this estate Robert Darcy Esq; and John Breton, who granted the reversion, after the said Philip's death, to Henry Fylongley and others (b). The daughter and heir of Philip Clement was married to John Ingowe, who with her had this estate.—Nicolas Ingowe his son and heir, was father of —Robert: that dyed 8 December 1500, and held this maner of Clements, with appertenances, and messuages in Hawkwell; called Wallfletes, Chippyram, Adgors, and Fowlers, of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the rent of 2 s. 4 d. together with Bawdewyns in Hockley, and several other estates (c) [2]. He married Johanna, daughter of Richard Durward of Berking; and had by her Mary Ingow his daughter and heir, wife of John Strangman of Hadley-Castle, Esq; to whom she brought this estate. They had two sons, and three daughters.—William Strangman Esq; the eldest son and heir [R] dyed 8 December 1573, as did his son — Bartholemew the last day of February 1580. They both held a moiety of this Maner of the Lord Hunsdon as of his maner of Raleigh. [For a more particular account of this Family, see above, p. 280.]

In 1562, the maner of Clements with appertenances in Hackwell, and 11 acres of arable, and 11 acres of meadow in North Shoebury, parcel of the maner of Barbers, were granted to Ralph Wiseman Esq; and others (e).

Dudley Fortescue Esq; who dyed 12 September 1604, held this maner with appertenances, and divers lands, services, and hereditaments thereto belonging, in this parish, Hockley, Rochford, Affingdon, Canewdon, and Packlesham: and Wallfletes and Chibbornes, containing 54 acres, &c.—Daniel was his son and heir (f).

This estate came afterwards by purchase into the noble Family of Rich Earls of Warwick: And of their coheirs it was purchased by Richard Hopper, of Raley Esq; His only daughter and heir, Pentecoste, brought it in marriage to her husband Ezekiel Hall of Fenchurch-street London, merchant. She had by him three sons, Ezekiel, John, Richard; and two daughters, Pentecoste, and Hannah. After their mother's decease, they jointly sold this estate to

Thomas Holt Esq; who dyed 2 February 1745-6. It belongs now to his nephew, Thomas White, Gent. who hath besides in this Hundred, the maner of Butlers in Shopland and Sutton; Bawdewyns in Hockley; Chichesters-hall in Raureth; Hally-tree house in Raley, &c.

Mr. Malden Laswell hath also some lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a little wooden belfrey, with a spire shingled, are 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Hawkswell-hall. It was united to the neighbouring one of Affingdon in 1429; but separated again from it on or before the year 1457.

Hawkswell parish is rated to the land-tax at 340l.

SUTTON.

This parish lies south south-east from Hawkswell and Rochford; and may upon that account have received its name of Sutton, quasi South-town; as might also the neighbouring parish of South-Church, with respect to some other Church.

This is called Great Sutton, in opposition to Sutton in Prittlewell, styled otherwise Little Sutton, and Temple Sutton.

In Edward the Confessor's reign the lands in this parish belonged to two Freemen, and to Robert the son of Wimarc: At the time of the Survey, they were held by Suene, whose under-tenant for part was Ascelin, and for the other part Aluid, an English-woman; and one Roger.

is what was holden by Ascelin [S]. The mansion house stands near the east end of the Church.

Sir Hamond de Sotton, who lived in Edward the 1st's reign, seems to have had his surname from this place [T].

It was very early in the Plumbergh Family, that had also the maner of Plumberow in Hockley. In 1210 and 1211, Thomas de Plumbergh held at Sutton and Plumbergh two knights fees of the Honor of Raleigh: They contained 410 acres of arable, 10 s. rent of assise, 2 marshes, and 8 acres of wood. He dyed in 1247.—Laurence, his son and heir, held of the King in ca. in the vill of Sutton, 280 acres of arable, 20 of wood, and 12 s. rent of assise; and dying in 1253, was succeeded by his brother Thomas's son—John de Plumbergh (g). This estate was next in the Stodham Family.

John de Stodham, at the time of his decease in 1264, held of the King in ca. in Great Sutton, 1 messuage, 119 acres of arable, 6 of wood, 47 s. 6d. rent of assise, with the Advowson of this Church.—Roger his brother and heir, held also this maner of Sutton, at the time of his decease in 1268, as did his brother—Thomas de Stodham in 1285 (h).

In 1304, William Cofyn, of London, and Emma his wife held the maner of Great Sutton, and the Advowson of the Church, of the King, of the Barony of Reiley, by the service of one knight's fee, and suit at the Court of Reiley, and at the Hundred of Rochford. He had also Plumberwe-hall (i).—Peter Cofyn, probably his son, who dyed in 1334, held this maner of Qu. Philippa, by knight's service.—Henry, his son, then aged 16, held the same at the time of his decease in 1362 (k).—William, his son and successor, held, jointly with his wife Joane, this maner and advowson in 1381, when he dyed: and—William is set down as his son and heir. But he dyed young, for when the said Joane departed this life in 1397, Rose was found to be her only daughter and heir (l). She was married to Thomas Flemyng Esq; of Flemyngs in Runwell, [See in the other Volume, p. 42.] who held this maner and advowson in her right; and dying in 1425, was succeeded by his son—Sir Thomas Flemyng, then 24 years old. He held, jointly with his wife Margaret, the premisses, at the time of his decease in 1464, leaving—John, his son and heir, aged 15 years (m): He dyed on or about 1476, without issue; and his three Sisters, Constantia, Blanch, and Ann were his coheirs. Whether any of them was married to William Covert I do not find: But this Maner was now parcelled out.

William Covert, who dyed 20 September 1494, held the third part of the maner of Sutton, divided into three parts.—John, his son and heir was then 22 years old (n).—George Covert Gent. son I believe of John, presented to this living in 1536, and 1538, and had the maner of Little Sutton in 1556 (o). He, and John Biliney, had license, 11 April 1562, to alienate this third part of the maner, and of the advowson of the Church, to Richard Lord Ricbe: who dyed possessed of them, 12 June 1566 (p).

In the mean time, the two other parts of this maner belonged to John Barrett, of Belhouse Esq; For, at the time of his decease, 4 October 1526, he held two parts of the maner of Great Sutton, with appertenances, and 6 messuages, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, and 40 s. rent divided into three parts, in Great and Little Sutton, and Prittwell; and the Advowson of this Church, of the King, in ca. by knight's service.—Edward Barrett Esq; his grandson, then 5 years old, was his heir (q). [See above, p. 79.]

William Wyatt Esq; who dyed 20 September 1532, held these Two parts of this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, of the King, of his maner of Rayleigh, then in the King's hands.—Thomas was his son and heir, who left—Frances, that presented to this Church in 1553, as did—Isaac Wyatt in 1575 (r).

Thomas Hobson Gent. was possessed of this whole Maner afterwards; and presented to the Church in 1629. His son—Charles Hobson Esq; sold this estate to William Brittridge of Harrow on the Hill, Esq; who lived in New-House in this parish, which he had purchased of—Aylet. He married three wives. The first was, Martha daughter of Capt. Goodlad of Lee, by whom he had an only son.—Richard, that took to wife Elizabeth daughter of . . . Purcas, widow of . . . Rayner. She presented to this Church in 1665. By her he had three Daughters, Elizabeth, unmarried; Martha, wife of Jehu Hall, Gent. and Anne, wife of the Rev. Thomas Rant, Rector of Sturmere, who had by her, John Rector of this Church, Anne, Elizabeth, Thomas, Richard, and William [U].

Jehu Hall Gent. had, by Martha his wife—Chester-Moore Hall Esq; Counsellor at Law, the present possessor of this estate; and Martha. [See above, p. 254.]

The Maner of FLETE-HALL.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north from this Church, near the Flete or arm of the Sea that comes up towards Rochford.

This belonged to Suene as well as Sutton-hall, and Alvid an English-woman held it under him [W].

About 1210, Serlo de Flete held this by the service of three quarters of a knight's fee, that had been Henry de Essex's.

John Perdriz held at the same time the sixth part of a knight's fee (s).

It commonly went along with the neighbouring Maner of Barrow-hall in East-wood, and was for many years, like that, in the Families of Perdriz, Heveningham, and Smart.

Philip Perdriz, who dyed in 1313, held in Great Sutton, of the Honor of Rayley, 1 messuage, 120 acres of arable, 4 acres of outer marsh, and a wind-mill, by the service of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and suit at the said Honor &c.

John Heveningham was his heir.—Philip de

Heveningham, probably his son, at the time of his decease in 1321, held in Sutton 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, one wind-mill, and 15 s. rent, by the same tenure as above (t).—John, his son and successor, afterwards knighted, held 1 carucate of land in Eastwood and Sutton, at the time of his death in 1374, as did his widow—Joane, who departed this life in 1394 (u). Their son—John Heveningham dyed in 1425, possessed of this maner of Great Sutton; holding it of the Honor of Reyley &c. (w). And his son—Sir John Heveningham, held this maner of Flethall, at the time of his decease 10 May 1499.—Thomas was his son and heir (x).—Sir John Heveningham, held it under the name of two messuages and one carucate of land in Eastwood and Sutton: and his son—Sir Antony held it by the name of the maner of Flete-hall with appertinances, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayley, by the service of one knight's fee, and suit at the Court of that Honor. Sir John dyed 4 August 1536, and Sir Antony 22 November 1557 (y). But the latter had passed by Fine, in 1557, the reversion of this estate to

Richard Smart; who, at the time of his decease, 28 August 1560, held this tenement called Flete-hall, of the Honor of Rayley, by the third part of a knight's fee.—William, his son and heir, was then 30 years old (z).

It belongs now to Mr. Bailey, of Romford.

Bradewerde-marsh in this parish hath belonged to John and Thomas Owdeby, Gent. to Thomas Pyncheon Esq; and to John Pritewell (a).

The CHURCH is small, consisting of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. At the east end there is a Tower of stone, with a Spire shingled, in which are Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Great Sutton.

Sutton parish is rated to the land-tax at 312 l.

lies by the Thames side between Lee and South-Church. It is otherwise written in records Pritwell, Pritwell; and seems to be derived from the Saxon words, Ppæte, pretty, leah, or ley, place, or pasture, and Welle, a well, or spring: There being a fine one at the Priory, which feeds several fish-ponds, and is accounted the best in this Hundred.

The capital Maner in this parish, named Priors, seems to have belonged to Suene before the Conquest, there being no former possessor mentioned in Domesday-book. A freeman had one part, which Tedric Pointel held at the Survey: and the Church of the Holy Trinity at Canterbury had another considerable share, styled Mildentun. From thence arose these several Maners. 1. Priors-hall. 2. The maner of Earls-fee, with Polested-wic. 3. Temple-Sutton; with other inferior and subordinate Maners. 4. Milton-hall. 5. The maner of Chalkwell-Hall.

The Maner of PRIORS, was so named, because it belonged to the Priory in this parish [X], of which we shall give an account a little lower. The site and remains of this Priory, now the Maner-house, are about a quarter of a mile north of the Church.

Robert de Essex, son of Suene, made this maner, with very large demesnes, part of the endowment of the Priory which he founded here. It continued in that House till the suppression, when it came to the Crown.

In 1527, K. Henry VIII. granted to Thomas Audeley, brother of Thomas Lord Chancellor Audeley, and his heirs male, the Priory of Pritewell, alias Pritlewell, the Priors Maner, and the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, to hold in capite, by the 10th part of a knight's fee (b). By license dated 1 April 1551, Thomas Audeley Esq; conveyed the site of this Priory, the Priors maner, the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage; and woods called Horsley wood, Southbirch wood, Westbirch wood, Northbirch wood, and Shobury-grove, here and in Eastwood, Hadley, and Lee, to

Robert Riche, and others: and a Fine passed for the same (c). This Robert was eldest son of Richard Lord Riche, who, for greater security, got also a grant of this estate from the Crown in 1551, and a confirmation of the grant in 1554, and 1557 (d). The father, Richard Lord Riche, appears to have been possessed of this maner, and of all the rest of the premises, at the time of his decease 12 June 1566. And then it came to his son—Robert Lord Riche, aforesaid, who dyed 27 February 1580; and who had also in this parish and Eastwood three farms called Colemans, Deres, and Lashbornes (e). In his posterity, Earls of Warwick it continued till after 1673. And then, upon the partition of the great Estates of the Family, This came to

Daniel Earl of Nottingham. Of him it was purchased by

Mr. Daniel Scratton, then of Billerca, but born at Belsted in Suffolk, who had raised a considerable fortune between the years 1640 and 1660. He bought also Milton-hall, and other estates hereabouts to the amount of about 1000l. a year, which he left to his nephew,—Daniel Scratton, of Bromfield, Gent. This latter dyed without issue, and intestate, 2 June 1744; whereupon a contest arose among his relations, which of them was the next of kin. And at the summer-assizes at Chelmsford in 1745, a verdict was given, by a jury of Gentlemen of this county, in favor of — Daniel Scratton, of Harksted in Suffolk. He is since dead, and the Estate is in his son and Family.

The Maner of EARLS-FEE, with Polsted-wic.

Earls hall, the mansion house, is about a quarter of a mile north of the Church, on the opposite side of the road from Priors. Near it is a large waste called Polsted-Common. This maner belonged for a while to the De Veres, Earls of Oxford, from whence it received the name of Earls-fee. There is another of the same name in Bures-Giffard.

This was part of Suene's demesnes, and of what he had in this Hundred under the title of Puteseia [Y], from whence some derive the name of Polsted &c. (e).

A family furnished de Polestude, or Polsted, had this estate in the reigns of K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. John.

Hugh de Polestude held four fees of the Barony of Raly, in Henry the Second's time, that had been Henry de Essex's: and one fee of the Honor of Hagenet (f). In 1243,—Hugh de Powlested held of the King in ca. as of the Honor of Rayle, the maner of Powlested by the service of four knights fees. And, in 1284, Hugh de Polsted held, of the same Barony, Polsted in Prytevell, by the 4th part of a knight's fee (g).

This estate was divided soon after; one part being in a Family furnished de South-Church, And another part in the noble Family of de Vere, Earls of Oxford, from whom it took the name of Earls-fee.

Richard de Southchurch, who dyed in 1294, held of the King in capite of the Honor of Raylie, by the service of half a knight's fee, in Pritelwell and Sutton, certain lands and tenements called Polsteds-Lands, viz. 160 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 36 s. of rent, and a wind-mill; — Peter his son and heir, dyed in 1309, leaving Alice and Joane his daughters and co-heirs (h).

Hugh de Vere the 4th Earl of Oxford was possessed of the Maner of Earls-Hall, alias Earls-Fee, which is called the Maner of Pritlewell; and he had the grant of a Market and a Fair here (i). He dyed in 1263, leaving—Robert his son and heir, the 5th Earl, who married

Alice, daughter and heir of Gilbert Lord Samford Chamberlain to Queen Elianor, by whom he had—Robert his son and heir, the 6th Earl, and a daughter named

Joane. She was married to William, son and heir of John Earl of Warren and Surrey, who had with her, among other estates, the maner of Prittlewell, which he held of Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford (k) [Z]. He dyed before his father 15 December 1286, leaving his wife great with her son—John de Warren, afterwards Earl of Surrey, born the 30th of June following. His mother Joane departed this life 21 November 1293; and he himself, 30 June 1347, without legitimate issue. This maner he had given, with several other lordships, to his sister and heir

Alice, wife of Edmund Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel; and the grant was confirmed by K. Edward II [A], to whom he gave the inheritance of most of his other estates (l).

This Edmund Earl of Arundel had the misfortune of being beheaded 9 October 1326, by the procurement of Qu. Isabel, and her favorite Mortimer,—Richard Fitz-Alan, his eldest son and heir, was restored in Parliament 1329, and dyed 23 January 1375, leaving, by Elianor his second wife, daughter of Henry Earl of Lancaster, and widow of John Lord Beaumont,—Richard his eldest son, who fell a sacrifice to the resentment of K. Richard II. being beheaded in that King's presence, and led to execution by his own son-in-law Thomas Mowbray Earl Marshall, 21 September 1397. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, he had three sons, Thomas; two others who dyed young; and four daughters.

Elizabeth, the eldest was married, 1. to William, son of William de Montacute Earl of Salisbury. 2. to Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marshall, and of Nottingham, and Duke of Norfolk. 3. to Sir Robert Goushull. 4. to Sir Gerard Ufflet (m).

Upon the Earl of Arundel's execution his lands were given by K. Richard II. to Thomas Mowbray aforesaid Duke of Norfolk; and to Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, and Duke of Surrey. And though Thomas, eldest son of Richard Earl of Arundel, was restored in blood, in 1399 [B], and the Duke of Norfolk dyed miserably the next year, yet this estate did not return into the Arundel family, but continued in Elizabeth, sister of the late Earl of Arundel, and wife of Thomas Duke of Norfolk; which Duke held this estate at the time of his decease in 1400; as did her third husband Robert Goushull Esq; in 1403, in her right, this being part of her dower. She held it till her decease in 1424 (n). [See above, p. 65. and in the other Volume, p. 53. 463. 554.]—John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, her son, succeeded her; having been restored to that Dukedom in 1416. He held this maner of Richard Duke of York, as of his Honor of Reyley, and dying 19 October 1432, left—John, his son and heir (o), who also held this maner at the time of his decease, 6 Novemb. 1461. His son—John Mowbray, the last Duke of Norfolk of this family, at his death in 1477, left an only daughter and heir—Anne (p), married afterwards to Richard Duke of York, second son of K. Edward IV. but had no issue.

Whereupon the large inheritance of the Mowbrays came to the Families of Howard and Berkley, heirs at law, as descended from Margaret and Isabell, the two daughters of Thomas Mowbray the first Duke of Norfolk; whereof Margaret was married to Sir Robert Howard, and Isabell to James Lord Berkley, [see in the other Volume, p. 555.]

Sir Robert Howard's son was—John, summoned to Parliament 12 Edw. IV. and created Duke of Norfolk, and constituted Earl Marshall 28 June 1483; but slain at the battle of Bosworth, fighting for K. Richard III. and attainted in Parliament 1 Hen. VII. But his son—Thomas was restored in blood 4 Hen. VII. and dyed 21 May 1524.—Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, his son, dyed in 1554.—Thomas, his grandson, held this maner of Earls-hall, in 1559 (q). He soon after sold this estate to

Richard Lord Riche, who, at the time of his decease 12 June 1566, held this maner of Erles-hall, alias Erles fee, in Pritwell, of Henry Lord Hunsdon, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of one knight's fee (r). In that noble Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued, till upon the division of their large inheritance, This was allotted to

Daniel, Earl of Nottingham. He sold it to Mr. Werge, and . . . Lomax; and they sold it again to Robert Bristow Esq; and Mr. John Chambers, of London, scrivener, whose daughter Mary was wife of Mr. John Dorrell.

It belongs now to Mrs. Rebecca Bristow, and to Wintthrop Baldwin Esq; and Mary his wife.

The Maner of Polsted belonged in 1494 to John Prior of Prittlewell; for John Tirrell then held of him, as of that maner, lands here called Parkers, Mawgers, Shoberyes, Perfeild, and Clayhawke (s). Probably it was given to the Priory, upon the forfeiture of the Duke of Norfolk.

From

From these capital Maners of Suene sprung up three other subordinate, or reputed, Maners.

BOTELERS was one, so named from an ancient owner.

In 1260, William le Botyller held of the King in ca. 80 acres of land in Prittlewell, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. — Hugh le Botiller held in Pritelwell, in 1278, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reilie 1 messuage, and 75 acres of land, by the 4th part of a knight's fee, suit at the Hundred, and Barony of Reilie, and payment of 3 d. to the hidage: and of the heirs of Hugh de Polsted, 20 acres of arable by the yearly rent of 8 s. (t). — William his son and heir, being under age, was then under the wardship of his mother, who had given to the King for that, and his marriage, 11 marks. He dyed in 1328, leaving — John his son (u); after whom we hear no more of the family here. See under Shopland.

Thomas de Staple who dyed in 1372, held a messuage and 90 acres of arable called Botelers-Hamstall, in Prittlewell, of the Honor of Reyle; — Richard was his son and heir; who, I suppose, dyed childless, for Margery his mother, remarried to Sir John de Chanceux, when she dyed in 1389, had no other heirs but these two, viz. Elizabeth, wife of John Pritelwell; and Joane, daughter of John de Sutton by Alice his wife another of the daughters of the said Thomas Staple and Margery (w). See under Shopland.

Afterwards this was in R. Bury: for in 1548, a tenement and 100 acres of pasture, with appertenances in Prittlewell, called Butlers-Hampstalls, were alienated by Richard Bury to John Webb Clerk, by licence.

William Harrys Esq; at the time of his decease 21 Septemb. 1555, held lands and hereditaments here called Johns, Hampstalls, and Palgraves; and Cokes, Brennings, and Wants, of the Lord Riche, as of the Priory of Prittlewell (x).

Edward Bashe, who dyed 2 May 1587, held this estate, leaving — Edward his son and heir (y).

SERLESLAND, was so named from Serlo, son of Philip, who dyed in 1280, and held of the Barony of Reley, one messuage and 122 acres of arable in Prittlewell, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reyley, by the service of the sixth part of a knight's fee; — Philip was his son and heir, who dyed in 1312, leaving — Richard his son and successor. The heirs of Richard Serle held it in 1340 (z).

John Baud Esq; who dyed in 1422, held 1 toft and 40 acres of arable called Serlesland, of the Honor of Reyley, by the 30th part of a knight's fee (a).

BERLANDS and BLAKE, a maner, or capital messuage, and divers other lands, tenements, &c. in Pritwell, belonged once to J. Baud, then to J. Webb, and were purchased of Edward Bashe by Richard Lord Riche, who held them at the time of his decease of the Honor of Rayleigh by the 6th part of a knight's fee (b). They passed as the rest of the Warwick estates in this parish.

DERYS, being 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 6 of wood, in Prittlewell and Estwood; and 150 acres in South-Church, called Hamstall; both holden of the Duke of York: also 100 acres of arable and marsh, called Palgraves land, holden of the Prior of Pritelwell, belonged, in 1453, to Richard Pakelesham (c). Deres belonged in 1575 to Thomas Shaa of Terling, who conveyed it, 23 October that year, with two other Farms called Colemans and Lashborns, to Robert Lord Riche. They were purchased with the other estates by Mr. Scratton.

TEMPLE-SUTTON,

another Maner; of which the mansion House is in this parish, but a considerable part of the demesne lands extends into the adjoining parish of Great Sutton; was so named because it belonged to the Knights Templars, or Hospitallers. It was also called Little Sutton, in contradistinction to the other.

The maner-house stands near a mile north-east from Prittlewell Church; and is said to have had a Chapel, or Oratory.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, a Freeman was possessed of this maner, under the name of Suttuna: At the Survey it was held by Tedric Pointel, whose under-tenants were, Grimbold, Hunold, and Robert [C].

Some time after, it was given to the Præceptory of Cressing-Temple in this County, but by whom is not mentioned. They had it as early as the year 1280; for then Alice le Despencer, daughter and heir of Philip Basset, held the maner of North-Weld some time of the Castle of Benyngton, by the service of 5 knights fees, whereof the Knights Templars of Cressing held two knights fees in Sutton, in the Hundred of Rochford (d).

In 1292, John Benefredd made an addition to the Knights-Templars revenues, by giving them 5 acres of land in Little Sutton and Prittlewell: As did, at the same time, Henry de Bluntesdon 1 messuage, and 8 acres of land in Rochford; and Thomas le Blakiere 1 messuage and 4 acres of land in Great Sutton (e).

Joane, widow of Sir John Gray, who dyed in 1425, held, among other things, one knight's fee in Temple Sutton, which William de Cusance lately held;—Henry her son and heir, was seven years old (f).

The Estate continued in the Knights-Templars, or Hospitallers, till their Dissolution.

In 1541, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Sutton-Temple, &c. to George Harper and his heirs. He, by license dated 24 June 1543, sold it, with appertenances in Sutton-Temple and Fulnes island, to

Sir Richard Riche (g). In whose Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the failure of issue male (h): and when the Estate was divided amongst the coheirs, this came to the share of Henry St. John Lord Bolingbroke, in right of his mother Mary Rich. [See in the other Volume, p. 101, 102.] He sold it in 1714, or 1715, to Sir Richard Child, Bart. afterwards Viscount Castlemain, and Earl Tilney; and it is now in his son—John Earl Tilney.

The Maner of MILTON-HALL is the Southern part of this parish. Milton-hall, the maner-house, stands half a mile south from this Church, about the Middle between Lee and South-Church; which occasioned the name. In records it is written Middletun, and Mildentun, contracted since into Milton.

This Hamlet is said to have been anciently a distinct Parish; and had a Church, or Chapel of ease, of which the remains were visible not long ago, at low-water mark. On this shore is a good nursery for oysters [D].

The Prior and Monks of the Holy Trinity at Canterbury, before the Conquest, had this Lordship [E]; which was granted or confirmed to them by K. Edward the Confessor [F].

This estate continued in the Monastery till 20 March 1539, when the Priory of Christ-Church was dissolved, and all its revenues came to the Crown.

The 26th of May 1542, K. Henry VIII. in the room of the Prior and Monks, having placed a Dean and twelve Canons here, he endowed them with the maners of Middleton, alias Milton, South-Church, Lawling, Borleigh, Styfted, and Bockyng in Merfy, with appertenances (i). They remained possessed of them but a little while: For, 23 November 1545, that King made an exchange with them, wherein it is to be supposed he would not be refused: And of them he had the maners of Styfted, Lawling, Middleton, valued at 27 l. and South-Church, Borley, the College of Canterbury, and the Almery-house in Canterbury. In consideration of which, the King discharged them from the yearly sum of 200 l. paid by them for finding of Scholars in Oxford and Cambridge, and gave them the maner and parsonage of Godmersham in Kent, valued at 80 l. 11 s. ob. A few weeks after, namely 20 January 1545, he granted the maners of Middleton alias Milton, South-Church, Lawling, and Styfted, with appertenances, to

Sir Richard Rich Lord Rich, and his heirs, to hold by the fortieth part of a knight's fee (k). From the heirs of the Earls of Warwick it came by purchase to

Mr. Scrutton, who left it, with Prior's maner, &c. to his nephew Daniel Scrutton of Bromfield, Gent. It is now in his heirs above-mentioned.

This Hamlet having belonged to the Church of Canterbury, is one of the Peculiars belonging to that See; subject in Spirituals to the Dean of Bocking. And the inhabitants chuse a Churchwarden and Constable of their own.

CHALKWELL-HALL, was undoubtedly so named from some famous Chalk-well belonging to it, or near.

The mansion house stands about a mile and a half south-west from this Church.

This reputed Maner, was holden of Milton-Hall by knight's service and the annual rent of 23 s. 3 d. for all services, and three of the best living creatures for heriots.

In 1488, . . . Cobham, of Bernefton Esq; was lord of this maner: For, Henry Maldon, who dyed 9 January that year, held a parcel of Marsh in Lalling of . . . Cobham de Bernefton Esq; of his maner of Chalkwell Hall.—Henry Aley, Esq; son of his sister Agnes, then aged eleven years, was his cousin, and next heir (l).

In 1498, Sir Thomas Boteler passed by fine to Reginald Pegge and Richard Wyott a moiety of the maner of Chalkwell; and ten years after,

[D] The Oysters are brought hither small from the southern coast of this island, particularly from the coast of Suffex and Dorsetshire, where the dredgers employ the poor people to pick them in baskets, in the months of February, March and April, and putting them in their vessels ready to receive them, sail back here, and lay them in the water, till they come to their proper growth; which is in about 7 or 8 months. It is observable, that those which lie with the concave part uppermost, thrive as well as the rest which lie in what we think their proper posture. The owners of the Oysters here have their proper limits staked out; and have an advantage over the rest of the dredgers of this County, in being so much nearer London; but in a frosty season, the oysters here, from the shallowness of the water, are more liable to be killed by the severity of the weather; the shore being even, and dry when the tide is out, and not having the conveniency of the pits and layings about Colchester and Maldon, which are replenished with new water almost at every tide.

[E] Terra Sancte Trinitatis de Cantorberia. Hund' de Rochefort. Mildentunam tenet Sancta Trinitas pro manerio & ii hidis. Semper viii villani. Tunc xiii bordarii, modo xv. Semper i servus, & ii carucate in dominio, & vi carucate hominum. Silva lx porcis, viii animalia, & ii runcini, & xxv porci, & cxxiv oves. Tunc valuit c solidos, modo viii libras. Lib. Domefd. fol. 8. b. Tit. 2.

[F] The confirmation Charter was partly in these words. 'Ego Edwardus gratia Dei, Rex Anglorum gubernator & rector, instinctu Dei concedo Christi Ecclesie in Dorobernia pro salute anime mee . . . On Est Sexan, Southcyrcan, Lagefare, Middletun, Lallinges, Boccinges, Cicce, Stigestede . . . Siquis autem aliquid horum a jure ejusdem Ecclesie abstulerit faciendo & consentiendo perpetuo anathemate feriat, & cum Juda traditore damnetur.'

Mary, wife of the said Sir Thomas joined in another fine for a moiety of the same (m).

The Estate was since in . . . Malby and afterwards in Lambert Pitchers, who sold it to

Mr. Jonas Lamb of Ley.

Charles Tyrell of Rochford Esq; had it in marriage with a daughter of Mr. Lamb. They had a son, who dyed without issue, leaving a widow.

It belongs now to Edmund Tyrell of Saxmundham Esq;

In 1340, Edward St. John held the maner of Pritewell of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the service of one knight's fee. And Richard de Havering held also then, of the same Honor, lands and tenements here by the service of the third part of a knight's fee (n). But which maner it was, and what lands, we cannot ascertain.

A Family had the surname de Pritewell from this place. In 1388, John Pritewell granted to Robert Affch Vicar of Pritelwelle, and his heirs, one cottage, with a moiety of a grange, and 2 acres of Maydestones croft near Tipillane, and 2 acres called Cartereslond, and a toft and 7 acres, and half a croft called Palmereflond, all in this parish (o).

Mr. William Speed; Thomas Burges; Isaac Pledger; John Remnant; Francis Enniver, &c. have also some lands here.

was pleasantly situated about a quarter of a mile north from the Church. Only some of the out-houses now remain.

This Priory was founded in the reign of K. Henry II. by Robert de Essex, son of Suene, for Monks of the Order of Clugni, and dedicated to St. Mary. It was a cell to the Alien Priory of Lewes in Suffex, and naturalized in the time of K. Edward III. The Endowment and Revenues of it, besides the Maner and demesnes here, and the Church of Prittlewell, were; the Churches of Eastwood, and Sutton, called at the time of the foundation only Chapels to Prittlewell: the maner of Great Shobury; lands in North Bemflett, and Hadley; Kytcot-marsh in Canvey, with all the tythes of that island; the tythes of Foulness-island; and tythes in Packlesham, Great Wakering, Great Warley, and Wethersfield. The Churches, or Rectories, and Advowsons of the Vicarages of Canewdon, Clavering, Eastwood, North and South Shobury; in this County; and of Stoke-Neyland in Suffolk: the Advowsons of the Rectories of Great Horkley, East Mersey, Raley, Raureth, and Wickford. At the time of their dissolution they had the following rents of assise; In this parish, of the free and customary Tenents, 18l. 6s. 4d. ob. In Eastwood, 32s. 3d. Foulnes, and Walet, 6s. Hakewell, 5s. 6d. Packlesham, 10s. 10d. Gr. Shobury, 26s. 5d.

Berking Abbey, for a portion of tithes out of their maner of Plumberow, 20s. Hatfeild-Regis Priory, for a portion of tithes out of their lands in Bumsted, 4l. And of the following Rectors; of, Great Horkesley, 20s. East Mersey, 4l. North-Bemflett, 13s. 4d. Raley, 33s. 4d. Raureth, the same. Great Shobury, 2s. Thundersley, 10s. Great Warley, 20s. Wickford, 53s. 4d. (p).

At the suppression it was valued at 155l. 11s. 2d. ob. Dugdale, 194l. 14s. 3d. ob. Speed. And there were in it only seven monks. See a List of the Priors in Newcourt (q).

It was granted to Sir Thomas Audeley in 1537, and passed from him through the same hands as the Maner of Priors above-mentioned (r).

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands pleasantly in the street, and is the largest and fairest Church in this Hundred. Both Church and Chancel have a south aisle, almost as large as the rest of the building. The great Chancel, and the aisle belonging to it called the Little Chancel, are leaved, and the remainder tiled. The Tower, which is of stone, is lofty, with pyramids at the corners: 'Tis a sea-mark. In it are . . . Bells.

The great Tithes of this parish were appropriated to the Priory here, and a Vicarage appointed, which continued in their gift till the suppression. Then they were granted to Thomas Audeley Esq; who presented to the Vicarage in 1539. He conveyed them, in 1551, to Robert, son of Richard Lord Riche; in whose posterity Earls of Warwick they continued, till upon the failure of issue male they came among the coheirs. Daniel Earl of Nottingham having them allotted to him, made an exchange of the Vicarage with the Bishop of London, in 1698, for the Vicarage of Okeham. [See above under Lee.] It hath been ever since in the gift of the Bishops of London.

About 500l. a year land in Canvey island pay great tithes to the Impropiator of this Church, and small tithes to the Vicar.

In K. Edward the fourth's reign, lands and tenements were put in feoffment here, by 2 wardens, 1 master, 1 priest, and certain brethren, to find a priest called Jesus Priest; which Chantry was worth at the Suppression, 7l. 17s. 0d. and in the Certificate it is said, that this was a populous town, having 300 houseling people.

This parish is rated to the land tax at 1317l. and Milton-hamlet at 417l. 2s. 0d.

Here is a Fair July 15.

II. SOUTH-CHURCH

This parish lies near the most southern point of this Hundred; and when the Church was built, and so named, was undoubtedly the most South of any in the Hundred. But the two Shoberies lie now nearly upon the same line. It is so near the Sea, that it might well be called Sea-Church. In the Synod of Clovesho, it is styled Sudmynster.

This Church and Maner were given to Christ's Church at Canterbury on or before the year 824 [G]. Edward the Confessor confirmed these to them among others of their possessions [H]: And that Church, then dedicated to the Holy Trinity, held them at the Survey [I].

Ealdbhirt, a Saxon Earl, and his sister Selthryth, gave to the same Church Lands here: which gift was canvassed or scrutinized in a Council held at Clovesham in the year 824, but the affair was determined in favour of the Church, and the lands were confirmed to Archbishop Wlfred, and to his successors [K].

Besides the Maner of South-Church; there are in this Parish The Maners of South-thorp, and North-thorp.

SOUTH-CHURCH-HALL,

the mansion-house of the first, is about half a mile south-west from the Church. It is moated round, and hath a fine spring of very good water near, always running over.

This Maner continued in the Prior and Monks of Canterbury, till their suppression.

A considerable Family that dwelt here, and from hence took the surname de South-Church, held this estate under the Church of Canterbury.

Richard de South-Church, at the time of his decease in 1294, held here, of the Prior and Convent of Christ's Church in Canterbury, one messuage, 640 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 2 marshes, 30 acres of wood, a wind-mill, and 4*l.* 16*s.* rent, with the work of the customary tenants (s). He held also Northorp, as we shall see presently. And, by grant of K. Henry III.

[G] Lifstanus dedit South-Church Monachis Ecclesie Christi Cant. & postea Celulfus Rex Merciorum dedit eisdem, & idem donum confirmavit. Somners Antiq. of Canterbury, Append. p. 37. Ceolwolf indeed lived about that time, but as he had nothing to do in the Kingdom of the East-Saxons, and the East-Saxons themselves were made a Province by Egbert King of the West Saxons before this Date, we must interpret it, that Ceolwolf gave them something in his own Kingdom, or was a Witness to Lifstan's Grant, if the barbarous Latin of those Times will allow that Sense to dedit.

had free-warren in Suth-cherche, Prittlewell, North-Cray, and La-Leigh (t) [L].—Peter de South Church, his son, held the same estate of the Prior aforesaid, at the fee-farm of 20*l.* a year. He dyed in 1309, leaving Alice, and Joane, his two daughters and co-heirs (u). Joane was married to William La Flete, who had a moiety of this maner in her right. And William Carleton, who most probably married the other daughter, conveyed all his right in the same, to them, and to the heirs of the said Joane (w).

In 1342, John de Newenton held this maner of the Prior by the like fee-farm of 20*l.*—John was his son. He seems to be the same person who occurs in records by the name of John de Pritewell of London, Spicer, and released all his right in the maner of South Chirche, in 1350, to William de Dersham, of Offeton, and his heirs (x). This latter made over the reversion of the same after his own life, to Robert Caspar, parson of Wortham, and to Alexander Hanekyn, of Canterbury; to have and hold to them and their successors for ever: This maner being held of the said Prior by the service of 20*l.* a year; except lands and tenements in the same, holden of the fees of Polsted, and Nortrop (y).

On the suppression of Christ's Church Priory in 1539, all its revenues came to the Crown. In 1542 upon appointing a Dean and twelve Canons for the government and service of Canterbury Cathedral, he made this Maner, with that of Milton in the foregoing parish, &c. part of their endowment. But 23 November 1545, he took them away again from them, giving them others in exchange: And, 20 January 1545, he granted this estate among others to

Richard Lord Ricke (z). In his descendents, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the failure of issue male, when the estate came to be divided among the coheirs. This was part of the share of the Rt. Hon. Daniel Earl of Nottingham who sold it to George Affer Esq; He dyed 28 November 1738, aged 63 years, and was buried at Barling.

[K] This implies, that lands could not then be given to religious bodies, without the examination and consent of a great Council of the nation, or Wittenagemot. . . . The original Council of Clovesham, from whence the above is extracted, is now in the possession of Thomas Astle Esq; among other curious Originals, one of which is K. Withred's Charter, A. C. 693, to Liminge monastery, for 4 plough-lands in Wig-helmicnetun, now Wilmington: Ex archiv. Eccl. Christi Cant.

[L] The grant of Free-warren was renewed, in 1364, by K. Edward III. to the Prior of Canterbury and his successors, in all their demaine lands in Kent, Suffex, Surrey, Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, Oxfordshire, and Devonshire; namely in Middleton, Southchurch, Lalling, Bonytone, Styftede, and Bocking.

His

His only surviving child,——Elizabeth, was then the wife of the Rev. John Davies, Vicar of Barling. She dyed 22 August 1739, aged 42 years, as did her husband Mr. Davies in 1750. They left an only child and heir, named Elizabeth-Affer. She was married, in May 1746, to Thomas Drew Esq; by whom she had a son, named George-Affer Drew, and a daughter of the name of Frances-Affer Drew. The said Elizabeth dyed in 1761; and her husband enjoys this Estate, and also the maners of North Shobury, Kents, the Lease of the demesnes of Barling, &c.

SOUTH-CHURCH Wic belongs also to Thomas Drew Esq; The mansion house stands about half a mile north-east from the Church. From it there is a most delightful prospect over the islands of Canvey, Greane, Shepey, Thanet, the Nore, up the Medway, and up and down the Thames.

The Maners of NORTHORP, and SOUTHORP, are now united, but were formerly two. One belonged to Godric a Thegn of K. Edward the Confessor; and after that King's death, to Robert son of Wimarce, by the name of Torpeia. The other, under the name of Thorpe, belonged to Inguar. At the time of the Survey, Suene held the former; and Ranulph son of Ilger the other. And Odo was under tenant to both [M].

Suene's part held of the Honor of Raley; and the other afterwards of the Honor of Lisle.

The Saxon word Soppe signifies village, so that these two might formerly be distinct villages, or hamlets.

Thorp-hall is near the Thames, or rather the sea, about a mile from the Church.

As to Southorp: Robert de Brus who dyed in 1276, held lands in Suthorp in the vill of South-Churche.——John de Brus was his son. Of him, in 1282 John de Nevill held the maner of Thorpe by one knight's fee (a).——Sir John de Nevill of Essex, who had this estate for life, granted it to John de Clopton in exchange for the maners of Chikenhale-Tany and Zoyn, which the said Clopton had for life [N]. But the remainder or reversion of Southorp was in

William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 79.] He dying 16 September 1360, and his son——Humfrey Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton 16 January 1372, before Alice Lady Nevill, widow of Sir John, which had a life-estate in this, and whose death did not happen till 1394 (c), therefore it did not come till 1394 to the Bobun Family; namely to the two daughters and coheirs of Humfrey, viz.

Eliador, wife of Thomas of Woodstock; and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV. Upon the partition of the Bobun Estates, in 1421, between Anne, Countess of Stafford, daughter of Eliador, and K. Henry V. this was allotted to the said Countess, being then valued at 22 l. a year. Her son——Sir John Bourchier had both the Thorps, as we shall see presently.

As to the maner of Northorp in particular: In 1267, William de Gloucester held this maner of Northrope, in capite, of Henry de Thorndone, by the service of one knight's fee, whose father John Thorndone held it, before him, of the heirs of William son of Richard de Stanbregg (d).

In 1294, and 1309, Richard de Southchurch and his son Peter, above-mentioned, who held the maner of Southchurch of the Convent of Canterbury, are found also to have held of the heirs of Henry de Thorndon, the 6th part of a fee in Northorp, being 214 acres of land (e).

William de Derfbam had the same in 1350, of the gift of John de Pritelwell (f).

In 1362, Mary widow of Thomas de Brotherton, Countess Mareschall, had two fees in Thorp, which Paul de Theydon held under her. And, in 1432, John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, held the same by the name of two fees and a half (g).

These two Maners seem now to have been united.

Sir John Bourchier Lord Berners, who dyed in 1474, held the maners of Southorp and Northorp, of the Queen of England;——John, son of Humfrey his son, was his heir (h).

This estate came again into the Stafford family; and was in Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, upon whose arraignment and condemnation, in 1521, it fell to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. in 1528, granted the maners of Thorpe, and Thorpe-hall, and Salstell, with appertenances, to Brian Tuke Esq; and his heirs male; to hold in fealty (i). At the time of his decease, 26 October 1545, he held, the maners of Thorpe, Thorpe-hall, and East Lee, and the Advowsons of the Churches, Vicarages, Chantries, Chapels, and other ecclesiastical benefices belonging to these maners, of the King, as of the maner of Writtle, in socage by fealty,

Robert Petre Esq; and a fine was levied for the same in Trinity-term. Afterwards, 5 February 1593, Qu. Elizabeth granted a special livery of them to—Sir John Petre (l), created 21 July 1603 Lord Petre. He held these maners at the time of his decease 11 October 1613, having bequeathed East-Lee to his second son—John Petre Esq; seated at *West-Haninge*feld; and the maner of Thorpe to his third son—Thomas Petre Esq; of Cranham-hall. Those two greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe, got a grant, in 1590, among many other things, of the maners of Thorp and Thorp-hall, and the Advowson of the Rectory (n). But they got SHOEBURY.

This is a name common to two contiguous Parishes; anciently but one district, lying close to the Sea, against the Nore. The most southern point is a small promontory called Shoebury Næse, or Nefs, from the Saxon Nære, nose; for the Britans and Saxons described their hills and other parts of the country from their similitude to the parts of the human body [O].

The name of Shoebury is formed from the [* N] One Outing having been out at sea in his hoy or boat, and having on board some small Oysters more than could be used, he threw them over-board on this shore. About a year after, being accidentally here at low water, and seeing those Oysters, he opened some, and found them much improved in size and fatness. He got more Oysters, and tried the experiment again, and found it to answer. Upon that, he went to Mr. Affer, and took a lease of this Shore at a low rent; the method of improving Oysters by laying them here not being known. By this trade Outing got a great deal of money; and built a House near the sea, now inhabited by a dredger. From that time advantageous Leases have been granted of this shore, and a great trade in Oysters here carried on.

This account I had from Thomas Drew Esq; grants of many things, of which they could not get possession. And they were granted the same year to Gilbert Wakering; to hold in capite, by the service of one knight's fee.

It might possibly be some of those lands and tenements in the maner of South-Church, which were of the Fees of Polsted and Northrope, and that William de Dertham had for life, in 1354 (o).

Besides the estates above-mentioned, Mr. William Waltham hath also some lands here.

The shore against this parish; which is flat, and where the tide ebbs and leaves it dry for two or three miles from high water-mark; is a very good Nursery for Oysters, as well as the adjoining Milton-shore: a quality which was discovered accidentally about the year 1700 [* N].

The Church, and Chancel are of one pace; and of equal size and bigness: both tiled. On a Tower of stone, containing Bells, is a Spire shingled. The Porch, at the entrance into the Church, is indented, which shews its antiquity. This Church hath been lately new pewed, cieled, and beautified: and a gallery was erected at the west end, in 1756, at the charge of Thomas Drew Esq; and Elizabeth his wife. Their arms are in the front.

This Rectory is one of the Peculiars of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury's, and in Spirituals under the jurisdiction of the Dean of Bocking. For though this Maner was conveyed to K. Henry VII. by way of exchange, yet the Rectory was not; but hath been all along in the Archbishops collation.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 788 l.

The first mention we find of this place was in 894: K. Ælfred being employed and detained by the Danes in the West of England, two troops of those rovers gathered together at Sceobyrig in Essex, and there made a fort or castle [P]. This Fort was undoubtedly an earth-work, with a trench

a trench and a mount, as most of their hasty fortifications were in those times; and hath been since either levelled, or washed away by the Sea.

Mr. Camden does too great honor to this place when he calls it a city: for it doth not appear ever to have been such [2].

Shoebury was even before the Conquest divided into two Parishes, South and North Shoebury, so named on account of their situation with regard to one another.

12. SOUTH SHOEBURY

lies near the Thames, or rather the Sea. It is otherwise called Great-Shoebury.

Robert son of Wimarce held this after the death of Edward the Confessor: At the time of the Survey it belonged to Suene [R].

Here is only one Maner, with which goes another estate called Mustal Grondage: The site of this last could not be discovered upon the best enquiry.

SHOEBURY-HALL,

the Maner house, stands on the South side of the Church.

This lordship was given to the Priory of Prittlewell (p) by the founder, Robert Fitz-Suene, together with the Advowson of the Church; and continued in that Monastery till the Suppression. It was then lett to William Frend for 30 years, at the rent of 40l. (q).

In 1537, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Great Schobury and Mustall Grondage &c. thereto belonging, with appertenenances, and the Advowson of the Church, to Sir Richard Riche, and his heirs, to hold in capite, by the tenth part of a knight's fee. He was possessed of this estate at the time of his decease 12 June 1566 (r). In his posterity, Earls of Warwick, it continued [S], till upon the failure of issue male their great Inheritance fell among the coheirs: And this came to the share of

Daniel Earl of Nottingham, in right of the Lady Essex his wife. He sold it to

Robert Bristow Esq; and it is now in his grandson—Robert Bristow Esq;

DANGERS, a messuage in this parish, by the right hand side of the road from this Church to North Shoebury; and of which some of the land is washed by the Sea; seems to be the same as was anciently called Dawes, and belonged to the Baker family. In 1534, Edward Baker held this messuage, and 60 acres of arable, 40 of pasture, and 20 of marsh, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Great Shobery. His son—James Baker Esq; who dyed 6 January 1569, held this Dawes tenement, and other lands in this and the next parish (s).—John Baker Esq; at the time of his decease 13 April 1606, had the reversion of this tenement called Dangers, and lands called Dangers, Harpes crofts, Staplers, Southcroft, Northcroft, Papparells, Adamsfayes, Mariscrofts, Gilberts, and other lands adjoyning, in South-Shobery.—Richard was his son and heir (t). [Concerning this family, see under East-Tilbury, Bures-Gifford, Hoekley, &c.]

It belonged to the late Sir Henry Fetherstone, Bart.

A family of note took their surname de Shobery from this place.

In 1210, William de Shobie held a knight's fee of the Honor of Raleigh (u).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Tower is built of flints, and hath a Spire shingled, with 3 Bells.

The arch over the passage from the Church into the Chancel is wreathed.

This Church was at first a Rectory, then a Vicarage, then a Rectory again; after that presented to eight times as a Vicarage; then again as a Rectory, and so it continues to this day.

The Advowson of this Church belonged to Prittlewell Priory till the dissolution; and then was granted by K. Henry VIII. to Sir Richard Riche, from whom it passed, as the Maner to Robert Bristow Esq; (w).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 433 l. 2 s. 0 d.

[S] Robert Lord Riche dyed possessed of a pasture called Mensual grondage in this parish, 27 February 1580; and his son, Robert Earl of Warwick, held also the pasture called Muscul grondage, at the time of his decease, 24 March 1618: yet Qu. Elizabeth, in 1591, granted to William Tipper and Robert Daw a grange called Muskell-Grange, with appertenenances belonging to the Monastery of Pritwell, provided they were not concealed. I do not find they succeeded in their attempt, because the Earl of Warwick, remained possessed in 1618, of the pasture of Muscul-Grondage, as belonging to the maner of Great-Shobery. These ravenous gleaners upon forfeited lands sometimes found game, which other sportsmen had overlooked, and by fresh proling grants came into what others had before paid for, but had not particularly enough expressed to them by name. See Inquis. 23 Eliz. & 17 Jaco.

13. NORTHSHOEBURY stands North of the other, as the name imports. It is otherwise called Little Shoebury; though the names of Little and Great are promiscuously used in the presentations to the Church, as Mr. Newcourt hath observed (x).

At the time of the Survey, Suene, and his under-tenant Walter, held this Parish; which had belonged in Edward the Confessor's reign to a Freeman [T].

Afterwards it was divided into these two Maners. 1. The Maner of North-Shoebury, or West-hall. 2. . . . that of Kents.

1. The Maner of NORTH-SHOEBURY, had also the name of WEST-HALL given to it about the reign of K. Edward IV. But we do not find that there is an East-hall near, to occasion that distinction.

The mansion house stands on the south side of the Church.

A Family surnamed de Wodeham, of Wodeham-Ferrers, had this estate about the year 1265, as appears by the curious Plea inserted below [U].

William de Woodham held, in 1271, of the King, in capite by reason of his Barony of Raleigh, in Little Sobiri one messuage, 90 acres of arable, half an acre of pasture; one free Tenant who held 15 acres of arable; and two Villanes who held 30 acres of arable, under him (y). At the time of his decease in 1280, he held the maner of Shobyri of the King in ca. of the Barony of Reylie by the service of half a knight's fee, and payment of 12 d. at the Hundred of Rochford for hidage, and suit at the Court of the Baron of Reylie. He held also 4 acres of marsh, of the fee of Agnes de Abindon, by payment of 2 s. 8 d. per ann. And of the heirs of John de Briche 50 acres of wood and heath, by the service of one half penny. And of William de Shobyri two marshes containing, i. e. having sufficient feed, for 500 sheep, by the yearly rent of 5 marks and a half, for one marsh, to the Prior of Merton; and to William de Shobyri, for the other marsh, 2 marks and a half, and one quarter of rye and one of wheat. He held also of Reginald de Ginges one marsh containing 500 sheep, by the service of 5 s. He had also South Bemfleet. [See above, p. 263.] And of the Countess de Ferrers he held in Woodham Ferrers 1 messuage, 240 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 16 of wood, by the service of 9 s. per annum.

—Thomas his son and heir being but 7 years old, the wardship and marriage of him was granted by the King to John de Lovetot. At the same time, the heirs of Stephen de Langedon held two knights fees in Little Subir and Nucel, of the King, in capite; and Agnes de Subyr and Henry de Gyng held one knight's fee in Little Sobie of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reylegh (z). In 1304, Thomas de Woodeham, and Agnes his wife, held 160 acres of arable, 1 acre of meadow, and 20 s. rent in this parish, of the King, of the Barony aforesaid, by the service of a quarter of a knight's fee. At the time of his decease in 1328, he held here 140 acres of arable, and 3 s. 3 d. rent of assise, of the King, of the Honor of Reylie. — William was his son (a). [See under South Bemfleet.] Then — Edward, son probably, or brother, to William succeeded, and, jointly with Agnes his wife, held 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, 1 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 20 s. rent in Little Shobury, North-Bemfleet, and Hadley; he dyed in 1381. — John was his son and heir (b). In 1419, — Edward, son of Edward Wodeham of Little Shober granted to Nicolas Fitz-Symond and his heirs all his right in all those lands and services called Barbours, and in all those lands which formerly belonged to Edward his father and Agnes his wife, in the villages of Shober aforesaid, South-Cherche, and Wakering (c).

The Fitz-Simon family had been several years before possessed of estates in this parish; at least as early as 1294 (d). All the account we find of them, is this. Sir John Fitz-Simons had four sons, Adam, Hugh, Edward and Richard. — Adam had issue — Edward, who, by Anne daughter of . . . Havering, had — John, who married Alice daughter of — Lord Fitz-Walter, and had by her — Philip, father of — John, that had, by Mary Chambers his wife, two sons Robert, and John. — Robert, by Catharine daughter of Robert Mansfield had Joane his daughter and heir, married first to Robert Tymperley; and afterwards to Henry, second son of Sir Roger Wentworth of Codham-hall in Wethersfield, and had by him Nicolas Wentworth Esq; who married Jane daughter of John Jocelyn.

Adam, son of Sir John Fitz-Simon, at the time of his decease in 1328, held in Little Shobery, 1 messuage, 243 acres of land, and 40 s. rent of assise, of the King as of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of half a knight's fee, and suit at the Hundred of Rochford and Court of Reyle. He had several other lesser parcels near.—Edmund, his son, held, in 1362, the third patt of this maner, and Barflete and Shelword marshes, of the Honor aforesaid, leaving —John, his son and heir (e).—Robert Fitz-Simon, who dyed in 1474, held the maner of West-Hall in North-Shobury, the first time we find it so called in records, and the maner of Mokking in Barling, and 200 acres of marsh in Pakelesham and Little Wakering, of the Honor of Railegh, by homage and fealty only; —Joane, then wife of Robert Tymperley, was his daughter and heir: She was afterwards married to Henry Wentworth: as just observed above. His son—Nicolas Wentworth Esq; had this maner in 1522 (f).

..... Aston Esq; held this maner about 1574.

Thomas Collins of London, vintner, left this Estate, by will, to his wife, who was remarried to Charles Russel Orange-merchant. After his death, she sold it, in 1722, to George Affer of South-hurch-Hall, Esq; And it now belongs, as well as that, to

Thomas Drew Esq;

The Maner of KENTS, was undoubtedly so named from an owner not found upon record. The mansion-house is old, formerly much larger than now, and moated round: It stands between the two Shoburies, and the land lies in both parishes.

It seems to have been detached from the capital maner in or before the Reign of K. Edward I. for, in 1328, John Fitz-Simon, held lands in Little-Shobury; As did Adam his son, and Edmund his grandson, as observed under the foregoing Maner.

After this, Robert Fitz-Simon came into the grand Maner, as appears above. And it is probable this went with the other to Tymperley; but nothing shews it.

In 1501, a fine was levied by which the maner of Kentys was passed from Trustees, as they seem to be, to Jasper Tyrrel and Margaret his wife: And another the same year from Jasper to Henry Baker and others (g).

For several descents it continued in the Baker family, which lived at South-Church and Bures-Giffard. Edward Baker Esq; who dyed 3 April 1535, held this capital messuage or tenement called Kent, and 100 acres of arable, and 40 of pasture in this parish, of the King as of the Honor of Railegh, by the third part of a knight's fee.—James Baker, his son, held also the same; and lands and tenements called Much and Little Napiltons, Noldes, Jacomyns, Bromeshoke, Porters, Kytchen croft, Pettyshotten, Kettells marsh, Cocokes, Manwey, Dawes tenement, Beremans, Mabell, Brownes, John Woodhams tenement, and Waving, in North and South-Shobery, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of South-Shobery in free socage, by fealty, suit of court, rent of 35 s. 4 d. and one heriet after the death of each free-tenant (h).—Henry his son and heir, who dyed 8 April 1611, held also this maner of Kents in North and South-Church, of Sir John Carey, Lord Hunsdon, of his Honor of Railegh, by one knight's fee, and suit of court, paying 16 d. yearly for hidage; worth, beyond reprises 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. He left three daughters his co-heirs, Abigail, Judith, and Anne (i). See above, p. 258.]

It was purchased by George Affer Esq; and now belongs to Thomas Drew Esq;

Mr. Richard Dawes; Richard Kennet, &c. have also some lands here: as had the late John Lodwick Esq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Tower hath on the top of it a spire shingled, and contains 2 Bells.

This Church belonged to the Priory of Prittlewell, till its dissolution when it came to the Crown, and hath continued in it ever since.

It was a Rectory untill about the year 1423, when the great Tithes were appropriated to that Priory (k), and a Vicarage instituted here. In 1719 this Vicarage was augmented by Bp. Robinson with 200 l. to which were added 200 l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Qu. Elizabeth, 27 Janu. 1591, granted the Rectory of North-Shobury to Henry Best and John Welles. K. James I, however it came again to the Crown, granted it, 17 September 1603, to Robert Cary, to be held of the maner of East-Greenwich (l). This was perhaps no more than a licence to alienate.

This parish is rated to the land tax at 508 l.

WAKERING.

Two contiguous Parishes of this name, with the two Shoeburies, are the South-east corner of this County, bounded by the Sea.

They are distinguished from each other by the names of Much or Great, and Little. Besides Wachering they are styled in records Wacheling.

From whence the name was formed is not plain, unless it was from Wachel, or Walcher, a Saxon owner; and ing, meadow, or pasture. There is such a word as Yacop, signifying viler, of lesser value; and watching; but neither of them seems to be applicable to this place.

14. GREAT WAKERING

is the largest of the two Parishes, as the name imports.

This Parish belonged, at the time of the Survey, and even before, to Suene of Essex [W], no former owner being mentioned.

In this parish are two Maners, 1. The maner of Great Waking. 2. . . . that of Barrowhall with Adam's Fee.

The Maner of GREAT WAKERING.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, as mentioned under Raley, and elsewhere, this Lordship came early into the noble and numerous family of Nevill, fully mentioned in the other Volume, p. 371. under Wethersfield. Hugh de Nevill forfeited it, for being in arms with Simon de Montfort against K. Henry III. But it was restored to him again, in 1266, upon giving up his castle and maner of Stoke-Curcy, and other valuable estates (m). [X]. His son — John de Nevill, who dyed in 1282, had this maner; which Robert de Brus held under him for life by the service of one knight's fee (n). It was a very considerable estate; namely then no less than 80 l. a year. — Hugh de Nevill, his son and heir, being under age, the Wardship of him was committed by the King to Henry le Waleys, and Thomas de Weylond had at the same time both the Wardship and Marriage of him (o). He was afterwards a Knight, and at the time of his decease in 1335, held this maner of the King in capite, as of his Crown, by the service of one knight's fee. Ida his widow had the third part of it for her life. Their son — Sir John de Nevill was found possessed of the two other parts at the time of his decease 25 July 1358; and, after the death of his widow Alice, and of his mother Ida, the remainder and reversion of the whole was in William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and his heirs for ever (p). But he dying 16 September 1360 [X*], and his son — Humfrey, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton 16 January 1372, before Alice Lady Nevill aforesaid, which had a life-estate in this, and whose death did not happen till 1394 (q), therefore the whole did not come till then to the Bohun family; namely, to the two daughters of Humfrey, viz.

Elianor, wife of Thomas of Woodstock; and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby afterwards K. Henry IV. Upon the partition of the Bohun estates in 1421, between Anne Countess of Stafford daughter of Elianor, and K. Henry V. son of Mary, This was allotted to the said Countess, being then valued at 80 l. 6 s. 7 d. ob. with a wood. It came after her into the family of her third husband William Bourchier, Earl of Eu (r).

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, at the time of his decease, 4 April 1483, held the maner of Great Waking by the service of 22 s. and the maner of Little Waking by the service of 12 d. a year, both of the Honor of Raley. William his son being dead before him, he was succeeded by his grandson — Henry, Earl of Essex (s): who being killed by a fall from his horse 13 March 1540, it came to his only child

Anne, married to William Parr, Baron of Kendal, and Marquis of Northampton: though she was divorced from him, yet she enjoyed this estate till her decease 26 January 1570 (t). [See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255. and more under the next parish.] [X].

It then came to her heir at law,

Walter Devereux, Viscount Hereford, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, and Earl of Essex, grandson of Sir John Devereux by Cecily Bourchier his wife, aunt to Henry, the last Earl of Essex. His son — Robert, Earl of Essex, sold it, 18 May 1594, to

Robert Wroth:

[X] He had, at the time of his decease, two parts of this maner: But his son Humfrey is not recorded to have had any part of it, only certain lands and tenements in both the Wakerings and Shoebury, which were before Sir John Peiton's, and Land-marsh and Littleboremead. Inquis. 34 Edw. III. & 6 Ric. II. — Alice Lady Nevill had the third part of two parts of the maners of Great and Little Waking.

Inquis. 18 Ric. II.

[X*] He had it again upon the following terms; Ac Rex restituit ei in feodo Manerium de Waking, ac Manerium de Wethersfeld, & diversa servicia, feoda militum, pro quibus Hugo remisit Roberto Walerand jus suum in Castr' & Maner' de Stoke-Curcy, ac in Manerio de Wadwey, cum Hundredo de Harham, ac in diversis serviciis & feodis militum, xxxv in fcedula. Pat. 50 Hen. III.

[Y] In 1430, a fine passed between Humfrey Duke of Gloucester 4th son of K. Henry IV. and others, plaintiffs, and Anne Countess of Stafford, deforc' of the maners of Great and Little Waking and Southorp, the right of William Newbold. And, in 1431, William released to Duke Humfrey, and others, all his right in those maners, and 6 messuages, 280 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 160 of pasture, and two fleets of water. Claus. 9, & 10 Hen. VI.

Sir John Cope Kt. and Bart. had the reversion of both the Wakerings.

They were afterwards in the family of Higbam, whose residence was at Boreham: John Higbam Esq; of Sir Hughs in Great Badow, married Sarah, daughter of Edward, younger son of Sir William Harris of Shenfield, in Margareting; whose son,——John Higbam Esq; dyed possessed of it 26 November 1735, leaving two daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, and Sarah, one of whom was married to John Tyrell Esq; of Hatfeild-Peverell, a near relation of the late Sir John Tyrell Bart. and the other to Captain Richardson.

The Maner house hath been long demolished: It stood by Pales Pitt at the coming into the street. The Courts are kept at Little-Wakering-hall.

The Maner of BARROW-HALL is the next considerable one in this parish. The mansion house stands half a mile west from the Church. In old records this Maner is written Berrewera, and Villa de Berwe. It takes in a great part of this parish, and the demesne lands extend into Little Wakering.

Phindac was possessed of it before the Conquest; and at the time of the Survey Richard son of Earl Gislebert [Z].

The ancientest possessors after that upon record were Families furnamed Coleman, and de Berwe.

In 1289, Gilbert Coleman, held a marsh called Sandfleet, in Rochford Hundred, containing 100 acres (u). We shall find this mentioned afterwards as parcel of this maner.

William de Barwe, who dyed in 1366, held the Maner of Barwe, jointly with Joane his wife deceased, of Sir Walter Fitz-Humfrey.——James his grandson, was his heir.

Maud, wife of John Coleman, held it in 1374, of John Welde, by knight's service, with lands in Pritelwell, and Sandfleet-marsh, containing 100 acres.——James de Barowe was her son and heir. She had been married first to William Malden (w).

It was afterwards in the Family furnamed de Pritelwell. For John Pritelwell granted to John Wakeryng, Clerk, and others, a messuage, one mill, 256 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 146 of wood, 140 of marsh and 50s. 4d. rent, in Barwe, Little Wakering, and Thundersleigh, which they conveyed to John Pyncherne in 1407. And to Thomas Pynchon and Alice his wife, in 1426, Robert Warenor, and others, granted their maner of Barwe-hall.—In 1458, Thomas Pynchon son of the last mentioned, and Elizabeth his wife, granted this maner, and lands and tenements called Colmans, with Doveyerd marsh, and Sandflete, in Prittlewell, Canvey-island &c. to William Lawfell, Gent. The same year, Thomas Spencer &c. granted their maner of Barrow-hall, with one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 2 of wood, and 500 of marsh, in Little Wakering, Pritelwell and Eastwood. And, in 1482, John Brigge released all his right in this maner, and in Colmans, Doveyerd-marsh, and Sandflete, to William Lawfell, and James Adfere, Gent. and to Richard Shadwell, Esq; (x). Concerning the Pynchon family, see in the other Volume, p. 65, 66.

It was next in the Sbaa family of Horndon on the hill. Sir John Sbaa, at the time of his decease in 1503, held this maner of Barowe-hall, with appertenances, and 300 acres of arable, 300 of pasture, 100 of meadow, and 400 of wood, in Little Barowe, Colmans, both the Wakerings, Pritwell, Eastwood, Leigh, Reyleigh, Thundersley, the two Shoberys, Shopland, Sutton, Hadleigh, and Stanbridge, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the service of 16d. a year. His son——Edward, or Edmund, Sbaa, held the same at the time of his decease 24 March 1532, leaving an only daughter and heir

Alice, then four years old (y). She brought it afterwards to her husband William Poley Esq; a branch of the Poleys of Wormingford in this County, and of Boxted in Suffolk. [See above, p. 217. and in the other Volume, p. 233. 484.]

But, in the mean time we find, that Thomas Sbaa Esq; dyed 22 May 1546, possessed of the maners of Barrowhall and Colmans, which he held of the King, as of his Honor of Rayleigh; and left——Thomas his son ten years old (z), who probably dyed young; for it centered in the Poley family.

Alice Poley aforesaid dyed 7 March 1558, and her husband William Poley 17 Decemb. 1587, holding this maner of Barrow-hall with Aldams fee, of the Honor of Raileigh.——John Poley Esq; their eldest son and heir, afterwards knighted, at the time of his decease 7 December 1593, held this maner, with Aldams fee; and two marshes called Barrow gore, and Doveyerd, and two woods named Great and Little Wybornes &c. and Samuells farm in South-Church.——William his brother and heir was then 24 years old (a). It continued in this family till 23d August 1720, when Mr. Poley sold the maner and demesnes, with Samuells farm, to Robert Surman Esq; Deputy-Cashier of the South-Sea Company, for the sum of 4749 l. 8 s. 2 d. Upon the forfeiture of his estates, This, then valued at 133 l. a year, being sold, 14 December 1723, by the South-Sea Company, was purchased, for the Sum of 2950 l. by Samuel Rusb Esq; of the Park in Southwark. He dyed 13 March 1724-5, and was succeeded by his son——John Rusb Esq; whose son——John Rusb of Benhall-hall Esq; enjoyed it: and it continues in that family. [For a further account of them, see the other Volume, p. 300.]

There is another Barrow-hall in East wood, and Berwes in Little Thurrock.

ADAMS FEE, so named from Adam Fitz-Simon, otherwise Aldams Fee, and vulgarly Aldermans, a reputed Maner that goes with Barrowe-hall, is only a Farm of about 20 l. a year. Nothing belongs to it but some free-hold tenements. It abutteth on the road leading to the Church.

LOVETOTES, is a considerable Estate lying in the two Wakerings, and parishes of Shopland, Great Stambridge, Little Shobery, South-Church, Ley, Raley, Bemfleet, and Stanford; and holden of the Honor of Raley by the service of a quarter of a knight's fee.

It took its name from the Lovetot family, and is supposed to be the carucate of land, which Walter de St. John held in 1259. He had a son, Walter, who dyed without issue; and a daughter Margery, married to Edward Shardlow. In 1276, they passed this estate by fine; being 140 acres of arable, and 160 of marsh; to John de Lovetot (b).

William de Brianzon, who dyed in 1310, held this tenement, comprehending a capital messuage, 244 acres of arable, pasture, and wood, and 7 l. 4 s. rent. And of Adam Fitz-Simon he held 10 acres of arable called Wanelockes-land. — John was his son and heir.

John Bluet, and his wife Alianore, held it about the year 1348. and we find it then described as one capital messuage, a dove-house, 130 acres of arable, 60 acr. of wood. Littlebingsworth marsh, belonging to it, held of the Honor of Bologne, by the like service (c).

The said Alianore had for her first husband William Brianzon; and her own and her husbands Bluet's heirs, were, Sir Peter de Dufaunce, son of Margaret one of their daughters; and Alianore, another of their daughters (d). They gave name to a nominal Maner called BLUETS; which belonged in 1372 to Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford, and Thomas de Staple held then of it 14 acres of land in this parish (e).

Richard Allen, who dyed 23 June 1517, held 600 acres of marsh called Small-goore and Temple-goore, in this parish and Fulnes, by fealty.

A messuage here called Goodens, and a Marsh called New marsh, belonged in 1543 to Edward Baker Esq; (f).

From this parish a Family of note took their surname De Wakering. John Wakering of Wakering-place, living partly in the reigns of K. Edward III. and K. Richard II. had two sons, William; and John, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster. — William, the eldest son, was father of William; and of John, that was Master of the Rolls, and Keeper of the Privy Seal in the time of K. Henry V. — William, eldest son and heir, had two sons named John. One was Archdeacon of Canterbury; consecrated Bishop of Norwich 31 May 1416; a person eminent for wisdom and learning, and one of the English Divines sent to the Council of Constance; also a benefactor to Benet, or Corpus-Christi-College Cambridge. He had Canewdon and other lands in this County, and dyed 9 April 1425 (g). — John, the other son, sold, in 1427, all his right in Wakering-place to Robert Darcy. He had two sons, Ralph and John. — Ralph was father of — Richard; and he of — Edmund; who by his first wife, Margaret daughter of John Aucher had James; Gilbert, a knight, who dyed 24 Decemb. 1616; and Richard, that dyed in 1583. By his second wife he had Ralph, father of Gilbert, and John. — James Wakering, the eldest son and heir, lived at Kelvedon; and by Margaret daughter of John Bird had — John, his son and heir, of Lincolns-inn, and of Church-hall in Kelvedon in 1634. He married Mary, eldest daughter and coheir of Dionysius Palmer of Felsted Esq; and had by her Dionysius; and Mary, wife of Thomas Wilcox of Tottenham Esq; — Dionysius Wakering Esq; the son and heir, was one of the Knights for this County in Oliver Cromwell's parliaments in 1654 and 1656.

Mary, his sole daughter and heir, was the first wife of Francis St. John, of Langthorpe in Northamptonshire, Esq; (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 150.] [A].

Mr. James Cownden; Robert Harrison; Richard Baker; Abraham Beard &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Here are Alms houses for six people, but without endowment.

Through this parish is the passage into Foulness-island.

And here is a Fair July 25.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, stands pleasantly in the street, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In the Tower, which hath a Spire shingled, are 4 Bells.

This Church was given to Bileigh-Abbey near Maldon, and was a Rectory in their gift till 1283, when Richard de Gravesend, Bishop of London, by his act dated at Copford, appropriated the great Tithes to them; reserving the Collation of the Vicarage to himself and successors, Bishops of London, in whom it hath continued ever since.

Upon the suppression of Bileigh-Abbey, the Rectory of this Church was granted, in 1538, to Richard Mabott, Cl. Master of the Hospital of St. Thomas the Martyr, in Southwark, and his successors. But upon the suppression of that, it was granted, in 1551, to John Gresham, and his heirs (i). John Southcott passed it by fine, in 1556, to Sir John Ayliffe, who had it at the time of his decease 20 October 1556 (k).

It was lately in Capt. Leonard Kilham, and now in his heirs.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1167 l.

15. LITTLE WAKERING

lies north of the last.

A freeman was possessed of this in Edward the Confessor's time, and after his death Robert the son of Wimarce. At the Survey it was part of the large possessions of Suene of Essex [B].

Here is only one MANER.

Waking-hall, the mansion-house, stands a little way north-east from the Church.

This Maner was in the same hands, as that of Great Waking. Namely, after the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, in John de Nevill, who held it of John de Brews [C], by the service of 1 d. Hugh de Nevill, who held it of the King as of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of one knight's fee, and suit of Court, &c. John Nevill, of Essex (*). — Humsfrey de Bohun (†). — Henry Bourchier Earl of Essex (l). — Henry, his son. — Anne, his daughter and heir, married to William Parr, Marquis of Northampton. Under him, Thomas Shaa, who dyed 22 May, 1546, held one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 400 of marsh, &c. in Little-Waking, Shopland, and Sutton, called Shelford, and Brade-worth (m).

And when the said Anne Countess of Northampton dyed, 26 January 1570, she held the maners of Great and Little Waking, with appertenances, and 100 messuages, 40 cottages, 100 gardens, 60 orchards, a water-mill, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 1000 of pasture, 3000 of fresh Marsh, and 2000 of salt marsh, . . . s. rent, free fishery, wrec of the sea, and a Beacon; in Great and Little Waking, Eastwood, Lee, South Bemfleet, North and South Subery, Barling, Fulnes, South-Church, and Pacletham; and free-warren in those parishes; of the Honor of Raleigh, by knight's service, then worth 60 l. a year (n).

This estate came afterwards into the Devereux Family Earls of Essex (o); and to — Sir John Cope; &c. and descended as Great Waking to John Tyrell Esq; Landwic, a large farm; and Oldbury, and Jaques, in Great and Little Waking, belong to John Henniker Esq; see above, p. 17.

Lovetots, described under Great Waking, lies partly in this parish.

The Grapenel family, of Lachindon, had some lands here in 1298 (p).

John Pritelwell had in this parish Barmesflete-marsh, and land and tenements called Peverels; in 1420 (q).

Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, held in this parish, in 1519, of Henry Earl of Essex, 226 acres, and 60 acr. of arable land, by the service of 10 s. per ann. (r).

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Tower hath a spire shingled. On the right hand side of the Belfrey door are the Arms of Bishop Waking. A pelican with a mitre in chief. Probably he was at the charge of building the Tower. On the left hand side, the Arms of France, England, and Bohun, quarterly.

This Church belonged of old to the Hospital of St. Bartholomew near West-Smithfield, London, to which the Rectory or Great Tithes were appropriated, and they continued patrons of the Vicarage till their Suppression, when they came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. refounding that Hospital, granted, 13 January 1546, among other things, the Rectory and Church of Little Waking, and the Advowson of the Vicarage, and Shernewarles marsh in this parish, to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London (f), Governors of that Hospital.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 784 l.

The Priory of Stoke in Suffolk had a portion of tithes of 32 s. given to it, most probably by Ralph Waking [D].

[D] For that Ralph, son of John Waking, who sold Waking-Place in Great-Waking to Darcy, disposed of his lands in Essex, by reason of the Wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, in K. Edward the IVth's time, and betook himself to the College of Stoke near Clare; giving lands to that College in this parish, from whence tythes were due and rented by the Abbey of Bileigh. This is most probable, but not quite certain.

or Berling. The name seems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Bap, a boar, and ing, a meadow, or pasture; with the addition of l in the middle.

This parish lies north of the Wakerings, near a Creek that communicates with the Rochford-Stream, adjoining to Potten-island.

It belonged to the Crown in Edward the Confessor's reign, who gave it to the Cathedral Church of St. Pauls in London, as appears by his Charter (s) [E].

At the time of the Survey it was found to belong to the Canons of St. Paul's [F]: And, in 1181, this Maner had in demesne 480 acres of arable land, each acre worth 6d. a year; 18 acres, sometimes sown sometimes pasture, each worth 8d. and 100 acres of marsh, worth each, one year with another, 3s. And in the marsh and common or mowing ground, was feed for 300 sheep with weathers. The mill answered weekly for one bushel of corn ground free. There was keeping for 6 cows, the profit of each of which was 2s. a year (t) [G].

BARLING-HALL,

the Maner house, stands about half a mile north-east from the Church.

This Estate continues in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, which hath granted it upon renewable leases to several persons. George Affer Esq; held so the demesnes of the Maner, and a Marsh; and from him they descended to

Thomas Drew Esq; who married his granddaughter. [See above, p. 298.]

is another small Maner in this parish, so named from an owner or occupier. We find in records, That one John de Mockyng, who dyed in 1362, held land in Horndon (u).

The mansion-house is half a mile west from the Church.

It belonged to a Freeman in Edward the Confessor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo bishop of Bayeux [H].

We have no account of it after that till K. Edward the IVth's reign. Then Robert Fitz-Symond held the maner of Morkkyns within the Hundred of Rochford; — Joane, wife of Robert Tymperley, was his daughter and heir (w): See above under North Shoebury.

Thomas Wiseman, Gent. at the time of his decease 22 Novemb. 1580, held this maner of Mucking-hall, with a parcel of land called Taylors in Barling. — John, son of his son William, was his heir (x). [See above under N. Bemfleet.]

In 1630, Dionysius Palmer held in fee the maner of Mucking-Hall in Barling, Shopland, Great and Little Wakering, and Fulness; — Mary, wife of John Wakering, and Catharine, wife of John Wiseman, were his daughters and coheirs (y). By this maner's extending into other Parishes, one might have guessed, Odo Bishop of Bayeux had been hereabout, who was an excellent improver of demesnes.

This Estate belonged afterwards to Sir Francis St. John, Bart. and then to Sir John Bernard, who had married his daughter, now to his son — Sir Robert Bernard, Bart.

In 1253, Henry de Cornhill, Dean of St. Pauls, purchased a marsh of Radulphus Cemenarius for ten marks. This marsh is leased out with the rest of the maner's demesnes.

In 1254, Abfolon, son of Richard de la Weylate, gave lands in Barling to the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls. We find a family of Le Waleys or de la Weylate, also in Shopland, perhaps so named from their residence near the Sea-walls, or in Wallet island.

In 1322, the Church of St. Pauls came to a composition with Adam, son of Simon de Barling, whereby the said Adam and his tenants obliged themselves to raise a wall on his own grounds to keep out the inundation of the sea or river, and a perch of wall upon the demesne lands of the Dean and Chapter; in consideration of which he and his heirs were to have the entire profit of the Fishery of the upper part of the Stream for ever (z).

Dame Jane Sith Lewes gave Bolles croft of 4 acres, and Stones croft of 1 acre, probably for an Obit (a).

17. SHOPLAND

lies between Barling, Sutton, South-Church, and Prittlewell.

The name of it is otherwise written in records, Schopland, Scoland, Shopeland, Shupeland, Scopeland. From whence it is derived, we cannot with certainty say: There is such a Saxon word as Scol, a school, and Scop, a poet; and land is a common word: but how applicable to this place, we submit to the reader's judgment.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, a Freeman, and afterwards Ingelric, were possessed of Scope-land; Eustace the great Earl of Bologne held it at the time of the Survey [*H].

There are two Maners in this parish. 1. The Maner of Shopland. 2. . . . that of Botyllers, or Butlers.

SHOPLAND-HALL,

the maner-house of the first, is situated near the Church.

This Maner belonged early to the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

By a certificate, in K. Henry the third's reign, of the knights fees of Robert Fitz-Walter belonging to his Barony of Baynard, it appears, that Philip de Cantelough held under him the fifth part of a fee in Scoland (b).

In 1289, Henry le Waleys held this maner of Scopland of the Barony of Bologne, by suit at Wyham Court from month to month (c).—Walter Fitz-Robert, i. e. son of Robert the first of the Fitz-Walter family, left it to his son—Robert Lord Fitz-Walter; and to him was Here are no charitable Gifts; but only near the Church is an Ale-house, the rent of which is applied to the reparation of the Church.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace, tiled. The Chancel, and a south aisle belonging to it, are leaded. At the east end stands the Tower, with a Spire shingled, containing 4 Bells.

This Rectory hath belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls ever since the reign of K. Edward the Confessor: They are not only Patrons but also Ordinaries of the place; which is subject wholly to their peculiar jurisdiction.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 716l.

granted a Charter of free-warren through all his demesne lands in Shopland and Shenefend (d). This Lord enfeoffed in this maner Robert de la Ward, who married his daughter Ida, or Idonea; and in 1307, they held it jointly of the King in capite as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of one knight's fee (e). By this Ida Robert had one daughter and coheir,

Margaret; but by a former wife had another daughter and coheir, named Joanna, married to Hugh de Meynill [I]. In 1333 these two, Hugh and Joanna, held a moiety of the maner of Shopland of the King, in ca. by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee, and two suits yearly, at St. Martins le Grand London, and at the Court of the Honor of Bologne at Wytham from month to month, for the whole maner (f). We hear no further of Meynill, or Meignill as he is some time called, or his heirs, in this parish: so that probably they dyed without issue.

Ida was remarried to Hugh de Nevill, and at the time of her decease in 1361, held this whole maner, which her father had given her for her life (g).

As to Margaret, or Margery, the other coheirefs, she was married to Thomas de Staple Esq; And they two held jointly in her right, a moiety of this maner, and of Heghwerd marsh; and 6 acres more in this parish; of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne. They held also jointly, 3 messuages, 300 acr. of arable, 3 of meadow, 5 of wood, 500 of marsh, 30s. rent, and a pound of pepper and of cummin, in this parish, and in Pritelwell, Hadleigh, Raureth, and Great Wakering, partly of the Honor of Bologne, and [I] This account we have from records. "Shupland manerium in Com' Essex datum per Robertum Filium Walteri cum Ida filia Roberto de la Warde, tentum in capite de Honore Bononie. partly of that of Raley. Likewise they held, in this parish, Taltelacre of Thomas att Cock, by the service of 2 s. And 10 acres of Henry Coc, by the service of 3 s. a year.—Moreover Apeton-hall in Canewdon. This Thomas was Serjeant at arms to K. Edward III. had the Bailiſhip of Rochford Hundred; and dying in 1372, was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph, being ſucceeded by his ſon—Richard. [See above, p. 268.] (b). Margery, widow of Thomas de Staple, was remarried to Sir John Chanceaux, and at the time of her deceaſe, in 1389, held 2 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 5 of wood, 300 of marſh, &c. as above. (i). [See more under Prittlewell, and Hockley, p. 287. 295.]

Shopland maner remained ſeveral years divided into two Moieties.

In 1381, Thomas att Coke, and Catharine his wife, held a moiety of the maner of Shopland; a moiety of Heyward-marſh excepted; of the gift of Edward de Wodeham. [See under North-Shobury.]—Thomas was his ſon and heir (k).

In 1488, Robert Maudeſley confirmed to Thomas Burgoyne and John Sygar of London a moiety of his maner of Shopland; and his maner of Botillers (l). We have no account how Maudeſley came into either.

Margaret, wife of Richard Churcyard, which dyed 16 November 1498, held a moiety of this maner; and left—James her ſon and heir (m).

Sir Thomas Darcy was the next poſſeſſor of this maner, and ſold it in 1535 to William Harris Eſq; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 21 September 1555, held it of Richard Lord Riche, as of his Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and then worth 20 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year.—William his ſon ſucceeded him (n).—Chriſtopher Harrys Eſq; held alſo Shopland-hall of the Honor aforeſaid, at the time of his deceaſe 2 September 1569, but his ſon—Chriſtopher did not (o).

Darcy's and Harris's poſſeſſion muſt be underſtood only of a Moiety of this Maner. For, in 1561, Richard Lord Riche purchaſed a Moiety of the maner of Shopland-hall of Roland Clerke, and Elizabeth Fane, widow, by a fine levied: for which they had the Queen's pardon, 4 Novemb. 1562 (p). The Lord Riche dyed poſſeſſed of it, 12 June 1566, as did his ſucceſſors Earls of Warwick (q). Upon the partition of their eſtates this came among the co-heirs. The quit-rents of this maner in 1651, were 28 s. 4 d.

It belonged afterwards to William Gillingham, of Kent, Gent. who had ten children—Iſaac, his eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded him.

It is now in Edmund Tyrell, of Stowmarket Eſq;

The Maner of BOTYLLERS, was originally a diſtinct Hamlet; being ſtyled in records Butlers and Shopland; and the Maner, and Advowſon of the Church, of Butlers.

The manſion-houſe lies on the right hand ſide of the road going from Barling to this Church.

It took that name from ſome ancient owners. William le Botyller, who dyed in 1261, held of Robert de Tybetott 102 acres of arable, and one marſh, in Shopland, by the rent of 36 s. per ann.—Hugh was his ſon and heir. This is the family which gave name to Butlers-Hamſtalls at Prittlewell; and had alſo 40 acres of arable and marſh in Wakering (r).

As the maner of Shopland-Hall went with a daughter of Robert Fitz-Walter to de la Ward, another daughter might be married to a Botyller; but of this I have no evidence. Hugh le Botiller aforeſaid, at the time of his deceaſe in 1279, held, by the ſame payment as above, this eſtate, of the heir of . . . Scopland (s); which is a hint that Botyllers was derived from the Hall maner.—William Botiller, his ſon and heir, dyed in 1328. He held in Shopland one meſſuage, with 150 acres of arable, of Hugh de Nevyle, in ſocage, by payment of 24 s. per ann. and ſuit at the Court of Shopland every three weeks;—John was his ſon and heir (t); of whom we do not hear any further here, nor of his family.

In 1448, Robert Maudeſley confirmed to Thomas Burgoyne, and John Sygar above-mentioned, his maner of Butlers in Shopland (u).

James Keloun, and Editha his wife, paſſed this eſtate by fine, in 1501, to Hugh Oldham, made Biſhop of Exeter in 1504. At the time of his deceaſe, 25 June 1519, he held a moiety of the maner of Shopland, 300 acres of arable and paſture, and 3 l. rent here, of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.—Ralph, ſon of his elder brother John, was his heir (w).

In 1562, Richard Lord Riche, and Thomas Franke Eſq; purchaſed this maner, with the moiety of the maner of Shopland-Hall, of Roland Clerke, and Elizabeth Fane widow, by fine, for which they had the Queen's pardon (x). Richard Lord Riche was poſſeſſed of this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe; and ſo was his ſon—Robert. His grandſon—Robert, Earl of Warwick, who dyed 24 March 1619, held the maner of Butlers with appertenances, and a moiety of the maner of Shopland-hall, and 20 meſſuages, 10 cottages, 10 tofts, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 60 of wood, 160 of marſh, 100 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent in Butlers, Shopland, Sutton, Pritwell, Leigh, Hadleigh, Great Wakering, Shobery, Rochford, Hawkwell, Rawreth, and Crekeſheth; and the Advowſons of the Churches of Butlers and Shopland (y). In 1651, the rent of the moiety of the maner of Shopland, and of Butlers farm, was 120 l. a year.

Upon the partition of the Estates of the noble Family of Warwick, this was purchased by Richard Lord Viscount Castlemain, afterwards Earl Tilney, who sold it again to his Steward

Berney Brograve, Esq; Mr. Thomas Carr; John Martin &c. have also some lands here.

In this small parish, there were, in 1721, but four Farm houses, a Vicarage-house, and one cottage, though formerly more. Nor was there any Ale-house, nor Poors-rate. There are in it no copyhold-lands, nor other lands paying to any maner whatsoever.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is small, of one pace with the Chancel; and the whole tiled [K].

This Church was given to the Abbey of St. Osith in this County; and to it the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated, and a Vicarage ordained about the year 1237. Of this Rectory,

John Morrison, B. A. 13 Novemb. 1741, is a kind of peninsula, having on the east Wallassea-island.

The name is otherwise written in records, Pachesham, Padesham, Pagesham, Pagglesham, Pakelesham, Paklesham, Patelesham.

Ham, the latter part of the name, signifies house, farm, or village; as for Pakel, or Pagel, it seems to have been the name of some ancient Saxon owner.

In this parish are four Maners, or reputed Maners. 1. The Maner of Paklesham, or Church-hall. 2. East-Hall, and 3. . . South-hall. 4. West-hall.

CHURCH-HALL

stands near the east end of the Church, which occasioned the name.

Ingulf gave this Maner to the Church of St. Peter at Westminster, 29 December 1066, and the grant was confirmed by K. Edward the Confessor (*). That Church held it at the time of the Survey [L], and remained possessed of it till the dissolution of Monasteries.

Under the Abbey it was holden by Families furnamed de Maldon, and Warner.

William de Maldon, at the time of his decease in 1368, held the maner of Cherche-Hall in Pakelesham, of the Abbot of Westminster in socage, by the rent of 9 l. per ann. (c).—John, his son, or grandson, held it in 1428, for the rent of 10 l. Then it came to and of the Advowson of the Vicarage, the Abbot and Convent remained possessed till their dissolution. They then came to the Crown, which presented to the Vicarage from 1550 till 1583 (z). Bp. Bonner had it in 1557 (a), but it was soon taken from him. In 1587, February 9, Qu. Elizabeth granted this Rectory and Church of Shopland, with appertinances to Edmund Downing, and Miles Dodding, &c. to hold of the maner of East-Greenwich, in socage, and by payment of 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. (b). The 9th of July following, they conveyed the premisses, by Indenture, to

Thomas Tyrell, citizen of London; and they have continued ever since in his Family, being now in Edmund Tyrell of Stowmarket Esq;

This small parish is rated to the land-tax at 313 l.

The Vicarage is of so small value that not being worth the Charge of Institution, it was held many years only by sequestration.

John Warner of Warners-Hall in Great-Waltham, Esq; son of Joane sister of Maldon. He held it in fee-farm in 1439, and his son—John Warner, in 1444; being then succeeded by his son—John Warner; who, at the time of his decease in 1473, held this maner of Pakelesham, alias Chirche-hall, and 200 acres of arable, 100 acr. of salt-marsh, 100 of pasture, 8 of wood, and 40 s. rent of the Abbot of Westminster (d).—Henry Warner held it also at the time of his decease 21 March 1504, by the service of 9 l. a year (e); being the last who held it of the Abbot.—John, his son, held it of Richard Lord Riche as of his maner of South-Bemflete, by fealty and yearly rent of 9 l. He was succeeded in 1552, by his brother—Henry (f). [For a more particular account of the Warner family, see the other Volume, p. 84, 85. 250.]

In 1554, Henry Warner passed this estate by fine to Antony Browne, Esq; afterwards knighted, with the Advowson of Packlesham-Church (g).

If Browne bought the Advowson, he seems to have been over-reached; for no private person presented after the Abbey but Sir Robert Southwell, in 1545; and that is said to be for that one turn. And Qu. Mary granted the Advowson, 3 March 1554, to Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London, and his successors. Sir Antony Browne dyed 16 May 1567, possessed of this estate, as did his great nephew—Wistan Browne Esq; 1 August 1580. And Wistan's uncle and next surviving heir—John Brown Esq; 26 February 1585 (b) [M]. It continued in this Family till about the year 1661, when Sir Antony Browne sold it to John Goldesburgh Esq; Of his son it is said to have been purchased by Sir Francis St. John. But it belongs now to John Butler Esq; of Warminghurst in Suffex, Knight of the Shire for that County.

The Maners of EAST-HALL, and SOUTH-HALL.

I join them together, because they were for several years in the same possessors. East-hall was known at first only by the general name of The Maner of Paklesham, and Paklesham-hall.

They are styled East-hall, and South-hall, on account of their situation with regard to the Church, from which each of them is distant about half a mile.

These lands belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to two Freemen: At the time of the Survey they were holden by William de Warren; and Robert son of Corbucion [N].

The ancientest possessors after them upon record, were the Families of Coggeshall, and Sutton. Ralph de Coggeshall, who dyed in 1305, held the maner of Paklesham of Sir Drugo de Barentyne, by the service of 2 marks a year, and suit at the Hundred of Rochford from three weeks to three weeks. In which maner there was a tenement called Rogwerd, a member of the same, with 150 acres of land, holden of the heirs of Thomas de Stodham, by the service of one pound of cummin. — John de Coggeshall, his son and successor, held also this maner of Paklesham, in 1339, of Drogo Barentyne, one of the heirs of William de Blamster of Childe Canefeld, by the service of two marks; which Drogo held the said maner of Adomar de Valence, by knight's service, and suit at the Hundred of Rochford; and 2 d. for Ward-penny, and 6 d. for hidage. — John de Coggeshall, at the time of his decease in 1361, held also this maner of Pagesham of Warin Trussel, by the service of two marks, and the maner of Rogherd of the Prior of Leghes. — Henry was his son and heir (i). We hear no more of the Coggeshall Family here. See more of them in the other Volume, p. 162.

In 1340, Hugh de Naunton held in Paklesham lands and tenements of the Honor of Raley; by the service of half a knight's fee (k): but which of these maners it was, is not more particularly specified.

Sir Richard Sutton granted, in 1373, to Robert Fitz-William of Newendon a moiety of the maner of Southalle in Paklesham, and a moiety of Talward marsh in Great Stambridge. And a moiety of the same was released, in 1387, by Robert de Teye, to William, son and heir of the said Robert Fitz-William. Again, in 1417, John Fordham Esq; released to Lewis John Esq; and others, all his right in the maner of Southalle, and in Talward marsh (l).

These maners were soon after united, in the possession of the Paklesham family; some of whom held them under James Boteler Earl of Wiltshire. In 1438, Thomas Paklesham released to John Broke and his heirs, all his right in one messuage, 12 tofts, 240 acres of arable, and 12 s. rent, in this parish, and in Great Stambridge, and Canewdon. And Richard Paklesham, who dyed in 1453, held this maner of Paklesham-hall of James Ormond Earl of Wiltshire. — Thomas, his son and heir, was then 36 years old (m). [Concerning this Paklesham family see more under Hockley, Prittlewell, Shobery, &c.]

Thomas Bullen, Earl of Wiltshire, had this estate afterwards; and then his younger daughter

Mary, married first to William Carey Esq; and afterwards to

Sir William Stafford: She held, at the time of her decease, 19 July 1543, Baggotts-marsh, Paklesham, East-hall, Southhall, and divers lands, tenements, &c. thereto belonging. — Henry Carey, afterwards Lord Hunsdon, was her son and heir (n). He sold these maners of East-hall, and South-hall, with appertenances in Paklesham, to Richard Lord Ricke, who had them at the time of his decease 12 June 1566, they being then 41 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year (o). They continued in that family, Earls of Warwick; and in 1651 Southhall was lett for 180 l. a year: and the site and demesnes of East-hall for 110 l. The quit-rents of this were 8 l. 8 s. 8 d. but Southhall kept no Court.

Upon the partition of that noble Family's estates, this fell to the share of Sir Henry St. John; and his son — Henry, Viscount Bolingbroke sold it to

Sir Francis St. John; from whom they have descended to Sir John Bernard; and to — Sir Robert Bernard, Bart. with several other considerable estates mentioned before.

The Maner of WEST-HALL was so called on account of its situation with regard to the Church; from which the mansion house is distant about a mile west.

This maner belonged to a Freeman in Edward the Confessor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, to Ralph Bainard [O]. — Geffrey, his son and successor, was father of — William Baynard; who for joining with William Malet, Helias Earl of Maine, and others, in a conspiracy against K. Henry I. was deprived of his Barony, and estates: and that King gave them to his Steward,

Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, progenitor of the ancient Earls of Clare, from which Robert descended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter: [See in the other Volume, p. 427. 539.]

In 1214, Ralph de Genges held half a knight's fee in Essex, in the Hundred of Rathford (Rochford), of the Barony of Baynard, of Robert Fitz-Walter (p). And, under Robert Fitz-Walter, in 1328, the heirs of Hugh de Bromford held likewise half a fee, in the vill of Paklesham.

The heirs of Robert Fitz-William held the same under Walter Fitz-Walter, that dyed in 1386 (q).

Joane daughter of . . . Trusbut, married first to Thomas Colt Esq; and afterwards to Sir William Parre, held, at the time of her decease in 1475, the maner of Patelesham of the Priory of Prittlewell. — John Colt Esq; her son and heir also held the maner of West Hall of the Priory of Prittlewell: and departing this life 22 October 1521, was succeeded by his eldest son — Sir George Colt (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 485. 491.]

In 1573, William Strangman, held the maner of West-Hall in Pakelesham of the Lord Rich of his maner of East-Hall; and dying 8 December that year, was succeeded by his son — Bartholomew, then 33 years old. He held this maner or tenement called West-hall or Pakelsham-place, and a tenement called Dawes and Michill yard, of Robert Lord Riche as of his maner of East-hall, by knight's service and payment of 26 s. a year. — Robert was his son and heir (s). [See above, p. 280. 287.]

William Wiseman Esq; of Gr. Badow Park, at the time of his decease 12 October 1622, held this maner, or farm, of Westhall, with appertinances, of Robert Earl of Warwick, by the foresaid rent of 26 s. And 43 acres, parcel of the same, of John Goldsborough Esq; of his maner of Church-hall, in socage, by the yearly rent of 22 s. 6 d. — William, his son and heir, was then 11 years old (t).

It hath passed, as the foregoing, from Sir Francis St. John to Sir John Bernard, and Sir Robert Bernard, Barts.

William Kersteman, Gent. Mr. Nehemiah Brooks &c. have also some lands here.

In 1473, Robert Fitz-Symond held 200 acres of marsh, in this parish, and Little Wakering, of the Honor of Railegh (u).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, stands low, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In the Tower are 3 Bells.

This Rectory was given, with the capital Maner, to Westminster-Abbey, by Ingulf above-mentioned, and continued in the gift of that Monastery till its suppression. When it was turned into a Bishopric by K. Henry VIII. 17 December 1540, this became part of its endowment. Upon its dissolution 1 April 1550, K. Edward VI. granted the Rectory of Pagle-sham, with others, to Nicolas Ridley, Bishop of London, and his successors. And Qu. Mary, 3 March 1553, confirmed it to Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London, and his successors (w).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 741 l.

is next to Pakelesham, being bounded on the north by the river Crouch.

The name of it is otherwise written in records, Cannedon, Canondon, Canvedon, Canvidon, Canudon, Canwedon, and Carendun. Dun in Saxon signifies a Hill, or high situation, as the chief of this parish is; and the first part of the name might be taken from Canute, or Cnut.

It is certain, that the Danes very much infested these parts. And if some one of their chiefs, called Canute, fixed his seat or habitation at the Hall here, it might give rise to the name [P].

It is certain, that it was the Habitation of some Romans during their continuance in Britain. For, about 1712, in opening a gravel-pit in a field near the Hall, twelve Urns were found; and, the year after, upon a further search, about 14 or 18 more. They were so thin and tender; that, notwithstanding the utmost care, only two could be taken up whole. One was near six inches in diameter, the other somewhat more.

[P] How much Suene, and his son Cnute, infested these parts, may be seen in the Saxon Chronicle, from p. 143. to p. 151. J. Weever says, it was so called from King Canutus the Dane, who kept his court here; qu. Canuti domus. Fun. Monum. p. 408. But the latter part of the name was certainly from dun, a hill.

In one of them were ashes and pieces of bone: the rest were filled with undistinguishable mould. There were not two exactly alike, but they differed either in the substance, or size, or shape, or colour, figures, &c. This account was given by the Rev. George Wheatley, Curate here in 1721; a learned and ingenious person, well skilled in the Saxon language, who had translated into English Gregory's Pastoral, from King Alfred's version.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas Pocock, Rector of Danbury, dug here about six years after, and found many Urns of several sorts of clay, and different sizes, which immediately fell to pieces; So that he could not preserve one entire, and they had nothing in them. They lay upon a stratum of gravel about eighteen inches from the surface of the ground.

This was a place proper enough for an Officer under the Comes Littoris Saxonici, to have an eye upon the Pirates, as he might have access to it either by sea or by land.

This was one of the Lordships belonging to Suene, who most probably had it before the Conquest, as no former possessor is mentioned in the Survey [2].

After the forfeiture of his grandson Henry de Essex, frequently mentioned before, especially in p. 273. this large Parish was divided into five Maners. 1. The maner of Canewdon. 2. The maner of Apton-hall. 3. . . . that of Scottys. 4. . . . that of Lamborn-hall. 5. The Hamlet, and maner of Putefea.

The Maner of CANEWDON.

Canewdon-hall, the mansion house, stands on the north side of the Church. It hath been a strong fortified place, in the manner of a Castle, doubly trenched and fenced after the oldest fashion (x): the remains of the Moates are still visible.

The ancient possessors upon record after Henry de Essex was a Family furnamed de Cancellis; in French Chanceaux.

In 1289, John de Cancellis and Joane his wife, held the maner of Canewdon of the King in capite of his Honor of Raleigh, by the service of three parts of a knight's fee.—Joane, his widow, held also the same, at the time of her decease in 1306.—Sir Giles de Chanceus, their son, held it in like manner: and departed this life in 1317 (y).—John Chanceaux, his son and heir, was possessed of this estate, and of a marsh here called Le Norde; and of lands in Paklesham, Rochford, Wakering, and Hockley (z). We have no account of the time of his death, nor of his issue. But it still continued in the Chanceaux Family. For, Alianor, daughter of Margery Chanceaux, that dyed in 1370, held one toft, and 10 acres of land in Canewdon, formerly parcel of this maner, by the service of the 30th part of a knight's fee.—John de Chanceaux, her uncle, was her heir.—Margery, wife of Sir John de Chanceux at the time of her decease in 1389, held this maner, and the maner of Poresethe (Pudsey) in this parish: She had no issue by Chanceaux, unless it was Alianor above-mentioned: But by her first husband, Thomas de Staple, she had Elizabeth, wife of John Pritelwell, and Alice wife of John de Sutton (a). [See above, p. 310.] Some of the Family of Chanceaux have Epitaphs in this Church [R].

We have after that no account of the owners of this estate till the year 1485, when it was in the Darcy family. Thomas Darcy who dyed 23 September that year, held the maner of Canewdon, with appertenances, of the King, as of his Honor of Reyley, by the service of one knight's fee. And the maners of Sbernewards, and Loftmans, holden of this maner.—Roger, his son and heir, at the time of his decease 3 September 1508, held also the same, and the maners of Apeton-hall, and Pudsey-hall, in this parish. He had also great estates at Shopland, Maldon, Little Badow, South-minster, and other parts in this County.—Thomas Darcy Esq; his son (b), sold this maner, with lands in this parish, Hakewell, Affingdon, Paklesham, Stanbridge, and Wakering, to Thomas Armiger, Esq; and a fine was levied in 1553. He dyed possessed of the same 3 November 1558, leaving—Thomas his son and heir 25 years old (c).

Sir Nathan Wright, of Cranham-hall, Bart. dyed possessed of this estate 16 October 1727. His widow, remarried to Herbert Tryst Esq; enjoyed it till her decease 7 December 1741. Sir Nathan's only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth, is married to General Ogletborp, who enjoys this estate in her right. [See above, p. 105.]

This Maner being called in Domefday-book Carendun, is what made Weever say that here was a Clarendon-hall. See him, p. 408.

[R] This seems to be a branch of him who came in with William the Conqueror from Chauncy or Chanceau near Amiens in Picardie, to be found in the Roll of Battel-Abbey, from whom Sir Henry Chauncy of Hertfordshire derived himself; a Gentleman highly deserving of his Country, who spent near half a life in the laborious search of its Antiquities, and hath left a collection, for its usefulness, surpassed by none but Sir William Dugdale's Warwickshire.

name to, a Family furnamed de Apeton, William de Apetone, who dyed in 1268, or 1269, held in the village of Canewdone one messuage, 200 acres of arable, 35 s. 7 d. in homages and services, and a corn-mill, by the service of one knight's fee;—John, his son and heir, held in Canewdon and Rochford 280 acres of arable, 10 s. rent, and feed in the marsh for 200 sheep; and left—William his son and heir (d).

Another—John Apeton, who dyed in 1321, held a messuage with a garden, 240 acres of arable, in this parish, 6 acres of wood in Hakewell, and 22 s. rent of assize, of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of one knight's fee, and 8 d. rent to the hidage, suit of Court &c. and one marsh in Canefr called Lymwerd, of Peter de Heveningham;—John was his son and heir (e).

Thomas de Staple of Shopland, Esq; dyed in 1372, possessed of this maner except Acrefleet-marsh, and it went, as Canewdon Maner, to his female heirs.

Roger Darcy had it in 1508.—Sir Thomas and Geffrey Darcy in 1550. and—Anne Darcy, widow in 1558.—Thomas son of Geffrey was her heir (f).

In 1583, Edward Dier Esq; sold it to Thomas Smith.

Sir Arthur Harris, who dyed 9 Janu. 1631, held the maner of Apton-hall;—Sir C. anmer Harris, his son, had it after him (g).

It was next in Mr. Joseph Fishpöole of Billerca, who by a daughter of Mr. Prigmore of Kelvedon, left—Joseph his son and heir. He married Rebeccab, daughter of Nicolas Blackwell of Bradwell, near the Sea, Gent. and had by her, Joseph, and Thomas, who dyed young; John; and Anne married to Henry Abbot of Earl's Colne, Gent. — John Fishpool, of Billerca, Gent. was Sheriff of this County in 1749.

The Maner of Scottys, an estate of about 360 acres, took that name from some of its ancient owners furnamed Scott.

The mansion house is about a mile south from the Church.

This, according to Weever (b), was once called Breamstons, probably Briancons, from the ancient family of Brianzon mentioned above, p. 77. It appears, that in 1320 John de Brianzon held of the inheritance of John de Coggeshall, as of the maner of Bemfleete, by the service of half a knight's fee; in the vill of Canewdon, the moiety of a messuage, and 127 acres of arable, 13 of meadow, 19 of pasture, and 30 s. 6 d. rent; and the marsh of Ringworth, containing 150 acres: the moiety of the said messuage he held of the King as of the Honor of Retlie, by the service of 20 d. a year to the hid-age, and suit at the Hundred of Rochford. He held also of John de Chanceux 20 acres of the land called Crikfeth, by the service of 4 s. a year. — Bartholomew was his son and heir (i).

This maner was afterwards in the family of Tyrell of Beches in Raureth. Under John Tyrell Esq; William Hanningfield, who dyed in 1427, held this maner called Scottys; except the tenements &c. called Crixeth-hall, otherwise the Brome, in this parish, and Ryngewerd, and Gore, marshes, with six weres and six leynes (k).

—John Tyrell, Esq; at the time of his decease 25 October 1494, held the maner of Beches in Rawreth, and that of North-Bemfleete, and the maner of Scotts with appertenances, and two in Canewdon, one called Ringwerd, and the other Gore, with the weres and leynis; of the King of his Honor of Raghley;—Edward his son and heir, held the same; and dying 16 June 1541, was succeeded by his brother—William Tyrell Esq; who departing this life 28 September 1543, his nephew—Edward, or Edmund, son of Jasper Tyrell his father's younger brother, came into these estates (l). He dyed 8 November 1574, and having no issue male, his four daughters, or their issue, became his coheirs. They were, Mary, Margaret, Thomasine, and Susan—(m) [s].

Thomasine was married, first, to William, second son of Sir Henry Tyrell, and afterwards to William Playters of Sotterley in Suffolk Esq; who enjoyed this maner in her right. She dyed 5 June 1578, and he 6 June 1584, leaving—Thomas Playters his son and heir (n). He conveyed it to ... Cannon, of Rettenden, who was possessed of it in 1598.

John Scott, who dyed 8 December 1616, held this maner with appertenances, in Canwadon, alias Cannondon, and parishes adjoining—William was his son and heir (o).

Afterwards Alderman Kiffin of London had this estate. It was purchased by John Evans of Wanledge in Wiltshire Esq; who settled it upon his daughter Elleanor, wife of John Lance of the Inner-Temple, and her children. After her death they sold it to

Nehemiah Bennet of London, Merchant, of whom it was purchased by the Rev. Thomas Juson late Rector of Wansted, together with Barringtons in Raleigh, which has for some time been bought and sold with Scottys. He dyed 18 March 1749-50, leaving by Catharine his wife daughter of William Churchman Esq; only son of Sir John Churchman of Illington in Norfolk Kt.—The Rev. Thomas Juson his son, and heir.

It appears by the Court-rolls that this Maner has held Court leet as well as Baron.

The Lord of Scottys-Hall is one of those concerned in the Lawless or Whispering Court at Raleigh.

The Maner of LAMBORN-HALL.

The mansion house is a full mile South-east from the Church, open to the Marshes, near Wallasea-island.

It was so named from a Family that came or took their surname from Lamborn in Ongar Hundred. Robert de Lamborne of that place paid scutage for an estate in Essex from the year 1199 to 1213 (p). — William de Lamborne, who dyed in 1300, held the maner of Lamborn once of the inheritance of Philip Burnell then a minor, and the King's ward, by the service of two knights fees; — James was his son and heir (q).

A family surnamed de Lamborne had the maner of Copisfoldeal; or Copewold, in Margaretting. See in the other Volume, p. 53.

We have no account for many years of the possessors of this estate. In K. Henry the VIIIth's reign, it was in Thomasine daughter of John Barrington of Raley Esq; She had three husbands; 1. William Lunsford, or as he is called in the Inquisition Lousworth. 2. William Sidney of Stoke Daubernon in Surrey, Esq; 3. John Hopton Esq; At the time of her decease, 16 January 1497, she held the maner of Lamborne-hall of the maner of Rochford, by the service of 5 s. And the maner of Crixethall of Thomas Darcy Esq; as of his maner of Canindon. And 40 acres of arable, 30 of pasture, 253 of marsh, 66 of wood, with appertenances, in Canweydon, Raleigh, Rochford, Hockley, Winkeford, Dunham, the two Ramsdens, Maldon, &c. — William Lousworth, or Lunsfortbe, her son and heir, who dyed 3 May 1531, held the maner of Lamborne-Hall with appertenances, and Le Castell Marsh, lying in Canondon, of the King, and by suit of the Court called Le Lawles Court in Raleigh, and yearly rent of 3 s. 4 d. He held also a parcel of land called Mompleyers, of the maner of Canondon-hall, and Bramblefeild of the maner of Apton-hall. — John his son and heir succeeded him (r) [T].

This estate afterwards came into the Campion family. William Campion sen. who dyed 10 December 1615, held the maner of Lamborn-Hall with appertenances in Canondon, Crixhith, Burnham, and Hockley, lately Lunsford's lands; — William Campion Esq; was his son and heir (s).

It hath ever since continued in that family, and is now in — Henry Campion of

The Hamlet of PUTESEY.

Pudsey-hall, the maner house, lies near the river Crouch, about half a mile west from the Church.

Two freemen were possessed of this Village in Edward the Confessor's reign. The great Suene held it, at the time of the Survey, by the name of Puteisia: and his under-tenants were Ascelin, and one John [U].

It is otherwise called in records Podelhele, Podeseth, Potesethere, Pudshall, and Pudsthe.

The noble Family of De Vere Earls of Oxford were Lords paramount of this maner.

In 1322, John Chauceaux above mentioned held 20 acres of marsh in Podelereth, and 90 acres, and 1 messuage and 160 acres of land, and 5 l. 3 s. 11 d. rent there, of the Earl of Oxford, in capite, by knight's service. Under John, the 7th Earl, in 1358, the heir of — Hugh de Chauceaux held one knight's fee in Podesethe. And under Thomas the 8th Earl, in 1370, one Walkefare held one knight's fee in Podeseth. — John de Chauceaux held, about the year 1372, the maner of Podelhele in Canewdon. — Margery Chauceaux, at the time of her decease in 1389, held the maner of Potesethere in Canewdon.

Then this estate came to Thomas Darcy, above-mentioned, who dyed possessed of it 23 Septemb. 1485. — Roger, his son and heir, at his decease, 3 September, 1508, left it to — Thomas Darcy Esq; his son; who by fine, in 1554, passed it to Bartholomew Averel, Esq; He dyed 14 May 1562, possessed of this maner of Pudsthe, alias Pudsey-hall, with appertenances, in the parish and fields of Canewdon, Little Stambridge, Affingdon, Hockeley, Hawkewell and South-Fambridge; which he held of the Lord Huntdon, as of his Hundred of Rochford, in socage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 18 d. He left three daughters coheirs,

Mary, then, wife of John Sammes, aged 19 years; Grace, 11; and Elizabeth, 8 years old (u). [See above, p. 112, and]

Elizabeth was married to Edward Waldegrave of Lawford Esq; being his first wife.

This estate belonged afterwards to Sir Samuel Moyer, created a Baronet 25 March 1701, and styled of Pudsey-hall.

It now belongs to John Luther Esq; one of the Knights of the Shire for this County.

LOSTMANS, or Loughtmans, and Shernewards, are mentioned above as two Maners subordinate to that of Canewdon; and in the possession of Thomas Darcy Esq; in 1485: The latter being 40 s. a year, and Lostmans 7 l. In 1508, Sherwards was 11 l. a year, and the other 3 l. (w). The name and memory of Shernewards are lost.

Sarah Levitt, widow, held the maner of Loftmans in 1608. It belonged afterwards to Mr. Parsons, of South-Church: and was purchased in 1746 by Mr. Jeremiah Kersteman. 'Tis now only a farm; upon which there is a very good house.

Bolt-hall belongs to . . . Dowse, Esq;

William Kersteman, Gent. Mr. Thomas Edlyne; George Jackson; &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Acres-fleet is mentioned in records as a Maner in this parish. See under Wallet-island.

Charitable Donations to this Place.

A messuage, with 40 acres of land, in Southminster, called Podds or Capels, commonly known by the name of Conyndon-lands.

One messuage, and six acres of pasture and meadow, lying in this parish, and called Pogdens.

Finches Lands, containing forty acres, in Canewdon, given to the Poor by Agnes Finch widow, about the time that Pogdens were given.

Two acres called Spylfrenches, given to the Poor by William Hawshill, and Thomas Hawkins, in 1495.

Edwards-Lands in Canuden, twenty-five acres.

Cuppolds-Croft, alias Cukingstole-Croft, alias Lamp-Croft, given for the maintenance of a Light in this Church; as appears by Inquisition 10 Eliz.

The rents of the above are distributed by the overseers, to the poorest of Canewdon, of good name and fame, but not to idle and disorderly persons, or to such as receive weekly collection.

Richard Wood, of Scaldhursts in the Hamlet of Pudsey, gave, after his own, and wife's death, which happened in 1687 and 1688, all his real and personal estate, to purchase lands, the rents of which should be employed to find bread for the Poor: With part of this legacy were bought lands in Great Stambridge, called Glocesters, Hamstals, and Crouch-Croft, containing seven acres.

The rents of these Donations are about 46 l. a year.

The lands of Mr. Brograve of Norwich called Inglewoods, Chymners, le Parke, Edwel-Croft, le Twelve-Acres, le Bush-Croft, by decree in Chancery in 1556, stand charged with a yearly rent of 52 s. 2 d. payable to the Vicar for the use of the Poor of this parish. Upon non-payment, the Vicar has a right to enter. These were originally given by William Totham (x).

Here was anciently a Fraternity of St. Anne, that had an estate for Lights and Lamps, the over-plus to be distributed in beans and herrings to poor people in Lent. Now given by the officers for the time being to the most indigent, that have been well brought up.

Here was also a Gild of St. Margaret, that had lands in this parish, and Hempsted and Elmsted, which were granted, in 1592, to William Tipper, and Robert Dawe (y).

The Poor of Wigan in Lancashire have in Pudsey an estate of 18 l. per ann. called The Poors Land of Wigan.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, stands on a hill, from whence there is a very extensive prospect. It consists of a body and a north aisle, 62 feet long, and 36 broad. The Chancel hath also a Chapel, or Vestry, on the north side, in length 36 feet, and 19 in breadth. In the Steeple, which is 74 feet high, are 5 tunable Bells [W].

This Church was given to Prittlewell Priory by the founder, Robert de Essex son of Suene; as appears by the following record. In 1241, a Quo warranto was brought against the Prior, to inquire by what authority he held the Advowson of Kanewdon Church, parcel of the lands of Henry de Essex escheated to the King? He answered, That this right was confirmed by Henry II, the King's grandfather. He produced the Charter of Henry de Essex, of Gilbert Foliot Bishop of London, and of Giles de Chauceaux (z). About the year 1231, the Prior and Convent impowered Roger Niger, Bishop of London, to ordain a Vicarage; which he did, and endowed it well, reserving the Nomination of the Vicar to himself and his successors Bishops of London.

Indeed Qu. Elizabeth, who loved to finger Bishops lands, granted, 18 March 1587, the Advowson of the Vicarage to Edward Downing and Miles Dodding: They granted it to Augustin Steward Esq; and he presented once (a). The nomination of a Vicar continued after that in the Bishop, though the presentation came to the Crown after the suppression of Prittlewell Priory. No claim of late having been made to present, the Bishop collates.

This Vicarage hath a Glebe of 60 acres.

The great Tithes belong to Thomas Sly Esq;

Canewdon parish is rated to the land-tax at 1485 l.

[W] In the south window of the Church is, or lately was, this escutcheon; Argent, a Chevron between three annulets, gules. The same carved on the pillars that support the north Isle, with these Arms; . . . Lozenges, 2, 3, and 1. This coat is on the Steeple of Much-Hadham in Hertfordshire, and in the Chancel of Little-Hadham.

On the outside of the steeple are the Arms of France and England quartered, and other Shields of Bohun, Mowbray, and Warren.

In the year 1711, when the Church was beautified, a figure of St. Christopher, painted on the right side of the door, appeared, which had been covered over.

STANBRIDGE.

Two Parishes of this name, distinguished from each other by the addition of Great, and Little, lie between Canewdon, Pakelsham, Rochford, Affingdon, &c. They were undoubtedly at first but one.

The name is otherwise written in records Stanbruge, Stamberg, Stambreg, Stambrugg; formed from the Saxon word Stan, stone, and brugg, or bridge; here being anciently a Stone-bridge over the little River that runs by Rochford.

20. GREAT-STANBRIDGE is two thirds bigger than Little Stanbridge, according to the rental.

The Lands in this parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Osward, and one Freeman: At the time of the Survey, Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and Suene under him, held one part. Suene, and Wiard under him, held the other part [X].

These lands were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Stanbridge. 2. . . . and that of Hampton-Barnes. 3. The maner of Bretton, or Barton-hall.

The Maner of GREAT STANBRIDGE.

The mansion house, Stanbridge-hall, stands a little way east from the Church, near the River.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Essex, grandson of Suene, for cowardise, as frequently mentioned before, Richard Fitz-William, or son of William, had this, among eight knights fees, holden of the said Henry, as of the Honor of Raley (b).

Under this Richard, the ancient Family of Musters held lands here in K. John's time [Y] [Z].

William, son of Richard Fitz-William, at the time of his decease in 1260, held two carucates of land in Stanbreg; the same quantity in Stapleford-Tany; and one carucate in Elmsted, of the fee of Reyle.

Margery, his only daughter and heir, brought these Estates to her husband, Richard de Tany (c). We have given a pretty full account of the Tany Family, above, p. 179. and therefore shall only take notice of such of them as are mentioned in records, that were possessed of this estate.

This Family gave Name to Stapleford Tany,

Chignall Tany, or St. James, and Latton, now called Mark-hall;—Richard de Tany, his son and heir, held this maner of Great Stanbregg, of the King in capite, of the Honor of Reylegh: He dyed in 1296, leaving, by Julian his wife,—Roger Tany his son, 18 years old (d). For a further account of the Exploits of the Tany Family; see T. Walsingham; and Sir William Dugdale (e).

Two years after, it was in another Family. Henry de Grapenell, at the time of his decease in 1298, held the maner of Great-Stanbrigg of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of one knight's fee. His four daughters, Petronilla, Margery, Joanna, and Margaret, were his coheirs. Petronilla, the eldest, was wife of John Fitz-John: and Joanna of Adam Fitz-John (f).

Petronilla Fitz-John had for second husband Sir John de Bensted, who held this estate, in her right, of Philippa Queen of England, as of the Honor of Reyley. He dyed in 1323 (g).—John de Bensted, at the time of his decease in 1362, held two parts of this maner: as did his son—John de Bensted, in 1376.—Edward, brother of the last succeeded him (h).—Petronilla, widow of John Bensted, but surely not the Petronilla above-mentioned, held in 1378 part of the demesnes of this maner in dower (i).—John, their eldest son dying the King's ward, without issue,—Edward second son succeeded, and departed this life in 1433. His son—Sir Edmund Bensted, at the time of his decease in 1439, left—Sir John Bensted who at the time of his death in 1471, held this maner of the Duke of York, as of his Honor of Clare, leaving—William his son and heir (k). [For a more particular account of the Bensted Family, see above, p. 35. and the other Volume, p. 495.] William Bensted Esq; conveyed the Maner and Advowson, by trustees, to

Thomas Stillington, who, 12 June 1490, passed it, to

Sir Reginald Bray, and other trustees; and a fine was levied of the premisses in Michaelmas-term 1491 (l): But, according to the Inquisition, William Bensted had it at the time of his decease, in September 1485. [See the other Volume, p. 495.]

It was afterwards in the Clopton-family: For John Edmondes Esq; who dyed 23 June 1544, held divers lands, tenements, rents, and services, in Great-Stambridge, of Francis Clopton Esq; as of his Maner of Stambridge-Hall (m).

Sir John Shaa, Alderman of London, was next possessor of the maner of Much-Stanbridge, with the Advowson of the Church, and of 200 acres of arable, 100 of pasture, 20 of meadow, and 20 of wood, in Little Stanbrigg, lately Sir Reginald Bray's, and before William Bensted's Esq; The maner he devised by will to his wife Margaret: and dyed December 1503. — Edmund Shaa, his eldest son and successor, at the time of his decease 24 March 1532, left an only daughter and heir, — Alice, four years old (n), married afterwards to William Poley Esq; It was next in — Thomas Shaa, of Terling Esq; [For a further account of the Shaa family, see above, p. 217. and in the other Volume, p. 126. 484. 488.] Thomas Shaa sold, 20 October 1579, for the sum of 800 l. the maner and Advowson to Thomas Ive of East-Donyland, Gent. and his heirs.

Robert Lawfon, alias, Edmonds, sen. Esq; at the time of his decease 7 February 1587, held this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, of Henry Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Raleigh. — Margery, daughter of his son William, alias Edmonds, was his heir, and 21 years old (o).

In 1604, Thomas Lawfon alias Edmonds, sold the premises to Thomas Sutton Esq; Founder of the Charter-house, who settled the estate on that House; and it hath continued in it ever since.

The free and customary Rents are 12 l. 4 s. 2 d.

South Minster, Cold Norton, Stambridge, Little-Hallingbury, and Little-Wigborough, Maners, were all disafforested by letters patent of K. Charles I. in 1638, for which Privilege the Governors of the Charter-house gave 500 l.

At the Court kept 4 October 1670, before Albery de Vere Earl of Oxford, Chief Justice of the King's Forests, the Governors of the Charter-House claimed within this maner, Court lete, and view of frank-pledge, of all their tenants dwelling and residing within the precincts of the same; and fines, and amerciaments, and other profits; assize of bread, and other victuals, wine, beer, &c. the examination of weights, and measures; choice of Constables, and other Officers; pillory, tumbrel, and gallows; sufficient fire-bote, house-bote, cart-bote, for the tenants of the maner, in their own woods, without view of the Foresters.

The Maner of HAMPTON-BARNES.

The mansion-house is in the marshes, near the Creek, half a mile from the road to Paklesham. This was detached from Odo's Maner in after-times, perhaps not before the reign of K. Richard III. for William Lawfell who dyed 1 May 1485, held lands, tenements, woods, meadows, &c. called Hampton Bernis, in Great Stanbrigg, of Robert Stillington Bishop of Bath and Wells, who was feoffee for Thomas Stillington above-mentioned (p).

In 1549, Richard Townshend, and Catharine his wife, passed this maner by fine to Richard Smart of Ipswich, who held it of Thomas Shaa Esq; as of his maner of Great Stanbridge, by fealty, and yearly rent of 17 s. He held also here a tenement called Godboultes. Dying 28 August 1560, he was succeeded by — William his son and heir (q). See above, p. 283. 292.]

It is now in Mr. Scrutton of Bromfeld, who has Prittlewell Priory.

Maner of BRETTON, or BARTON-HALL.

The mansion-house stands on the same side of the Channel with Hampton-Barnes.

This is the part that Suene, and Wiard under him, held at the time of the Survey [A].

This Estate takes its name from Hugh Brito, that held a fourth part of a knight's fee of the Honor of Henry de Essex of his Honor of Raley (r).

Robert Rochford, who dyed in 1337, held for his life, a certain tenement called Breton in Great Stanbrigg, of the maner of Rochford (s).

Joane Countess of Hereford had, in 1379, the maner of Bretton, as parcel of her maner of Rochford (t).

Sir Thomas Darcy, by fine, in 1526, passed this maner of Bretton, alias Bretton-hall or Barton hall, and 5 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 300 of pasture, the same quantity of marsh, 100 acr. of alder, 200 of furze and heath, 100 of wood, and 3 l. to

John Lucas Esq; And, in 1550, John Lucas, and Elizabeth his wife, passed it to Bartholomew Averell (u), who held it of the Queen in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. He dyed 14 May 1562; his three daughters, Mary wife of John Sams, Grace and Elizabeth being his heirs (w).

The latter brought it to her husband Edward Walgrave of Lawford, Esq;

John Gleane Esq; second son of Thomas Gleane of Harwick-hall in Norfolk Esq; was possessed of it at the time of his decease 15 February 1670 (x). Afterwards, it was purchased by

Sir Isaac Skaarde of Southwark, Kt. and descended to his son

Abraham Skaarde Esq; who was knighted in 1745, and dyed 22 August 1746.

In 1348, Alianor wife of John Bluet held a marsh called La Pole in Great Stanbrigg, containing 500 acres, of the Earl of Northampton; as of the Honor of Reyle, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee (y).

Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, in 1519 held 200 acres of arable and meadow in this parish, of John Shaa Esq; by fealty only (z).

John Maldon Esq; who dyed in 1428, held one toft called Bygginges in Great Stanbregge, and 100 acres of arable there, of the Prior of Pritelwell. Sir Antony Brown in 1568, held 120 acres here, called Great and Little Bigen (a).

Barons, a farm in this parish, belongs to John Henniker Esq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary and All Saints, is pleasantly situated on a rising ground. It hath a South aisle, and the pillars between it and the body of the Church are of the Tuscan order. In the Tower are 3 Bells; and, on the top of the Tower, is a spire or shaft shingled.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Stanbridge-hall, and is now in the Governors of the Charter-house.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 646 l.

21. LITTLE STANBRIDGE

lies north of the last.

Part of this parish belonged, before and at the time of the Survey, to the Church of the Holy Trinity in Canterbury, for the maintenance of the Monks. Another part belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to one Freeman, which Tedric Pointel unjustly seized afterwards [B].

These lands were divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The maner of Little Stanbridge-hall. 2. . . . that of Combes.

Little Stanbridge-hall stands near the west end of the Church.

Though this parish is small, it belonged to the great Families of Fitz-Walter, Fitz-John, Hardell, Baddlesmere, Tibetot, Le Despenfer, &c.

Ralph Baignard held this maner of the Church of the Holy Trinity. His grandson—William Baignard, lost it for siding against K. Henry the First's enemies, and that King gave it to Richard Fitz Gislebert, lord of Brion in Normandy (b).

John de Kokeham, who dyed in 1275, held of John Fitz-John one messuage, 182 acres of arable in Little Stanbrigge, with the Advowson of the Church, and 29 s. 8 d. rent: and of the Lord Robert Fitz-Walter, 142 acres of arable, by the service of one knight's fee; and 7 acres of meadow, 10 acres of pasture, and 24 s. rent of assise.—Laurence de Hardell was his next heir (c). He held these estates at the time of his decease in 1285 (d).

Bartholomew de Baddlesmere, a nobleman of Kent, was the next possessor; and obtained in 1315, a Charter for free-warren in all his demesne lands in Little Stanbregge, Affendon, Canewdon, Hockle, Thacksted, &c. but was beheaded about 1322, for joining Thomas Earl of Lancaster (e). He held the maner of Little Stanbrigge, and the advowson of the Church of William de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, as of the maner of North-Fambrigge, by the service of 1 d. a year, called ward-penny; and about the same quantity as above, of Robert Fitz-Walter. —Giles de Baddlesmere, his son and heir, held also this maner of the King of his Hundred of Rochford, by the service of 12 s. and 56 s. 8 d. per ann. Having no issue, his four sisters were his coheirs; namely, Maud, wife of John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford; Elizabeth, married first to Edmund de Mortimer, and afterwards to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton; Margaret, wife of Sir John Tipetot; and Margery, of William Lord Roos (f). Among them was this estate divided; For

Sir Robert Tibetot, son of Sir John, at the time of his decease in 1372, held this maner of the King in ca. as of the Hundred of Rochford, by the service of 12 d. per ann. to the hidage of that Hundred; except the third part of this maner, that was holden of Sir Walter Fitz-Walter, by the service of a pair of gilt spurs. Eighty acres belonging to this maner lay in Affingdon. Margaret, Milicent, and Elizabeth, were his daughters. The two eldest were married to Roger, and Stephen, the second and third sons of Richard Scroope, Lord Treasurer of England; and Elizabeth to Philip le Despenfer (g).

Sir Philip le Despenfer had this estate; and the state of it then was, that there were within the site of the same divers houses, 214 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 10 of wood, 40 of pasture, 20 of marsh, and 4 l. rent of assise, holden of Richard Duke of York as of his Honor of Reyley. And about 164 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, wood &c. holden of the heirs of Walter Lord FitzWalter, the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, and the heirs of Sir John Chanceaux. He dyed in 1423, or 1424.

Margery his only daughter, was married, first, to John Lord Roos, and afterwards to Sir Roger Wentworth (b). At the time of her decease in 1478, she enjoyed this estate. Philip her son being then dead, his son—Henry Wentworth succeeded her (i).—Sir Richard Wentworth held this maner at the time of his decease, 17 October

John Cocke was the next possessor, and dyed 30 December 1574, leaving — John his son, twelve years old (l).

In the last century it belonged to Micajah Perry of London Esq; one of the most eminent Virginia Merchants, who dyed 1 October 1721, aged 80 years and upwards.—Richard his son was dead before him. He married Sarah, daughter and heir of George Richards of Southampton, merchant, by whom he had Micajah, Philip; and Sarah, married to Robert Heysham Esq; member of Parliament for Lancaster.—Micajah Perry Esq; the eldest son and heir, was Alderman of the city of London, Lord Mayor in 1739, and one of its representatives in Parliament in 1727, and 1734. By Anne his wife, daughter of Owen of Eltham in Kent, and of London, he had—Richard his son and successor [C].

22. ASSINGTON

lies north northwest of the two Stanbridges, and north of Rochford. The name of it is otherwise written in records, Affinden, Affindon, Affandum; and the origin of it is undoubtedly Affan-dun, i. e. Affes-hill.

Mr. Camden thought this to be the place where the Battle was fought between Edmund Ironside, and Cnut, in 1016 (n). But it was at Affindon near Bartlow. [See in the other Volume, p. 539.]

This was part of Suene's possessions at the time of the Survey: After his grandson Henry de Essex's forfeiture, this Estate appears to have been in the same hands as Hawkswell, namely in the Families of Bayouse, Coggeshall, Doreward, Bullen, Rich, &c.

The Hall stands near the Church.

Very little occurs in records concerning this parish. It appears only that here are two MANERS, which extend into some of the adjoining Parishes.

We find some mention of under-tenants, and just the name of those they held of; Laurence de Hardell who dyed in 1285, held in Affindon 50 acres of arable of Philip Mansell by the service about 60 l. a year. The House is moated round, but seems mean, and hath been much larger. Very little is said of it in records. It belonged lately to Henry Lord Bolingbroke, and now to Earl Tilney.

Mr. William Stock hath also some lands in this parish.

The Church is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tiled. At the west end stands a spire shingled, in which there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the maner: and, as such in the gift of Bartholomew de Baddlesmere. After his death, his widow Margaret Dumfrunvill, Lady de Baddlesmere, presented to the Living in 1328 and 1333. By Elizabeth, one of his daughters, married to Edmund de Mortimer, it came into the Mortimer Family. Richard Nevil, Duke of York, presented in 1434, and 1445. He being slain at the battle of Wakefield in 1460, his second son Edward Earl of March afterwards K. Edward IV. inherited this among the rest of his possessions. From which time it hath remained in the Crown (m).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 250 l.

of one garland of roses; and in Affindon and Rochford 80 acres of arable and 3 of wood, and 8 s. rent, of John de Rochford, by the service of 2 d. to the hidage, and by the 6th part of a knight's fee. — Nicolas was his son. He had also estates in Little Stanbridge, Canewdon, Hokeley, &c. (o).

In 1340, Reginald Garrey held lands and tenements in Affindon of the Honor of Raley, by the service of half a knight's fee (p).

Sir Robert Tibetot held of the King the maner of Little-Stanbridge, and 80 acres of arable in Affindon, which belonged to the maner of Stanbrigge, and were holden of the King in capite, as parcel of the said maner: He dyed in 1372, leaving three daughters co-heirs; Margaret, Milicent, and Elizabeth (q). See under Little Stanbridge.

We have no mention after that for several years of the maner of Affindon: but in K. Henry VIIIth's time a considerable estate is mentioned here under the name of Beckney.

Richard Alen, who dyed 23 June 1517, held one messuage, 300 acres of pasture, and 200 of marsh, called Beckney, in Affindon, Hockley, and South-Fambridge, of the Prior of Colne, by fealty. — John was his son (r).

William Harrys Esq; at the time of his decease 21 September 1555, held the maner of Beckney, with appertenances, in Ashindon, South-Fambridge, Hockley, and Sutton, of the Lord Riche, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of the third part of a knight's fee.—

William Harrys Esq; was his son and heir (s).

— Christopher Harrys Esq; of Shenfeild, in Margareting, held this maner, or messuage, called Beckneys in Ashendon of the Lord Hunsdon, by the third part of a knight's fee; and also Cristell-hall in this parish, and Rochford; and dying 2 September 1570, was succeeded by his son—Christopher; who living only till 26 December 1571, was succeeded by his brother—William, near three years old (t). He was knighted afterwards, and at the time of his decease 15 June 1634, held this maner, capital messuage, or farm, known by the name of Beckney, of Robert Earl of Warwick, of his Honor of Raileigh, by knight's service.—Christopher was his cousin and next heir (u). [Concerning this family of Harrys, see more above, p. 310. and in the other Volume, p. 54.]

From the Earl of Warwick this estate came to Henry Viscount Bolingbroke, and was purchased of him by Richard Lord Viscount Castlemain; afterwards Earl Tilney.

In a late account I have seen of this maner, the demesnes are said to be 240 acres.

In 1285, Richard le Chamberlayn held half a fee in Ashindon, of the King, in capite: Hence came the maner, or farm, called Chamberlains in this parish (w).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, stands on the top of a hill, from whence is an extensive prospect over Dengey-Hundred, as far as Maldon. It is small, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. Between the Church and Chancel there was formerly an arch. In a Tower of stone is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was in the gift of the families of Bayouse, Coggeshall, Doreward, Bolein or Bullen; and by purchase came into the noble family of Rich, Earls of Warwick. Upon the division of their estates, Henry Lord Viscount Bolingbroke had it; and sold it to William Arnold.

In 1429, this Church was united to that of Hawkswell, on account of the smallness of both livings, and nearness of the Parishes; but they were soon disunited again. See above, p. 290.

As for the Miracles reported to be done by an Image here, see Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 19.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 269 l.

There are two Parishes of this name within this County; one in this Hundred, and the other in the Hundred of Dengey; parted from each other by the river Crouch. A bridge formerly stood here which occasioned the latter part of the name; and Fam is taken from the Saxon word Fam, or pæm, foam, or froth: the river being undoubtedly rapid and foamy here, while the Bridge stood. Now here is a Ferry.

23. SOUTH-FAMBRIDGE, is that which lies in this Hundred, on the south side of the River. It is otherwise written in records Phenbruge.

Edward the Confessor gave this maner to Ely-Monastery; but, at the time of the Survey it was in the King's hands, and holden under him by Rainald Balistarius [D]. Probably it had been taken from the Monks on account of their harbouring William's enemies, in 1071.

Here is but ONE MANER, and the Hall stands about half a mile north from the Church, on a rising ground.

The Monks recovered this Estate again afterwards. For, in 1166, Reginald de Fambridge held a knight's fee in Fambridge, under Nigel Bishop of Ely (x).

About the reign of K. Henry III. this lordship became part of the possessions of the ancient family surnamed de Brianzon, owners of West-Thurrock [E].

Bartholomew de Brianzon, at the time of his decease in 1286, held Little Fambregge, of the inheritance of Joane his wife (y); — William his son and heir, who dyed in 1310, held the maner of Fambregg of the Bishop of Ely by the service of half a knight's fee; Alianor his widow, remarried to John Bluet, had it by way of dower; and her son — John de Brianzon, confirmed it to her, and her husband Bluet for their lives: she dyed in 1348 (z). [For a further account of the Brianzon family, see above, p. 77. 91.]

William de Bobun Earl of Northampton at the time of his decease in 1360, held this maner of South-Fambregge of the Bishop of Ely. —

Lib. Domefd. fol. 97. b. Tit. 79.

[E] Mr. Newcourt has been led into a mistake, by an error of some transcriber, to make Bartholomew Lord Badlesmere hold this estate, which by his daughter came to the Bohun Family. This is true of Little-Stambridge, where he mentions it, but not of this Place.

Humfrey, his son, Earl of Hereford, Essex &c. (a), and left two daughters coheirs, the eldest of whom, Alianor, was married to Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester. [See in the other Volume, p. 452.]

In 1395, Sir John Cobham, Sir John Harleston, and others had license to give this maner of South-Fambregge to the Master, Wardens, and Chaplains of Pleshey-College: the said maner being holden of the King as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the service of 18 d. for hidage; payable on the feasts of St. John Baptift, and St. Andrew, to the Bailiff of Rochford-Hundred (b). Pleshey-College was founded by Thomas of Woodstock, and this endowment might be by his direction. [See in the other Volume, p. 453.]

Upon the suppression of Religious Houses, Pleshey College becoming vested in the Crown, K. Henry VIII. on the 36th of December 1546, granted the maner of South-Fambridge, to

John Gate Esq; (c). [For a particular account of this Family, see the other Volume, p. 146, 454, 457.] His estates becoming forfeited, upon his arraignment and condemnation 19 August 1553, for espousing the Lady Jane Gray's interest, this, among the rest, came again to the Crown; where it remained till 3 January 1560, when Qu. Elizabeth granted it, with the Advowson of the Church, &c. to

Peter Osborne Esq; (d) And in that family it continued till very lately. They are said to have come out of the north, and Peter Osborne resided at Purley in this County in 1442,——Richard, his son, left,——John, and Richard: The latter was seated at Tyled-hall, in Lachingdon in this county; and had two sons——John; and——Peter, born in 1521; a man of great understanding, and very active and zealous for the Reformation. He was keeper of the Privy Purse to K. Edward VI. who granted him and his heirs the office of Treasurer's Remembrancer in the Exchequer. A great friend he was to Sir John Cheke, who dyed at his house. In Qu. Elizabeth's reign he was one of the High Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Affairs,——Sir John Osborne, Kt. his son was Treasurer's Remembrancer, and Commissioner of the Navy, in the reign of K. James I. By Dorothy, daughter of Richard Barlee of Elfenham in Essex, Esq; he left four sons; [Francis, the youngest, wrote the Essays or Miscellanies, one of which is, Advice to a Son.] Sir John Osborne,

Kt. the eldest son, settled at the Nunnery of Chicklands in Bedfordshire, a most delightful situation; and dyed in 1628.——Sir Peter, his eldest son, was 28 years Governor of Guernsey. By Dorothy daughter of Sir John Danvers of Dauntzey in Wilts, he had seven sons and two daughters. The eldest son——Sir John, the first Baronet of the Family, so created 11 February 1660, was Gentleman of the Privy-chamber to K. Charles II; and Treasurer's Remembrancer. He married Alianor Danvers, niece to Sir John Danvers of Dauntzey; and dying in 1699, was succeeded by his only son——Sir John Osborn, Bart. who by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Stroud of Barrington in Somersetshire, Esq; had John. By his second wife, Martha daughter of Sir John Kelyng he had seven sons and four daughters,——John, the eldest son, married Sarah, daughter of George Lord Torrington, and dyed in 1719, in his father's life-time,——Sir Danvers Osborn, son of the said John, succeeded his grandfather in 1720, and some time after sold this estate to

John Stephenson Esq; who married a daughter of Jonathan Forward, merchant in London. [For a more particular account of the Osborn Family, see the Baronetage, edit. 1741. Vol. III. Part 1. p. 225.]

A messuage here called Fersters, and 160 acres of arable, and 10 of marsh, belonged in 1422 to John Baud; and in 1447 to Robert Darcy (e).

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is little and low, and stands in a bottom about half a mile from the Creek and the Ferry. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, tiled. At the west end there is a little wooden turret, but no Bell.

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner; and, after it was granted to Pleshey, the Advowson continued in the noble Families of Stafford &c. heirs of Thomas of Woodstock: and then came to the Osborn family.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 220 l.

The Bridge that gave name to this and the opposite parish, hath been down many years: but here is a noted Ferry; at which a very bold Love-adventure is said to have happened [E]. Two messuages, and lands called Ferry-lands, with the Passage or Ferry, and Betts, belonged in 1556 to William Harrys Esq; who held them of the Lord Rich, as of the Honor of Rayley, by the 20th part of a knight's fee; and were then worth 2 l. 6s. 8d. a year (f).

[F] Mr. Malden of Rayne, Servant to the Earl of Warwick, gave this relation, which was taken in writing; 'The Earl of Warwick going from Leighes to Rochford-Hall was attended by Capt. Cammock, who courted his daughter: He carried her off upon a horse, and came to Fambridge Ferry, where the Boat was on the other side, and the tide violent; they found themselves pursued, and had no shift but to swim over: The Captain advised her not to venture;

'but she said she would live and die with him, and took the water. When they were half over, the Earl's servant came to the water-side, and his horse neighed; upon which, the horse that carried the Lovers turned round, and with much difficulty was brought to keep his course. They rode to Maldon, were wedded and bedded; and the Earl said, 'seeing she had ventured her life for him, God bless 'em.'

At the east end of this Hundred are the following Six Islands.

1. FOULNESE. 2. WALLASEA. 3. POTTEN.
4. NEW-ENGLAND. 5. HAVEN-GORE. 6. RUSH-LEY.

FOULNESE ISLAND

is the eastern-most, and the largest, of the six Islands.

The name of this island is formed from the two Saxon words, Fugel, a fowl, and næge, a promontory; that is the Promontory of Fowls, or birds (g). It is otherwise written in records, Fughelnæs; but the ancientest name is said to have been Eoulnæsse (h).

This Island is computed to be above twenty miles in circuit, without reckoning the Salt-ings toward the sea, which are not inclosed by a Wall as the rest is. It is said to contain about four thousand five hundred acres, lying in different Farms; the Houses standing separately, for convenience of the occupiers. Two thirds of the Lands at least belong to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Winchelsea, who is Lord of the Maner, and holds Court Leet and Baron pro libitu. The soil is fruitful, producing good corn of all kinds; but the water brakish, being impregnated by the salt in the earth: They have none perfectly fresh but rain-water, preserved in cisterns. The fences are only ditches, which every tide fills. Over these, as in other marshes, what they call Wolves are laid, upon which their gates are fixed. Eight hours in twelve there is passage for a horse to Wakering. The Houses are all of wood, which soon decay, through the inclemency (as the inhabitants say) of the air. To the same cause they ascribe the ill thriving of their fruit trees: The latter seems owing to the abundant salt with which the staple is loaded; and perhaps the first may be attributed to the same sapping quality. If the air were chargeable with all this, the people could not bear it so well as they do.

Foulness-hall stands near the Church.

This Estate was originally in Suene, and upon his grandson's forfeiture came to the Crown: It was granted to Hubert de Burgh, with the Honor of Raley; and his son—John gave it to Guy de Rochford, from which time it commonly went along with the maner of Rochford.

Sir Guy de Rochford, dyed in 1274, and, besides the maners of Rochford, Berden, and Elsenham, held 120 acres of marsh in Foulness, called Nassewyk. — John Rochford, son of Maud, sister of the said Guy, was his next heir (i). This John de Rochford, at the time of his decease in 1309, held the maner of Rochford, with the marsh of Foulness, called Eftwodwick, of the King in capite of the Barony of Reylie, by the service of one knight's fee; — Robert was his son and heir (k).

Sir Thomas de la Ryvere released in 1343, to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and Elizabeth his wife, and his heirs, all his right in Middlewyk-marsh in Foulness (l). From William de Bohun, who dyed in 1360, the maners of Rochford and Foulness passed to his son — Humfrey de Bohun; and then to his daughter Alianor, wife of Thomas of Woodstock; upon whose tragical death it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VI. granted it to James Earl Ormond; From whom it passed to the Families of Bullen, Stafford, Rich; and to the female heirs of the Earl of Warwick, one of which brought it to

The Rt. Hon. Daniel Earl of Nottingham, whose son and heir, the Rt. Hon. Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham, is the present possessor. [See above under Rochford.]

In the Steward's Account of Robert Earl of Warwick in 1651, the quit-rents of the maner of Foulness amounted to 8 l. 17 s. 10 d. Foulness-Hall, viz. New-Hall and Old-Hall, were 150 l. per ann.

Here are Nineteen Farms; thirteen of them belong to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Winchelsea: The late George Affer Esq; now Thomas Drew Esq; Edward Hawker, of Great Badow Esq; Mr. Weldon of London; Mr. Samuel Filmer, of Staple-hyrt, in Kent; Mr. Peter Moorbeck, of Foulness; and Mr. Kealy, have, or lately had, the Six others.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, St. Thomas the Martyr, and All Saints, is a wooden fabrick, about the middle of the Island, of one pace, forty-seven feet long, and twenty broad. It was at first no more than a Chapel.

This island was originally no distinct Parish; but the Tithes of it belonged to the neighbouring Parishes of Rochford, Sutton, Little Wakering, Shopland, Little Stanbridge, and Eastwood, whose inhabitants had peopled the same.

In the place where the parochial Church now stands, was a Chapel institutive, presented to by the Lady Joane de Bohun in 1386, and from that time by lords of the maner. This Chapel being slenderly provided for, and the Curate little resident, a Chantry was founded and endowed in 1408, by the same Joane, Countess of Hereford, &c. The Charter is in the London Registry, recited by Newcourt (m). The Chantry Priest was to perform all offices for the inhabitants, who, by reason of the swelling of the water, could not always resort to their proper Parish Churches of Rochford, Sutton, Little-Wakering, Shopland, Eastwood, and Little-Stanbridge. This was by authority of Richard Giffard Bishop of London, and consent of all parties concerned. The Glebe then was settled, and this Chaplain was to have all the Tythes, Oblations, and spiritual profits here, belonging to the Ministers of the Parish-Churches above-mentioned payable from the inhabitants of this Island. The right of Patronage of the said Chantry was in the Archbishop, the Countess, and the rest of the lords of the said maner, or island of Foulness, and they all presented jointly in the year 1408 (n).

The respective lords of this Maner presented to the Chapel from 1408 to 1547.

Chantries being dissolved, this Chapel was erected into a Rectory, and as such presented to first in 1554, and ever since.

Richard Lord Rich had a grant of the maner in 1546 [F*], and, I presume, with it of the Advowson, because it went in his Family.

In 1595, Qu. Elizabeth granted a messuage and marshes called Burward, containing eighty acres, and 160 acres of salt-marsh in Foulness, formerly belonging to a Chantry situate near the maner of Foulness, &c. to John Wells and Henry Best, to hold in socage. This was gleaming, after the grant to Rich (o).

WALLASEA, WALLETT, or WALLIS, is the next largest Island, lying between Paklesham, and the river Crouch. 'Tis now a peninsula, joined to the firm land by a short causeway, made and kept up by the islanders and parishes adjoining.

It is about four miles in length, and where broadest something more than a mile and a half: and was undoubtedly so named from the Sea-Walls, which secure it against inundations.

The water of this place is not fit for the kitchen. The inhabitants fetch it a-cross the Creek. And there is such a mixture of salt-water in the Ponds, that their Horses will not thrive, till they have been accustomed to it some time; therefore they buy them in autumn, to inure them by degrees.

The chief Estates in this Island are, Acresfleet-marsh; This was formerly called a Maner, and belonged in 1395, to Sir Henry Grey of Wilton; afterwards to his widow Elizabeth; and, in 1441, to his son Sir Richard Grey (q). — Sir Francis Jobson had it in 1577; and — Ralph Pratt Esq; in 1612 (r). It was holden of the Honor of Raley. — Mr. Thomas Crush of Roxwell was sometime ago owner of it, and afterwards — Mr. Vicars of London.

Gore-marsh, belonged to Sir Henry Fetherston, Bart.

Ringwood-marsh, the property of the heirs of the late Justice Hare of Lee.

Castle-marsh, Henry Campion's Esq; lord of Lamborn-hall.

Sherwoods-marsh.

Tile-barn, part of the estate of the late Sir Thomas Davall's heirs.

These six marshes belong to the parish of Canewdon, and pay Tithes to it, and all other dues.

Pool-marsh, 500 acres, belongs to Charles Western Esq;

Tillet's-marsh, is Mr. Henchman's.

[F*] Robert Earl of Warwick, at the time of his decease 24 March 1619, held the maner of Fowlness, and divers lands &c. called Nasewicke; Arundell-marsh, Newewicke, Eastwicke, Southwicke, Munckenbarne, and two marshes in Packleshame, and Wakering, parcel of the maner of Fowlness; And the Advowson of this Church. This maner was then 73 l. 18 s. 8 d. clear per ann. He had also two messuages, 600 acres of fresh marsh, and 200 acres of salt marsh, called Shelford, and Bradworth, in the Isle of Fowlness, Little Wakering, Shopland, and Sutton; holden of the Honor of Raley. Inquis. 17 Jaco.

These two belong to Great Stanbridge.

This is in East-wood-parish.

Hilly-masb, the highest ground in the island, more properly called East-Grapnells, is the estate of Nehemiah Bennet Esq; West-Grapnell's, otherwise Richmonds, belongs to Mr. William Webb.

These two belong to Packletham.

Cockley-lay, or Cocksey-lay, otherwise Little Marsh; was the late Mrs. Crusn's, now I believe Edward Codd's Gent.

This belongs to Little Wakering.

Coker's-marsh, so named from Mr. Ralph Coker of Woodham-Mortimer, the owner. It formerly belonged to Prittlewell-Priory; and, after the dissolution was granted to Bishop Bonner, who gave it in marriage with his daughter to . . . Perkins Esq; lies south of the last. There is in it a farm of 600 acres, arable and pasture, called Great Pottens.

POTTEN-ISLAND

HAVENGORE

abuts south-east on the Sea, near Orwell-beacon.

Havengore-marsh is rated to the land-tax at 70l.

NEW-ENGLAND, and RUSHLEY, have nothing remarkable [G].

IS parted on the South from that of Rochford by the river Crouch; abuts upon Chelmsford-Hundred on the West; has the German Ocean on the East; and is divided, on the North, from the Hundreds of Witham and Thurstable by the river Chelmer, and Blackwater River and Bay. It is almost a peninsula.

The Danes were long in possession of this District; which from them, or at least a capital Parish where the Hundred Courts were held, took the name of Danes-ig, that is Danes island. It is otherwise called Witbricteshern, and so universally written in Domesday-book; which name was undoubtedly taken from some Saxon Thegn, or Lord, named Witchbriht, and hepn, or hyn, corner, or horn.

We find it first styled Danesei about the reign of K. Henry II.

In a rhyming Charter, or pretended grant of the custody of this Hundred, by K. Edward the Confessor to Randolph Peperking, it is called Dancing [H].

This Hundred is about sixteen miles long from west to east, and ten miles broad, where widest: which is at the two extremities.

It is in the disposal of the High-Sheriff of this County for the time being.

With regard to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, the Hundred and Deanty of Dengey are in the Arch-deaconry of Essex.

In this Hundred are twenty three Parishes, which I treat of in the following order.

I. M A L D O N

is one of the two ancientest Towns in the County of Essex.

The name of it is derived from the two Saxon words Mæl, a cross, and bun, a hill; qu. Cross-hill. It is otherwise written in records, Maudone, Maudine, Mealdona, Meaudone, Maldun, Meldun.

Some have imagined, that it was the Colonia-Camulodunum mentioned in Antonine's Itinerary. But as that Colonia was 52 miles from London, very nearly the measured distance from this great City to Colchester; and Maldon is only 38 miles from London; therefore I have placed the Colonia-Camulodunum at Colchester, in my History of that Town, p. 12. &c. and have not since found any reason to alter my opinion.

Whether this was a Roman Settlement I am not able to determine. Here was found a fine Gold Coin of Nero and Agrippina, which is reckoned so valuable a treasure, that it is always in the keeping of one of the Bailiffs for the time being. On one side are the Heads of Nero,

Witness the Bishop Wolston,
And bock ycleped many one,
And Sweyn of Essex our brother,
And to ken him many other,
And our Stiward Howelyn,
That bysought me for him.

T. Blount's Antient Tenures, p. 103, 104.

A person of the least knowledge, or penetration, must immediately discover this rhyming Charter to be a forgery. In the first place, it is extremely doubtful whether Ralph Peve-rell was in England before the Conquest, when he came in with K. William. Then, in Edward the Confessor's time Saxon was the common language; whereas the style of this pretended Grant is that of the fourteenth century. So that it is the invention of some idle poetaster about the reign of K. Edward I. or II.

[H] This Charter is as follows:

Ich Edward Konyng
Have geven of my Forest the keping
Of the Hundred of Cholmer and Dancing
To Randolf Peperking and to his kindling;
With Heort and Hynd, Doe and Bock,
Hare and Fox, Cat and Bröck,
Wild Fowell with his Flock,
Partridge, Fesant hen and Fesant Cock;
With green and wyld stob and stock
To kepen and to yemen by all her might,
Both by day and eke by night,
And Hounds for to holde
Gode, and swift and bolde,
Four Greyhounds and six Braches
For Hare and Fox and Wildcats,
And: hereof iche made him my Book;

and his mother Agrippina; and round them, NERO CLAVD. DIVI F. CAES. AVG. GERM. IMP. TR. P. Cos. Upon the reverse, the Emperor is represented sitting in a carr drawn by four Elephants, holding in one hand a hasta pura: By him sits his mother holding a Legionary ensign; with this legend, AGRIPP. AVG. DIVI CLAVD. NERONIS CAES. MATER. EX S. C. I had the like Medal in silver, found at Colchester.

A Coin of Vespasian hath been also found here, with this legend, SALVS AVGVSTI.

On the west side of this Town are the remains of a Camp, through the middle of which is the road to Chelmsford. Three sides of the Fortification are visible, being a square or oblong inclosing about 22 acres, the rest is built upon and defaced. Just without it, on the north side, is a fine Spring, which improved the situation. Whether this is a Roman, Saxon, or Danish Work, I am not able to determine.

This Town stands on an eminence, or side of a hill, south of the river Idumanum, or Blackwater-bay. It consists of one wide street extending, from west to east, near a mile; which is crossed near the top by another wide street; much in the same form as Colchester: From these streets branch out several lanes.

I do not find that it ever was inclosed with Walls.

The Bay makes a convenient harbour for Ships, and the merchants carry on a considerable trade in coal, iron, deals, corn, &c. By an act of parliament passed in 1790, the Chelmer is to be made navigable from this place to Chelmsford.

The first mention we find of this Town in History, is in the year 913, when K. Edward the Elder came, with some of his forces, into Essex, at Mældune; and encamped there, whilst a Town was building and fortifying at Witham: and a great part of the people that had been under the Danes government, submitted to him (s). The same King, in 920, came to Mældune, and rebuilt and fortified the Town, before he went from thence (t). In 921, a great army of Danes besieged Mældune, till forces came to its relief, and killed great numbers of the enemy (u). In 993, Unlaf the Dane, with numerous forces, attacked Mældune; and having killed Earl Byrhtnoth who came to oppose them, remained masters of the place; and peace was forced to be made with them (w).

At the general Survey, Meldune was styled a Half-Hundred, and the state of it stood thus. The King had in it one House, pasture for 100 sheep, and one Socheman: He had also 180 Houses, which the Burgeffes held of him; and a Hall. Suene, and his under-tenant Guner, had lands here; which were charged with assisting in providing a horse in the King's army, and building a ship. Ralph Piperell; and Hugh de Montfort, had also lands in Meldune. And St. Martins le Grand in London held an estate under Eustace Earl of Bologne [1].

These were divided afterwards into the following Maners: 1. The maner of Great Maldon. 2. The maner of Little Maldon. 3. Jenkins; and other lesser ones.

We shall first treat of these Maners, and then give a particular account of the Borough.

The Maner of GREAT MALDON.

The distinction into Great and Little Maldon began about the reign of K. Henry II. Great Maldon comprehends the Town, and Little Maldon that part where Bilegh-Abbey stands.

Eustace, Earl of Bologne, deprived St. Martin's of them, but restored them afterwards, as appears by the following deed.

Eustachius Comes Bolonie H. Episcopo London Salutem: Ego quorundam sapientum & iustorum virorum acquiescens consilio, ac poenitentia ductus, Eccle beati Martini & Canonicis, & pro possessionibus suis a me sibi elatis satisfacere disposui. Terram de Melduna &c. Testes sunt Arnulphus Dapifer, Hubertus Calvus, & multi alii de ejus familia.

The Maner of Great Maldon contained what was in the King at the time of the Survey; and what escheated to the Crown upon the forfeiture of Suene's grandson, Henry de Essex.

It remained chiefly in the Crown; and for want of proper authorities, we find it impossible to give a perfect account of its Lords.

K. Stephen is said to have granted the Seignior of Maldon to the Earl of Bologne: This is what is called by way of eminence the Maner of Great Maldon; which doth belong, and hath belonged time out of mind, to the Corporation of Maldon. They have also a Court-lete: And hold by Charter a Court of View of Frankpledge.

But, besides this Borough, Lordship, or Maner, of Great Maldon; it appears by records, that there was another styled also which hath usually gone along with the Maner of Little Maldon.

About 1274, Thomas de Preyers held a moiety of this Maner, of the King, by the service of half a knight's fee. — Margaret, his only daughter and heir, by her marriage with Robert de Bourchier, Lord Chancellor, brought it into the Bourchier Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 285.] But as they were very much attached to the House of York, K. Henry VI. took it from them, and gave it to [K]

Thomas Darcy Esq; one of his servants. [See in the other Volume, p. 28.] It returned again into the Bourchier family; For

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, who dyed 4 April 1483, held the maners of Great and Little Maldon of the King in capite, by the service of half a knight's-fee. William, his eldest son, being dead before him, he was succeeded by his grandson — Henry, Earl of Essex (*): who was killed by a fall from his horse 13 March 1540, and left

Anne, his only child and heir, married in 1541, to Sir William Parr, Baron of Kendal, afterwards Earl of Essex, and Marquis of Northampton [L]. At the time of her decease, 26 January 1570, she held the maners of Great and Little Maldon, with appertenances, and 20 messuages, 10 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, 600 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 400 of pasture, 200 of wood, 500 of furze and heath, 60 s. rent; and free fishery, wreck of the Sea, and a crane or wharff, in Great and Little Maldon, Woodham, Walter, and Mortimer, and Purley; and free-warren in those parishes, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Peverell, by knight's service (y). See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.] Her heir at law,

Walter Devereux, Viscount Hereford, and afterwards Earl of Essex, obtained, the same year, a grant of these maners. But he had them not at the time of his decease 22 September 1576 (z). In 1590, Qu. Elizabeth granted the maners of Great and Little Maldon to

Thomas Gardiner, to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (a). He dyed 20 April 1590, and was succeeded by his son — Thomas, then 20 years old, afterwards knighted (b); who sold this maner of Great Maldon, and that of Little Maldon, to

Robert Sprignell Esq; He was possessed of them at the time of his decease 25 July 1624. — Richard Sprignell, his son and heir, then aged 22 years (c), was created a Baronet 14 August 1641, being styled of Coppenthorp in Yorkshire. His brother — Sir William Sprignell, sold this estate to

Captain Zachary Taylor, of Stratford; who, by Elizabeth daughter of Captain Warren of Wapping, left two daughters coheirs; — Elizabeth, married to

Mr. William Swan, of Friday-street, linnen-draper; and — Jane to

Mr. Richard Davenport, son of John Davenport, of Ironmonger-lane, tobacconist: And between them was this estate divided.

Anne, daughter of Mr. Richard Davenport, enjoys this estate at present. She was married, first, to James Frost, Gent. afterwards to Thomas Freman, of Chelmsford, Gent. After her decease, John Frost, Gent. son of her first husband, is to succeed her.

The Maner of LITTLE MALDON

comprehends not only Little Maldon-hall, with its demesnes and appertenances, but also that part where Biley-Abbey stands. It is what Ralph Piperell, or Peverell, held at the time of the Survey, on which account it was holden afterwards of the Honor of Peverell.

The next possessor of this estate upon record after Ralph Piperell, was Robert Mantell, founder of the Monastery here; who had a grant of free-warren. And in 1210, Mathew de Montell, or Martell, held half a knight's fee in Little Maldon, of the foresaid Honor (d). — Cecilie, wife of another Matthew Mauntell, at the time of her decease in 1289 held in Little Maldon 20 acres of arable, 33 of wood, and the third part of a mill in Little Maldon.

Thomas Filioll, her cousin and next heir, enfeofed some persons in parcels of this maner (e).

Roger Baynard, who dyed in 1295, held in Little Maldon, of the King in ca. by the service of one knight's fee, 1 messuage, 250 acres of arable, 18 of meadow, 9 of pasture, 73 s. rent, and 100 acres of wood, with the third part of a mill. And he had granted to Henry de Cobham, and his heirs, part of this maner, viz. 70 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 7 s. yearly rent, and the third part of a mill. His nephew — [K] Thomas Darcy held the maner of Maldon in 1485, but it is not said whether it was that of Great or Little Maldon: He held it of the Honor of Peverell. Inquis. 1 Hen. VII.

Thomas Baynard, son of his brother Richard, was his heir. But he had not this estate at the time of his decease in 1344 (f). [See in the other Volume, p. 176.]

William Amory held this maner in 1341, wherein he was succeeded by his son—Edmund (g).

It came afterwards, as well as the Maner of Great Maldon, in the Bouchier family. Bartholomew, Lord Bouchier, was possessed of it in the reign of K. Henry IV.—Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her two husbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 253.] But she dying without issue, it descended to her heir at law—Henry Bouchier, Earl of Eu, and Essex; who, at the time of his decease 4 April 1483, held both the maners of Great and Little Maldon (i). His grandson—Henry, Earl of Essex held the same; and then his only daughter and heir

Anne, Marchioness of Northampton. Her husband William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, did indeed alienate it, by license dated 12 October 1540, to William Wriothesley, and others (k). But, notwithstanding that she dyed possessed of it 26 January 1570 (l). The same year Qu. Elizabeth granted it to

Walter Devereux, Viscount Hereford, and afterwards Earl of Essex: And, in 1590, to Thomas Gardiner, with the maner of Great Maldon (m). His son—Sir Thomas Gardiner Kt. sold them, as I have just before observed to Robert Sprignell Esq; They passed together from Sprignell to—Taylor,—Davenport,—Frost, &c.

The Maner of IENKINS, commonly called Jenkin-Maldon. Only part of the land lyes in Maldon, the House is in Haseley, about two miles south from this Town.

This is now only a nominal Maner. It belonged anciently to the Hospital of St. Giles in Little Maldon, and was the chief of its endowment.

After the suppression, K. Henry VIII. in 1538, granted lands called Tillinghams, and Byleigh-wick, Byggys, Lambornes, Westfeild, Holfrith crofts, Smalmerth, commonly named Jenkin Maldons, in the parishes of Hayselfleigh, Purleigh, Woodham Mortimer, and St. Mary's and St. Peter's in this Town, to Thomas Dyer, and his heirs. He had license, 15 November 1546, to alienate them to Roger Heigham, and his wife (n). At the time of his decease, 29 August 1558, he held the maners of Jenkyn and Maldon, and the rest of the premises, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 54 s. 3 d.—William, his son and heir was then 19 years old (o).

Edward Bellingham was possessed of it in 1595, and dying 31 March 1605, left his son and heir—Edward, aged upwards of 29 years (p).

It belonged lately to Sir John Smith, Bart. then to his son—Sir John Smith, Bart. now to his two Sisters, Mary, widow of Dormer Parkhurst Esq; and Elizabeth Smith.

SAYERS, or SEYRES, and SOUTHOUSE, are mentioned as other Maners in Maldon; now only a grazing farm, in the parish of St. Mary's.

Sir Richard Grey, of Wilton, held these maners, and le Hide, in 1441. of the King, by knight's service, as parcel of the maner of Purle; And so did—Margaret, his widow, that dyed in 1451.—William was their son and successor (q).

In 1506 Hugh Dennys Esq; obtained a pardon for his intrusion on the maners of Purle, Maldon, Sayers, Snodham, &c. And, at the time of his decease 17 September 1558, he held the maners of Sowthowse and Sawiers of the Queen as of the Honor of Raleigh.—Henry, his son and heir, was 13 years old (r).—John Dennis Esq; 20 January 1576, sold Sowthowse and Sawyers, lying in the parishes of Maldon, Munden, and Purley, to Thomas Emeley, Gent. In the recovery, they are described as one messuage, one garden, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of pasture, 20 of wood, 300 of furze and heath, 200 of marsh, and 100 acres of land under water (s). He dyed 29 March 1608, leaving—Maximilian his son and heir (t).

This estate belonged some time ago to Richard Lockwood, and Osmond Beauvoir, Esqres. afterwards to Mr. Charles Philips merchant.

Northey island, near Maldon, which hath been reputed a Maner, was also in the same hands.

NORTHPIIT, and NORDMASHE, are also mentioned as Maners here. Thomas Darcy held them at the time of his decease 23 September 1485 (u). They are now unknown.

William Twyddie Esq; who dyed 21 June 1605, held the maner of Maldon, alias Earles Maldon in Maldon, with all its rights, members, and appertinances; and a messuage, stable, curtilage, and orchard thereto adjoining, late in the tenure of William Mounson. Also these several parcels of land, Hawke-downe-hills; fourteen acres; Birdescrofte; Great and Little Melfeild; Banfeild; Redleis, or Fryerfeild; Nold Nould-grove; Smythfeild; le Harpe mead; Milkwell; Culver crofte; and Tillersfills: all in the three parishes of Maldon; holden of the King in free socage, and not in capite, nor by knight's comes next under our consideration.

This Borough belonged originally, like most others, to the King; and, at the time of the Survey, the Houses were lett to the Burgeses, at a certain rent.

In K. Henry the First's reign, Robert Fitz-Richard was lord of the Borough of Maldon (w).

It was afterwards in the hands of K. Henry II. and he granted it to Partridge, a Norman, who gave a moiety of it to an Hospital in Normandy; the Master whereof did afterwards exchange with the Bishop of London, for some lands the Bishop had in Normandy [M]. How the Bishop came by the other moiety does not appear, but probably by grant from the Crown, because Bishop Robert Braybroke, Lord Chancellor, with his Chapter of St. Paul's, granted it to this Corporation in 1403: By virtue of which grant, they enjoyed a Custom, called Landcheap, which is, that all persons purchasing any freehold lands within the Borough, shall pay to the use of the Borough 10 d. out of every mark of the purchase-money (x).

This ancient custom, with some other rents and profits arising from a moiety of the town of Maldon, seems to be what Hamo le Parker, and Anne his wife, held about the year 1301, of the King in capite, by the service of the fourth part of a knight's Fee. There were certain Tenants, who paid a yearly rent of assize for the Stalls of the Market 16 s. There was a certain toll from Ships and Lighters coming here, worth 8 s. per ann. with a moiety of the Pleas of the Court of the said Town (y).

In 1422, Henry Teye held a moiety of the lordship [dominii] of the Town of Maldon, of the King in capite, by knight's service; as of the Honor of Peverell (z).

At the request of William de Mandevill, Earl of Essex, K. Henry II. gave a very ample Charter to the Burgeses of Maudone; whereby he granted and confirmed to them, and their successors, all their Lands, Possessions, and Tenements, as they held them of him; within and without the Burgh, as far as the bounds of the Banlieu of the same; namely Haylespett, Morisbroke, Limborne, Billimbroc, Buherne, Cravenho, Elmcrofte: To have and to hold for ever, free and quiet with sac, soc, &c. and all their Liberties and free Customs, peaceably, freely, quietly, fully, and honorably, in lands, waters, houses, revenues, in all places and matters appertaining to their tenements aforesaid; by the service of free Burgage. He also exempted them from Aids, Amerciements, &c. usually levied by Sheriffs, Foresters, &c. Moreover he exempted them from Danegeld, Hydag, Carriage, Summage, Scutage, Tallage, Stallage, Lastage, and Toll, in every market, and fair, and at the Passage over bridges, and along roads belonging to this Kingdom; of working at the building or repairs of Castles, Bridges, Causeways, and the fencing of Parks &c. And from all foreign Service, except the finding for forty days at their own expence one Ship, for the King's use, whenever He shall be obliged to go personally, or to send an Army, for the Kingdom's service; being first summoned by the royal letters to a certain day and place. See this Charter at length in the Note below [N].

Among other ancient Privileges, they were entitled to Common of Pasture, and Estovers, upon Tiptre-heath. See in the other Volume, p. 141.

The substance of their present Charter is as follows.

Geffrey de Mandeville had a grant of the whole Barony and Lands of William Peverel, and undoubtedly of what Ralph Piperell held here at the time of the Survey; which induced his son William to procure this Charter. See Dugdale's Baron. Vol. I. p. 202.

Burgesses and Inhabitants of the Burgh of Maldon, and their successors for ever, that they should be one perpetual Body corporate and politic, and one perpetual Community, consisting of two Bailiffs, six Aldermen, eighteen capital Burgesses, and the Commonalty of the Burgesses of Maldon. But not having named in that Charter the Bailiffs, and other Officers, nor given the Burgesses any power or authority to nominate, constitute, and elect any of their own body to be Bailiffs &c. Therefore she and her consort K. Philip, 25 February 1554, granted them a new Charter, whereby they incorporated the Burgesses and Inhabitants of the Burgh of Maldon, alias Maldon, and their successors; to consist of two Bailiffs, six Aldermen, eighteen capital Burgesses and the Commonalty of the Burgesses of Maldon; to be one perpetual Body corporate and politic in fact and in name, and to have perpetual succession.—They were impowered to purchase and receive maners, lands, tenements &c. provided, they did not extend to the clear yearly value of 40 l. beyond reprises, and were not holden in capite, or by knight's service.—They were also impowered to hold, before the Bailiffs, in the Court of their Motehall, all manner of Pleas, real and mixt, concerning any lands and tenements within their Burgh, Liberty, and precincts of the same; and also personal Pleas for any sum or kind; and to compel the defendants, in real Pleas, to answer by process of law from fortnight to fortnight; and in personal Pleas from week to week; and to arrest and attach their bodies, and chattles within the Burgh, and commit their bodies to prison; and to hear and terminate all such Pleas. Likewise, to hold Pleas of assise, novel disseisin, mort d'ancestor, redisseisin, attainments, debt, accounts, trespass, and all other personal Pleas whatsoever, arising, within this Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct; that were moved or to be moved within any of the Courts, of Chancery, the Common Bench, Exchequer, and before the Justices itinerant, or any other Justices and Officers; and to determine the same.—The Bailiffs were also empowered to hold in the Motehall a Court of View of frank-pledge, and View of frank pledge, concerning all tenants, and inhabitants of this Burgh, and the suburbs, twice a year, viz. within one month after Easter, and within one month after Michaelmas:—And the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and the rest of the Corporation, and their successors, to have a Prison within their house of the Mote-halle, of which the Bailiffs for the time being should be keepers.—Also within their Burgh, or Liberty, tumbrel, pillory, and gallows.—To have a Market within their Burgh every Saturday for ever.—To constitute and appoint a Clerk of the Market.—And Coroners of their own.—To hold Courts of Admiralty, and have the fines, amerciaments, and other emoluments thence arising.—To them were given Felons cattle, escapes, and other goods and chattles, forfeitures, fines, and amerciaments, for their own use.—They were to have one Common Seal: and the Return of all writs and Precepts and executions of the same, provided it was not about felony or treason:—and the assise of bread, wine, beer, and of all kinds of victuals; of measures, weights, &c.—

The Bailiffs, Aldermen, and capital Burgesses, or the greater part of them, to make reasonable Ordinances and Constitutions for the good of the Burgh, and put them in execution, provided they were not repugnant or contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the realm.—To assess reasonable Tallages, or Taxes, upon the goods of all persons, and of all Burgesses, dwelling within the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct, as well within Liberties as without, according to every one's ability, upon the rents, trades, and merchandises, or otherwise, as shall seem to them best, and to levy them by reasonable distress; committing such as refused to pay, if necessary, to prison, and keeping them there till they paid.—The Bailiffs for the time being, and some Lawyer, and two Burgesses; chosen the same day, and in the same manner and form as the Bailiffs; to be jointly and severally Keepers of the Peace within the Burgh.—In support of their service aforesaid, of finding one Ship for forty days, as they did in the time of K. Henry I. and other Kings of England, this Charter granted them all fines, issues, compositions, amerciaments, forfeitures, for felonies, and other crimes, outlawries, waifs, strays, happening within the Burgh, banlieu, and precincts, without account.—It also confirmed their Liberties contained in the Charter of K. Henry II. namely Exemption throughout England, and the ports of the same, from scot, passage, murage, picage, &c. as they enjoyed it from time immemorial. And if any one took toll or custom from any of the Burgesses, the Bailiffs and other members of the Corporation should go and take out of that city, burgh, or town, where custom was so taken, or of the goods of him that took the toll, to the amount of what was taken from their fellow-burgesses; or the trespasser should come to Maldon, and prove by due course of law that he owed nothing.—This Charter granted likewise to the Bailiffs, Aldermen, Burgesses, and Commonalty of Maldon their Fishery within the Liberty and Precincts of their Burgh; and the Customs of the water and of the banks whoever had lands adjoining, and the use of the Creeks and of their wharfs, and cranes.—Moreover, it granted them, and their successors, three Fairs, yearly forever; to last four days, namely the vigil and day of St. Giles, and the day following; [August 31: and September 1.] and the vigil and day of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, and the two days following; [September 8, 9, 10.] with all their liberties and free customs.—Next, it exempted the Bailiffs and other members residing within the Burgh, and their successors, from being impanelled out of the Burgh, against their will, upon any Jury, or Assize; or to be appointed assessors or collectors of tenths, fifteenths, and other tallages, subsidies, &c. or put into any other office whatsoever, without this Town and Liberties.—And it granted to the Bailiffs, Aldermen, Capital Burgesses, and Commonalty of this Burgh, and their successors, and ordained, That whenever a Parliament was summoned, they should have power and authority to chuse and nominate two discreet and honest Men to be Burgesses in Parliament for their Burgh, as they were accustomed to have from time immemorial; and that the said Burgesses should have two votes votes in Parliament, &c.—It directs, that the Aldermen and capital Burgeſſes, for the time being, or the greater part of them, yearly for ever, on the Friday next after the Epiphany, in the Burgh of Maldon, chuſe two of the more diſcreet and ſufficient Aldermen, for their Bailiffs, to continue in their office for one year, and to be ſworn in the ſame before the two other ſenior Aldermen.—None of them to be choſen Bailiff again, till three years after having ſerved the office.—This Charter confirms alſo to the Corporation all their Bounds and Limits, namely Hayleſpett, Morysbroke, Lumborn, Billingsbroke, Buherne, Cratenha, and Revank, with the waters and banks or ſhores within thoſe bounds, as they had enjoyed them from time immemorial: And that none ſhould fiſh, or erect cranes and wharfs, from the Hethe to Revanks, without the licence of the Bailiffs &c. nor preſume to ſell or buy within the Water unleſs at the Hethe of this Burgh, upon pain of forfeiture.—All their ancient Customs, Liberties, Privileges, Franchiſes, Rights, granted to them at any time before by any former Charters, are finally confirmed by this in the ampleſt and full-eſt manner.

Under this Charter the Corporation has acted ever ſince, it being their laſt Charter. In purſuance of it, they have Two Bailiffs annually choſen, Six Aldermen, Eighteen capital Burgeſſes; and of other Burgeſſes who have votes at Elections, about 1000.

This Burgh hath ſent Burgeſſes to Parliament ever ſince 1329, the 3d of K. Edward III. but with ſome chaſms, as appears by the Liſt of them inſerted in the Introduction to this Hiſtory after the Liſt of the Knights of the Shire.

This Town was anciently divided into three PARISHES. 1. ALLSAINTS. 2. ST. PETER'S. Theſe two have been long united together. 3. ST. MARYS.

ALLSAINTS

Parish, is in the higheſt part of the Town: and the Church is the chief in this Borough. It is a ſpacious edifice, conſiſting of a body, and north and ſouth aiſles: the ſouth one is called Darcy's aiſle, or Chapel. On the top of the Tower is a Spire, built in the form of an equilateral triangle, which is very uncommon. Here are 5 Bells.

This Church was given by Robert Mantell to Bileigh-Abbey, founded by him in Little Maldon, of which we ſhall preſently give an account. The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to it, and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Abbot and Convent continued patrons till their ſuppreſſion.

The ſmallneſs of the Profits of this Vicarage, and of the neighbouring one of St. Peter's, occaſioned them to be united in 1306, and they have remained ſo ever ſince.

Upon the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. granted this Church and Rectory, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to John Gate Eſq; He, by licence dated 17 September 1546, alienated them to William Marche (a). Afterwards they came into the—Franke family, which preſented to the Vicarage from 1561 to 1620—and then into that of Ingram (b).

Bartholomew Bludworth, of London, merchant, was poſſeſſed of them next. His widow, —Utricia Bludworth, of Bevitree in Devonſhire, preſented to the Vicarage in 1710: and their ſon—John Bludworth Eſq; in 1725 and 1730.

Dr. Thomas Plume, whom we ſhall have occaſion to mention more particularly a little lower, gave 400l. to augment the Vicaridge of All-Saints in Maldon, by buying improper tythes, or ſo much glebe as might be had for the ſame, for which the Incumbent ſhall be reſident, and take care for daily prayers.

Lands and tenements in Maldon were put in feoffment by divers perſons, to the intent that the Wardens of St. Catharine's Gild ſhould find a Priest to ſing maſs in All-Saints Church, and help to ſerve the Cure. In the Certificate it is ſaid, that this Pariſh had then in it by eſtimation 200. of houſeling people. At the ſuppreſſion, the yearly value of it was 46 s. K. Edward VI. 26 September 1548, granted to John Welles all the meſſuages, lands, meadows, and paſtures belonging to this Gild or Fraternity (*).

Robert Darcy of Danbury Eſq; founded three Chantries in this Church; in the reign of K. Henry IV: and the ſouth aiſle, or Chapel, is called Darcy's aiſle, or Chapel, undoubtedly becauſe it was built by him for the uſe of his Chantry-Prieſts. Several of that family were buried in this aiſle, as appears by the Epitaphs. See a further account of the Family under Danbury, and St. Oſith.

ST. PETERS.

This Pariſh ſtands in the heart of the Town. The Church was given by R. Mantell to Bileigh-Abbey, and united to All Saints, as I have obſerved above.

Of the Church, only the Tower is now ſtanding. The body of it being down, Dr. Thomas Plume erected upon the ſite of it a handſom brick edifice, the lower part of which is the Grammar-School, and the upper part a Library, which he furniſhed with his own Books. For a more particular account of this generous perſon's Benefactions to this Town, ſee below under the article Charities and Benefactions.

Ralph Breder may be called the firſt Founder of the Grammar-School, he having left 300l. for that uſe. Mrs. Anaſtasia Wentworth added thereto. See below among the Benefactions, and in the other Volume, p. 134.

In this Pariſh there was a Gild in honor of the Virgin Mary, founded by licence of K. Henry V. for a Priest to ſing maſs in the Church, and to keep a ſchool. In the Certificate of Chantries it is ſaid, that the Pariſh of St. Peter's was 'a very great pariſh, having in yt the number 'of 240 of houſeling people.' The endowment of this gild, was, a tenement called the Starr; nine tenements and meſſuages, and a gate-houſe; and a stall in the market: four meadows in Maldon; and one in Langford called Stokehope: two crofts of land, and one garden. All then valued at 9l. 5s. 9d. ob. They were granted, with St. Catharine's gild, to John Welles.

parish stands in the lower part of this Town, near the Channel. It is what St. Martins held under Eustace Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey. The profits of it were assigned for finding lights in St. Martin's Church.

K. Stephen granted that Collegiate Church free-warren in all their lands in Mealdon.

The Church of St. Mary's was anciently a Sea-mark, and had on the top of the Tower a Beacon. The Tower being decayed, fell down and demolished part of the Church; for the repairing of which a Brief was granted by K. Charles I. 18 July 1628.

Upon the dissolution of the College of St. Martins London, this Church was given to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster; and the perpetual Curacy hath continued ever since in their gift, being of their peculiar jurisdiction.

Thomas Knipe, M. A. was the perpetual Curate of it; and now Samuel Horsmanden, L. L. B. Rector of Purley.

In this, as well as in the two other Churches, formerly was a Gild, or Fraternity: This was in honor of St. George. Lands and tenements had been put in feoffment by divers persons, to find a Priest called St. George's Priest to sing mass in the parish of St. Mary's, and also to help serve the cure. The particulars of the endowment were, lands and three messuages and tenements in Maldon; a messuage, lands, and hereditaments called Boies, in Salcote and Tolshunt-Knights; messuages, lands, &c. called Sampsons, Widowe lands, Hunger londs, Tabor, Osbornes croft, and Swete Maggotts in Tolleshunt-Darcy; and lands &c. called Smythes in Dengy. All then of the yearly value of 6l. 11s. And in the Certificate it is said, That the parish of St. Maries was a great parish, having in it about the number of 280 of howseling people. The revenues of it were granted, with those of the two others, to John Welles (c).

There were, before the Reformation, Three Religious Houses in and about this Town. 1. The Abbey of Bilegh. 2. A Priory of Carmelites. 3. St. Giles's Hospital.

THE ABBEY OF BILEGH, stood west of the Town, in that part which is called Little Maldon. It was of the Premonstratensian order, dedicated to St. Nicolas, and founded by Robert de Mantell in 1180.

The Monks, or Canons, placed in it, were brought from Great Parndon. [See in the other Volume, p. 494.]

Their first possessions consisted of the lands they had before in Parndon; the site of their House here, with appertenances, two virgates of land in Maudone, and two little islands called Rucholm, and Hardholm; and the third part of Strode-wood; a field called Alicedune; and all the land which Rob. Mantell had given them at Totham, and Goldhangre; the Churches of St. Peters, and All-Saints, in this Town; of St. Laurence in Danesey; and half the Church of St. Margaret of Bures: And of the gift of Roeis wife of Rob. Mantell, one messuage in Mammelane, London. Also, of the gift of Ralph de Marci in Lagefare [Laver] all the land which was Felledens's, and panage for fifteen hogs every year in the wood there. Of the gift of Beulceline, wife of Roger de Langeford, at Blacheham all the land which Walter the Cook held of her (d).

In 1285, Hugh Fitz-Otto gave them a marsh called Coleurde in Bradwell near the sea: And, in 1290, Hugh de Nevill lands in Great Wakering, with the advowson of that Church: As did, in 1299, Robert Fitz-Walter the advowson of the Church of Ulting (e). In 1392, John Doreward, Robert Rikedon, and William Dannebury, gave them 46 acres of arable in Maldon (f).

At the dissolution, their Revenues consisted, of the Maners of Byleigh, and of Cannons in Great Parndon; Moynes, in Asheldham and St. Laurence; Lands in Bocking and Pannefeld; Colleward in Bradwell; Muntess-ferm in Woodham-Walter, and Mulsham in Chelmsford; Tollyfants in Goldhanger; Weymarsh, Est marsh and West marsh, in Goldhanger and Faltey; Lands, tenements, and rents in Haylesleigh, Purleigh, Woodham Mortimer, and Norton; Rents in St. Laurence, Steeple, and Cryxeheth; Messuages, tenements, and land in London; Rents of several lands and tenements in Maldon, and of Spittle-lands there; Muntess-ferm in Purleigh, Frerne and Jakeletts, Bennetts, Dodwere, and Wymark land, in the same parish; Gorewell, and Prentysse in Tollebury; Muntess-ferm in Tollehunt Darcy, Tollebury, Goldanger, and Little Totham; Rents in Great and Little Totham, Goldanger, and Salcott; Frerne in Great Totham; Rents in Ulting, Woodham-Walter, Sandon, Widford, and Chiggenhall St. James; Rents in Great Wakering; Bowres in Woodham-Walter: The Rectories, or great Tithes, of All-Saints and St. Peter's in Maldon, and of Ulting, and Great Wakering; and the Advowsons of those Vicarages; and the Advowson of the Rectory of St. Laurence (g).

They had also very extensive lands and demesnes near their House, and in Maldon, and other places, particularly set down below [O]. The yearly amount of all their Revenues, was, according to J. Speed, 196 l. 6 s. 5 d. or 157 l. 16 s. 11 d. qd. according to Dugdale; out of which were maintained nine Canons.

Only part of this Abbey remains, the rest lying in ruins.

Their Arms were, Argent, 6 flowers de lices, gules, 3, 2, 1.

Henry Bouchier, Earl of Eu, and Essex, and Lord Treasurer of England, who dyed 4 April 1483, was buried, in the Chapel of the Virgin Mary in this Abbey; likewise his Lady Isabel. And Lady Mary Nevill of Essex, was also buried in this Church (h).

The lordship and site of this Abbey, with its Church-yard, and the lands set down in note [O], together with the Rectories of St. Peter's and All-Saints in Maldon, and the Advowsons of the Vicarages, were granted, in 1540, to John Gate Esq; and his heirs, to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and rent of 3 l. 11 s. 2 d. He obtained license 17 September 1549, to alienate them to William Marche: (i) who, at the time of his decease 11 July 1549, held the maner of Bileigh, and the house and site of the Monastery, and Bileigh grange, 5 messuages, 1 dove-house, 2 mills, 100 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 1000 of pasture, 80 of wood, 100 of more, 100 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent in Maldon, Byleigh, Woodham-Walter, Ulting, and Langford. — William, his son and heir, then aged 23 years, dyed possessed of the same 10 November 1552, and his sisters, Mary wife of Richard Bowes, Margaret wife of John Beynham, and Elizabeth Marche, were his sisters and heirs (k).

This estate was next in Thomas Francke Esq; of the Rise &c. in Hatfeild Broad-oak. [See in the other Volume, p. 507.] He held the site of this Monastery, and the maner of Belight, and Belight grange, and 5 messuages, 1 dove-house, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, and 200 of pasture, in Maldon &c. And dying 9

February 1579, was succeeded by his son — Richard Francke, then 26 years old (l). He departed this life 28 October 1628, and his son and heir — Leventhorp Francke (m), afterwards knighted, sold this estate to ... Crathorne, Gent. one of the Receivers in the Custom-house, London. Of him it was purchased by Richard Ingram, of Grace Church-street, London, iron-monger; who dying a batchelor left it to — Richard Ingram, of London, merchant. The latter sold it, about 1698, to

John Bludworth, of Hampton-Court, merchant. He married Utricia, daughter of Mr. Banks of Leaden-hall-street, London, [remarried after his decease to the Rev. Walter Stert, of Corfleet in Devonshire] and had by her — John Bludworth, Esq; who left it to

Mrs. Sarah Clifton. It belongs now to

Dr. Fortescue, a Physician at Bampton in Oxfordshire.

Some of the abovesaid possessions of the Abbey were dismembred from the rest. For the Spittle-lands, in St. Peter's Maldon, formerly belonging to St. Giles's Spittle, or Hospital; with Bond-feild, the Grange-house, a garden, the Ox-house, and a Garner, belonging to Bileigh-Abbey, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1539, to William Gonson, Esq; His son — Benjamin Gonson held the same in 1577 (n). [See above, p. 111. and in the other Volume, p. 19.]

Little Bileigh, part also of the Abbey's possessions, belonged in 1566, to Thomas Eve, who had license to alienate to

William Vernon, Bileigh-grove alias Bileigh-Strond, the two Doggetts-crofts, Doggetts-more, Parkefeilds alias Parkewood, and the Panne mead, in St. Peter's in Maldon. And the same William Vernon purchased of George Wiseman other lands in Bileigh and Maldon 20 May 1569 (o). He was the second son of John Vernon of Nottinghamshire Esq; descended from Richard Vernon of the Peak in Derbyshire. At the time of his decease, 2 August 1605, he held this estate, leaving by Alice his wife, daughter of ... Scriven — William his son and heir, thirty years old (p). He enjoyed this estate, containing about 70 acres, and other lands in Maldon and Woodham-Walter comprehending 103 acres, late parcel of the possessions of Bileigh-Abbey. By Sarah his wife, daughter of John Butler of Tobye in this County, [remarried to John Jeffrey,] he had John, William, Mary, Sarah, and Dorothy; and dying 17 February 1611, was buried in the Chancel of All-Saints-Church, with an epitaph (q).—John Vernon, the eldest son, was a Greek or Turkey merchant, and brought from the ruins of Smyrna a tomb-stone under which he lies buried in the Chancel of the said Church, with Mary his wife, daughter of John Scrivener of Suffolk Esq; by whom he had 2 or 3 children, of the last of which she dyed in child-bed 1 November 1647. He himself departed this life 28 January 1653, aged 44 years.—Captain Vernon, the last of this family, dyed single and poor.

This estate belonged lately to Henry Bevan Esq; and now to his brother—Isaac Bevan, Gent.

THE PRIORY OF CARMELITES was founded about the year 1292, by Richard Gravesend bishop of London, and Richard Helham, a priest, for Carmelite or White-Monks [P].

Those mendicants not being capable of possessing lands, the revenues of this House were valued at the Suppression but at 26 s. 8 d. For the sum of 21 l. 6 s. 8 d. in Speed is a mistake (r).

The 14th of January 1537, William Harris had a lease of the Friars Carmelites at the ferm rent of 8 d.

K. Henry VIII. October 8, 1546, granted this House to George Duke, and John Sterre, and their heirs; to hold in burgage and free socage, by fealty only (s).

Thomas Mildmay Esq; by deed dated 6 October 1563, conveyed this capital messuage called the Friars in Maldon to

Vincent Herries, Gent. and his heirs; From him they passed to his eldest son—Sir Thomas Herries; who by fine and recovery settled it on himself and Cordelia his wife for life, and after their deaths to the use of—John his eldest son. He having no issue, his brother—Thomas Herries Esq; inherited: and he by feoffment and livery conveyed it to Bartholomew Brickwood, Gent. and his heirs for ever. He was descended from Thomas Brickwood of Evington in Leicestershire; and son of Samuel Brickwood, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Henry Symons of Maldon, Gent. Bartholomew married Anne, daughter of . . . Hewet of London, Gent. and by will, 20 March 1673, gave her this estate for life, remainder to his eldest son—John, and the heirs of his body; and in default thereof to the issue of his other sons, Samuel, and Benjamin, as John should by will appoint. He, by his will dated 9 February 1693, gave it to his younger brother—Benjamin, and his heirs for ever. The latter bequeathed it by will, 22 October 1707, to his nephew—Henry Brickwood, Gent. who, 14 March 1707-8, sold it to

Thomas Richmond Esq; one of the Burgesses in Parliament for this Burgh in the third Parliament of Qu. Anne. His brother—Jonathan Richmond had it after him; whose daughter Susannah brought it in marriage to her husband Mr. Thomas Cooke of Southwark. She was re-married to Mr. Hill, and is now a widow.

This little Convent was honoured with several great Scholars; namely Thomas Maldon, who dyed in 1404. Richard Acton, in 1446. Robert of Colchester, in 1465, and Thomas Hatfield (t).

THE HOSPITAL OF ST. GILES

stood in Little Maldon. The remains of it are built of a mixture of stone; and of bricks and tiles that have the appearance of Roman. It is now converted into a Barn. One of our Kings is said to have been the founder (u). And the design of the foundation, was for the relief of such Burgesses of this Town as should have the Leprosy. For the maintenance of it, the Master or Warden was to have all forfeitures for bread, beer, flesh, and fish not good or fit to be eaten. If the Warden did not duly discharge his trust, the Hospital was to come to the Crown. Upon the male-administration of Robert Mansfeld, Master; who for three years had neglected his office, having during that space neither maintained a Chaplain, or any leprous person; therefore K. Henry IV. took this Hospital into his own hands, but restored it again. So that presentations were made to it by several persons after Mansfeld's death, from 1422 till 1480. But Henry Bouchier Earl of Essex, Isabell his wife, and others that had presented the then Master, having obtained the King's license 18 February 1480; they did by writing under their hands and seals, 17 May 1481, give to Thomas Scarlet, then Abbot of Bileigh, and to the Convent and their successors, this Hospital of St. Giles, the patronage of the same, and all the lands thereto belonging, about 90 acres, for their better maintenance and support. And Thomas Kemp, Bishop of London, did unite and appropriate this Hospital, with all its fruits, profits, &c. to the Abbot and Convent of Bileigh and their successors (w).

The chief of its revenues were the Maner of Jenkin-Maldon, of which we have given an account above.

A list of the Wardens may be seen in Newcourt.

This Hospital belonged to the late Lieutenant-General Montolieu; now to his son—Col. Charles Lewis Montolieu.

[P] They were one of the four mendicant Orders, and founded in the year 1122, by Albert patriarch of Jerusalem, who gathered together a few Hermits that lived on mount Carmel, and gave them the rule of St. Basil. This Order was brought into England about the year 1265.

Twenty pounds per annum to the Bailiffs of Maldon, for the Poor of the three parishes; viz. 8*l.* to All Saints parish; to the other two 6*l.* apiece: Also 30*l.* for reparation of the Church of All Saints; and 120*l.* for repairing the Haven, Channels; and Bridges of Fullbridge and Heybridge, to be expended in three years:—Likewise, 300*l.* to be laid out for an endowment of a Grammar-School-master; The said School-master to be nominated by his feoffees; whilst they lived, and afterwards by the Bailiffs of this Corporation: He gave the maner of East-Newland, purchased of Abel Clarke Esq; Finally he gave 20*l.* to be lent to Free-men without interest, they giving Security.

Samuel Bedell of Bilegh-Abbey gave 40*l.* to the same use.

Thomas Cammock of Maldon, Esq; gave Cromwell-Water to the Town.

Mrs. Anastasia, widow of Henry Wentworth Esq; and sole daughter and heir of William Hale of this Town Gent. that dyed 4 June 1634, gave 23*l.* per ann. to the Free-school, out of a farm at Hatfield-Peverell: She also gave two Houses of about 9 or 10*l.* per ann. to this School.—Besides this, 3*l.* per ann. was given out of rents of Houses in this town to the said School.

But the greatest Benefactor to this Town was Dr. Thomas Plume:

“The farm of Iltney in Munden having been (as he had credibly heard) a Chantry-land given to Maldon (*), but alienated by K. Henry VIII. he now restored, and gave for ever to the town of Maldon for the uses following: 1. To keep in good repair the school and library-room for ever: 2dly. To maintain a weekly Lecture from Lady-day to Michaelmas for ever, allowing the several neighbouring Ministers of Dengy, or Rochford-Hundred, that shall be chosen to preach it, Ten shillings for their Sermon, and two shillings for his own and his friends dinner, if the Trustees order it, upon Wednesday or Saturday, as they shall agree, in the Upper Church at Maldon. But upon the first Wednesday or Saturday in August he allows twenty shillings out of Iltney-lands towards the dinner of them that shall there meet, and take the accounts of the tenants, let and set the farm, consider the repairs of the houses &c.—Allowing the Sexton ten shillings for each of the two quarters for tolling the bell for the Lecture, to be paid 10*s.* upon Midsummer-day, and 10*s.* at Michaelmas. And likewise 10*s.* at each of the said quarter-days to be divided among the most godly indigent poor of Maldon that repair to this lecture, prayers, and sermon most constantly: Further, out of the profits of Iltney-lands he orders the Trustees to keep six, or ten poor Boys out of Maldon or Munden, and allows the Master 20*s.* per ann. towards their clothing. And he allows the Minister of All Saints parish, or whosoever reads the Prayers before the Lecture and at other times, 20*s.* per quarter, out of Iltney estate for ever, for constant reading morning Prayer daily about eleven o'clock and five at night, or sooner in winter. The Trustees he nominated, were the two annual Bayliffs of Maldon (if they communicated with the Church of England) and the Ministers of All-Saints parish Maldon, the Curate of St. Maries there, the School-master, the Library-keeper, and also the Ministers of Woodham-Walter, Purleigh, Munden, Heybridge, or Curates for ever, or any five of them.

As to his LIBRARY just mentioned above,

He gave to this Library all his Books and Pictures, (except his own Picture in Mr. Pond's house) together with his large Map of the world. And desired all his manuscript Papers, of his own hand, to be carefully preserved in the study of the said Library. He directed that the keeper of his Library should be a Scholar that knows Books, M. A. and in holy orders; and may be some Minister that has a neighbouring living, and can and shall reside in Maldon: or the School-master himself, or any other of good learning and life, that will be engaged to attend every morning and afternoon (except Sundays) two hours in the Library-room, or in his house near to it, in all four hours per diem; that any Gentleman, or Scholar, who desires, may go into it, and make use of any book there, or borrow it, in case he leaves a vadimonium with the keeper for the restoring thereof fair and incorrupted within a short time, or else therewith to buy another of the same kind and goodness. He shall suffer no stranger to be there alone without a voucher for his honesty, and his own promise not to carry away, or deface any book. The Library-keeper is to give 200*l.* bond at least not to imbezzell his books, nor to lend them out without sufficient pawn to his Trustees at Maldon, to buy the same again. The Governors of Sion-college London for the time being are to take account thereof, for which he left that college 20*s.* per annum out of Iltney estate for ever. And because new Books are daily printing, he wills that twenty shillings per ann. be paid out of his Iltney estate yearly for ever, to buy any that shall be most desired by the Library-keeper.—His Salary is forty pounds a year, and a dwelling house near the Library.

Two thousand pounds that he had in the East-India Company he ordered to be employed for making good his Charities as to the Work-house for the poor of Maldon, Munden, and neighbour parishes, and other Charities specified in his will.—Having bequeathed in it before 200*l.* and all the residue of his personal estate not disposed of, for purchasing and providing Tenements, and a Stock for setting the Poor of Maldon, and some of the Poor of Munden, to work. And what remained of his personal estate in the Exchequer, towards erecting a Work-house for the poor of Maldon and neighbouring villages.”

This munificent person was born in Maldon, and baptized in All-Saints Church 7 August 1630; educated in Chelmsford-School, and at Christ's College in Cambridge: afterwards Vicar of Greenwich, and Archdeacon of Rocheſter. He dyed in the beginning of November 1704, and was buried in Longfield Church-yard in Kent, with an epitaph ordered by himself [2]. Besides his Charities to this Town, he left great

And, because he would shew he had no ill opinion of marriage, he bequeathed 100*l.* to the placing of ten maids in marriage, being above 24 years old, of civil life, and who had lived in one service above seven years, five whereof to be in East Greenwich.

WOODHAM.

Two parishes so called stand in the north-west corner of this Hundred; between Maldon and the Hundred of Chelmsford; in which last Hundred there is another styled Woodham-Ferrers, so near these as to have been once part of the same district. The name is from the two words, Wood; and ham, habitation or village; i. e. the village in the Wood: of the same meaning as Waltham. The two Woodhams in this Hundred are distinguished by the addition of Walter, and Mortimer, two noble Families to which they anciently belonged.

3. WOODHAM-WALTER took that name from its lords, the Fitz-Walter family.

Levena was possessed of it in Edward the Confessor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, Ralph Baignard, and his under-tenant Pointell [S].

Here is but one Maner; the mansion house of which, once the seat of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, stood about half a mile from the Church.

Ralph Baignard was one of K. William's attendants in his Conquest of this Kingdom; and so high in his favor, that he rewarded him with 25 lordships in this County, and many more elsewhere. [See in the other Volume, p. 427.] Baynard's castle in London was his capital mansion, and the head of his Barony. He was succeeded by his son—Geffrey; and he by his son—William Baignard, or Baynard; who for joining in a Conspiracy against K. Henry I. was deprived of his Barony and estates (y), which that King gave to

Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert progenitor of the Earls of Clare; from which Robert descended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, seated here, of which we shall briefly deduce the succession, referring to the Peerages for a more particular account of their actions, intermarriages, and their several children. This Robert, surnamed Fitz-Richard, dyed in 1134, leaving by Maud his wife daughter of Simon de St. Liz, Earl of Huntindon, his son and heir—Walter Fitz-Robert, who married first Maud eldest daughter of Richard de Lucy, with whom he had the lordship of Disc, or Diss, in Norfolk, secondly Margaret de Bohun. By the first he had—Robert Fitz-Walter [T], which surname descended from him to his posterity. He held Wodeham by the service of 15 knights

[R] He was a man so extremely fat, and of such an uncommon bulk and weight, that there are very few, if any, such instances to be found in any country, or upon record in any books. At the age of 12 years and a half he weighed 10 stones and 4 pounds horse-man's weight, i. e. 144 pounds. He increased in bulk as he grew up, so that in Seven years more he weighed 336 pounds. He went on increasing, and probably in pretty near the same proportion: For the last time he was weighed, which was about thirteen months before he dyed, his neat weight was 41 stones and 10 pounds, or 584 pounds. At the time of his death, as he was manifestly grown bigger since the last weighing, if we take the same proportion by which he had increased for many years upon an average, viz. of about 2 stones a year, and only allow 4 pounds addition for last year, on account of his moving about but very little, this will bring him to 44 stones or 616 pounds neat weight.—As to his measure, he was 5 feet 9 inches and a half high. His body round the chest just under the arms measured 5 feet 6 inches, and round the belly 6 feet 12 inches. His arm in the middle of it was 2 feet 2 inches about, and his leg 2 feet 8 inches. After his death, seven men were buttoned in his westcoat without breaking a stitch, or straining a button. He dyed 10 November 1750, aged 29.

[T] This Robert, the second of the name, was one of the Barons, who most zealously appeared against K. John; and was constituted General of their army, under the title of fees belonging to his Barony (z); and dyed in 1235. By his first wife Gunnora, daughter and heir of Robert de Valoines, he had his son—Walter Fitz-Robert, or Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1258. His son and heir—Robert Fitz-Walter, born in 1258, was knighted in 1274. The year following he passed away the inheritance of Baynards-castle to Robert Kylwardby, Archbishop of Canterbury, who translated there from Holburn the Dominican or Black-Friers. In 1285, he had license to enclose 100 acres of heath, to enlarge his Park at Woodham (a): and from 1294 to 1325 was summoned to Parliament. His first wife was Alianor, daughter of William Earl Ferrers, of Groby, and his second Dervorgil, one of the daughters and coheirs of John de Burgh. [See under Lexden.] Departing this life in 1326, he was succeeded by—Robert, his son and heir by his first wife. He dyed in 1328, being then possessed of the maners of Woodham-Walter, Burindon, or Burnham, Reyndon, Little Dunmow, Henham, Wymbishe, Great Teye, and Lexden; all which, with his other maners in Norfolk and Suffolk, he held of the King in capite, by an entire Barony, and by the service of three knight fees (b) [U]. Having married Joane, eldest of three daughters and coheirs of John Moulton of Egremond, he left by her—John Fitz-Walter, his son and heir, born in 1315, who dyed 18 Octob. 1361. He had summons to parliament from 1341 to 1360; and besides the abovesaid maners enjoyed those of Aston and Shering. By Alianor his wife, daughter of Henry Lord Percy, he had—Walter, born in 1345; who did very great service in Essex, against the rebels under Jack Straw; and was summoned to parliament from 1369 to 1385. He departed this life in September 1386 (c), having had two wives, Alianor; and Philippa, daughter and coheir of John de Mohun, lord of Dunster, widow of Edward Plantagenet, Duke of York. By this last he had—Walter his son and heir, born in 1368; who had summons to parliament from 1390 to 1403. He dyed in 1408 (d), leaving by Joane his wife, daughter of Sir John Devereux, and sister and heir to her brother John, two sons, Humfrey, who dyed young; and—Walter Fitz-Walter his successor, who had summons to parliament in 1428 and 1430; and dyed in 1432 (e). He married Elizabeth . . . that enjoyed this maner of Woodham Walter till her decease 14 June 1464; and leaving no issue male, their heirs were found to be

Elizabeth; Anne, then wife of Thomas Rattclyff Esq; and Joane daughter of the said Elizabeth by her second husband William Maffy, wife of Sir Robert Fenys (f). Sir William Dugdale is mistaken in his account of this Family [W]. Thomas Rattclyff Esq; dyed about the year 1440; having never been possessed of this maner and estate, which his mother-in-law Elizabeth Lady Fitz-Walter enjoyed during her life, together with those of Burnham, Henham, Little Dunmow, Wymbishe, Sheryng, Lexden, and Ulynge (g). Their son and heir—John Ratcliffe Esq; obtained a pardon of intrusion, in 1460, for entring upon the lands of his inheritance without livery (h). In 1485 he was summoned to parliament by the title of Lord Fitz-Walter, being then Steward of the Household to K. Henry VII. But engaging in a conspiracy to set Perkin Warbeck on the throne, in 1494; he was convicted of high-treason, and carried to Calais, where he was soon after beheaded. Upon his attainder, this Maner; with the rest of his estates, became forfeited to the Crown.—Robert Ratcliffe, his son, was

Thomas Wake 1 fee in Colne-Quincy. Roger Fitz-Walter half a fee in Teye. Laurence de Bradenham half a fee and a quarter in Langenho. The heirs of Hugh de Bromford half a fee in Paklesham. The Prior of Dunmow half a fee in Burnham. Sir Thomas Barnard 3 parts there. Margaret wife of Bartholomew de Badlesmere half a fee in Little Stanbrigge. John de Wanton the tenth part in Wimbishe. The heirs of John Gent eight parts there. Maud Launey and Alice le Botiller 2 fees in Loutes Wenden. Elen de Denarston 1 fee in Haffhedon. The Countess of Pembroke 5 fees in Braksted, Plechenden, Quenden, and Little Anity. The Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem half a fee in Reynon. Margeret Shernebrok the 20th part in the same place. John de Goldingham 1 fee in Chigwell. John Filoll 5 fees and a half in Little Badewe, Hockle, Tollethunt, and Moke-linton in Uting. Robert Vedelin 1 fee and a half in Little Badewe. Oliver de Bohun 1 fee and a quarter in Norton. James de Burres half a fee in Mundon. John de Uting 6 parts in Stokhall, and Langford. The Prior of Bishops-gate half a fee and a quarter in the vill of Chalvedon. The Prior of Byknacre 1 fee and a quarter in Maylond. Walter Fitz-Humfrey 1 fee and a quarter in Pentelowe. Mr. Robert de Reddelwell 4 parts and 16 parts in Pentelow and Chelmeſton.—He had also the Advowsons of the Churches of Great Teye, Wimbishe, Lexden; and of the Priory of Dunmow.

Walter Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1386, besides the abovementioned Maners, had those of Shering, Crixeth, Cage in Southminster; lands in Woodham Walter &c. called Brianes; a messuage, 140 acres of arable, 15 of wood, and 1 of meadow, called Uphall in Great Teye.—And these Knights Fees; 1 fee and a half in East Hanyngfeild, holden by William Hanyngfeild. Sir John Sutton held under him 1 fee and a quarter in Langenhoo. Richard Fitz-John 1 fee in Fambregge. He had also the Advowson of the Church of Shering.

Walter Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1408, had these Knights-fees likewise. John de Boys held under him half a fee in Langenhoo. John Doreward 1 fee in Stanwey. The Abbot of St. John's Colchester, 1 fee in Fering. Clement Spice 1 fee in Lexden. The Prior of Leghes half a fee in Borham.

The Abbot of Tiltey and Robert de la Rokele 1 fee in Wendon and Wendon-hoo.—He had also the Advowson of Ashedon-Church. Inquis. 2 Edw. III. & 10 Ric. II. & Hen. IV.

[W] He says, that Sir John Ratcliffe, Knight of the Garter, married Elizabeth daughter and coheir of Walter Lord Fitz-Walter, and had by her John his son and heir, summoned to parliament in 1485. Vol. II. p. 285. Whereas the father of this last John was Thomas, who married Anne, second daughter of Walter Fitz-Walter, as appears by the Inquisition 4 Edw. IV. and as Sir William himself hath it right in his first Volume, p. 223. By following him too implicitly, I was led into his mistakes in the other Volume, p. 500. and 567. Sylvanus Morgan has the like mistake, book iv. p. 57. & Milles, p. 665.

restored to the Honor of Lord Fitz-Walter, Egremond, and Burnel, 3 November 1505. And not only the attainder was reversed in 1509 by act of parliament; but he was also created, 18 July 1525, Viscount Fitz-Walter, and 28 December 1529 Earl of Suffex. He dyed 27 November 1542. By his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Stafford Duke of Buckingham, he had three sons, Henry; George; and Sir Humfrey, of Elnestow in Bedfordshire. — Henry, his eldest son and successor, was Knight of the Bath, and Knight of the Garter; and married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, by whom he had Thomas, Henry, and Francis: by his second wife, Anne, daughter of Sir Philip Calthorp, he had Egremond, and Frances married to Sir Thomas Mildmay of Moulsham. Departing this life 17 February 1556, he was succeeded by his eldest son — Thomas, Earl of Suffex, “a goodly Gentleman, and of a brave and noble nature, true and constant to his friends and servants (i);” Lord Deputy of Ireland; a brave foldier; and employed in several embassies and other affairs of great consequence. In his time the ancient Family Seat in this parish began to be neglected. For, having obtained a grant of New-Hall in Boreham, he made it the place of his residence. [See in the other Volume p. 15.] He dyed without issue 9 June 1583 [X], and was buried in the Chapel adjoining to Boreham-Church. Frances his widow, aunt of Sir Philip Sidney, was Foundress of Sidney-Suffex College in Cambridge. — Henry, his next brother and heir, departed this life 9 December 1593, and was succeed by his only child — Robert Earl of Suffex; who dying without issue, 22 September 1629, — Sir Edward Ratcliffe, son of Sir Humfrey of Elnestow, above-mentioned, became his heir (k) [Y].

This Estate was next in the Fytch family; a branch we suppose of the Fytches of Lindfell and Little Canfield. [See in the other Volume, p. 445. 463.]

lies south-ward of the last; and is sometimes called Little Woodham.

It took the additional name of Mortimer from some of its ancientest possessors.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Siward held this parish; as did Ralph Peverell at the time

Sir Barrow Fytch Kt. presented to this Living in 1670. How long before he had been possessed of the estate doth not appear. His son — William Fytch Esq; married Mary daughter of Robert Cory D. D. by Mary his wife relict of John Mildmay Esq; which brought him Danbury place, where the Family hath resided ever since; this William having taken down Woodham Walter-hall, the ancient seat of the noble Families of Fitz-Walter and Ratcliffe. He left two sons, — William, Captain of a man of war, who dyed unmarried. — Thomas Fytch Esq; Sheriff for this County: and some daughters, one of whom is married to Samuel Bennet Esq;

Mr. John, and Benjamin, Dawson; Thomas Shynn; John Nevill; Robert Royse; Jarvis Moss; James Brown; Shadrach Nash, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, being very ruinous, and standing at a great distance from the village, so that it was very inconvenient for the Parishioners to resort thither for divine service; Thomas Earl of Suffex having obtained a license from Qu. Elizabeth, 26 June 1562, to build a new Church where he should think proper, he accordingly erected the present one; and it was consecrated 30 April 1564. In the Steeple are 3 Bells.

The Advowson of this Rectory was given by Walter Fitz-Robert, about the reign of K. Richard I. to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who presented from that time till 1517 (l). In 1548, K. Edward VI. granted this Advowson to Thomas Wriothesly Earl of Southampton, in exchange for some lands. He alienated it, 20 June the same year; to Henry Ratcliffe Earl of Suffex (m); from whose heirs it came to the Fytch family, in which it still continues.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 920 l. 2s. od.

of the Survey [Z]. It is there written Odeham.

This estate belonged to the Honor of Peve-rell of London, of which it was holden in capite, by the service of half a fee, or a whole knight's fee. K. Henry II. gave it to the father of Robert de Mortimer in marriage (n). He was grandson to Ralph de Mortimer, who came over with William the Conqueror. The said Robert held Little Wudeham in 1210, by the service of half a knight's fee (o). He married Margery daughter and heir of Hugh de Say, lord of Ricards-castle in Herefordshire; [remarried to Hugh de Stutevill] and dying about the year 1216, was succeeded by his son and heir—Hugh de Mortimer; who departing this life in 1275, left—Robert, his son 22 years old: He dyed in 1287, leaving by Joyce his wife—Hugh his son and heir, that had Summons to parliament in 1297, and 1299.

This last, at the time of his decease in 1304, left by Maud his wife two daughters coheirs, Joanna twelve years old, and Margaret eight (p).

From henceforward it appears by records, that this Maner was sometimes in one hand, and sometimes in two or three, according as it happened to fall among coheirs; till at last it came to be divided into two Maners. The mansion-house of the chief is called WOODHAM MORTIMER PLACE, and of the other WOODHAM-MORTIMER-HALL.

Maud, widow of Hugh Mortimer, dyed in 1307. Margaret her youngest daughter was married to Geoffrey de Cornwall (q), and probably had no issue, for we hear no further of any of them here.

Joanna, the eldest daughter of Hugh and Maud Mortimer was married, first, to Thomas de Bykenore, by whom she doth not appear to have had any issue. Her second husband was Richard Talbot, a younger son of Richard Lord Talbot of Eccleswell in Herefordshire, by Sarah daughter of William Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick (r). He dyed possessed of this maner in 1355, as did Julian his widow, in 1361, and were succeeded by their son—Sir John Talbot, who departed this life in 1375, as did Catharine his wife in 1380. They had two sons—Richard, that dyed young in 1382: and his brother and heir—John dying also at the age of 15 years, 3 July 1388, his three Sisters and coheirs inherited his estates. They were, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Warine Leiceken, or Archdekne; Philippa wife of Sir Matthew Gurnay; and Alianore, that dyed unmarried in 1390 (s). But Sir Gilbert Talbot, who had a life-estate in this maner enjoyed it till his decease, and presented to the Rectory from 1382 to 1393 (t). And Sir Matthew Gourney, and Warine Archdeken presented in 1399.

Elizabeth, held a moiety of this maner, and of the Advowson of the Church, of the King as of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and dying in 1407, or 1408, left three daughters coheirs; vize Alianor, wife of Sir Walter Lucy; Philippa, wife of Sir Hugh Courtenay of Baunton; and Margery, or Margaret, wife of Thomas Arundel (u).

Sir Matthew and Philippa Gurnay had a daughter

Philippa, wife of Sir John Tiptoft, who at the time of her decease in 1417, is recorded as holding the maner of Woodham-Mortimer, by which must be meant a part of it: Alianor, wife of Sir Walter Lucy; Elizabeth, and Joane, daughters of Philippa late wife of Sir Hugh Courteney; and Margery wife of Thomas de Arundel, were her cousins and heirs (w).

Sir Hugh Courtney, at the time of his decease in 1424, held the third part of this maner, by the law of England after the death of his wife Philippa, as of the Honor of Peverell. Edward was his son: and Joane and Alianor were the daughters and heirs of Philippa (x).

So it is in the Inquisition; but, instead of Alianor, it is a question whether it should not be Elizabeth.

Sir Walter Lucy, by his wife Alianor Archdeken, had a son, William, who was a knight; and two daughters, Alianor, wife of Thomas Hopton Esq; and Maud, wife of Thomas Vaux Esq; Sir William Lucy married Margaret... but dyed without issue. His widow held the maner of Woodham Mortimer of the Abbot of Walden at the time of her decease in 1466. Thomas Hopton had by his wife Alianor, William that dyed without issue, and Elizabeth, married first to Sir Roger Corbet of Morton Corbet in Shropshire; afterwards to John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester; and thirdly to Sir William Stanley brother of Thomas Earl of Derby. She held a moiety of this maner, and dyed 2 June 1498 (y).

William Vaux had by his wife Maud a son named William; who with Elizabeth then wife of John Earl of Worcester, were found heirs to this estate in 1466 (z). But the Vaux family doth not seem to have been interested long in the estate. For, at the time of Elizabeth Lady Stanley's decease, who by her first husband had Richard Corbet Esq;

Robert Corbet Esq; son of the said Richard, was found to be her sole heir. He was then 21 years old (a); afterwards knighted, and dyed 11 April 1512, holding this maner of the King in capite by knight's service; wherein he was succeeded by his son. — Roger, 12 years of age (b). He departed this life 20 December 1538, leaving—Andrew his son and heir 15 years old (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 109.] The latter obtained a licence, 6 August 1561, to alienate this maner to

Leonard Sandell: of Hatfield Peverell, who, after having kept it only about three years, had license, 6 May 1564, to sell it to

John Church, of Little Sandford, and Margaret his wife (d) [A]; the consideration money being 1000 l. He held the maner of Woodham Mortimer with appertenances, and 10 messuages, 6 cottages, 1 dove-house, 500 acres of arable; 100 of meadow, 500 of pasture, 300 of wood, 200 of heath and furze, and 12 s. rent in Woodham Mortimer, and Walter, Purleigh, Haseleigh, Studley Greene, Ronfell, Danbury, Bicknaker, Boreham, and Little Badow; and the Advowson of Woodham-Mortimer Church, of the Queen as of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. At the time of his decease, 14 January 1564, he left his son — Richard, or Rook, Church, only one year and sixteen days old (e). The 14th of April 1592 he sold the premises to

Henry Smith, and Giles Greene, who by license, 2 March the year following, conveyed the same to Arthur Harris Esq; (f) He dyed possessed of them 18 June 1597. This Arthur was third son of William Harris of Southminster in this County, and grandson of Arthur Harris of Prittlewell. [For a more particular account of the Family see Crickefea where their seat was, and in the other volume, p. 54.] Arthur, at the time of his death, besides the maner, and demesnes, had Darcy's grove; a tenement and lands called Seaven wells, alias Sewells, Fuller's tenement, and East Graffnell mead, in this parish, and Woodham Walter; and Newhall in this parish, Haseleigh, and Purleigh, which had been his father's; holden of the maner of Lawlinghall (g). He married Dorothy daughter of Sir William Waldegrave of Small-bridge, by whom he had — William, his son and heir, who succeeded him in these estates: and dying in 1616, was succeeded by his son — John: whose son and heir — Sir Arthur Harris Kt. inherited the same (h). He departed this life 9 January 1632, leaving — Cranmer, his eldest son then 22 years old (i); and John. Cranmer was knighted 21 June 1629, and marrying Martha daughter and co-heir of Daniel Holford of West-Thurrock, left by her two daughters coheirs, Martha, and Mary.

Martha brought Woodham-Mortimer Place maner, with the Advowson of the Church, to her husband Charles Mildmay Esq; youngest son of Sir Henry Mildmay brother to Sir Thomas of Moulsham-hall. They had an only daughter and heir

Martha, that was married to Sir Charles Tyrell of Heron Bart. In this Family the Estate and Advowson continued till the late Sir John Tyrell sold them to

The Rt. Hon. Lucius Carey Lord Viscount Falkland, the present possessor.

The Maner-house, called WOODHAM-MORTIMER-PLACE, stands about a mile South-west from the Church.

stands near the Church; and is said to have been built by Sir Cranmer Harris for one of his daughters. It belongs to the other reputed maner, which is stiled a Maner of itself, but holds no Court, nor hath any tenants.

Peter Chamberlen M. D. purchased it of the Harris family. He was born 8 May 1601, and dyed 22 December 1683. By his first wife Jane Middleton he had 11 sons, and 2 daughters, and among them 45 grand-children, and 8 great grand-children; whereof were living at his death three sons, viz. Hugh, Paul, and John, and his two daughters, and 20 grand-children, and 6 great grand children. By the second wife, Anne Harrison, he had 3 sons, and 2 daughters, whereof only Hope was living at his death (k). His grandson Hugh Chamberlen, an eminent physician and man midwife, dyed 17 June 1728. It seems, Hope the youngest son of Peter had this estate, and sold it, about 1715, to

Mr. William Alexander, of London, wine-merchant, who left it to the Wine-Coopers Company in London. [See in the other Volume, p. 55.]

Robert Latham, who dyed 3 March 1520, held a maner called Hide-parke, with tenements thereto belonging, of Roger Corbett, as of his maner of Woodham-Mortimer (l). It lay partly, if not chiefly, in Purley. See under that parish.

About 100 acres of land in this parish was anciently called Mortimer's-fee; and to the south or south-east of it lyes Twitty-fee, now called Canterbury, alias Runsell-fee.

Mr. Samuel Brickwood; John Lorkin; John Wiggins; William Shepherd; Robert Wilson; &c. have some lands in this parish, besides those above-mentioned.

One Hardekyne held 115 acres of land here, by the remarkable Serjeancy of keeping one of the King's young Hounds whenever the King should send it to him to keep; and to take care of him till he was able to run, or hunt [B].

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. At the west end, in a little boarded Belfrey, with a shingled Spire, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner, and now to that of Woodham-Mortimer-Place.

It is observable in the London Registry, that Thomas Kemp Bishop of London, 21 August 1465, collated, to this Rectory, with the Church or Chapel of Haylesley for its smallness thereto annexed. We have no traces of any consolidation of these two livings. Haseleigh was then in the Patronage of Thomas Legh Esq; nor was it at this time void: which gives room for a conjecture, that it is meant of the Chapel of Little-Haseleigh, the lands of which, probably, the Abbey of Bilegh had got; and these amongst the rest might be granted by K. Henry VIII. to Thomas Dyer, forfeited under the notion of a Chantry, as many Chapels were.

John Coker and Christian his wife gave out of Wardells croft, for an Obite 3 s. 4 d. per ann. and Roger Coker, out of Hobbes-Croft, both in this parish, 3 s. 6 d. per ann. These lands were in the hands of the Church-wardens for the time being. K. Edward VI. granted them in to Thomas Fisher, and Thomas Dabridgcourt, and their heirs; to hold by fealty only in free socage (m).

4. H A S E L E Y.

This little parish lyes south-east of Woodham-Mortimer. The name is formed from the two Saxon words Dærl, a hasele-nut-tree, and ley pasture. It is otherwise written in records Hailleshei, and Haileflei.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Serlo; and Ailmar a freeman; were possessed of this parish: At the time of the Survey it belonged to Ralph Peverell; and the said Serlo held under him the same part as he was master of before. Godric held the other part [C]. These two parts are called in the Survey two distinct maners; and as mention occurs of Great and Little Haseley, it is probable that one of them was taken into the adjoining parish of Woodham-Mortimer; or else it might be what was called afterwards Jenkins.

Here is now reckoned but one MANER, and the mansion house stands a little way south-east from the Church. This estate was holden of the Honor of Peverell.

We have but very little account of its owners. In 1210, and 1211, Alice de Haileflei held the fourth part of a knight's fee: And Richard, the son of Ranulph, had one fee in Great-Haileflei, which Mathew Mantel held of him (n). A Charter of K. Henry III. in 1260, grants free-warren in Brightlingsfay and Haylesley to John de Munvirun, or Muntviron, who by that seems to have been lord here (o).

William de Horewold and Cecily his wife, seem also to have enjoyed this estate in 1339. He presented to the Church in 1328 (p). The estate was longest in the Families of Leigh, and Alleyn.

John de Legh, who dyed in 1421, held the Maner of Hailleflei of the King in capite as of his Honor of Peverell, by the service of half a knight's fee. — Thomas, his son and successor, then 16 years of age, dyed also possessed of this maner, and of that of Shelley, in 1438, leaving — Thomas Leigh his son and heir but half a year old (q). Besides this maner, and the Advowson of St. Nicolas Chapel thereto belonging, he had also the maners of Shelley, and of Olives and Garnetts in Margaret Roding. [See in the other Volume, p. 473.] Henry his son dyed before him 25 November 1494. He himself departed this life 23 April, and Joanna his wife 24 August 1509, and were succeeded by their grandson — Giles Leigh, of Walton Leigh Esq; then 18 years old (r); who, at the time of his decease, 7 August 1538, left two daughters co-heirs;

Mary, married to John Alleyn; Agnes, to Christopher Alleyn; brothers to Sir John Alleyn Lord-Mayor of London, sons of Richard Alleyn of Thaxted. These had Livery, in 1539, of Leigh's lands in Essex, viz. the Maners of Halyfleigh, Garnetts, and Olyffs, with appertenances; the Advowson of the Church of Margaret-Rothing; and the Chantry of St. Nicolas in the Church of Hallefleigh.

Agnes obtained Halyfleigh for part of her share, and seemed by the Inquisition to have had not only that, but Garnetts, and Hatfeild maner and Priory. By her husband Christopher she had three sons, Giles, Antony, and Ralph. She dyed 1 February 1553. — Giles Alleyn Esq; the eldest son, then 21 years old, inherited (s). He married Mary daughter of John Skory Bishop of Hereford, by whom he had, Samuel; Isaac; Rebecca, wife of Thomas Nevill of Stock, Gent. Mary, wife of William Coys of North-Okendon; and Anne, of Henry Chauncy, of Yardley in Hertfordshire, Gent. He departed this life 27 March 1608. — Samuel, the eldest son, then upwards of 42 years of age, dying 5 June 1614, without issue, — Isaac the next brother succeeded; being 30 years old (t). He married, first, Mary daughter of John Pake of Bromfeild, and had by her Giles, John, and Anne. By his second wife, Anne, daughter of Henry Leigh of Ruthall in Staffordshire, he had William. — Giles Alleyn Esq; the eldest son and heir, married Susan, daughter and sole heir of John Nevill of Stock; and had by her John, born in 1636; Giles: Amy, Elizabeth, Susan, Mary (u). This Estate came afterwards into the possession of

Henry Mildmay, of Graces in Little Badow Esq; He gave it to his second daughter, Lucy, wife of Thomas Gardiner, of Bouchier's Hall in Tollerbury, Esq; Of them it was purchased by Sir John Smith, of Iftleworth in Middlesex, Bart. and he dying 16 August 1726, was succeeded by his son — Sir John Smith, Bart. It belongs now to his two Sisters.

We find mention of a Maner of LITTLE HASELEY. Probably it was taken into Woodham-Mortimer by Ralph Peverell, who was lord of both.

In the Inquisition upon the death of Agnes Alleyn, above-mentioned, in 1553, it is said, she held the Maner of Halyslight, in Woodham-Mortimer and Purleigh. And we find in another, taken in 1573, for John Alleyn jun. who seems to be a collateral branch, or a grandson of Agnes; and dyed 22 June 1557, leaving Edmund his son and heir, 20 years old; That he held the Maner of Hayleslight, in Woodham-Mortimer and Purley, and the Advowson of a Free Chapel of St. Nicolas (w). The confusion which is in these Inquisitions may be attributed to the uncertainty where Little Haseley properly lay.

Joseph Harwood hath also some land here.

The Maner house of Jenkins Maldon stands within this parish, as I have observed above, under Maldon.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of timber, and plaistered. On the west end stands a small turret, in which formerly was 1 Bell, now none.

This Rectory hath been always appendent to the Maner. It was for above 100 years presented to as a Chapel, that is till the year 1390, when it was presented to as a Rectory or Free Chapel.

Haseley is rated to the land-tax at 291 l.

5. PURLEY.

This parish stands south of Haseley and Maldon, and part of it high, which renders it the more healthfull. Whether it was so called from the two Saxon words Pep, a pear, and ley, pasture, I cannot certainly say.

I should take, according to Norden, this name to have been from the Purlieu or Pourallee, which was the ancient border of a Forest, in which the King's rangers were obliged to hunt out the deer, and the owner of the land had a right, under some restrictions, to kill them; if I could think it no other than a Norman term, and introduced upon the Conquest. Two things may be offered to justify this conceit; the one, that Edward the Confessor, who spent some time in Normandy, had brought home with him some of the sporting Forest terms, and might call this part of the Forest Purlieu, in the Privileges which he granted. The other is, that Reginald de Grey, who dyed in 1307, with this Lordship, enjoyed the privilege of Purlieu, which might have been an appendage to the Maner from the Saxon times: He had Purlieu within this whole lordship of any Deer or Forest wild Beast. Besides Purley it is written in records Purlai and Purle.

There are many entries in Domesday book under Purlay, and many distinct Maners have been since, yet it is not possible to trace to which the more modern ones did anciently belong, except in one or two of the most inconsiderable.

The owners of the lands here, in Edward the Confessor's reign, were Edeva; Gudmund, a freeman; ten other freemen; Algar, a freeman; Leuin; Leuin Cilt; and Grime. At the time of the Survey, they were holden by Eustace Earl of Bologne; Hugh de Montfort; Robert Gernon; Walter the Deacon; and Ralph Baignard [D].

These lands were divided afterwards into the following Maners. 1. The Maner of Purley hall. 2. . . . that of Gibbecrake. 3. The maner of Waltons and Netherhall. . . . Frerne, and Jacklets, partly in Mundon; and Lachindon-Barns, alias Purley-hall, are also sometimes styled Maners in records, but not reputed now to be such.

The Maner of PURLEY.

Purley-hall, the mansion-house, stands near the west end of the Church.

This estate was early in the noble family of Grey of Wilton. John de Grey held Purle in 1220; and also in 1243; for, that year, a grant was produced at the Pleas of the Forest at Chelmsford, from K. Henry III. to John de Grey, of Free-warren in Purlai, Gybbetrake, Lechedon, and 11 other of his maners; in which also was contained licence to hunt and take, in all the King's Forests in England, fox, hare, and cat, except in the King's demesne warrens, provided he did no damage to the King's hunting [E]. He dyed in 1266. — Reginald de Grey, his son and heir held, in 1285, one knight's fee here, in capite, of the King, worth 20 l. a year (x). And, at the time of his decease, in 1307, held the same knight's fee by the name of the maner of Purle with the Hamlett of Gibbecrake: His son and heir — John de Grey (y), held this maner, and that of Gibecrake which was a member of the same, by the service of the third part of a knight's fee; and dying in 1323, was succeeded by his son — Henry (z). This latter held not only the Maner of Purle, by the service of one knight's fee; but also a Park called le Hyde Parke in Purle of the Prior of Christ's Church in Canterbury by the service of 4 s. a year: lands called Eyres or Sayers, and Southous, of the Dean and Chapter of St. Martin's le grand, by the same service; Mareschalesland of Ralph de Ufford, as of his maner of Fambregg, by the service of 2 s. per annum; Haleresland, with Tryndeheye grove, of the Abbot and Convent of Bylegh, by the service of 4 s. a year. He departed this life in 1342 (a). His son — Reginald de Grey de Wilton upon Wee, held this maner, with the Hamlet of Gedecrake; 1 messuage, and 100 acres of arable, and 40 of marsh, of the Earl of March; 2 messuages, 160 acres of arable, and 20 of marsh, of the Dean of St. Martins; and about 90 acres more, of whom unknown. He dyed in 1370 (b) — Sir Henry, his son, at the time of his decease in 1395, held this maner of Purle; and a Park, in which there was a messuage called Gibbecrake-halle, and 50 acres adjoyning to the Park, in Purle and Sandon; also Lachyndon barns; Heyrons, and South-rowe in Danbury; Lollers in Great Leghes; the maner of Snoreham; and that of Acresfleet in Canewdon. His son, — Sir Richard Grey held the same, except what lay in Danbury and Leghes; and dying in 1442, was succeeded by his son — Reginald, then 21 years old (c). He was succeeded by his son — John; and he by his son — Edmund, who alienated this maner. They had also Weld-barnes in Debden. See the other Volume, p. 563. For a more particular account of this noble Family of the Lords Grey of Wilton, see Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. I. (d). They had summons to Parliament from 23 Edw. I. 1295, to 43 Eliza. 1601.

Sir Giles Capel had this maner in 1519 (*).

The next possessor of this estate was Hugh Denny. At the time of his decease, 17 September 1558, he held the maner of Purle, alias Purlegh-hall, of the Queen, in capite, by knight's service; and South-house and Sawiers in Maldon, of the Honor of Raley. — Henry, his son, held the same; and dying 8 April 1569, was succeeded by his son — John, who departed this life 30 July 1609, leaving — Henry, his son and heir (e).

It was afterwards in Sir Alexander Cawyns; and now in

James Bonnel Esq;

The Maner of GIBBECRAKE went along with that of Purleigh-hall, till Edmund Lord Grey, and Florentia his wife, alienated it, 27 June 1504, to John de Vere Earl of Oxford.

We find it described in 1323, as 1 messuage, with a garden and dove house, 180 acres of arable, a wind-mill, a water mill, 80 acres of wood, and another wood of 16 acr. called Gibcrack-hoo; holden of the heirs of Robert Mantell, by the service of a pair of gilt spurs.

After the death of John Earl of Oxford, in 1512, it was styled 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 800 of pasture, 100 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent, in Purle, Danbury, Sandon, and Est Hanningfeild, holden of Thomas Tyrell (f). But this description undoubtedly comprehended also Waltons, which that noble Family likewise had.

It continued in the four successive Earls of Oxford, of the name of John, and came to Edward. He, 16 February 1577, alienated it to John Mabbe, of London, goldsmith; who, 26 May 1584, sold it to

Edward Glemkam, of Benhall in Suffolk Esq; The next year

George Wolmer, of Broxholm in Lincolnshire, Esq; sold it to Sir Michael Sondes, of Throwley in Kent; who, 24 March 1601, conveyed it to Robert Clarke, Esq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer, knighted 23 July 1603. He gave it to his second son — Jeremiah Clarke, of Stebbing Esq; who sold it, 1 October 1638, to mingeby, Legh, Pudinton, and Snelleston. From Le Neve's Collect.

William Lord Maynard. His son, — William, Lord Maynard, alienated it again 4 May 1652, to

Robert Abdy Esq; created a Baronet 9 June 1660. He devised it by will to his son — Sir John Abdy Bart. who sold it, 28 January 1679, to Edmund Wiseman Esq; afterwards knighted. Sir Edmund conveyed it, 24 September 1687, to Henry Collins Esq; of the Middle-Temple, and his heirs for ever. His son — Henry, enjoyed it after him; and was succeeded by his son — Antony Collins Esq; who dyed 13 December 1729.

He was twice married. By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Walter Wrottesly, he had no issue. But by his first wife, Martha, daughter of Sir Francis Child, he had Henry; Antony; and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Martha. Henry dyed young; and Antony 20 December 1723, aged 21, but single. — Elizabeth was married to Walter Carey Esq; and Martha to Robert, brother to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Fairfax. Martha dying without issue, Walter Carey Esq; in right of his wife, became entitled to the whole, and also to the maners of Hatfeild-Bury, and Sandon. See in the other Volume, p. 26. 130.

It now belongs to Lovebond Collins Esq;

The Maner of WALTON'S and NETHER-HALL, was so named from its owner, John Walton, mentioned presently; and Nether-hall from its situation.

This I take to be what was Hugh de Montfort's [F].

The earliest possessors upon record after Montfort, were the Battaile Family; who gave name to a maner at Stapleford Abbot, and another at Bradwell near the Sea, and by Marriage it came to John Walton.

In 1211, Aumaritus Battaile held one knight's fee in Purle, of the Honor of Hageth (g). Montfort's lands were likewise holden of the same Honor [G].

This Aumaric, or Emeric Battaile, died in 1252, and John de Aketon, and Petronill his wife, mother of Emeric, held in dower, of the inheritance of the said Emeric, 100 acres of arable, with one messuage in Purle, by the service of three parts of a knight's fee, of the fee of William de Houbbrigge; — Saer his son and heir, then 10 years old: at the time of his decease in 1292, held 1 messuage in Purle, of Edmund, son of Thomas de Purle, by the service of a clove-gilly flower; and 100 acres of the Lady Joane de Huntingfeld, by the 4th part of a knight's fee, and suit at the Hundred of Danesey; and so this maner of Purle was worth 33s. 10d. (b). — Edmund Bataile his son and heir, who dyed in 1333, was possessed of a capital messuage, 100 acres of arable, 3 of pasture, and 3 of wood, in Purle; of which, the messuage, and 30 acres were holden of the Bishop of Norwich, by the service of 15d. ob. every thirty weeks for warding the Castle of Norwich, 20 acres of arable, and 3 of wood, of the heirs of Moneron, by the service of 7s. per ann. 24 acres of arable of the Prior of Christ's Church Canterbury, by the service of 4s. and 26 acres of arable of Walter Tillyngham, by the service of 6d. a year.

Margaret, or Margery, was his sister and heir (i). She was married to Sir William de Sutton, whose successors were, — Sir John de Sutton; another — Sir John; whose daughter, and at length sole heir, Margery, brought it in marriage to her husband

John Walton Esq; [See above, p. 175, 176, and in the other Volume, p. 187.] They had two children, Richard, and Joane. — Richard Walton Esq; the son and heir, dyed in 1408, or 1409. He then held three messuages, 200 acres of arable, ten of meadow, 20 of pasture, eight of wood, and 18s. rent, in Purle, Mundon, and Haylesle, of the Lord Grey of Wilton. Leaving no issue, his Sister

Joane, wife of Sir John Howard jun. inherited his estates (k). Their only daughter and heir

Elizabeth, brought them in marriage to her husband John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. He being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to the House of Lancaster, they became forfeited to the Crown; and K. Richard III. gave this maner to . . . Percy (l). Upon K. Henry VIIIth's accession to the throne, the noble Family of Vere being restored to their Honors and Estates, — John, the 13th Earl — John, the 14th Earl — John, the 15th — John, the 16th and — Edward the 17th Earl, enjoyed this (m). The latter sold it, 1 March 1559, to

George Golding Esq; He dyed 24 November 1584, possessed of the maners of Waltons and Nether-hall; and of Jackletts, Fanbridge, and Amys land. — Arthur Golding, his brother and heir (n), sold this estate, 1 March 1595, to

Thomas Mildmay Esq; eldest son of William Mildmay of Springfield-Barnes Esq; (o). He dyed 15th Decemb. 1612, holding the maner of Waltons, with Jacklets, and Fambridge land; and other lands adjoyning. He had been knighted [H]. His grandson — Thomas, son of his eldest son William, succeeded him (p). By descent, or purchase, it came to [G] It may be presumed, that William Ayermyn, at that time Bishop of Norwich, Lord Keeper, and Lord Treasurer, obtained of the King some Honor or Maner paramount to the Lords here; I do not find that it went to his Successors. It was what Thomas de Purle, whoever he was, held before.

[H] Besides this maner of Waltons, and other lands above specified, Sir Thomas had the maners of Springfield Bars, Downhall in Bradwell near the Sea; Bacons in Dengey; Langdon-hills; Nashall in Ongar; and the following lands in Springfield; the Marsh, Much and Little Perryfeild; Melfeild, the Hoppetts, Little Pullyns, Upperston-hill, Netherston-hill, Kingtons garden, and these three crofts Mattot-cotts, Pyes, and Milcroft; also Southfeild, Bulmersfeild, the Arbor, Oxstall, Hornes, Colvil alias Powers; and Bileigh-mill &c. Elizabeth Elizabeth Mildmay, of Graces, wife of Edmund Waterfon, merchant. It now belongs to James Bonnel Esq;

The Maner of BARONS was so named from the Baron family:

The mansion house stands near the Parsonage.

By the description set down a little lower, this seems to have been much the same as the foregoing one of Waltons, or at least to have been originally in the same family. When they were severed doth not plainly appear. As Margaret Baroun had an estate at Bradwell near the sea, with this; and that Edmund Bataile had also the same jointly, both holden of the same persons, we may safely affirm, That she was the sister and heir of the said Edmund, mentioned under Waltons; married first to Sir William de Sutton, and afterwards to Baroun, whose son Robert Baroun had in her right part of this estate. However it be,

Margaret Baroun, who dyed in 1339, held in the vill of Purle 1 messuage with a garden, 80 acres of arable; and 3 of wood; of which, 30 acres of arable and 3 of pasture, were holden of the Bishop of Norwich, by the service of 15 d. ob. every thirty weeks; and 16 acres of arable, and 3 of wood of William Horewold and Cecily his wife, by the service of 7 s. yearly; 20 acres of the Prior of Christ-Church in Canterbury, by the service of 8 s. and 18 acres of Walter de Tyllingham, by the service of 6 d. per annum.

—Robert Baroun, her son (q), at the time of his decease in 1349, held in this parish 3 parts, or the third part, of one messuage with a garden, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, and 5 of pasture, of the Bishop of Norwich, by the service of 3 s. 6 d. — John son of Emma Wyburne, one of the said Robert's sisters; Alice, wife of Thomas, son of Reginald at Hoo, another of his sisters; and Johanna le Smythes his third sister, were his heirs (r). Of these, I presume, Giles Breanson purchased this maner of Barons. For, at the time of his decease in 1363, he held a messuage and one carucate of land in Purle, of the Bishop of Norwich, paying 21 d. to the said Bishop, every thirty weeks, for his castle guard at Norwich. — John, son of John, and grandson of Robert, brother of the said Giles, was his next heir (s).

John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, who dyed in 1374, held one knight's fee in Purle that Bruencius Brianfon held (t). He settled his estates on his mother's sister's son, William de Beau- champ, a younger son of Thomas, Earl of Warwick. [See in the other Volume, p. 35.] In consequence of which — Joane, widow of this William, at the time of her decease in 1435, held half a fee in Purle, which Brian Brianfon formerly held; and another half fee formerly John de Purley's. Their son, Richard de Beauchamp Earl of Worcester, dying in 1422, left an only daughter Elizabeth, married to Sir Edward Nevill, fourth son of Ralph Earl of Westmoreland, who in her right became Lord Bergavenny, and succeeded to her estates. He departed this life 18 October 1476, leaving — George his son and heir, Lord Bergavenny (u).

Robert Latham, who dyed 3 March 1519, held the maner of Baron-Hall of George Lord Bergavenny, as of his maner of Southall. — William was his son and heir (w).

William Strangman held it of Sir Richard Rich; at the time of his decease, 8 December 1573 (x). [See above, p. 280. 287.]

In 1604, Dudley Fortescue Esq; held the maner or tenement of Barons in Purley with appertinances, of Sir Thomas Mildmay, as of his maner of Terling. [See above, p. 287. 290. and in the other Volume, p. 120.]

This estate now belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Countess of Suffolk; remarried to the Rt. Hon. Lucius Carey, Viscount Falkland.

FERNE, otherwise FREME; and JACKLETS, is part of what belonged to Walter the Deacon, at the time of the Survey [I]. His son, — William Mascherell, founder of Wikes Nunnery in this County, settled this land upon that House; and is undoubtedly the knight's fee that the Priores of Wikes held under John de Hastings, Earl of Penbroke, in 1374.

The Priory remained possessed of it till the Suppression of the lesser Monasteries, in 1525, when Wyks was granted, among many others, to Cardinal Wolsey.

Upon his præmunire they all falling to the Crown; K. Henry VIII. leased this estate 1 December 1536, for 20 years at the rent of 11 l. 11 s. And in 1538 granted it to

Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk (y); who, by license 20 January following, alienated it to

John Stonard: and — Francis Stonard had leave, in 1575, to alienate it to William Bode (z). At the time of his decease 17 June 1591, he held this maner of Ferne, alias Freme, and Jacketts, with lands and tene-

This estate now belongs to the Charter-house in London.

The Hon. the Governors of the Charter-house hold a Court every year, about the cut round Bush in the middle of the road.

LACHENDON-BARNES,

otherwise Purley-Barns, is another reputed Maner in this parish. Why so called we cannot find, unless because it was formerly reckoned part of the neighbouring parish of Lachendon, or Lachingdon.

By the name of Barns, one would think it belonged to some Cistercian Monastery.

It is one of the parcels that belonged to Hugh de Montfort at the time of the Survey, and were holden under him by Gudmund, Humfrey, and Ulmar [L].

Of the succeeding owners of this estate we have no account, till we find it in the noble family of Grey of Wilton above-mentioned. John de Grey, who dyed in 1323, held in Lachendon one Barn, 140 acres of arable, and 60 acres more; 4 acr. of meadow, 6 of pasture, and 20 of marsh; The said 60 acres being holden of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster (b). His successors were — Henry, — Reginald, — Sir Henry: The latter is recorded particularly to have held in the vill of Purle, of the Earl of March, 1 messuage, 102 acres of arable called Lacyndon barnys, and 24 acres of marsh (c). His son — Sir Richard Grey, who dyed in 1442, and his widow Margaret, in 1451, held also the maner of Lachingden, or Lachington, bernés (d) [M].

Henry Ashurst Esq; who sold it in 1671, to Henry Mildmay Esq; and of him it was purchased by

Mr. Charles Coe, of Maldon, who gave it to his son — Thomas Coe, M. D. from whom it descended to his son — Thomas Coe Esq;

Callow-green, a hamlet in this parish, is under the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean of Bocking: and is undoubtedly what is mentioned above to have been holden of the Prior of Christ's-Church in Canterbury.

Flanders-wic, and Sparrows-wic, belong to Cornelius Dutch, Gent.

Mr. William Belcham; Isaac Watfon; Thomas Sewell; John Wyatt; William Gladwin, &c. have also some lands in this parish: Whether any of them is a farm of 150 acres, called Little Cannas, I am not able to say for certain.

Here is a Fair on Whitfun-Tuesday.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is a large handfom building, consisting of a body, and two aisles, tyled: In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was given to the Priory of Horton in Kent by Robert de Vere, son of Bernard, founder of that Priory (f); and the Advowson continued in the Prior and Monks till their suppression, when it came to the Crown. It remained there till about the end of K. James the 1st's reign, and then was granted to the Horfmanden family of Kent [N]. — This Rectory hath a glebe of . . . acres.

The parish of Purley is rated to the land-tax at 1458l. 2 s. 0 d.

Uluric, a freeman, was possessed of this parish in Edward the Confessor's reign; At the time of the Survey, it was held by Ralph Baignard [O].

of his Barony and estates, as related more particularly above, p. 338. and in the other Volume, p. 21, 135, 427; K. Henry I. gave them to Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, from whom descended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

This parish was divided afterwards into these two Maners. 1. The maner of Cold-Norton-hall. 2. . . . that of West Whetenham.

COLD-NORTON-HALL,

the mansion-house of the first, stands a little way south-east from the Church.

Under the Fitz-Walter family it was holden by that of Aunblie. In 1290, John de Bathon, or of Bath, enjoyed the maner of Norton by the law of England, because he married Elienor, daughter and heir of Sir Geffrey de Aunblie; who held this maner of the Lord Robert Fitz-Walter of Wodeham, in capite, by the service of one knight's fee; and the Lady Joane, wife of Sir John de Bohun was his next heir, being Daughter of Elienor; who was wife of John de Bathon. John de Bohun dyed possessed of this estate in 1316, leaving—John his son and heir (b).—Oliver de Bohun held it under Robert Fitz-Walter, in 1328. He presented to the Living in 1329, and 1334 (i). It passed from the noble family of Bohun, Earls of Hereford and Essex (k), into that of Stafford; and then into that of Bourchier.

Anne Countess of Stafford, one of the co-heiresses of the Bohun family upon the partition of their Estates between her and K. Henry V. had for part of her share this Maner, then valued at 24 l. and she presented to the Living in 1427 and 1433. Her fourth son—Sir John Bourchier, Kt. B. and by marriage Lord Berners, presented to the same from 1446 to 1467 (l). [For a more particular account of these noble Families, see above, p. 128, and the other Volume, p. 62. 254. 453. 503.] Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham was possessed of it; upon whose attainder, in 1521, it coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1522, to

Sir William Tyler (m). But, after Tyler's decease, 12 November 1527, the same King granted it to

Robert Ratcliffe, Viscount Fitz-Walter, and his heirs male (n). And Qu. Elizabeth, 2 February 1598, granted all remainders and reversions of the same to his nephew—Robert Earl of Sussex (o). The 13th of the same month, the Earl conveyed the maner of Norton, and the Advowson of the Church, to

Thomas Sutton Esq; And in the license of alienation the premisses were styled, the maner of Norton with appertenances, 16 messuages, 2 mills, 1 dove-house, 16 gardens, 16 orchards, 600 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 20 of wood, 40 of furze and heath, 10 of more, 40 of marsh, free-warren, and free-fishery, view of frank-pledge, and 12 l. rent (p).

Mr. Sutton made it part of the endowment of his rich foundation at the Charter-house; and both Maner and Advowson have ever since remained in the Hon. the Governors of that House.

The Maner of WEST WHETENHAM [P], and FLAMBARDS,

was derived from the other Maner, but when particularly we do not find.

Flamberds, the mansion-house of its owners, for a while, is above a mile and a half north-west from the Church.

The first mention we find of it in records is in 1486. Margaret Alley, widow, sister of Richard Alley, held then the maner of West-Whetenham and Flambards, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of pasture, and 20 of wood; with appertenances, in Norton, Stowe, and Wodeham Ferrars, of the maner of Cold-Norton: The maner of West-Whetenham, was then worth 3 l. 13 s. 4 d. and that of Flambards 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. which shews that they were reckoned distinct Maners. The said Margaret dyed 25 November 1486.—Her heirs are not mentioned (*).

The next possessor of this estate was Sir John Browne, Lord Mayor of London in 1480, son of John Browne of Okeham in Rutlandshire. He held, at the time of his decease 1 January 1497, the maners of West-Wettenham and Flambardes; and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of pasture; and 20 of wood, in Norton, Stowe, and Woodham-Ferrers, of Sir John Bourchier, Lord Berners, as of his maner of Cold-Norton. By his first wife, Alice, daughter of Sir John Swinsted, he had Robert, father of Robert Browne of Walcot in Northamptonshire Esq; and by his second wife, Anne, daughter of . . . Belwood, he had—William Browne Esq; born in 1467 (q), one of the Sheriffs of London in 1504, and Lord Mayor in 1513 being then a Knight. He married, first, Margaret daughter of Edmund Shaa, by whom he had William; Anne, wife of Richard Farmer; and Julian, wife of Sir John Munday. By his second wife, Alice daughter of Henry Keble Lord Mayor of London, he had John, seated at Horton in Kent; and Anne, wife of John Tyrell of Heron Esq; The said Sir William Browne, their father, departed this life 23 June 1514, holding these two maners of the Lord Berners, and lands and tenements called Sparradowne, Beredown, Wettenham Westcroft, Launcecroft, Horsehoke, Whetenham South-croft, Pottersland, Thurstons, Jennett, Robynes, Spakemans Jakes Attwood, Brodefield, Tylefeild, Pleyns, Al(s). He married . . . daughter of Ralph Dormer, Lord Mayor of London, and had by her, Thomas; John; and Elizabeth, wife of Stephen Beckingham, of Tollethunt.—Thomas Browne, Esq; his eldest son and successor, born in 1526, held much the same estates as his father, and departed this life 2 May 1567, leaving, by Jane his wife, daughter of Sir Giles Allington, of Horsheath in Cambridgeshire, John; and two daughters, Helen wife of George Fitch, of Braconhead; and Anne, of Thomas Bridges of West-Hanningfeild.—John, the son and heir, then aged 7 years (t) afterwards knighted; married twice. His first wife was Catharine, daughter of Henry Botiller of Hatfeild-Woodhall in Hertfordshire; and the second, Cecily, daughter of Sir John Croke, one of the Justices of the King's Bench. By this last he had no issue: But, by the first, he had 8 sons, and 4 daughters; Giles, William, Thomas, John, Humfrey, Henry, Edwin, Robert: Elizabeth, wife of Nicolas Marshall; and Mary; Juliana; Francisca. He dyed 18 May 1619.—Giles, his eldest son, then upwards of 35 years old (u), took to wife Mary, daughter of Sir William Harris, of Cricksea, Kt. and had by her—Arthur Browne Esq; living in 1664, who married Anne, daughter of John Aylmer, of Mugdon-hall Esq; and had two sons,—Giles, and Arthur [2].

William Godsave Esq; Mr. Joseph England; Thomas Jones &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Stephen, is tyled as is also the Chancel. In a wooden frame boarded, with a spire, are 2 Bells.

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner of Norton-Hall; and as such in the gift of the Hon. the Governors of the Charter-house.

7. STOW-MAREYS

lies south-west of Norton. The Saxon word stow signifies Place; and the addition of Mareys was to distinguish this from some other Stow, but we know none with that appellation in this County, except Waltham-Stow. Marys might be thought to have been taken from the dedication of the Church to St. Mary, if we did not find a family surnamed Mareys settled here. It is sometimes written Stow-Marish, and Stow-Marsh.

No parish of this name occurs in Domesday-book, and therefore it is justly supposed to be what is set down there under the appellation of Eistanes, which belonged to Dodinc in the Confessor's reign, and at the survey to Walter the Deacon; and Hametuna, or Haintuna, which Suene then held; but had belonged before to Godric, and another Freeman, and to Robert son of Wimarc: Galter, Garner, and one Ralph, were the under-tenants [2].

Estates, lying mostly in the adjoining Parishes, appear by records (w), to have extended into this; but here were two Maners, 1. The maner of Stow-Mareys. 2. The maner of Hayes.

The Maner of Stow.

Mareys, the mansion-house of this, stands about three quarters of a mile south-west from the Church [R].

It belonged anciently to the noble Family of Bohun; and was held under them by the Mareys family. Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, who dyed in 1372, had two knights fees in Stow-Marys, holden by John Mareys (x). By the presentations to the Living it appears to have continued in the Mareys family till 1389. Then it was in—Conand Aske, or his feoffees, in 1433.—John, and—Richard, Hammond, from 1453 to 1488 (y).

William Willford, and Agnes his wife, were possessed of this maner in 1548 (z).

It was afterwards in the Maxey family of Bradwell near Coggeshall. Antony Maxey Esq; who dyed 12 September 1592, held the maner of Stowe, alias Stow-Marish, with a moiety of the Church, in Stow, Great and Little Hayes;

What makes me conclude, that this is the Place called in Domesday-book Eistanes, is, first, because Walter the Deacon held it, who had maners in the neighbouring Purley; next, that a maner here was called Hayes, which had an alternate in presenting to the living. I would therefore suppose the ancient name to have been East-Hayes.

Having no issue, he was succeeded by his brother—Sir William Maxey, Kt. (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 156, 157. 410. 411.]

The Maner of HAYES

is supposed to have derived its name from Hainetun, mentioned in Domesday-book. It is sometimes called Abbot-Hayes, and mention is made of Great and Little Hayes.

The mansion-house of Hayes stands about the same distance, south, from the Church, as Mareys.

This maner seems to have anciently belonged to the family of Sutton: For half of the Advowson of the Church, and the alternate Presentation to it, belonging to them, in right of this Maner, it was settled by fine, in 1341, on John, son of John de Walton, and Margery his wife, daughter of John de Sutton, and their heirs. And they presented from 1321 to 1390 (c).

8. NORTH FAMBRIDGE, is the south-west corner of this Hundred. It stands on the north side of the river Crouch, over against South Fambridge. The name is explained under that other parish.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Godric, a freeman, was owner of this Fanbruge: But Tedric Pointel held it at the time of the Survey [S].

Here is but one MANER.

The Hall stands near the east end of the Church.

After Pointel we have no certain account of the possessors of this Maner [T] till the year 1328, when it belonged to William de Burgh Earl of Ulster. At the time of his decease in 1333, he held this maner of North-Fambrigg of the King, in capite, by the service of one knight's fee, leaving,

Elizabeth, his daughter and heir, one year old (f); afterwards married to Lionel third son it in marriage to her husband Sir John Howard; and their only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, brought it to her husband John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford; who presented to the Living in 1488, and 1511. At the time of his decease 10 March 1512, he held this maner of Hayes in Stow, and was succeeded by his nephew—John de Vere, the 14th Earl of Oxford (d): and from him it descended to his successors Earls of Oxford, till — John, the 16th Earl, or — Edward the 17th Earl, alienated it to some of those that presented afterwards alternately, Cooper, or Goodwyn. [See above, p. 156, 176, and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Hogwills, and Potters, in this parish, belonged to William Browne Esq; in 1549 (e).

William Bragg Esq; Mr. Joseph Dunkley; Joshua Sheppard; Duncan Ewing; Joseph Stringer &c. have also some estates here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is leaded, but the Chancel tiled. In a wooden frame tiled, there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory is alternately in the gift of the Lords of the Maners of Mareys and Hayes.

The parish of Stow-Mareys is rated to the land-tax at 587 l.

of K. Edward III. She dyed in 1363, having had by the said Edmund an only daughter Philippa, wife of Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, and Lord of Wigmore, who in her right became Earl of Ulster, and Lord of Clare, Conaught, and Trim. Among other great estates, he held the maner of North-Fambregge, as parcel of the Earldom of Gloucester; and departing this life in 1381, was succeeded by his eldest son — Roger Mortimer, Earl of March and Ulster; who, at the time of his decease in 1398, held this maner (g).

Anne, his eldest daughter, and at length Heir, was married to Richard of Coningsborough, Earl of Cambridge; second son of Edmund of Langley, fifth son of K. Edward III: He was beheaded in 1414, for entering into a Conspiracy against K. Henry V. and his estates were undoubtedly confiscated to the Crown. [See in the other Volume, p. 339.]

[T] In 1276, John Fitz-John held the maner of Fambregg, with the advowson of the Church, of Sir Robert Fitz-Bernard, in capite. And in 1297, Richard Fitz-John held the maner of Fambregge of Robert Fitz-Walter in ca. by the service of 5 fees and a half, belonging to his maner of Shiringe. Inquis. 4, & 25 Edw. I. It is not said which of the two Fambridges; but it appears to have been this. One of Richard's coheiresses, Joane wife of Theobald le Botiller, had this maner afterwards. See Dugdale Baron. Vol. I. p. 707, 708.

Warwick (i), obtained this estate for a while, I cannot affirm: But, if they had any thing here, it was only the Advowson of the Rectory.

More certain it is, that this Maner was given by K. Edward IV. to his own Queen's sister, Anne, third daughter of Richard Widvile Earl Rivers; married first to William Bourchier, son of William Earl of Eu and Essex, by whom she had Henry, afterwards Earl of Essex; and Cecily married to John Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley. The said Anne's second husband was George Lord Grey, Earl of Kent. At the time of her decease, 30 July 1489, she was possessed of this maner, which descended to her son — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex (k). He being killed by a fall from his horse 13 March 1540, it came to his daughter,

Anne, and her husband William Parr, Earl of Essex, and Marquis of Northampton. At the time of her decease, 26 January 1570-1, she held the maner of North Fambridge, with appertenances, and 20 messuages, 10 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, 200 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 400 of fresh marsh, 500 of salt marsh, 40 of wood, 40 s. rent, North-Fambridge-Ferry, in this parish, Norton, Stowe, Purley, Lachendon, and South Fambridge; free-warren in those parishes; and the Advowson of North-Fambridge Church. Her heir was Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley (l). [See above, p. 203, and in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.]

But Qu. Elizabeth, in 1591, granted the maner of North-Fambridge, with appertenances, to Christopher Osborne; to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (m). — John Osborne, Gent. son, as we suppose, of Christopher, dyed 18 March 1605-6, possessed of this Maner with appertenances; and of two parts in three of the In and Out Marsh called South-marsh, in this parish and Purley. — John, his uncle, was his heir (n). It continued till lately in the Osborne family.

Elizabeth Osborne, sole heiress, brought it in marriage to her husband Temple-Fotherly Whitfield Esq; who dying in January 1729 left it to his nephew — Ralph Whitfield Esq; a Major in the Army. He departed this life in 1744, and was succeeded by his son — Thomas Whitfield Esq; one of the Filazers of the Court of Common-Pleas.

Thomas Coe Esq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small building near the Ferry, new-built with brick, and tyled. Near the west end there is a small boarded frame tyled, but no Bell.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the Maner; and the Advowson of it belonged in 1296 to Richard Fitz-John (o). Maud his eldest daughter and coheir brought it into the Beauchamp Family, Earls of Warwick, in which it continued till 1445; when it came by Anne, a female heir, to Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury and Warwick; and to his son, Richard Earl of Warwick, who being slain at Barnet-field in 1471, it fell to the Crown; and was granted away with the Maner. But since the attainder of Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, in 1601, it hath remained in the Crown.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 476*l*.

9. LACHINGDON with LAW-LING, is a large Parish, extending from that of Mundon to the river Crouch.

Lachingdon is otherwise written in records Lacendun, Lachindon, and Lessenduna: And Lawling, is also called Lallinge. Whether Lachingdon is derived from the Saxon words Lacan, Lach, and ing; or Læcing; and ðun, I am not able to judge: As for Lawl, or Lal, the first syllable of the other name, it is not easy to guess from whence it can be derived, unless it should be from lah, or lag.

There were several Maners in this parish at the time of the Survey. Those in Lawling were more numerous and considerable, than those in Lachingdon.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Aluvin, a freeman, held Lachingdon, or Lessendun: And Leuvin, another freeman; as likewise eight other freemen; held lands in Lacendun. These several parcels were in the King's hands, at the time of the general Survey [U]. Phin, a freeman, had also a Maner in Lacendun. And the Church of Canterbury had a Maner at Lachendon, besides that of Lallinge.

What is under the name of Lainge belonged before the Conquest partly to the said Church of Canterbury; and to Brun a freeman: Uluric Cassa, and Ralph Pévereil, and Eudo Dapifer, were seized of the two last, in 1087.

We shall first treat distinctly of what is mentioned under the name of Lachingdon; and then of what is set down under the title of Lallinge.

The several Maners set down as in Lachindon, were The King's Maner; The Church of Can-

The King's MANER.

We have no account of the tenants under the Crown for some years.

The owner of this estate in the time of K. Henry III. had taken his surname from the place, or some of his ancestors before him. William de Lacindon was presented in 1254, for having a knight's fee, and yet not being made a Knight; therefore he was amerced.—Hugh de Letbendon, or Lachyndon, who dyed in 1294, held of the King, in capite, in Lachindon, of the Honor of Han-nett, by the service of one knight's fee, 1 messuage, 300 acres of arable, 1 marsh, 3 acres of meadow, 4 of pasture, 13 s. 8 d. rent, and a yearly rent of 10 s. to the Castle of Dovor (q).—William de Lackindon, his son, at the time of his decease in 1312, held of the King, as above, 1 messuage, 120 acres of arable, and 11 s. 7 d. in the vill of Lachindon, by the service of one knight's fee, and by the same rent to the Castle of Dovor, and suit at the Honor of Hagenett. He held also 80 acres of marsh here, of the Abbess of Berking, by the service of one clove-gilly-flower per annum.—Hugh, his brother and heir, who dyed in 1316, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hauley, by the like services, a capital messuage, 140 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 8 of pasture, and 9 s. rent of assise.—John de Lackindon was his son and heir (r). We have no further account of this family.

In 1328, William Moton, and Johanna his wife, held 50 acres of arable in Lachindon, of the King, in ca. by payment of 10 s. to the Castle of Dovor.

John Heyroun, who dyed in 1343, held 50 acres of arable, 30 acr. of inclosed marsh, and 2 of pasture, in Lachendon, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hagenett, by the service of 2 d. a year; but charged for the Lordship of Hagenett with the payment of a sec rent of 10 s. per annum, on the 15th day of August (s).

William Sayer, of Coppeford, at the time of his decease, in 1348, held 50 acres of arable, 30 of marsh, and 2 of pasture, in the vill of Lachindon, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hagenet, by the payment of 10 s. as above. And 6 or 7 acres of inclosed marsh of the Abbess of Berkyng, by the service of a half-penny a year.—John Sayer, his son, held the same, at the time of his decease in 1350; as did—Richard his son, who dyed in 1368; and these lands were then charged with a yearly rent of 4 l. of Silver to Sir Richard de Havering, and his heirs for ever.—John Sayer was brother and heir of Richard (t).

This estate was next in the noble Family of Bourchier. For Sir John Bourchier, who dyed

21 May 1400, held 1 messuage and 100 acres of arable and marsh in the vill of Lachindon, of the King, as of the Honor of Dovor, by the service of 10 s. per annum:—Bartholomew, his son and heir, at the time of his death 18 May 1409, held the maner of Lacyndon, of the King, as of the Honor of Hagenet, by the service of one knight's fee; As did—Idonea his widow, that held it in dower till her decease on 12 September 1410 (u). And then it came to the next heir,—Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Essex, who dyed 4 April 1483; being succeeded by his grandson—Henry, Earl of Essex (w). [For a fuller account of this noble Family, see above, p. 203. and in the other Volume, p. 253. 255.]

Henry de Grapenell, at the time of his decease in 1298, held in Lachindon of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Dover, 60 acres of arable, by the yearly payment of 10 s. to the Castle of Dover (x). See under Tyled-hall.

John Cok of Lachyndon, who dyed in 1404, held 150 acres of arable and marsh here of the King, as of the Honor of Dovor.—Peter was his son (y).

As far as we can observe, this Maner was parcell'd out with Tiled-hall, and other Maners in this parish.

TILED-HALL, is the Maner that belonged to Phin, and afterwards to his wife Ulueua [W].

The mansion house stands a little way east from the Church.

After Phin and Ulueua the ancientest owners upon record were the Grapenell family, mentioned above, p. 318. Henry Grapenell, who dyed in 1298, held here of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Dover, 60 acres of arable, by the service and payment of 10 s. to the Castle of Dover.—Petronilla, wife of John Fitz-John; Margery, married afterwards to William Inge; Johanna, to Adam Fitz-John; and Margaret, to Nicolas Havering, were his four daughters and coheirs (z).

William Inge held, by the law of England, in Lachindon 60 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of pasture, and 24 of marsh, of the King, in ca. by the yearly payment at Michaelmas of 10 s. for the guard of Dover-castle; and dying in 1321, left—Joanna his daughter and heir married to Ivo or Eudo de la Zouche. Eudo held this maner in Lachindon called Tyled-hall, of the inheritance of his wife, in 1326, and the land is called in the records 50 acres (a).

Margaret, wife of Nicolas Havering, had 4 l. a year rent, in 1335, out of divers tenements parcel of the maner called Tyled-hall in Lachindon.—Richard de Havering was her son and heir (b).

We have no account from this time of the owners of Tyled-hall till 1553. Then, John Osborne, Gent. who dyed 19 April that year, held the maner of Tyled-hall, with appertenan-ces; and lands, meadows, and pastures called South-Wallett, Coles, and Wallett-marsh, in Lachendon, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Lallinge, by suit of Court only. He held also land called Battell-hill, parcel of this maner, of the King, as of the Castle of Dover, by the abovefaid rent of 10 s. And Tyled-hall-marsh, of Thomas Barnardeston as of the maner of Chalkwell-hall. — Richard Osborne Gent. his son and heir, then aged 10 years, dyed possessed of the same; 14 September 1595, leaving — Richard, his son and heir, also 10 years old (c); who departing this life 11 November 1612, was succeeded by his brother — John, aged 21 years (d). He left only daughters coheirs,

Elizabeth, one of them, brought this estate in marriage to her husband Richard Betenson Esq; They had issue, Richard; Peter; and Edward, of Colne-Engaine. — Richard, the eldest son and heir, had by Catharine, daughter of George Tuke of Laver-Marney Esq; Richard, and Thomas. — Sir Richard Betenson Kt. the eldest son, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Monyns, Bart. by whom he had — Sir Richard, created a Baronet 6 February 1666, and — Edward. [See under Laver de la Hay.] The latter sold this estate, in 1718, to

Sir George Markham, Bart. who, in 1736, gave it by will to

Bernard Wilson, M. A. Vicar of Newark upon Trent. Of him it was purchased, in 1748, by Samuel Trew Gent. and he conveyed it, the same year, to Edward Codd, Gent. together with South-Wallett, and Peverells.

A Maner in LACHENDON belonged to the Church of Canterbury, besides that of Lalling [X].

By whom it was granted to them doth not appear; but as they were possessed of it before the Conquest, it is highly probable that it was given them by the heroick Brithnoth Earl of Essex, who gave them the maner of Lawling.

The persons that held this Maner under the Church of Canterbury, in different parcels, were, the Burnels; Grapnells and their heirs; Heyrour &c.

Philip Burnell, who dyed in 1294, held in Lachendon and Lallyng of the Prior of Canterbury; by the yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. to the Treasurer of Canterbury, and of 22 s. to the Prior; 1 messuage, 140 acres of arable, 4 of pasture, 1 marsh, and 17 s. 3 d. rent of assise. He held other parcels of different persons. —

Edward was his son (e). — Sir Nicolas Burnell, at the time of his decease in 1382, held this maner of Lachyndon of the Archbishop and Church of Canterbury, by the service of 2 s. — Sir Hugh Burnell, held the same, in 1420, of the Archbishop, in fealty. Joyce, wife of Thomas Erdyngton jun. Catharine Burnell; and Margery, wife of Edward Hungerford, were his cousins and heirs (f). [For a further account of this family see the other Volume, p. 12, 92.]

In 1298, Henry de Grapenell held in Lachendon, of the Prior of Canterbury, 1 messuage, 60 acres of arable, and 8 s. rent, by the service of 8 s. 6 d. a year. — William Inge, who married Grapenell's daughter Margery, held the same in 1321, by the service of 8 s. per ann. and by the service of one ploughshare, and suit at the Prior's Court in Lalling from 3 weeks to 3 weeks. — Eudo de la Zouche, who married Inge's daughter Joanna, held this land also, in 1326, by the like services, with the addition of one bederepe in autumn (g).

John Heyrour held it likewise, in 1343; and — Christiana wife of John Faunteloun was his sister and heir (h).

Next William, John, and Richard, Sayer, mentioned above under the King's Maner, held this of the Prior and Convent of Christ's Church in Canterbury, in 1348, 1350, and 1368 (i). The ploughshare was to be of the price of 6 d. (k).

We hear no further of distinct Tenants of this Maner, which we may suppose was, after this, incorporated into the Convent's larger Maner here.

LALLING, or LAWLING, appears anciently to have been the largest part of this Parish, though afterwards reckoned only a Hamlet.

The three Maners that lay in it, belonged before the Conquest to the Cathedral Church of Canterbury; to Brun, a freeman; and to Ulurio Cassa. Canterbury Church and Priory remained possessed of the first at the time of the Survey; Ralph Peverell, and Eudo Dapifer, held then the two others.

LALLING-HALL,

the Maner-house of the first, stands two miles, north north-east, from Lachingdon-Church.

This estate was given to the Church of Canterbury, in the year 991, by Brithnoth [X] the 'Ecclesie Christi in Dorobernia has terras contuli, Lellinges, Illege, & Hetlege, liberas ab omni seculari Servizio, exceptis expeditione, pontis, & arcis constructione.'

In Corpus-Christi-College, Cambridge, Manuscript Library, is a confirmation of this grant by K. Æthelred ann. 1006. 'Ego Athelredus Rex Anglorum Alfrico Archiepiscopo & Angligenum Orcadorum necnon in gyro jacentium monachis &c.' . . . Confirmat terras a se aliisque datas Ecclesie Salvatoris in Cantia temporibus antiquissimis. In Orientalibus Saxonibus Lalling. In Orientalibus Anglis brave

The Prior and Convent of Christ-Church, or Holy Trinity, in Canterbury, (for it went under both those names) remained possessed of this estate till the dissolution of Monasteries [Z].

In 1542, K. Henry VIII. granted it, with the Maners of South-Church, Milton-hall, Stifed, Bocking-hall in West-Mersey, and Borleigh, to the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral of Canterbury.

They remained in possession of them but a little while: for 23 November 1545, they were fain to exchange them with that King for other estates. The 20th of January 1545, K. Henry granted this Maner, with the rest, to

Sir Richard Riche, and his heirs (m). [See above, p. 296. 298. and in the other Volume, p. 21. 390.] He dyed possessed of it in 1566, so did his son—Robert Lord Rich, in 1580 (n); and after him his descendents Earls of Warwick; so often mentioned under Rochford-Hundred. Of the coheirs of—Charles, Earl of Warwick, it was purchased by Thomas Western Esq; and hath descended to—Charles Western Esq; For a more particular account of this Family see the other Volume, p. 147, under Rivenhall, where is their chief Seat.

Lalling has a court-leet kept at Lalling-Hall, the title of which is Lawling with Snoreham; and to it belongs Leigh-How in the parish of Purley, and Runsell Hamlet in Danbury.

The Maner of LITTLE LACHINDON, alias SNOREHAM, was erected out of the lands of the Church of Canterbury.

John de Grey, who dyed in 1323, held in Lachindon one grange, or barn, 140 acres of arable; and 60 acres besides holden of Richard de Burgh Earl of Ulster, by the service of 7 s. a year; and 4 acres of meadow, 6 of pasture, and 20 of marsh (o). His successors were—Henry de Grey, who dyed in 1342, and—Reginald in 1370 (p).—Sir Henry de Grey, son of the latter, held this estate by the name of Snoreham, of the Prior of Christ's-Church in Canterbury, in 1395.—Elizabeth, his widow held the same in 1401 (q). And so did their son—Sir Richard Grey, also by the name of the maner of Snoreham, in 1442, and—Margaret, widow of Sir Richard, that dyed in 1450 (r). [See above under Purley.]

The lands of this Maner are, in the subsequent accounts, so intermixed with those of the neighbouring parish of Snoreham, that they are not easily distinguished. Here, therefore, we shall only observe, that Roger Grome, clothier, who dyed 24 November 1561, held the maner of Snoreham, with appertinances, in Snoreham and Lachindon, of Richard Lord Riche, as of his maner of Lawling-hall, by the yearly rent of 12 s. 6 d.—Thomas Grome was his son and heir (s). Next,

Arthur Harris Esq; held this maner of Snoreham, or Little Lachenden, at the time of his decease 18 June 1597, and after him his son—Sir William Harris, who dyed in 1617. and—Sir Arthur, son and heir of Sir William (t). [See under Cricksea.]

Then it passed to Mr. Argal, and to Nathanael Green Esq; as Snoreham.

We have observed above, that in Lallinge, besides the two Maners last described, Ralph Peverell held one, that had belonged before to one Brun [A]. This was called afterwards

PEVERELLS.

It appears to have gone along with Tyled-hall. Richard Betenson Esq; at the time of his decease 12 July 1624, was possessed of this maner of Peverells, and divers other lands in Lachendon and Althorn, holden of the King as of his Dutchy of Lancaster (u). With Tyled-hall it was conveyed to Edward Codd, Gent.

Eudo Dapifer, Lord of the adjoining parish of Mundon, held also a Maner in Lallinge, which belonged before to Uluric Cassa [B]. This is what was called afterwards

The Maner of HILL-HOUSE, vulgarly Hell-house. 'Tis now only a Farm in the south part of the parish.

The Bishop of London had likewise a Maner in Lallinge, styled that belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Godere [C]. This is supposed to be what was called afterwards The Maner of Stamfords. Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, held, at the time of his decease, 4 April 1483, the maner of Stamfords of the Bishop of London. — Henry, his grandson, succeeded him (w). — Anne, Marchioness of Northampton, sole daughter and heir of this last, held the maner of Stamfords, with appertenances, and 3 messuages, 2 cottages, 40 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 200 of marsh, free fishery, and wrec of the Sea, in Lachenden and Stamfords, and a yearly rent of 5s. out of the lands of Richard Osborne, of the Queen, as of her Castle of Dover, by knight's service (x). She dyed 26 Janu. 1570. The same year Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Stamfords to Walter Devereux, Viscount Hereford (y).

ULEHAM,

These two Maners, or reputed Maners, of Hill-house, and Uleham, went afterwards together. Roger Grome, above-mentioned, held in 1561, the Maner of Hell-houfe, and that of Ullams, with appertenances, in Lachindon, of the Queen, in capite, as of her Honor of Hagenett. — Thomas, his son and heir, then 18 years old, succeeded him (z). — William Grome, Gent. brother it seems of Thomas, by license dated 7 September 1580, alienated a moiety of this maner, and the moiety of one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 10 of wood, and 100 of marsh, in Lachendon to

Arthur Harris Esq; (a) At the time of his decease, 18 June 1597, he held, of the maner of Lawling-hall, in free socage, the Maner, capital messuage, or farm, called Hill Howse, alias Hell-house; with appertenances; in Lachingdon, Lawlinge, and Althorne: And the Maner of Ullams, in Lachindon: together with divers tenements, lands, marshes, &c. occupied with those two Maners. — Sir William Harris his son and heir, held the same of Robert Lord Rich: and was succeeded by his son — Sir Arthur Harris, or Herris (b).

These have passed with the Maner of Snoreham.

Here is a Fair on the 2d of June.

The CHURCH, and Chancel are tyled. No steeple, but a wooden frame, in which hangs 1 Bell.

This Rectory hath been all along in the collation of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Near Lalling-hall anciently stood a Chapel, built for the Ease and Conveniency of the Inhabitants of that part of the Parish, which were distant two miles from the mother Church. Part of the foundations are still visible in the orchard belonging to Lalling-hall. The Rector of Lalling was obliged to officiate in that Chapel.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1142 l. and Runfell Hamlet at 195 l.

10. SNOREHAM is a very small Parish, not mentioned in Domesday-book, and taken since that time out of the adjoining Parishes of Lalling and Purley [D].

Speed and Norden omitted it in their Maps; and in others, it is set down only as a Maner-house by the name of Snoreham-hall; but in the latter Maps it is right.

The greatest part of the lands belonged to the Church of Canterbury, and have been already described under the Maner of Snoreham alias Little Lachingdon; the rest came most probably out of Purley.

John de Grey, of Wilton, besides 140 acres in the foregoing maner of Little Lachindon, and 60 acres of land under the Earl of Ulster; held in Snoreham, one Grange, and a heath, and 160 acres of arable, 6 of pasture, and 4 l. rent; of which, 120 acres were holden of the Prior of Christ's Church in Canterbury, by the service of 13 s. 4 d. per annum. If the Prior had all the Parish, there was no reason for any distinction. Afterwards he is said to hold, by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee, all the tenements in Snoreham of William Gernon (e), whom I also suppose lord of the Grange, because Gernon had a maner in the neighbouring parish of Purley; and John de Grey held the maner of Purley of the King, and Hyde-Park there, of the Prior, as well as the Maner of Lachendon Barns, now reckoned into Purley. [See above, p. 348.] And Leigh-How, in the parish of Purley, is, in the title of the Maner of Lawling cum Snoreham, said to belong to that maner.

That some of these lands came out of the parish of Purley is the more probable, because Lachingdon and Snoreham are in two distinct jurisdictions, the former being an Exempt to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and a Peculiar subject to the Dean of Bocking; the other, in the Diocese of London, wholly subject to that Bishop and his Archdeacon of Essex; except a Hamlet called Callow, or Gallow-Green, now reputed in Purley, which, in Spirituals, belongs to the Dean of Bocking, and may therefore be presumed to have been anciently in Lawling.

Of what age this Parish is, nothing shews above the year 1326; then Sir Henry de Grey of Wilton presented to the Rectory, and his Family down to the year 1496, as the London Registry shews.

But John de Grey had in 1323 the estate in this parish just mentioned before.—Reginald Grey, Lord of Wilton. — Sir Henry Grey — Sir Richard. — Sir Thomas, and — Sir John, had also the same; and presented to the Church (f).

By the presentations, it appears to have been after that in Sir Giles Capel, in right of his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Roos; in — Hugh Dennis Esq; in — Thomas Grome, Gent. in — Arthur Harris Esq; and,

Thomas Argall Esq; and his heirs. This Family was seated at Great Badow. About the end of last century, — Thomas Argall Esq; married

Anne, daughter of Sir William Wyld Kt. and Bart. one of the Judges of the King's Bench, and had by her two daughters, Jane, wife of William Godwin; and Mary, wife of . . . Heyman, of Town-Malling, in Kent. Neither of them having any issue, this estate was sold, under a decree in Chancery, to Nathanael Green Esq; He dyed in 1725, leaving Lucy, married to Raphael Courteville Esq; and Catharine, and Elizabeth, Nuns. Mr. Courteville and his wife having suffered a recovery, conveyed this estate to Mr. John Strutt, of Biley-mills, in 1743.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, was undoubtedly built by some of the noble Family of Grey of Wilton, the patrons. It is quite ruinous, there being only some small remains of it near the Hall-yard. The inhabitants resort to Lachingdon-Church, as being the nearest, and are there baptized and buried, and contribute to all parochial duties. However, this is still a Rectory presentative.

There are not above six or seven houses in this parish; which is rated to the land-tax at lies between Lalling and Maldon-river, or Blackwater-bay; abutting north towards Northey-island.

II. MUNDON

The name is derived from the two Saxon words, Mund, security, defence, mound; and don, a hill; here probably having been some kind of fortification.

This belonged to Goduin, a King's Thegn, in Edward the Confessor's reign. Eudo Dapifer held it at the time of the Survey [E], and gave both Maner and Advowson of the Church to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, of his foundation (g) [F].

After the suppression of that Abbey, K. Henry VIII. in 1539, granted this Maner of Mondon, and the appropriate Rectory, or great Tithes, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy Seal, and his heirs (h).

Upon his attainder it reverted to the Crown: and Qu. Mary I. 15 April 1558, annexed Munden-hall, with several other lordships, to the Duchy of Lancaster (i).

Sir Thomas Wiseman bought this Maner, to hold of the King in fee-farm: and was succeeded by his son — Sir William.

Thomas Western Esq; of Rivenhall purchased it; and it hath descended to his heirs. [See in the other Volume, p. 147.]

Mundon-hall, the Maner house, stands a little way north from the Church. It hath very large demesnes.

Eltney, or Iltney-farm, near the Channel, was part of St. John Abbey's demesnes in this parish (k). In 1556, William Harrys Esq; held this messuage called Iltney, in Mondon, and divers lands, tenements, meadows, pastures &c. of the Queen, as of her maner of Mondon.

Ralph Breeder had it in 1608 (l).

It belonged afterwards to Dr. Thomas Plume, who settled it upon his foundations at Maldon. [See under Maldon, p. 337.]

The Lords Fitz-Walter had a moiety of a fee in Mundon; which John Oliver held in 1386. and — James de Bures afterwards (m).

Robert Teye held, in 1426, 1 messuage, 80 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 6 of marsh, [F] We have taken notice above, p. 255, of the corruption of the name of Pitsey into that of Picheford. The like corruption appears in the same Charter, of Mundon into Mundover. In the original it is, Mundon, which is an abbreviation of Mundonia. But the unskilful transcriber taking the final n in Mundon for an u', and imagining it must be a contraction of uer, made of it that uncouth and unusual name Mundover.

12. STEPLE with STANS GATE lies east of Mundon, having on the north Maldon-river. And the adjoining Isle of Ramsey is in this parish.

It appears from Domesday-book, that the ancientest name of this place was Ulfwinefcherche, which being too long for the inhabitants of this Kingdom, that delight in short Names and Monosyllables, was changed into that of Steple, taken undoubtedly from the Church, which had a Steple and the other neighbouring Churches had not.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the owners of the lands here, were Aluric, a freeman; four freemen in Uluuines-Cherch; one Norman; and Bondi, a freeman. At the time of the Survey, Aluric's part belonged to the King; Tedric Pointell claimed what was in Uluuine's Cherch, as an exchange; and Henry de Ferrers had Bondi's part [G].

Here are at present two Maners. 1. The maner of Steple. 2. The maner of Steple-Grange.

The Maner of STEPLE-HALL.

The mansion house of this is on the north side of the Church.

After the Survey the earliest account of it we have was in 1282. Then Hugh Fitz-Otto held the maner of Steple by purchase from Sir Americ Peche, in capite, by the fourth part of a fee. And in the same village, of John de Cantilupe, one marsh, of the yearly rent of three marks: And of Roger le Taylur, 40 acres of arable, and 40 of marsh, by the service of one clove-gilliflower: And 30 acres of arable of Robert Berners. Joanna was his daughter and heir (o).

It appears by a copy of an Indenture dated 15 January 1362, that Sir John de Aspale and Elizabeth his wife, were then possessed of the maner of Steple in Essex, which went to two Daughters; one of them, — Catbarine de Hemenbale had

The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to St. John's Abbey; and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Abbot and Convent remained patrons till the Suppression, when they came to the Crown, and have continued in it ever since.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 974 l.

this lordship. Margery wife of Sir George Felbrigge was the other daughter (p).

We hear nothing more of this Maner till 1477. John Feild, who dyed that year, held the maner of Stepyll, alias Stepyll-hall, and 300 acres of pasture, and 100 acres of arable, 5 of wood, 5 of meadow, and 60s. rent, in the parish of Stepyll, of the Prior of Bicknacre, in socage, by fealty and rent of 1 d. per ann. — Dorothy was his daughter and heir (q). Who gave this to Bicknacre nothing shews, but they had it in the beginning of K. Edward the III's reign; for then they presented to the living, and had an alternate presentation with the Priory of Stanf-gate (r) [H].

Agnes Morton, widow, who dyed 6 April 1517, held the maner of Stepyll, with appertenance; and other lands called Cokes payes, Mutchest, or Great and Little Stuckes, Ferrors, Dickles, Chapmans, and Morris; of the Prior of Bicknacre, by fealty, and yearly rent of 1 d. — Robert Morton, her son and heir, then 44 years old, succeeded her.

Dorothy Filoll, widow, held this maner at the time of her decease 1 October 1537, of the Priory of Bicknaker, then annexed to that of St. Mary Spittell, by fealty.

Anne Willoughby was her daughter and heir, aged 40 years (s). — Thomas Willoughby, most probably her son, was also possessed of this maner, and dying 16 August 1559, was succeeded by his brother — Francis Willoughby (t).

Sir Henry Billingsley was lord of the maner of Steple-hall in 1604 (u).

About the beginning of this century it belonged to Elizabeth, Dutchess dowager of Montague. [See in the other Volume, p. 15.]

It is now in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London.

[H] The revenues of Bycknacre Priory extended into the parishes of Woodham-Ferrers, Danbury, Steple, Mayland, Purle, Burnham &c. See in the other Volume, p. 34.

This is what belonged, at the time of the Survey, to Henry de Ferrers [I].

As Ralph de Ferrers, lord of Tiltey, confirmed the foundation of that Abbey, he unquestionably became also a benefactor thereto [K]. [See in the other Volume, p. 436]

In 1538, The maner, or grange, called Steeple-Grange, was granted by K. Henry VIII. to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk; who, the same year, sold this maner, ferm, or grange to John Stonard (w). From him it came to—George Stoneard, Esq; who dyed 31 Decemb. 1558, and, according to the Inquisition, held the maner of Steeple-Grange, part of the possessions of the Priory of Tiltey. — John Stoneard, then aged 36 years, succeeded his father (x). He dyed 16 October 1579. This estate was afterwards in—Clement Stonard; then in—Francis, who held it, at the time of his decease, 13 September 1604, leaving — Clement Stonard his son and heir, 46 years old.

It is said in the record to lye in the several parishes, vills, or fields, of Steeple, St. Laurence, Woodham-Mortimer, Woodham-Ferris, and Shobery (y).

Mr. Jonatban Boulter, of London, had it lately. It belongs now to

James Roffey Esq;

STANS GATE

is a Hamlet in this parish, near the water, being a kind of peninsula.

The name signifies a Stone-gate, but what gate could occasion that name doth not appear at present. It might be a landing-place from the water.

Siuard was owner of Stanesgate in Edward the Confessor's reign. At the time of the Survey, Ralph Fitz-Brien held it under Ralph Peverell [L].

About 1110, this Ralph Fitz-Brien founding a Priory for Canons of the Order of St. Augustin at Great Brifete in Suffolk, made the Church of Stanesgate, with the third share of the Tithes of his lordship, and some lands, part of its endowment (z). Richard de Belmeis, Bishop of London, confirmed this grant; and mentions particularly all the Tithes both great and small out of the whole demesnes of the lord of Steple, and out of Henry Foliot's: And all the Tithes of Ramsey-island; and out of Aylewe-lond, and Foteslond, and Raylewayle's.—But only half the Tithe of Earl Maurice's and Winton's lands, of the Fee of Steple: and the like of all the lands of the parishioners of Steple (a).

A PRIORY

for Cluniac Monks was founded here before the year 1176, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, and a cell to the Priory of Lewes (b).

The possessions belonging to it, besides the site &c. were, the Maner of Stanesgate, the Priory maner of Stanesgate, a water-mill, and several messuages, lands, and tenements in Stanesgate, Steeple, Ramesey, Woodham-Mortimer, Tillingham, Maldon, Great and Little-Totham, Tiptree, Messing, Tollethunt Darcy, and Tollethunt Major [M]: the great Tithes of Stanesgate, Steeple, and Kaynham; and the Advowsons of those Vicarages.

In 1525, this House was suppressed, with other smaller Monasteries, and granted to Cardinal Wolsey, for endowing his two Colleges (c). The revenues of it were then, in Spiritualities, 5 l. 0 s. 3 d. and in Temporalities, 38 l. 8 s. 3 d.

Upon the Cardinal's fall in 1529, this coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted, in 1536, all the premisses, and the oblations &c. belonging to the parish Church of Steple; the Vicar's poor pittance only excepted; to the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, by way of exchange (d). And Sir Thomas, Prior of St. John's, granted, 28 June 1533, the maner of Stanfgate to Thomas Cocke, and Richard Cocke (e).

After the suppression of St. John's Hospital, K. Henry VIII. granted, in 1543, the maner of Stannesgate, with appertenances, and the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage of Steple, to Edmund Mordaunt, and his heirs. He, by license dated 1 June 1544, alienated them to Sir Richard Riche, Lord Riche (f). He enjoyed them at the time of his decease in 1566, and they passed to his descendents Earls of Warwick (g).

Charles Hoskyns Esq; of Croydon, is said to be the present possessor of Stanfgate maner.

[M] In the Inquest taken at Chelmsford, 8 August 1525, the Jury found, that this Priory had 50 messuages, 1000 acres of arable, 600 of pasture, 200 of meadow, 100 of wood, and 20 s. rent in the Parishes above-named.

Stanfgate-Wic belongs to Shaw King, Esq; Ramsey-isle is parcel of the maner of Stanfgate.

The Rev. Thomas Cooch [*M], and Thomas Sweeting, have also some lands in Steple.

The Church, or Chapel, of Stanfgate is down.

The CHURCH of Steple, dedicated to St. Laurence, is tyled. The Chancel is in ruins. At the west end, in a wooden frame boarded and tyled, are 2 Bells.

The great Tithes of Steple and Stanfgate were divided between the Priory of Great Briset, and that of Stanfgate. After the suppression, the Rectory of Steple, and Advowson of the Vicarage, were granted to Edmund Mordaunt; who alienated them to Richard Lord Riche (b). By Advowson of the Vicarage, must be understood the alternate presentation: for the Priories of Stanfgate and Bicknacre presented alternately (i). With Bicknacre was granted the Advowson of Steple to Henry Polsted in 1539. He sold them together to Sir Walter Mildmay: and Humphrey Mildmay Esq; who dyed 9 August 1613, was possessed of them (k). Henry Mildmay, of Graces Esq; presented in 1678. One of his daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Waterfon had it last.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, of Stanfgate were purchased of the Earl of Warwick's heirs by Mr. King; and are now in Shaw King Esq; His mother presented to the Vicarage of Steple with Stanfgate in 1750.

Here are two Fairs; the Wednesday in Whitfun-week, and the Wednesday after Michaelmas-day.

13. MAYLAND

lies south of Steple. In records it is written Meilanda.

If the Saxons had used the name of May for one of the months, that might have been employed in the name of this parish: but Trimilki, thrice milking, was the name they gave to that agreeable month. The first syllable May, therefore I think, was derived from Mæde, pasture; land is well known.

In Domesday-book no such name occurs as this. Probably it was one of those articles that could not be traced out, and which for that reason I have placed together in a note at the end of this Hundred.

There are two Maners in this parish. 1. The maner of Mayland. 2. The maner of Knipshoe, and Dredgers.

The Maner of MAYLAND.

Mayland-hall, the mansion-house of this, stands a little way south from the Church.

This was part of the endowment of St. Osi-Monastery in this County, given to it undoubtedly by the founder, Richard de Belmeis, Bishop of London. That house was possessed of it at the time of the Suppression, being then lett for 22 l. and also of the Rectory of Mayland.

In 1525, K. Henry VIII. granted this Maner, and Rectory, among many others, to Cardinal Wolfey (l). Upon his præmunire it coming to the Crown, the same King granted it, in 1539, to Sir Richard Riche (m). It continued a while in his posterity, Earls of Warwick, so often mentioned before (n).

Robert Wiseman Esq; had it in 1635. Some years ago this Maner was given to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, by the munificent Edward Colston Esq; together with the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage.

The Maner of KNIPSHO and DREDGERS appears to have belonged to the Family of Gernon, mentioned above, p. 13. 16. 55. 158. 176. and in the other Volume, p. 179. 576. Under John Gernoun, Thomas Baynard, who dyed in 1344, held in Mayland, 1 toft, 80 acres of arable, and one marsh, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. Joane, his widow, at the time of her decease in 1349, held this maner of Knepesho. — John Baynard was their son and heir (o).

It was next in the noble Family of Bouchier. Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, who dyed 18 May 1409, held the maner of Knypesho in Mayland, of the King as of the Honor of Peverell. — Idonea, his widow, held in 1410, 160 acres of arable, and 40 of marsh, called Knipsho, of the same Honor (p). — Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, married, first, to Sir Hugh Stafford, and afterwards to Sir Lewis Robessart, held the same (q). She dyed 1 July 1433. And, to conclude all that relates here to this noble Family, — Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex, held the maners of Knypso and Legates, in 1483 (r): And, in 1570. — Anne Lady Bouchier, Marchioness of Northampton, held the maner of Knipsoe and Dredgers, and 2 messuages, 2 cottages, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 50 of pasture, 10 of wood, 40 of marsh, in Knipsoe Dredgers and Mayland, and fishery, wrec, and free-warren (s).

But, in the mean time Richard Baynard, who dyed in 1473, is said to hold the maner of Knybso, alias Baynards, in the vill of Mayland, of John Payton, by the service of the 4th part

I suppose it was only part of the Maner that the Baynards and Danyells held.

John Baker Esq; was owner of this maner, or tenement, in 1635.

Bovells lands so called, in this parish and Southminster, part of the endowment of Darcies Chantries in Maldon, were granted to Sir Francis Jobson, who alienated them to Francis Bode (u).

Little Bicknacre, alias Bicknacre-Barns, in Mayland, were granted, in 1589, to Robert Wroth, and William Wiseman (w).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Barnabas, is tilled, and so is the Chancel. In a wooden frame, boarded, with a spire shingled, are 3 Bells.

It belonged originally to the Abbey of St. Osith; and afterwards was given to the Church of St. Paul's; but by an exchange made by Gilbert Foliot, Bishop of London, in the time of K. Henry II. became again part of St. Osith's possessions. The Rectory, or great Tithes, were then appropriated to that Abbey; and a Vicarage ordained; both which continued in St. Osith's till the dissolution of Monasteries.

In 1525, K. Henry granted the Rectory to Cardinal Wolsey; and, after his fall, to Sir Richard Riche in 1539, together with the Advowson of the Vicarage. From 1593 to 1639 they were in the Wiseman Family: and from 1664 to 1671, in R. Duncomb Esq; in right of his wife (x).

St. Bartholomew's Hospital purchased them with the Maner: and, in 1723, augmented the Vicarage with 100l. added to 100l. of Mr. Colston's benefaction, to which were joined 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 702 l. 2 s. 0 d.

ALTHORN,

otherwise written Alderne, and Aletherne, was so named, either from the ground being there All covered with Thorns; or from Alb, old, and ðopn, here being some remarkable large Old Thorn. For many places have taken their names from such things, as might be proved by instances.

This is supposed to be what is entered in Domesday-book under the appellation of Altenai, and Eltenai. The former, Lestian enjoyed as free, in Edward the Confessor's reign: and Suene, and his under-tenant Ralph, held it at the time of the Survey. The other, styled Eltenai, had belonged to Ingelric, and at the time of the Survey to Eustace Earl of Bologne.

These were divided afterwards into three Maners.

The Maner of ALTHORN is what belonged to Suene [N].

Althorn-hall, the mansion-house, stands a little way south from the Church.

The earliest account we have of this estate, after Suene, was in 1203, when a Fine passed between Eustace Fitz-Thomas, pet' and William de Pontefract, tenant, for one carucate of land, with appertenances in Alethorne (y).

Before the year 1303, the Abbot and Convent of St. Osith were possessed of this Maner, given them undoubtedly by their founder. For, in that year, Richard de Gravesend held lands in Alethorne of the Abbot of St. Osith, as we shall shew more particularly under the next maner.

In 1360, Robert de Naylingherst and John de Illeford gave 1 messuage, 254 acres of arable, 15 acr. of meadow, 30 of pasture, a small marsh, and 10 s. rent in Althorne, Adburghton, and the suburbs of Colchester, to the Abbot and Convent of St. Osith and their successors for ever: Of which, 134 acres were holden of the said Convent, by the service of 9 s. 4 d. a year; and 6 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and the marsh, by the service of 12 d. per ann. And 46 acres of arable of John de Stoke, by the yearly service of 9 s. 4 d. (z).

To whom these lands were particularly granted at the suppression, I do not find.

There is at present no such acknowledged Maner as that of Althorn-hall: But the lands are in three parcels. One part goes with Mayland-hall, and belonged to — Robert Wiseman Esq; afterwards to — George Neltharp Esq;

A second part belongs to Southminster: And a third part to the Maner of Cage in the same parish. These two were part of the estate of — Thomas Brograve Esq; now of Berney Brograve Esq;

The Maner of STOK E-HALL was so named from its owner Edmunde de Stok; living in the time of K. Edward I.

This is what belonged to Eustace Earl of Bologne [O].

Richard de Gravesend, who dyed in 1303, held certain lands in Aletherne called Hungesland, containing 120 acres of arable, and 4 s. rent, of Edmund de Stoke, and of the Abbat of St. Osth, by the service of 31 s. 6 d. — Richard was his son and heir (a).

Alphonfus de Vere, in 1328, held a messuage, 60 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of pasture, 30 of marsh, and 6 s. 8 d. rent in Allethorne, of William de Baud, as of his maner of Coringham, by the service of the eighth part of a knight's fee; — John was his son (b).

This Alphonfus was a younger son of Robert the 6th Earl of Oxford: his son John here mentioned was the 7th Earl.

The Maner of Stokes appears next in the Darcy Family. Robert Darcy, Esq; was possessed of it in 1508. For Roger Darcy, who dyed 3 September that year, held lands and tenements, in Althorne, Mayland, &c. of Robert Darcy Esq; as of his maner of Stokys (c).

William Harrys, who dyed 21 September 1556, held the maner of Stokes and Luthyrnes in Althorn, Mayland, and Crixsetts, of the Bishop of London as of his Castle of Stortford (d). — Edward Harrys Esq; was possessed of it in 1574 (e). And — Sir William Harrys, Kt. at the time of his decease 14 November 1616, held of the Bishop of London, the maner of Stokes, Lutherns, Bykers, John Davis, Allgatts, Dykers, Davyes, and Butts, with appertenances; and lands and tenements called Culver-house land, Margaretts Crofts, and Wells, and divers other lands &c. in Alderne, alias Altherne, Mayland, Croxsey, otherwise Crixseth, &c. belonging to this maner. — Sir Arthur Harrys Kt. his son, succeeded him: and was succeeded by his son — Sir Cranmer Harrys, Kt. (f). A particular account of the Harrys Family will be given under the next parish of Cricksea.

The Maner of HAYRONS, is the third Maner in this parish: Derived probably from that of Eustace, and so named from an owner.

There were Maners of the same name in Danbury and High Estre. See the other Volume, p. 28. 456.

We have but a slender account of this estate.

Antony Higbam Esq; had it in 1540 (*).

Bartholomew Averell, Gent. mentioned above, p. 112. 266. 316. &c. held this maner called Heron's Countesbridge, and a tenement named Kings and Widdow-croft, in Althorne, Mayland, and Lachindon, of the maner of Coryng-ham-hall, in fealty, by socage, and rent of 13 s. 4 d. Also a messuage called Chamberlaynes, in Althorne, of John Lord Darcy, as of his maner of Southminster-hall, in fealty. He dyed 14 May 1562, and Mary Sammes; Grace; and Elizabeth, Averell, were his three daughters, and coheirs. In another place it is said that he dyed 14 May 1564, leaving — Bartholomew his son and heir (g).

Benjamin King, is the next possessor upon record. He held the maner of Countesbridge, alias Heron's, with appertenances, in Althorne, Mayland, and Lachindon, of the maner of Coringham: and departing this life 16 May 1628, was succeeded by his son — John King, who dyed 14 July 1634, leaving — Thomas King Esq; his cousin and next heir (b).

Althorn-Barns, which we suppose is this estate, was purchased by Mr. Thomson of London, Turkey-merchant. He had three sons, Christopher, of Halsted and Wethersfield; John; and Adam: to the two youngest he left this estate, and to their heirs. — John, son of John, sold his moiety to Mr. Harris, Solicitor in Chancery. — Stephen Thomson, as far as we can learn, is the present possessor. The House stands near the west end of the Church.

Butts-cliffs; and Bridge-marsh, are in this parish.

John Stephen held, in 1574, messuages and lands here called Gibbes or Piggells, Margaretts croft, Capells, Normans, Sampsons, Saltpress, Kings, Beavys, Steers, Webbs, &c. (i).

Here is a Fair June 5.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. In a small spire shingled are 3 Bells.

This Church did anciently belong to the Cathedral of St. Paul's; but, after the foundation of the Monastery of St. Osth, Gilbert Foliot, bishop of London, transferred it, by agreement, as well as that of Mayland, to the said Monastery. And K. Henry III. confirmed the agreement, by a Charter dated 11 September, 1268. The Rectory being appropriated to that House, a Vicarage was ordained and endowed between the years 1222, and 1228; and the Rectory, with the Advowson of the Vicarage, continued in St. Osth's Monastery, till its dissolution. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted both to Sir Richard Riche (k). In his Family they remained till about 1593, when they came to the Wisemans of Mayland, then to Duncombe, and to Samuel King, Gent. Next to George Nelthorp Esq;

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 702l. 2 s. 0 d.

15 CRICKSEY,

adjoins on the South to the river Crouch; and is supposed to have been so named from the two Saxon words Cnecca a creek, and ræ, the sea; it lying near the creek of the sea at the mouth of the said river, for which reason Norden styles it Chrouche fee.

It is otherwise written in records, Criccheseia, Cricksey, Crixsey, Crixheth, Crixseth, Chriksea, Crickesley, Crykesey, Croxsey, Crekeseth, and Kryxhithe.

The owner of this place in Edward the Confessor's reign was Aluuard: It was held by Moduin at the time of the Survey [P].

Here is only one MANER.

Cricksea-hall is near the east end of the Church; and Cricksea Place about three quarters of a mile south-east of the same.

After Moduin we have no account of the possessors of this estate till 1320, when John de Brianzon held of John de Chanceux 20 acres of the land called Crickseth, which had been William le Smyth's; by the service of 4s. a year. And of William Senaunt 15 acres (l).

In 1375, the Lord Walter Fitz-Walter held the maner of Crixeth of the King as of the Honor of Reyleigh by knight's service. And he held the same at the time of his decease in 1386. As did his son — Walter Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1407, or 1408 (m).

Next, in 1498, Thomasine Hopton held the maner of Crixhethall of Thomas Darcy Esq; (n) as of his maner of Canindon; and Robert Darcy, at the time of his decease 24 April 1516, held the maner of Crykesey, with the Advowson of the Church, of the King, by the service of half a knight's fee (o).

It continued longest in the Harris Family; who had a large brick House here, in a pleasant Park, well stored with timber. They were descended from William Harris of Prittlewell in this County. He married Anne, daughter of . . . Jernegan, and had — Arthur Harrys of Prittlewell; who, by Joanna his wife, daughter of Thomas Percy, second son of Henry Earl of Northumberland, had — William Harrys of Southminster, that held the maner of Crixsetts-hall of the Lord Riche, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of one knight's fee, and suit at the Court of the said Honor from month to month; besides many other estates (p) [Q]. He dyed 21 September 1555; having had three wives; 1. Joanna, daughter and coheir of John Smyth, of Norton. 2. Joanna, daughter of . . . Cooke, of Bocking. 3. Anne Rutter. By the first he had William his son and heir, and Vincent, of Maldon. By the second, he had Arthur Harrys, of Woodham Mortimer and Cricksea. William the eldest son is not recorded to have enjoyed this maner, but only 23 acres of arable and pasture, and 20 of wood, called Cryxseth-hide; a messuage called the New house, and three acres of land, in Crixseth; and the great house in Pritwell; a tenement in Rochford styled Stebbyn's; and other estates in Hockly, South-Fambridge, Leigh; especially in Southminster, 23 acres parcel of the maner of Rattleborough, 102 acres of pasture named Sheepeote and Lodgelades, and 128 acres of meadow and pasture called Highfeild (q). The other son, — Arthur Harrys Esq; of Woodham Mortimer and Cricksea, above-mentioned, held the maner of Cricksey, alias Cricksetts, with appertenances, and the Advowson of this Church (r). See above, p. 342. He married Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Waldegrave of Smalbridge, and dying 18 June 1597, was succeeded by his son — Sir William Harrys, or Herris, who held the maner of Crixley, alias Crixseth, with all its rights, members, and appertenances, and divers messuages, lands, &c. in this parish, and Althorn, and Burnham; and the Advowson of this Church; of the Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Raleigh. Departing this life 14 November 1616, he left, by Alice his wife daughter of Thomas Smyth of Westhanger in Kent, — John, his son and heir, and 4 daughters. John had 3 sons, Arthur, of Crickley; William, of Lincolns-inn; Thomas; and Alice, wife of Sir Henry Mildmay of Graces. — Sir Arthur Harrys, the eldest son, married two wives; 1. Anne sole daughter and heir of Robert Cranmer of Charsted in Kent. 2. Anne, sole daughter of Sir Nicolas Salter of Enfield in Middlesex, widow of Sir Henry Bowyer of Denham, Kt. By the second he had Salter Harrys, father of Edward, of Southminster. And by the first he had Cranmer, and John. He departed this life 9 January 1632, and was succeeded by his son — Sir Cranmer Harrys Kt. aged 22 years (s). He married Martha, daughter and coheir of Daniel Holford, of West-Thurrock Esq; and had by her two daughters, Anne, and Mary [R].

It was afterwards purchased by Thomas Western, of Rivenhall Esq; and is now in his descendants. [See in the other Volume, p. 147.]

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. There is no Steple, nor any Bell, unless one.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner: and as such in the gift of the Families of Fitz-Walter, Darcy, Harrys, Bowyer, and Western.

is the South-east corner of this Hundred, adjoining to the river Crouch, where it discharges itself into the sea: and that gave rise to the name; the Saxon word Bupn, or Býpn, signifying a torrent, a violent stream, and ham, a village, or habitation.

Aluuart, a freeman, was owner of this parish in Edward the Confessor's reign. At the time of the Survey, Ralph Baignard held it in demesne, with other lands that had belonged before to ten freemen [S].

In this parish are now two Maners. 1. The maner of Burnham, with Mangax. 2. The maner of Eastwick and Westwick.

The Maner of BURNHAM.

Burnham-hall, the mansion-house, stands a little way north from the Church.

How the posterity of Ralph Baynard lost his Barony, which was given to Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gilbert, is seen above, p. 313. 320. and in the other Volume, p. 36. 427. 539.

This lordship came, as Dunmow to Fitz-Walter, to Radcliffe, then to Sir Henry Mildmay.

In 1285, Robert Fitz-Walter held the maners of Woodham-Walter and Burnham, in capite, of the King, as an appertenance to his Barony, which was worth 100 l. a year (t). In 1386, — Walter Fitz-Water held this maner in capite, as parcel of the Barony of Fitz-Water (u). — Elizabeth, widow of Sir Walter Fitz-Walter, held this maner for life; she dyed in 1465; and Anne, her second daughter and coheir, brought this estate to her husband, Thomas Ratcliffe, Esq; (w). From whom it passed to his descendents, Viscounts Fitz-Walter, and Earls of Suffex.

Frances, daughter of Henry Earl of Suffex, marrying Sir Thomas Mildmay, of Moulsham-hall, Kt. it came in her right, after the death of Robert Ratcliffe, Earl of Suffex, in 1629, to

[T] In the reign of K. Henry III. Hugh de Hodeing had

Sir Henry Mildmay, and next to — Benjamin, and — Charles, Barons Fitz-Walter, and to — Benjamin, created Viscount Harwich, and Earl Fitz-Walter. The latter dying 29 February 1756, without issue, left this, among his other considerable Estates to his kinsman

William Mildmay, Esq; now Sir William Mildmay Bart. of Moulsham-hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 2.] This is the only part of the ancient Lords Fitz-Walters Estates, which he hath.

Mangax, alias Mangapp, is said to be the maner-house, where the Court is called, and adjourned thence to Burnham-Hall.

In the Court-rolls it is styled Burnham with Mangapp; and Burnham Canons [T].

The Royalty of the River, about 18 miles in length, and a mile over, belongs to Sir William Mildmay.

Under Robert Lord Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, Sir Thomas Barnard, or Baynard, held 3 parts of a fee in Burnham. And, besides that, at the time of his decease in 1344, he held of John Lord Fitz-Walter an inclosed marsh by the service of the sixth part of a knight's fee. — Joane his widow held the same marsh in 1349. — John Baynard was their son and heir (x). But what Baynard held is not a Maner.

The Maners of EASTWICK and WESTWICK belonged to the Priory of Dunmow, and were undoubtedly given to that House by the foundress Juga Baynard, or some of the Fitz-Walter family. By name they do not occur in Domesday-book, but are reasonably supposed to be what is entered there under the appellation of Weneswic [U]; and belonged to Geffrey de Magnaville. They are styled in records sometimes half a fee; and sometimes one fee and three quarters. For instance, In 1328 the Prior of Dunmow held half a fee in Burnham under Robert Fitz-Walter: and, in 1392, one fee, and 3 parts of a fee under Walter Fitz-Walter (y).

in Burnham and Etton 290 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, 24 of pasture, 119 s. 10 d. ob. rent; and in villenage as in wo. k. &c. to the value of 22 s. 4 d. Inquis. ann. incert. Hen. III.

After the dissolution K. Henry VIII. granted these Maners, in 1543, to Sir Richard Riche (z) [W]. At the time of his decease, in 1566, he held the maners of Westwick hall, Eastwick-hall, and Baynards and other lands and tenements in Burnham, of the Queen, in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. His grandson—Robert, Earl of Warwick, who dyed 24 March, 1618, held also the same (a). After the death of Charles Earl of Warwick in 1673, they came to one of his coheirs,

The Rt. Hon. Robert Earl of Manchester. Of his son—Charles, Earl of Manchester, the Maner was purchased by the Rt. Hon.

Benjamin Lord Fitz Walter. And the demesnes of Westwick, alias Coney-hall, by Mr. Skynner, of White Chapel, apothecary: and those of Eastwick by Platt Disbrow, of Downham Esq; They both belong now to Sir William Mildmay.

Here is another Maner, called

The Maner of Warners, alias Holywell, which belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Earl Tilney.

The Court is called under a tree. It was styled Hallywell-marsh, and Twyfelworth-marsh in Burnham, and granted to Sir Richard Riche, in 1539 being 600 acres (b).

Isaac-Martin Rebow Esq; Mr. Jeremiah Rowley; Jacob Hughs; John Gowlet, &c. have also some lands here.

The Town of Burnham is near the water; about a mile south from the Church.

In 1348, John Fitz-Walter had the grant of a Market at his maner of Burnham upon the Tuesday every week; as also one Fair yearly upon September 13, 14, 15, 16 (c). The Fairs now are April 25. and September 4.

17. SOUTH-MINSTER

lies north of Burnham, and South of Tillingham and Dengey: and, on account of the Church's situation with regard to these two last Parishes, may have received the name of South-Minster, i. e. South-Church. It is otherwise written Sudmanstra, and Sudmynster.

Before, and after the Conquest, this was the Bishop of London's land, or estate. Fifteen freemen held part of it under him. K. Cnute took away this Maner, but William the Bishop recovered it in the Conqueror's time [X].

Charities.

About Forty two pounds a year in charities are said to belong to this Town.

A Farm of 90 l. a year belongs to a free-school in Kent.

Hide-Croft, worth 10 s. a year, was given to some religious use; but not known what.

Daniel Williams, D. D. founder of the Library in Red-Cross-Street, London, gave by will, 26 June 1711, all his Houses in Burnham, to Robert Mecham Senr. for the use of the Presbyterian Meeting House.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, consists of a body tyled, and north and south aisles leaded. It had the loftiest Tower in this Hundred, with six Bells, but blown down in the great wind: It was a sea-mark. 'Tis since rebuilt, and hath only 5 Bells.

This Church was given, in 1155, by Walter, Fitz-Robert, son of Richard Fitz-Richard, and grandson of Richard Fitz-Gilbert, to the Priory of Dunmow. A Vicarage was erected before the year 1243, for then its rights were confirmed by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's (d).

At the Dissolution, the Rectory; and Advowson, of the Vicarage, which had been in the Priory, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1536, to Robert Ratcliffe Earl of Suffex (e). So that they returned to the same family from whence they originally came out.

They now belong to Sir William Mildmay, Bart.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1674 l. 1 s. 0 d.

This Parish was divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The Maner of South-minster. 2. The Maner of Cage.

The Maner of SOUTH-MINSTER.

South-minster-hall stands a little way east south-east from the Church.

This lordship continued in the See of London, till 1550, when Dr. Nicolas Ridley, then Bishop, passed it to K. Edward VI. who granted it, 16 April the same year, with Lullingtons and Writtells, to Thomas Lord Darcy; and it was held by his son and grandson both of the name of Thomas (g) [X].

The latter Thomas Lord Darcy by license dated 3 May, 1585, sold the maner, of South Minster, and 200 messuages, 100 cottages, 100 tofts, one wind-mill, six dove-houses, 20 gardens, 4000 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 2000 of pasture, 500 of wood, 1000 of Moor, 4000 of marsh, 5*l.* rent, and a moiety of the Church, to Thomas Sutton Esq; (h) who settled them upon his rich and useful foundation of the Charter-house. The lease-hold rents of this Maner were then 92*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and the customary rents 38*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.* a year (i).

The Maner of CAGE.

Is derived from the Bishop's, and seems to have been what the fifteen Free-men held.

The mansion-house is near a mile west from the Church.

This maner was several years in the Fitz-Walter family. Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, held in the village of Suthminstre, of the Bishop of London, 100 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 15 of pasture, and 6*l.* rent of assize, paying the Bishop 18*s.* per ann. (k). This went in the Family of Fitz-Walter, down to the reign of K. Henry V. Namely in Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1375, and 1386. in—Walter, who dyed in 1407. in—Humfrey, &c. (l).

Next, Roger Darcy Esq; at the time of his decease, 3 September 1508, held the maner of Cage of the Bishop of London, as of his Castle of Stortford.—Thomas, his son and heir, was but two years old (m).

This Estate was next in the Harrys Family.

William Harrys, who had the maner of Cage [Z], dyed 21 September 1555, and was succeeded by his son—William Harrys Esq; (n). One of his sons,—Edward Harrys held it in 1574 (o). He married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Sir Francis Barrington; and to his second wife, Anne daughter of Henry Josceline, of Torell's hall, widow of Sir Robert I ee. By this last he had, Arthur, who dyed 1 June 1588, and Anne. By the first he had—Sir Francis Harrys, of Southminster, whose wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Sulyard of Flemynge in Runwell; and by her he had one daughter, married to . . . Laurence, M. D.

Sir John Leman, Kt. born at Sallingham in Norfolk, and Lord Mayor of London in 1616, was the next possessor of this estate. He held the maner of Cage, alias Cages, and 4 messuages, 4 gardens, 4 orchards, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 250 of pasture, 40 of wood, and 7*l.* rent, said to lye in this parish, Asheldham, Mayland, Althorn, Steple, Burnham and Dengy, of the Bishop of London, as above, by the yearly rent of 4*s.* and departing this life March 26, 1632, aged 88, was succeeded by his cousin and next heir—William Leman Gent. (p).—Mrs. Mary Leman, daughter of Mr. Robert Leman, citizen of London, was lady of this maner in 1635; the demefnes and quit-rents were then 80*l.* per ann.

About the beginning of this century, this estate was in Thomas Renda, Esq; of Wallingford-Castle, Representative in Parliament for that Burgh in 1700, 1701, 1702, 1708, 1710, and 1713. He had one daughter married to

Richard Bigge Esq; Representative also in Parliament for that Burgh in 1713. He lived at Bear-court in Pangborn in Berkshire; and left one daughter married to John Cottingham, of Wallingford Esq; who dyed 4 November 1745.

Mr. Robert Johnson, corn-factor in London, bought it soon after: He departing this life in 1749, it came to his son.

The RAY, a messuage and marsh in this parish, belonging to St. Osith, or some other Religious House, was granted, in 1539, by K. Henry VIII. to Thomas Lord Cromwell (q). On the 30th of January 1540, it was assigned by the same King to his forsaken Queen Anne of Cleve.

Ray-wic, part of it we suppose, belongs to the Charter-house. And Rays-bury to William Smith.

Other Estates here.

North-wic belongs to George Bramston Esq; Goulds, and South-bridges, East lands, and Burnt house lands,—to Mr. Matthias Huntley.

Sheepcote, owner unknown to me.

Mr. Ham Stacey; James Wilkins; Samuel Mullings; John Woer, &c. have also some lands here.

Plumborough-Marsh, is part of the endowment of Chelmsford-Free School. See in the other Volume, p 5]

Richard de Gravesend held it in 1304, of Nicolas de Wokingdon, by the service of one pound of Cummin (r).

Mr. Knowstub, Rector of Cockfield in Suffolk, sometime Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, gave an Annuity of 11*l.* per ann. out of lands, called Squires-lands, in Southminster and Steeple, 20*s.* to the College, and 10*l.* toward the Exhibition of two poor Scholars.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Leonard, is large, and both Church and Chancel leaded. The Chancel is new-built with brick. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church was given, by Richard de Beavis, or Belmeis, first of the name, Bishop of London, to the Abbey of St. Osith, by him founded. After this, Richard de Beavis, or worth 130*l.* a year. Inquis. 5 & 6 Ph. & Mar. nu. 31.

[Z] He had also in this parish 102 acres of pasture, called Sheepcote, and Lodge-lades; and 23 acres parcel of the maner of Rattiborough. Inquis. 1 Eliz.

Belmeis, his nephew, Bishop of London, in 1151, by advice of Theobald Archbishop of Canterbury, and other Bishops, and with consent of his Chapter, assigned this Church to the Treasurer of St. Paul's and his Successors (s), which was confirmed by K. Henry II. But Gilbert Foliot, Bishop of London, transferred it again to the Abbey of St. Osieth. A Vicarage was erected and endowed by William de Sancta Maria Bishop of London in 1219; the Advowson of which, together with the Rectory or great Tithes, continued in the said Convent till the suppression.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted the Rectory of Southmynster, and the Advowson of the Vicarage, to Sir Richard Riche (t). His son, — Robert Lord Riche alienated them, 2 September 1575, to Edward Heron Esq; and Francis Albany, Gent. (u). The 1st of January 1598, William Wiseman Esq; conveyed the Rectory, or Parsonage, and the Advowson of the Vicarage, to Thomas Sutton Esq; who settled them upon his foundation of the Charter-house.

Here are three Fairs, viz. 3 days before Easter, 9 days before Whitsunday, and September 29.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1224 l.

There are in it several Houses together, forming two streets.

18. A S H E L D H A M, lies north of Southminster. The name of it is otherwise written in records, Affeldham, Ashheldham, Ashelden, Asheden, Ashdon, Asheldon, Ashildham, Affildeham, Axildeham, Effeldeham, Hefildesham. It seems to have been taken from a person's name, and ham, habitation, or village.

No such name as Asheldham occurs in Domesday-book, and therefore I take it to have been what is there styled Acleta. It had belonged to Modinc, in Edward the Confessor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey was holden by Eudo Dapifer, and his under tenant Richard [A].

In this parish are three Maners. 1. The maner of Asheldham. 2. . . . that of New-hall. 3. Bodenyks maner.

The Maner of A S H E L D H A M.

Asheldham-hall, the mansion-house, stands a little way south-east from the Church.

We have no account of the possessors of this estate till the year 1332, when it was in the Family de Horkelesleigh, of Little Horkelesleigh, more particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 234. William de Horkelesleigh, who dyed in 1332, and Emma his wife, held the maner of Affeldham, and certain tenements in Wermedford, viz. 1 messuage, 90 acres of arable, 1 acr. of meadow, 6 of pasture, 24 of wood, and 40 s. rent, called le Woodhall, of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyley, by knight's service. His heir was his nephew

John de Roos (w), grandson of Robert de Roos and Alefia daughter and heir of Sir Robert Asheldham. [See in the other Volume, p. 234. 536.] Sir John de Roos dyed in 1373, and Alefia his wife in 1375 (x). He and Alefia his wife, besides their son John who dyed before them, had a daughter named Elene, which became heir to her nephew. She brought this estate in marriage to Sir Geoffrey de Brockhole; and departed this life in 1419, leaving two daughters coheirs, Joane, and Margery (y).

But, before that, this Estate was in the Bourchier Family. For Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, who dyed 18 May 1409, held the maner of Asheldham of the Countess of Hereford, as of the Honor of Mandeville, by the service of half a knight's fee. — Idonea, his widow, held the same at the time of her decease, 12 Septemb. 1410, of the King as of the Honor of Reiley (z). — Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two husbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart. She dyed 1 July 1433 (a). Then it came to — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Essex. He held it of the Bishop of London (b). From his grandson — Henry, Earl of Essex, it descended to — Anne, Marchioness of Northampton, wife of Sir William Parr, and only daughter of the last Henry. [See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.]

In 1571, Novemb. 25. Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Asheldham-hall, and Coots Marsh in Asheldham, to Walter Devereux, Viscount Hereford, heir at law to Anne Marchioness of Northampton (c). See above, p. 203.

Hester Conbam, widow, was lady of this maner in 1635.

It belonged lately to Mr. James Marrener, a stationer in Fenchurch-street, London. He dyed 1 March 1745-6. Before his death he sold this estate to George Wegg Esq; of Colchester.

The Maner of NEW-HALL, otherwise Brockhole's.

The mansion-house stands a little way east from the Church.

This belonged, as well as the former, to Sir Geoffrey de Brockhole; and descended to his two daughters and coheirs, Joane, and Margery.—Joane had three husbands, Philip Kedington, Thomas Aspoll, and Robert Armburgh, but no issue by any of them. She dyed in 1443, possessed of the maner of Newhall in Ashildham.

—Margery was married to John Sumpter, of Colchester, Gent. and had—John Sumpter, her son and heir. He held a moiety of the maner of Newhale in Ashildham, of the Honor of Reyley; and departed this life in 1425, many years before his aunt Joane, leaving Cristina, and Elen, his daughters and coheirs (d).

The next possessor upon record was Sir Ralph Warren, Lord Mayor of London in 1536, and one of the Sheriffs in 1528. He was grandson of William Warren, of Fering; and, besides this, had the maners of Low Leyton, Great Easton, Newport Pond, and Claybury, in this County. [See above, p. 7. 23. and in the other Volume, p. 434. 585.] He had two wives, Christian, and Joane (e). Departing this life 11 July 1553, he was succeeded by his son—Richard Warren, who, as well as his father held this maner of the King and Queen as of their Hundred of Densey, in free socage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 4d. Probably he had no issue; for, at his decease, 25 March 1597, he was succeeded by his sister Johanna's son, Oliver Cromwell, or Cromwell, of Huntingdon, Esq; (f).

The 20th of April 1598, he sold it, with Great Easton, to Henry Maynard Esq; created a knight 7 May 1603. [See in the other Volume, p. 431, 432.] At the time of his death 11 May 1610, he held this maner of John Lord Hunsdon, as of his Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of one knight's fee, and the seventh part of another, and homage, fealty, &c. (g). —Susanna, Lady Maynard, and her son, William Lord Maynard, 27 April 1621, conveyed this estate to

Sir Henry Mildmay, of Graces Kt. who dyed 9 October 1639. By his will, dated 8 May 1637, he gave this maner to his son—Henry Mildmay Esq; and the heirs male of his body. He built a good house here, in which he resided: and departed this life 13 December 1692, leaving four daughters coheirs. —Frances, the third daughter, wife of Christopher Fowler, had this estate. [See in the other Volume, p. 25.] She and her husband sold it about the year 1705.

It belongs now to George Wegg Esq;

BODENYKS,

another maner in this parish, was so styled from John Bodenyk, who had an estate here in 1399 (b). This was undoubtedly taken from one of the two others, upon the division between the heiresses of Brockhole.

In 1537, Sir Thomas Bedingfeild, son and heir of Edward, held in capite the maner of Bodnek, with appertenances, in Asheldon, alias Asheden. Thomas Bedingfeild, Cl. was his brother and heir (i).

Roger Higham Esq; who dyed 29 August 1557, held the maner of Bodnecke, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, worth 18l. —William was his son and heir. He held also 2 messuages, and 170 acres of arable, and 10 of marsh, called Forsters, lying in South-Fambridge, and Affingdon; and Jenkin Maldon (k). [See above, p. 330.]

Sir Peter Vanlore was owner of this estate in 1635.

Hester Conham, widow, had it afterwards. She had 2 daughters, one married to . . . Poore Esq; of the Inner Temple; the other to . . . White.

It belongs now to St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

A tenement here called Moynes was granted, in 1543, to John Wiseman, and his heirs (l). It belonged to the Abbey of Bilegh. See above, p. 334.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence, was given by Robert son of Godebold to the Priory at Little Horksley in this County (m). The great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained of which the Bishop of London reserved the Collation to himself, and it hath continued in his successors ever since.

The Rectory and great Tithes were given, upon the Suppression, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who are now the Impropriators.

In the Church are two Bells, or only one.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 415l.

These lands were divided afterwards into two Maners. The maner of Dengey. 2. . . . that of Bacons.

The Maner of D E N G E Y.

Dengey-hall stands near the west end of the Church.

Odo's estates being forfeited, [as is related at large, above, p. 196.] this, among the rest, became vested in the Crown.

When, and by what King, after the forfeiture, and to whom, this Estate was at first granted, doth not appear; but in K. Henry the 1st's time, Roger de Cramavill held two parts of a knight's fee in Danesie of the Honor of Peverell of London (n).—Henry de Cram'avile, most probably his son, had this lordship in 1284. He dyed in 1298, and held the maner of Danesey, and Advowson of the Church, in capite, by the service of one Serjeancy to the Castle of Dover, yearly payment of 10s. the ward of it, and suit at the King's Hundred Court at Danesey, from three weeks to three weeks: And thirty acres in the same vill, called Writhefland, of the Bishop of London, by the service of 4s. per ann.—Ela was his sister and heir (o).

But his widow, Joanna de Cram'avill, held a third part of it in dower, namely 30 acres of pasture and marsh, of Nicolas at More, till her decease in 1314 (p).

John de la Mare, who most probably married Ela aforesaid, dyed in 1313 possessed of the maner of Dengey, which he held of the King, in capite, by the service of paying for the ward of Dover-castle one mark every 20 weeks. He held also of this maner, lands in Bradwell called Pilton, by the service of 3s. a year (q). Elianor, most probably a mistake for Ela, wife of John de la Mare, held this maner of Danesey, with the member of Pilton, by the service aforesaid, at the time of her death in 1324. Her daughter

Florence, wife of Philip de Orby, was her next heir (r). She was afterwards remarried to Nicolas Fraunceys, and held the maner of Danesey of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Hagenet, by the service of ward at Dover-castle, till her decease in 1344.—Sir John de Orreby, her son by her first husband, was her heir. He held, jointly with his wife Margaret, this maner of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Dover: and, at the time of his decease in 1353, left John his son and heir, then 3 years old; who dyed young, or without issue; and a daughter named

Joanna. Margaret, her mother, dyed in 1369 (s). Joanna was married to Henry de Percy, senior, and had an only daughter

Mary, married to Sir John de Roos, of Ham-lake. She dying 25 August 1394, without issue, this estate came to John de la Mare, citizen of London, descended from William, brother of John de la Mare above-mentioned (t). But it seems the Crown had seized this estate upon the Rebellion of the Percies in 1403. For John of Lancaster, Duke of Bedford, third son of K. Henry IV. at the time of his decease, 14 September 1435, held the maner of Dange-hall, and a tenement called Dangebrigge, which the King his father had granted him in 1404, being lands forfeited by Henry de Percy for Rebellion (u).

By the presentations to the Living this maner appears to have been in the Woodvile family from 1445, to 1459.

This Estate was next in the family of Gate. Sir Geoffrey Gate, who dyed in 1477, held the maner of Dangehall, in Dange, or Dansey, and Bradwell, of the King, as of the Barony of Peverell, which was parcel of the Honor of the Castle of Dover, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. — William was his son and heir. He departed this life 28 September 1485, leaving—Geoffrey, his son, knighted afterwards (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 146. 454. 456.]

How it came again to the Crown, doth not appear. But K. Henry VII. founding the Hospital of the Savoy, in the Strand, London, endowed it with the maner of Dengey, and Advowson of the Church, and the Masters and Chaplains of the Hospital presented to the Living from 1504 to 1535.

The Hospital was suppressed by K. Edward VI. in 1551, and this maner granted by him, with other lordships in this County, first to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and afterwards, in 1553, to the Mayor and Commonalty of London. Qu. Mary restored it to the Savoy Hospital, 3 November 1556 (x). But it was suppressed again, and fell to the Crown.

Qu. Elizabeth granted it, 23 January 1560, to Thomas Fanshaw Esq; His Family have remained possessed of it ever since: namely the Rt. Hon. Thomas, and Charles, Viscounts Fanshaw, Simon Fanshaw Esq; &c. The Fanshaw Family are originally of Dronfield in Derbyshire, where many of them lye buried.

Out of this estate is paid 20l. a year to the Savoy. [See above, p. 4.] [C].

The Maner of B A C O N S.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north from the Church.

[C] Mr. Jekyll found this estate in Francis Witham, and in William, son of Francis; then in William Smith of Cressing-Temple, Esq; who, with Thomas Smith, presented to the Living in 1613: But the London Registry files them only farmers of the Maner. See Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 212.

This is the part that belonged to the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy [D].

Gilbert Bacon, from whom it took its name, was possessed of it in 1282, holding it most probably under the Abbey. That year he obtained a license from Henry de Crem'avile, lord of the capital maner, and patron of the Church, to build a free Chapel here. — Dunefrid Bacon, son of Gilbert, granted in 1302, this whole maner, with the Advowson, or Portion, of the tythes belonging thereto, to

Ralph Bygood. And, in 1378, Henry Folvill released to — Walter Bygood, the said maner, and the advowson of a certain Chantry there. Walter held, jointly with Isabell his wife, this maner; and the advowson of the Chantry, of the Abbot of Bileigh, by the service of 16 d. a year. He dyed in 1398. — William Bigod, was his son and heir. But we hear no more of him (y). Isabell his mother, widow of Walter aforesaid, was remarried to John Doreward, who kept a Court here 22 February 1399. She dyed in 1417, holding this maner of the Prior of Takele, by fealty, and service of 10 marks per annum. Her heirs were,

Catharine one of her daughters, then wife of Robert Hunt; and Isabella, daughter of another daughter of hers named Margaret (z).

Isabella, was married to Thomas Darell, or Dayrell, Gent. In the mean time, Richard Fox, who dyed in 1434, held the third part of this maner, by what right doth not appear, and left a daughter, named Anne. His widow Joane, remarried to John Hotoft, held this third part at the time of her decease in 1445 (a). [See in the other Volume, p. 192. 426.]

To return to Hunt and Darell. In 1441, the former covenanted, by indenture, with the latter not to alienate or discontinue the maner of Bacon, and the third part of the Advowson of a Free Chapel, or Prebend, in the Church of Dansey: And, in 1445, they, and their wives, demised this maner, excepting Bacons portion, to Richard Pinder.

In 1465, June 29, Simon Harevy, or Hareby, kept his first court here: As did Isabell his widow 21 September 1473. And in 1481, Richard Baxter enfeoffed Isabell Harvey, and others, in a moiety of this maner, with the Advowson of the Chapel, or Chantry. Isabell was remarried to Thomas Daniell, or Darrell, and, at the time of her decease, 20 February, 1489, held this maner of Bakons, with appertenances, in Danysey, of the King, in ca. by knight's service, then worth 20 l. a year. — Thomas Darrell, her son and heir, was 48 years old (b). He dyed 1 June 1491, holding this estate of the King, as above: But — Thomas his son and heir, held this maner, and Advowson of the Chapel or Chantry of the Prior of Takeletheth, as in right of his Priory. He dyed 1 June 1498, leaving, by Christian his wife, two daughters, Beatrice, seven years old, and Anastasia

two. — Christian, their mother, was remarried to Roger Bottyll Esq; who kept a Court here 2 April 1500. She dyed 17 April 1508 (c). Of her two daughters, who had for their guardian Thomas Jermyn Esq;

Beatrice was married to Robert Jermyn Esq; third son of the said Thomas Jermyn of Rushbrook Esq; and Anastasia to Francis Jermyn Esq; the second son of the same: But neither of them had any issue. Francis granted his right in this maner to his brother, Robert, and Martin Boulton, Gent. 21 January 1514. On the 14th of April 1551, Robert Jermyn, brother and executor of Francis then deceased, in pursuance of his will, enfeoffed his kinsman — Sir Ambrose Jermyn in a moiety of this maner. And, 26 June 1552, Martin Bolton conveyed by deed his right in this maner to the said Sir Ambrose; who kept a Court here 12 May 1559. His second son — Ambrose Jermyn Esq; kept his first Court here 2 September 1577. By license dated 2 September 1605 he alienated the maner of Bacons, with 12 messuages, to

Sir Thomas and Sir Henry Mildmay Kts. Sir Thomas, of Springfeild, at the time of his decease 15 December 1612, held this maner, and lands and tenements in Dansey alias Dangie, Southmynster, Asheldame, and Tyllingham, of the King, in capite, by knight's service. His grandson — Thomas, the son of his eldest son William, was his heir (d). But his second son — Sir Henry Mildmay, of Graces Kt. had this estate; and held Courts here 22 April 1617, and 22 September 1629. He dyed 9 October 1631. aged 61. His son — Henry Mildmay Esq; commonly called Col. Mildmay, had it after him, and departed this life 3 December 1692, in the 73d year of his age. [See in the other Volume, p. 25.] He left five daughters coheirs, Mary, Lucy, Elizabeth, Frances, and Catharine. Before his decease, in 1689, upon the marriage of Frances the fourth daughter with Christopher Fowler, of London, merchant, the said Henry Mildmay, and Mary his wife, and Mary and Frances, the daughters, conveyed this estate to Christopher Fowler: In 1705, he conveyed it to

John Walter, and his heirs. And Walter, in 1707, to

Thomas Foulerton Esq; of whom it was purchased in 1716 by Mr. George Wegg, and it now belongs to his son — George Wegg Esq;

George Wegg Esq; hath also Coote-farm in this parish, which he bought of Sir Francis-Haskyn-Styles Eyles.

Mr. James Cocket; Thomas Grove, &c. have likewise some lands here.

East-ware is a good farm in this parish, of 150 l. a year.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. James, is tyled as well as the Chancel. In a wooden frame, boarded and shingled, are 2 Bells.

BACONS PORTION.

We have seen above, that, in 1282, Gilbert Bacon obtained a license from Henry de Crem'ville to build a free Chapel here, called in writings by the several names of Free Chapel, Chantry, and Prebend. He endowed it with a portion of the tithes arising from his estate, namely from lies north of Dengey, along the Sea-coast. Part of the parish, especially about the Church, stands high, and the roads are good, as is also the water, a thing not common hereabouts.

The name seems to be derived from the two Saxon words, Tilung, the same as tilling, husbandry, and ham.

These lands Æthelbert King of Kent gave to the Church of St. Paul's in London, which he had founded [E]. There is not the least improbability in his having lands in Essex to give away; since according to Bede, 'that most potent King had extended his dominions as far as the great river Humber, by which the Southern Saxons were divided from the Northern [F]. And, indeed, the poor little Kingdom of Essex was too often swallowed up by its ambitious neighbours.

However, at the time of the Survey, the Church of St. Paul's held this maner [G], and it hath continued in it ever since.

Tillingham-hall is on the north side of the Church.

PAKKARDS is another Maner, of which the House stands in this parish, but the greater part of the demesnes are in Bradwell. William Felton, Gent. who dyed 23 December 1493, held this estate of the maner of East-hall in Bradwell.

—Edmund, his son, held the same in 1519, and was succeeded by his son—Edmund, who departed this life 16 September 1570, leaving —Thomas, his son and heir.

Bacons farm, Hide, Landwic, Sherle, Eastware, and Moyle; for which the Portionist was to do part of the duty in the mother Church. The Portionist hath sometimes received 10 l. a year; but by a Composition 16 April 1542, it was settled at 4 l. 8 s. a year; upon condition, that the Rector of Dengey should administer the Sacraments, and perform all ecclesiastical rites to the persons holding those lands (e). It is presentative and institutive, which is a great hardship for so small a thing. The lords of the maner of Bacons are patrons.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 916 l.

With it hath commonly gone a tenement named PERIE, sometimes styled a Maner.

William Haningfeild held it under the title of a Maner, in 1426, of the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls, London. The Felton family had it afterwards. And Sir Arthur, and Cranmer, Harris (g). [See above, p. 315. and in the other Volume, p. 36. 282. 323.]

TILLINGHAM-GRANGE is near two miles south-east from the Church, in the marshes. In 1553, Thomas Careston held the maner of Grange and Mowicke, with appertenances in Tillingham and Dengey, of the Queen immediately, in capite, by knight's service, worth 30 l. a year. He was burnt for heresy (b), i. e. for being a Protestant. . . . Mowick seems to have been what is now called Midlins, about half-way between this and the Church. They belonged to the Fanshaw family, and afterwards to Mr. Hollingsworth.

Merks, is a farm that belonged lately to Mr. Joseph Franklin.

The Corps of the Prebends of Reculverland, and Wildland, lye in this parish. The first about a quarter of a mile from the Church; the other full half a mile. They have Court lete and Court Baron.—Two estates of 40 l. a year belong to that of Reculverland; And estates of 18 l. 14 l. 12 l. and 8 l. per ann. to the other.

The Corps of Eldland was also in this parish, if not lost.

will dated 14 March 1652, ordered an Alms-house for four dwellers to be built in this parish, each of them to be single, and to receive 5l. a year. Lands tyed for the payment of it, are Midlins, 80l. Samsoms, 20l. Whotts marsh 20l. and in Fryerning 30l. a year. The feoffees are, the Vicar, who hath two votes, and eleven others, officers and chief inhabitants of this parish. The Almshouses stand behind the Hall-yard. He also gave to the Poor a bullock worth 5l. at Chrismas, and another at Easter.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of one pace with the Chancel, and neat. It had a south aisle, which being decayed occasioned the rebuilding of the Church, in 1708, by a pound rate on the inhabitants. 'Tis handsomly pewed, and hath a gallery at the west end. In a strong stone Tower are 5 Bells.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, are appropriated to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who are Ordinaries of this place it being of their peculiar jurisdiction, and also Patrons of the Vicarage.

Dr. William Clark, Dean of Winchester, and Vicar of Stepney, who had a Lease from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, of Tillingham-hall with the demesne lands, and of the great Tythes, and the marshes called Hellwick, Middlewick, and Weatherwick, by his will, dated 22 April 1679, devised the clear profits of that Estate for Augmenting Ten small Vicarages, or other Ecclesiastical benefices with cure; to pay unto the Incumbents of each of them thirty pounds a year; and the Augmentations to be in such parishes where the Improvements are in the hands of lay-men, and if it may be in market towns, or populous parishes. The Benefices he himself named, were, the Vicarage of Buckingham, the Rectory of the Abbey Church of St. Albans, some convenient Church in Maldon, and Stony-Stratford in Buckinghamshire. Dedham, and Hatfield Regis, have been since added by the trustees, and some other Churches. But by the Lessors having much raised their fine, and through other losses, the rents are much sunk.

Sir William Mauduit, for himself and Amabil his wife, and for his heirs and the souls of all his ancestors, gave four acres of land in Westfeild in this parish to the Church of St. Paul; and Geoffrey de Luci, then Dean, and the Chapter, granted him leave, considering the difficulty of access to the parish Church in the winter time, to build a Chapel in his Court of Colverhyde, for his own use, under such conditions as private Chapels are wont to be built (i).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1261l. 2s. 0d.

Here are two Fairs, on Whitfun Tuesday, and Septemb. 16.

21. ST. LAURENCE, is west of Tillingham, having on the north Maldon-river, or Blackwater-bay.

The dedication of the Church to St. Laurence gave name to this parish.

It doth not occur by that name in Domesday-book, but only under the general one of Niue-land; divided afterwards into West Newland, and East Newland.

The Priory of the Holy Trinity, or Christ's Church, in Canterbury, held West New-land before and after the Conquest. Ingwar was possessed of East Newland, in Edward the Confessor's reign, and Ralph brother of Ilger held it at the time of the Survey.

These were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of St. Laurence-hall. 2. The maner of West Newland. 3. . . . that of East Newland.

The Maner of ST. LAURENCE.

St. Laurence-hall stands on the south side of the Church.

The ancientest owners upon record of lands in St. Laurence, as a Maner, were Robert Fitz-Walter, William Gernon, and the heirs of Tollethunt-Tregoz. For Roger Baynard, who dyed in 1295, held in St. Laurence, of Robert Fitz-Walter, 30 acres of arable, by the rent of 2 s.

8d. and 13s. 4d. rent of assise; and of William Gernoun, 30 acres; and of the heirs of Tollethunt Tregoz, 60 acres of arable, and 1 marsh. His nephew—Thomas Baynard was his heir (k). —Joane, widow of Thomas, held of John Fitz-Walter, by knight's service, the reversion of the maner of St. Laurence, which Roger Baynard, and Alice his sister, enjoyed for their lives (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 176.]

The next possessor upon record was Sir John Shaa, Lord Mayor of London in 1501. At the time of his decease, in December 1502, he held the maner of St. Lawrence-hall, with appertinances, and 2 messuages, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 30 of marsh, and 13s. 4d. rent, in St. Lawrence-hall, and Bradwell, which had been Thomas Baynard's and Thomasine's his wife, of the Priory of Bicknacre, by fealty, and yearly rent of 3s. 4d.—Edmund, or Edward, his son and successor, held also the same: and dying 24 March 1532, left

Alice, his only daughter and heir (m). [See above, p. 88. 217. 305. 318. and in the other Volume, p. 484. 488.]

Richard Weston, one of the Justices of the King's Bench, who dyed 6 July 1572, held this maner of St. Laurence-hall.—Sir Jerom was his son and heir, but it doth not appear he had this estate at the time of his decease, in 1603 (n). [See in the other Volume, p. 71.]

Sir Robert Clarke, had it in 1606, and—Robert was his son and successor (o). [See in the other Volume, p. 453. 459.]

Sir John Leman, Kt. mentioned above under Southminster, held, in 1632, this maner and capital messuage of St. Lawrence-hall, alias Baynards, in St. Lawrence and Bradwell, of the heirs of Robert Earl of Suffex, as of his maner of Burnham, by fealty and rent of 1 s: and lands and marshes called Robimans, of the maner of Bradwell, by the yearly rent of 5 s. — William Leman, Gent. was his son and heir (p).

Through whose hands it since passed we do not find till it came to Theodosius-Joseph Mason, Esq; who had it in 1745.

The Maner of WEST-NEWLAND-HALL belonged, before and after the Conquest, to the Priory of the Holy Trinity, or Christ's-Church in Canterbury [H].

A family furnamed de Tillebury held it under the Priory. For Robert Ledett, who dyed in 1276, held 60 acres of land in the vill of St. Laurence, of Richard de Tilbery, by the yearly payment of 10 s. under the name of socage, in lieu of all services.—Wichard was his son and heir (q).

It was afterwards in the Crown, and settled by K. Edward III. upon his Abishag, Alice Perrers. For it was found in 1377, that she received the issues and profits of two parts of this maner of West-Newland in St. Laurence and Steple, which William Aucy, cousin and next heir of Robert de Havering, granted to Clement Spice after the death of Lora wife of Sir John de Havering; since which grant the said William Aucy and two women pretended to be the next coheirs of the foresaid Robert de Havering, for two parts, and after the death of Lora for the third part (r).

Sir William de Wyndesore, who had married Alice Perrers (s), alienated before his decease 2 parts of the maner of West-Newland, with the reversion of the 3d part after the death of Lora aforesaid, to William Beauchamp, Hugh Segrave, and William Cofyngton, Kts. William Cary, and others; which two parts, and reversion, were granted to him by the King. This maner was holden of the Prior of Christ's-Church in Canterbury, by the service of 20 s. a year to their maner of Hallyng; of the Earl of Hereford, by the service of 2 s. and of the Earl of Norfolk, by the service of 14 d. per annum. Cristina, wife of Sir William Morers; Margery, wife of John Duket; and Isabella, were his sisters and coheirs (t).

Robert Rochester held, in 1508, this maner of West-Newland of the Earl of Essex, as of his maner of Hathingdon-hall: and was succeeded by his son and heir—William Rochester, who held five parts of the same of Sir Richard Riche, as of his maner of Lawling-hall, by fealty, suit of court, and rent of 20 s. And the sixth part of Thomas Newman, as of his maner of Quendon-hall by the rent of 4 s. per ann. He dyed 31 August 1558, leaving — John his son and heir (u). [See more concerning this family in the other Volume, p. 127.]

William Austen Esq; at the time of his decease 16 January 1633, held the maner of West-Newland of Robert Earl of Warwick, as above.

A moiety of this maner was in the Rev. Benjamin Slocock, M. A. one of the Chaplains of St. Saviour's Southwark. . . . John Hill, and his wife being possessed of the other moiety of this maner of Newlands, otherwife West-Newlands, or Upper and Lower West-Newlands, they conveyed the same by fine, in Easter-term 1744, to Mr. Slocock.

The Maner of EAST NEWLAND.

This is what belonged to Inguar in Edward the Confessor's reign; and to Ranulf brother of Ilger, and his under-tenant William, at the time of the Survey [I].

St. John's Abbey in Colchester had it afterwards, but of whose gift doth not appear (w).

After the suppression it was granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell. Upon whose attainder it reverting to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1541, to

George Cely, and his heirs: to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. The same year, he had license to alienate it to John Coker (x).—John Coker junr. dyed 30 March 1551, possessed of this maner, messuage, tenement, or farm, leaving—Robert Coker his brother and heir 24 years old (y).

Ralph Breeder, alias Browninge, held the same at the time of his decease 2 March 1608-9.—Richard Browninge senr. aged 56 years was his brother and heir (z).

In Trinity term 1745, Antony Dean, of Harwich Gent. passed by fine the maner of East Newland, and 200 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, and 200 of pasture to John Nicholson, Gent. And, in 1750, Antony Dean sold this maner to Arthur Dabbs, of Hatfield-Peverell, Gent. who dyed 5 February 1750-1, having bequeathed by will this estate to Samuel Trewe Gent.

A tenement called Gaynes, in this parish and Asheldham, was granted in 1543 to John Wiseman, and his heirs (a).

is the north-east part of this Hundred, bounded on the east by the German Ocean, and on the north by Blackwater-bay, or Fluvius Iadumarius.

Whether there was here a Broad Well from whence it might take its name, I cannot learn: Or, whether it took it from the Saxon words Brað Wall, broad-wall; which is most probable. For 'on this shore, as Mr. Camden observes, the country people are hard put to it with great Banks and Walls of mud to keep the sea out of their fields.'

In order to distinguish it from Bradwell near Coggeshall, it hath the addition of juxta Mare, and juxta Tillingham, near the Sea, and Tillingham.

We do not meet with the name of this Parish in Domesday-book, under this Hundred, but have Effecestre; formed from Eth or Effe, a contraction from the word Othona, with the addition of Cestre, which the Saxons generally affixed to places, where there had been Roman Castra, camps, or stations. For, that here stood Othona, we have the authority of the best Historians, particularly of Mr. Camden. 'Higher up [than Tillingham] toward the northern shore, stood once a flourishing city, called by our ancestors Ithancester. For thus Bede, and Ralph Niger monk of Coggeshall, tell us.' "Cedd built Churches in several places, ordaining priests and deacons, to assist him in the word of faith and ministry of baptizing; especially in the city which in the language of the Saxons is called Ithancestir (c): which stood upon the bank of the river Pant, that runs near Maldon in the Province of Dengy; but that city hath since been swallowed up in the river Pant." I cannot, adds Mr. Camden, exactly point out the place; but that the river Froshwell was heretofore called Pant, I am pretty confident, because one of its springs still keeps the name of Pant's-Well, and the Monk of Coggeshall speaking of it uses the same appellation. Some think this Ithancester to have been seated in the utmost point of Dengy-Hundred, where stands at present St. Peter's on the Wall. I am inclined to believe, that this Ithancester was the same as Othona, the Station of the Band of the Fortenses with their Provost, in the declension of the Roman Empire; who were placed here under the Count of the Saxon shore, to secure the Coast against the pirating Saxons. For Othona might very easily pass into Ithana; and the situation in a creek at the mouth of several rivers, was very convenient for such a design (d). Philemon Holland informs us, that here were the remains of a huge ruin of a thick wall, near which many Roman Coins had been found.

(b). The Monks got the Rectory appropriated to themselves, and a Vicarage ordained; but in 1438 the appropriation was dissolved, and the Church again made a Rectory. The Advowson remained in the Abbot and Convent till their dissolution, when it came to the Crown, in which it hath continued ever since.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 614l.

Upon these good grounds therefore taking this to be Effecestre, I shall observe, that it belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to two freemen, Turchill, and Ingulf: At the time of the Survey, the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy had one part; and Hugh de Montfort, and his under-tenant Ulmar, the other part [K].

In this parish are the following Maners. 1. The maner of Bradwell, with Pilton-fee. 2. . . . that of Battails. 3. The maner of Doun-hall. 4. East-hall.

The Maner of BRADWELL.

Bradwell-hall, the mansion house, lyes near the Brook of Tillingham; a mile and a half south-west from the Church.

The part which was Hugh de Montfort's being afterwards in the Crown, K. Henry II. granted it to his brother William, who gave it to Thomas Bardulfe, to hold by the service of one knight's fee: and Thomas gave three parts of it in marriage with his three Daughters, married—to Robert de St. Remy—to William Bacon—and—to Baldwin de Thony.

The said Thomas retained half of this fee, viz. the fourth part which Baldwin de Thony and Thomas de Borfore held, and a fourth part which Simon Cook held in this village: And when the Normans lost their lands in England in K. John's reign, the King gave the two parts of Robert de St. Remy, and of William Bacon, to Thomas Fitz-Barnard. [See in the other Volume, p. 179.]

Thomas Bardolf left the Advowson of this Church, with the fourth part of the Lordship to Doun Bardolf his son, who married Beatrice, daughter and heir to William Warren Baron of Wormgay in Norfolk (e), with whom that Lordship came to him.—Agnes, wife of Thomas Bardolf, who dyed in 1357, had in dower two knights fees, in Bradwell, which Joane wife of John Orreby held under her; and also the advowson of the Church, worth 40 marks per annum. (f). — William Bardolf held in Bradwell one knight's fee, and the advowson of the Church; and 13s. rent, with other parcels (g). The succession of this noble Family of Bardolf, which had summons to Parliament from the 22 of Edward I. to the 5th of Henry IV. (h) was as follows. Thomas Bardolf. — Doun Bardolf, who dyed in 1276. — William. — Hugh, departed this life in 1304. — Thomas in 1329. — John 3 August 1371. — William in 1384. Thomas. This last joining in a conspiracy against K. Henry IV. and being wounded at Haselwood in Yorkshire, dyed of his wounds in 1403, and being attainted, his lands were confiscated. He left two daughters, Anne, married to Sir William Clifford; and Joane, to William Phelip Esq; For a more particular account see Dugdale's Baronage (i).

Under the Bardolf family the following persons held part, or the whole, of this estate.

John de la Mare held, in 1313, the maner of Bradewell, by the service of half a knight's fee [L]. — Elienor, his widow, held the same in 1324. So did — Florence, their daughter, wife of Philip de Orby in 1344 (k). And their son — Sir John de Orreby in 1353. As also Margaret his widow — Joane their only surviving child was married to Henry Percy, and had by him an only child, — Mary, a little more than a year old, at the time of her grandmother Margaret's decease (l).

During her minority K. Edward III. granted this maner to Alice Perrers (m).

Mary de Percy was married to Sir John Roos of Hamlake, and held this maner; but dyed 25 August 1394, without issue (n).

Thomas Lord Bardolf being attainted, as above said, and his lands forfeited, K. Henry IV. in 1404, gave this to his third son, John, Duke of Bedford (o). He dyed 14 September 1435, possessed of this maner of Bradwell, and one tenement in Hockley and Pelitun; and also of one tenement called Bardolf's fee, and the Advowson of the Church (p). As he dyed without issue, this estate reverted to the Crown.

In 1485, K. Henry VII. assigned this maner, among many others [M], to Qu. Elizabeth, widow of K. Edward IV. during her life. And in 1504, leased it to William Wyatt, for 40 years, at the rent of 75 l. (q).

K. Henry VIII. in 1539, granted it to his cast off Queen Anne of Cleve. And, 15 April 1558, Queen Mary annexed it to the Dutchy of Lancaster (r).

The 12th of November 1604, K. James I. granted it to Walter Mildmay, to hold of the maner of Enfield, by fealty, in free socage. Not long after, he sold it to Thomas White D. D. who held his first Court here 9 July 1609, and settled it, with Pilton fee, in the manner we shall shew presently.

This Pilton-fee was formerly distinct, but is now part of the Maner of Bradwell. In 1286, William de Montchensi held the maner of Pilton of Henry de Cram'ayle, by the yearly rent of 3 s. and suit at the Court of Danesey (s).

John de la Mare, above-mentioned, held lands and tenements in Pilton, in Bradwell, of the maner of Dangey, by the service of 3 s. per ann. And lands and tenements in Pylton and Hockele, of Thomas Bardolf; and lands of John Cook, by the service of 9 s. a year. — Elienor, his widow, held the same. And their daughter, Florence, wife first of Philip de Orby, and afterwards of Nicolas Fraunceys, held the tenement called Pilton, in which were 40 acres of arable, and 20 of marsh: and the tenement called Hockleye, containing the same quantity of land (t). — Sir John de Orreby, their son, held in 1353, this estate, of John Cooke senr. by the service of 9 s. being then styled 3 messuages, 120 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 200 of marsh, and 40s. rent (u).

Alice Perrers had it with the maner of Bradwell; and the maners of Hockele, Pilton, and Daneseye, which were parcel of the maner of Bradewell, contained 2 messuages, 260 acres of arable, 260 of marsh, and 28s. rent (w). After this it went with Bradwell-hall, and John Duke of Bedford held them together.

These estates were given by Dr. White to the City of Bristol, where he was born, for an Alms-house; and to Sion College, of which he was founder: He dyed 1 March 1623-4. Besides 3000 l. to purchase and build the College, he gave 160 l. per ann. for maintenance of the

The Steward goes to Bradwell-street named Pilton-fee, and calls the Court there, and then adjourns it to Bradwell-hall. The quit-rents of both are 23*l.* a year.

The Maner of BATTAILS, was so named from an owner.

Emeric Battaile, who dyed in 1252, held of the King, in capite, 68 acres of arable in Bradewell, and 1 messuage, pasture for 50 sheep, rent of assize from the free-tenants 23*s.* 3*d.* ob. the work of two villanes; 8 acres of the King's fee, 100 days work: all which he held by the service of one knight's fee, payment of 10*s.* to the ward of Dover-castle, and suit at the Court of Hagle.—Saer, his son and heir, was 10 years old. At the time of his decease, in 1292, he held, in this parish, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Haule, 20 acres of marsh, 18*s.* 10*d.* rent of assize, and view of frank-pledge, by the same services as his father: and a wind-mill, of Richard de Danesey. This maner was then worth 78*s.* 6*d.* ob. per ann.—Edmund was his son (x). But, in 1298, Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Battail, and wife of Peter de Taleworthe, had this estate in purparty. Edmund dyed in 1333, possessed of a capital messuage, 20 acres of arable, 40 of salt marsh, and 10*s.* rent of assize, holden of the King, as of the Honor of Hawle, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. His sister—Margaret was his heir (y). [See more concerning this family, above, p. 175. 346. and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Antony Higham Esq; held the maner of Battells, with appertenances in Bradewell, and 220 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and marsh, and 42*s.* rent of assize; at first of Queen Catharine of Arragon, as of the maner of Okeley, and afterwards of the King, in capite, by socage, and 5*s.* yearly rent for frank-pledge payable to the Sheriff: and 20 acres, and 5*s.* rent, with half a pound of wax, of the King, in ca. as of his Honor of Hawkeley, by the 4th part of a knight's fee, and suit at the said Honor. He dyed 15 November 1540, leaving—Robert, his son and heir (z). [See above, p. 362.]

Stephen Brooke, at the time of his decease 20 January 1581, held the maner or messuage called Battells, and Hide-hill, in Bradwell, of the Queen, in ca. by the 100th part of a knight's fee. His two daughters, Sarah, 7 years old, and Elizabeth 6, were his coheirs (a).

Henry Carter, who departed this life 27 March 1629, held this maner of Battell, with appertenances, and 40 acres of land called Hidehill; and Keyhaven-marsh, and Keyhaven-creek, of the King, in capite: and of the Warden and Fellows of New College, as of their maner of East-hall, these lands, and marshes fresh and salt, Helgate-marsh, Smithes-marsh, Skinners-marsh, and Dunnyngs marsh, all lying in Bradwell, Dengey, and Tillingham.—Henry Carter, his son and heir, was upwards of 20 years old (b).

It belongs, or lately belonged, to Theodosius-Joseph Mason Esq;

The Maner of DOUNHALL.

The mansion house stands about half a mile north from the Church.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Modinc, and three freemen, were owners of this estate: At the Survey, it was held by Eudo Dapifer and his under-tenant Richard, and by Ralph Peverell [N].

Henry de Tipetot held in Bradewell, in the reign of K. Henry III. 30 acres of pasture, a water-mill, and 40*s.* rent, by the service of carrying one lance in the King's Army (c).

John de la Dune, who took his name from this place, held, in 1254, four pounds rent in this vill of Bradewell, by the serjeancy of carrying one gleyve [gladium] or sword, in the King's army. And, in 1284,—Thomas de la Donne, most probably his son, held a tenement in Bradewell, worth 6 marks a year, by the serjeancy of finding one lance for the King, whenever he should happen to go with an army into Wales (d). At the time of his decease, in 1306, he held, in this parish, a capital messuage, 126 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 2 parts of a marsh, and 8*s.* rent, of the King, in ca. by the service of one lance in his wars, and 12*d.* rent to the Hundred of Danesey. And of John de la Mare, 40 acres of arable, 2 parts of a marsh, and 3*s.* rent, by the service of 13*s.* 4*d.* per ann. And 30 acres of Thomas Baynard, by the rent of 4*s.* 8*d.* a year. And of John Cook, 3 acres, and 2*s.* ob. rent by the service of 8*d.*—Margaret at Donne, his daughter, held 102 acres of arable, and the rest, much as her father: and dying in 1343, was succeeded by her daughter—Joane, wife of John le Cock (e).—Edward de Donne held here in fee-tail 1 messuage, a water-mill, 100 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 2 of pasture, 40 of outer marsh, one fleet, and 10*s.* 4*d.* rent, of the King in ca. by the third part of a knight's fee, and one lance of the price of 2*s.* whenever the King went to the wars in Wales for the defence of England only: also in fee tail, view of frank-pledge on Decemb. 21, by the service of 12*d.* yearly, payable to the Sheriff: and he held of Joanna de Swynburne, 1 messuage, called Tannyes, 100 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 200 of outer marsh, 1 of wood, 5 old fleets, and 12*d.* rent, by socage, and tealty: and of Henry de Percy, 1 messuage, 60 acres of arable, 1 of pasture, 30 of outer marsh, William, his son and heir, held also this estate (g).

John Rainesford had it in 1502, and obtained license, 8 February that year, to alienate it to

Thomas Christmas.—John Christmas sold it, 28 January 1551, to—George Christmas. He

John, his son and heir (h), 7 September 1580, alienated the maner of Downehall, and 2 messuages, 2 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 20 of wood, 300 of marsh, and 30 s. rent to

Michael Herde, of this parish. Of him it was purchased by Benjamin Hoare, Esq; who sold it again to Clark Esq; of London.

EAST-HALL

is another Maner in this parish, the mansion house of which lies above a mile north-east from the Church.

It belongs to New College in Oxford. In 1627, Sir Edward Pincheon held of this maner lands and marshes called Helgats, Dunnyngs, Smythes alias Skinners, and Blayvers (l).

Margaret Baroun had, in 1339, a messuage and some lands here. [See above, p. 347.]

Brocksey-sands, were formerly Brocksey-Park, or Marsh; above 3 miles from Bradwell-hall, nearer Tillingham to the South-east, parted from Tillingham by a Channel of three fathoms water, about half a mile over. 'Tis the same I presume, which Sir John de la Mare had licence to enclose. He granted leave to the Prior of St. Valery, in 1308, to have a way through it, to their marsh, called Gurmonds, for cattle, when the height of the tide hindered their passage. This Brocksey seems named from the Brook rising near St. Laurence's, into which the sea flowed.

The Abbey of Bilegh had a marsh here, called Coleward. Here were Tythes belonging to Bacon's Portion in Dengy. The Prior of Hatfield-Peverell received the Tythes of Roger de Hakeney in this Parish, worth 40 s. per ann.

Mr. George Malden; Charles Elliot; William Batt; James Gilder; William Smith; Joseph May, &c. have also some lands here.

There is a tradition at Bradwell, that formerly a man might go from thence on horses heads to Mersey, where now a man of war may ride. This will meet with little credit from him that reads the History of the Danish Invasions, and Edward the Elder's lying at Maldon to oppose their landing.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Thomas, was new-built in 1706. Both Church and Chancel are tyled. The Steeple, which is of stone, hath a high Spire shingled, and in it are 8 Bells.

This large Rectory was at first appendent to the Maner of Bradwell-hall; and, as such, in the gift of the noble Family of Bardolf, and of their successors, lords of that maner, till the forfeiture of Thomas Lord Bardolf in 1403. It then came to the Crown, and continued in it till 1555, when William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke presented. Sir Edward Pinchon presented in 1611, and Francis Lord Newport, and Jerom Earl of Portland in 1662. Since that it hath passed through various hands, and been sold over and over again [O].

This Living hath a glebe of 184 acres.

On that spot, which is now the north-east point of this Hundred, stood a Chapel, anciently called Capella de la Val, or St. Peter ad Murum. This was dependent on Bradwell, and a Chapel of ease to it, whose Rector did find a Priest to officiate in it on Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. A Jury found, in 1442, that it had a Chancel, Nave, and small Tower with two Bells; that it was burnt, and the Chancel was repaired by the Rector, and the Nave by the Parishioners: When it was founded, and by whom, they knew not. It is now in ruins.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1792 l.

H U N D R E D
O F
T H U R S T A B L E,

IS bounded on the South by the River Pant, and Maldon-river or Blackwater-bay; on the West and North-west by Witham Hundred; on the rest of the North by that of Lexden; and on the East by the Hundred of Winfree.

In its greatest length from west to east it is about eleven miles; and from north to south where broadest about six miles.

The name seems to be formed from Dop, Thor, a Saxon deity, and stale, explained above under Barstable, p. 190 [2]. In records it is written sometimes Turestapla.

This Hundred is in the disposal of the High Sheriff for the time being, who puts in and out what Bailiffs he pleases.

With regard to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, it is in the Archdeaconry of Colchester.

At the time of the Survey, the King was possessed of this Hundred, and had in it four Salt-works in the custody of the Sheriff; and 3 men that held 10 acres [R].

In this Hundred are ten Parishes, which I treat of in the following order:

Heybridge.	Goldanger.
Langford.	Tollethunt-Beckingham.
Wickham-Bishops.	Tollethunt Knights.
Totbam-Great.	Tollethunt Darcy.
. . . Little.	Tollebury.

These Parishes have right of Commonage upon Tiptree-heath. See in the other Volume, p. 141.

I. H E Y B R I D G E

lies at the South-west corner of this Hundred, on the north side of the river Pant or Blackwater, opposite to Maldon. It is otherwise written in records Haybridge, Hebregg, Hebrugge, and Heybrug.

The ancient name of this place was Tidwaldinton, Tidwalditune, Tidwoldenton, Tidwoldinton, or Tidwolditune, undoubtedly from a Saxon owner called Tidwold, and tun; and was used in records till the reign of K. Edward I. The present name seems to have been taken from the High-Bridge here; consisting of five arches, and which seems to be very old. In records it is sometimes called Wall-Bridge; and it is reasonably supposed, that the main stream, now running under the new Bridge called Fulbridge, had its course under this High-bridge, or else there would not have been occasion for so many arches.

Tidwalditune was one of the 13 lordships wherewith K. Athelstan endowed the Cathedral Church of St. Paul (s): whereof five were in this County [S].

It was possessed of it at the time of the general Survey [T], and hath been so ever since.

This was one of the Maners belonging to the Canons of St. Paul, to which this immunity was granted, That no purveyor of the King should take any corn within their precincts (t).

There were formerly many Houses in this parish, now down; nay it is said that there were some all along Potley, or Potman, marsh.

The Causeway between Maldon and this place must have been raised at a very great expence: and was worthy of the care of K. Edward II. who ordered, in 1324, a Survey of it to be taken (u).

[R] Willelmus Rex habet iv salinas in isto Hundredo, quas custodivit Vicecomes, & iii homines de x acris; Et val' xx denarios. Lib. Domeſd. There were at this time several Salt-pits, or works, in this Hundred; which is remarkable.

[S] Namely this; Belcham, and Wickham, St. Paul's; Runwell; and Edulfesneſe, or Walton. The words of his Charter were, . . . 'Et octo manſas apud Tidwalditune.'

There is only one MANER in this parish; and Heybridge-hall stands about half a mile south south east from the Church. This Maner hath been all along held by lease under the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and longest by the family of Fresh-water, originally come from Tollesbury.

Richard Freshwater of Heybridge-hall Esq; who dyed 11 October 1617; by Bridget his wife one of the daughters of John Brand of Boxford, had four sons, John, Richard, Thomas, and Edward; and three daughters, Frances, Bridget, and Mary. — John, the eldest son, married Elizabeth, one of the daughters of John Wiseman, of Stisted-hall Esq; by whom he had Richard, John, Thomas, Isaac, and Edward; and three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, and Clemence. He departed this life 7 October 1657, aged 56, years; and his wife 25 February 1681, in the 87th year of her age. John, Thomas, and Isaac, dyed unmarried. — Richard, the eldest son, by Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of John Studley of Denton in Wiltshire, had Elizabeth, and Mary [U].

Elizabeth was married, first, to William Ayler, of Great Totham, who dyed in 1749, having had by her, William; Thomas; who departed this life 8 February, 1736; and Elizabeth, wife of . . . Savage. The said Elizabeth had to her second husband, Edmund Percivall, of Lincoln's-inn Esq; and dyed 28 December 1690, aged 32.

Robert Hay,

2. LANGFORD.

This parish lies along the side of the river Pant or Blackwater, and the Long Ford here is what occasioned the name. Lang in Saxon is the same as Long. It is otherwise written in records Langeford.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Gola and Agelmar were the possessors of this Estate; At the time of the Survey, it was held by Ralph Baignard, or Baynard [W].

Here is only one MANER.

Langford-hall stands a little way north from the Church.

William Baynard, grandson of Ralph, forfeiting his Barony and lands for joining in a conspiracy against K. Henry I. as is more fully related above, p. 338. . . . and in the other Volume, p. 427, that King gave this Maner to Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, ancestor of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

Edmund Percivall having in her right the Lease of this estate, took to his second wife Anne Fitz-James, widow, whose maiden name was Hering. She enjoyed this estate many years, and bequeathed it to her nephew, the Rev.

Julius Hering, of Clatford, near Marlborough, in Wiltshire; who enjoys Heybridge-hall, and the demesne lands, by Lease from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

Fifty two shillings a year are payable to poor Widows of this parish, out of an estate called Longs and Londons, lying in Great and Little Totham, and Goldangre. See under Great Totham. The like sum is paid to poor Widows of St. Botolph's and St. Giles's Colchester. See The History of that town, p. 167.

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Steeple is fallen, or taken down. This Church lyes on the Strand, over against Maldon, the Sea at high tides coming up to the Church-yard.

It was founded and dedicated between the years 1160 and 1181.

This Church is of the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; who are lords of the maner, Ordinaries of the place, proprietors of the Rectory or great Tithes, and patrons of the Vicarage.

A Vicarage was here ordained and endowed by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's 15 August 1243 (w).

In this Church was formerly a Chantry, in the patronage of the Bishops of London.

is the present Vicar.

Geffrey de Ambli had it in the reign of K. Henry II.

Afterwards it was in the Family of Preyers of Sible-Hedingham, and by the marriage of Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas de Preyers, to

Robert de Bourchier, Lord Chancellor, came into that noble Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 253. 285.] Sir John de Preyers, settled it by fine, in 1320, upon John de Bouffer senior, and his heirs: but Preyers was to receive 40l. a year during his life (x). — Robert Lord Burghcher, at the time of his decease, in 1349, held the maner of Langford, with the Advowson of the Church, of Oliver de Bohun, as of his maner of Norton, by the service of 4s. 2d. a year (y). His son — John, Lord Bourchier, had also the same, and dying 21 May 1400 was succeeded by his son — Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, who held one moiety of this maner of the King by the service of half a knight's fee, and the other moiety of the Lord Fitz-Water, by the like service. — Idonea, his widow, held it till her decease, 12 September 1410, one half of Henry, Earl of Hereford, as of the Honor of Mandevill, and the other half of the Lord Fitz-Walter (z).

Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two husbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart. But she dying without issue 1 July 1433, it came to her kinsman,

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, created Earl of Essex 30 June 1461 (a). At the time of his decease, 4 April 1483, he held this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, of the Priorefs of Clerkenwell (b). It came next to his grandson—Henry, Earl of Essex, who, at his death, 13 March 1540, left Anne, his only daughter and heir, married, in 1541, to William Parr, afterwards created Marquis of Northampton. [For a more particular account of this Family see the other Volume, p. 254, 255.] He having forfeited all his estates for espousing the cause of the Lady Jane Grey; Qu. Mary, 8 August 1558, granted him this Maner, with others [X], to hold of the maner of East Greenwich, by fealty only, in free socage (c).

This maner was next in the Smyth family of Cressing-Temple; concerning which see the other Volume, p. 113.

Thomas Smyth Esq; who dyed 10 March 1563, held the maner of Langford, with appertenance, of the Queen, in free socage. — Clement, his son, who also held the same, departed this life 16 December 1590; and was succeeded by his brother—Henry, then 30 years old (d). He dying 17 April 1612 without issue surviving, his next brother—Sir John Nevill, alias Smyth, Kt. then 59 years old, inherited this and other estates. — William Smyth Esq; departed this life 12 February 1631, possessed of this estate, and his next heir was his brother—Sir Thomas Smyth, alias Nevill, then upwards of 70 years of age (e).

Some of the Sammes Family lived at Langford-hall; but whether as tenants or proprietors we cannot learn.

3. WICKHAM-BISHOP'S.

There are two Parishes named Wickham in this County; namely This, and another in Hinckford-Hundred.

This is styled Wickham-Bishop's, because the Bishops of London have been from time immemorial, even before the Conquest, lords of the Maner [X], and patrons of the Rectory: As the other has the addition of St. Paul's, because

Matthew Harvey, Esq; sixth son of Thomas Harvey of Folkston in Kent, and brother to the most eminent Physician Dr. William Harvey, was the next possessor of this Estate; and presented to the Church in 1637. 1662. and 1667. He left it to his nephew—Sir Eliab Harvey, of Chigwell, Kt. who sold it in 1680, to Nicolas Wescombe Esq; He dyed in 1696, and his widow, Sarah, remarried to Mr. Bateman, enjoyed it till her decease in March 1740-1. Her eldest son—Nicolas Wescombe, of the Inner Temple, Esq; succeeded her, and departed this life 16 December 1744. It is now in Nicolas Wescombe, of Cheverills Green in Hertfordshire Esq;

Stock-hall, in this parish, was holden, in 1319, of the Lord John de Bohun, and John Preres, by John de Ulting. He held it, in 1328, of Robert Fitz-Walter, as the sixth part of a fee in Stockhall, and Langford. And his son Nicolas Ulting held it, in 1386, of Walter Fitz-Walter (g).

Sir Hugh Stafford held, in 1421, of the heirs of John Prayers, a tenement called Stokhall, containing 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 30 of pasture (b).

Mr. Henry Glascock hath some land here, besides what hath been already mentioned.

Sarah Hall, by her will dated 8 November 1680, gave her customary cottage, in the Street here, called Fosters Gardens, for the use of the poor of this parish for ever; and 40s. for reparation of the same. It consists of three dwellings for poor people.

The Church-clerk hath also a House to live in.

The Church dedicated to St. Giles, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. In a spire, shingled, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

Thomas Langford, a Dominican Frier, author of an universal Chronicle, who flourished about the year 1320, was a native of this place (i).

This parish is rated to the land tax at 615l.

it belongs to the Dean and Chapter of that Cathedral.

The Saxon word pic signifies a Castle, or fortrefs; and though there are no remains of any, here might have been a temporary fortification against the incursions of the Danes, who much infested this neighbourhood. A Beacon stood in the highest part of this parish, upon the edge of Tiptree-heath. As for the word ham, it signifies a village, or habitation.

382 THURSTABLE HUNDRED.

Here is only one MANER,

and most of the lands in the parish are holden of it by copy of court-roll.

Wickham-hall is about half a mile south from the Church.

There were many Coats of Arms in the old House [Y]. Some years ago it was taken down, and a neat House of brick erected for a Farm-house.

Formerly it was the residence of the Bishops of London; and, in 1375, William Courtney, then Bishop, obtained a license from K. Edward III, to impark 300 acres of land in his maner of Wickham (k).

The demesnes of this Maner are held by Lease from the Bishops of London. Lord Maynard formerly had the Lease, and one of the Family parted with it to Henry Parsons Esq; brother to Humfrey Parsons Esq; Alderman of London. He having also purchased the site of an old Water-Mill, in the parish, erected there a fine and spacious Mill. Adjoyning to which, he built a handsom and commodious Seat, with fine Gardens, Fish-ponds, &c. He left the premisses to his wife's daughter, Mrs. Frances Marston, married since to

Philip Burlton Esq;

Other Estates in the Parish are,

Part of the lands belonging to Bennington-hall, and to the late Mr. Lingard's farm; of which the Houses are in Witham.

The Bishop of London hath also large Woods in the Parish.

Most of the Houses in this parish are above a mile east from the Church, near Tiptree-heath.

The CHURCH is small, of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. On the west end there is a small wooden Turret, with a spire shingled, in which is 1 Bell.

This Rectory is in the collation of the Bishop of London, and wholly subject to him, being exempt from the Archdeacon of Colchester's jurisdiction. There belongs to it a Glebe of above 100 acres; but a great part of it is gravelly and poor. The Parsonage-house stands a full mile east from the Church, on the top of a hill, near the edge of Tiptree-heath; from whence there is an extensive prospect. The greatest part of it was rebuilt with brick by a late Incumbent, the Rev. Mr. Ley, but in a slight manner, so that it was rather a Dilapidation.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 562 l. 2 s. 0 d.

Here are two contiguous Parishes of this name, distinguished from each other by the addition of Great and Little. The name is otherwise written Toteham, and seems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Tote, a man's name, and ham, habitation.

Toteham-hall, the mansion-house stands a little way east from the Church.

Hamo Dapifer left his great estate to the children of his elder brother Robert Fitz-Hamon, Lord of Caerdiff, and Tewksbury, whose eldest daughter and coheir Mabel brought it in marriage to William natural son of K. Henry I. created Earl of Gloucester in 1109; and who dyed in 1147. His eldest son — William, Earl of Gloucester, gave this lordship to

Richard de Lucy. Concerning whom see more above, p. 125. 128. — Maud de Lucy was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to Richard de Rivers, who had this estate, and the Honor of Ongar, in her right. Of this Richard,

John de Nevill held, in 1281, the maner of Totham by the service of one knight's fee (l). His father — Hugh de Nevill held it before him, viz. in 1210, of the Honor of Hagenet, it consisting of 3 knights fees [A]. — Sir Hugh Nevill, son of John, at the time of his decease in 1335, held, jointly with his wife Ida, this maner of Great Totham of Elizabeth de Burgh, Lady of Clare, by the service of 1 knight's fee. His son and heir — Sir John Nevill of Essex departed this life 25 July 1358, without issue; having settled, after his, and his wife Alice's death, the maners of Great Totham, Thorpe, Wethersfield, Little Halingbury, Chighenhale Zoyne and Tany, Langham, Peldon, Great and Little Wakering, on William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton. Alice, Lady Nevill, widow of Sir John, did not dye till 1394 (m). [For a more particular account of the Nevill Family, see above, p. 304. . . and in the other Volume, p. 79. 371. 515.]

From the Nevill family this Parish obtained the name of Totham Nevill.

William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton to whom Sir John Nevill had left the reversion of this estate, dyed 16 September 1360, and his son, — Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton, 16 January 1372. So that neither of them enjoyed this estate; but, in 1394, it fell to the two daughters and coheirs of Humfrey, viz.

Elleanor, wife of Thomas of Woodstock, and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV. [See above, p. 304.] Elleanor had this estate for her purparty.

Anne, her only daughter and heir, was married first to Thomas, and then to his brother Edmund, successively Earls of Stafford, and afterwards to William Bourchier, Earl of Eu. [See above, p. 304, and in the other Volume, p. 80. 371.] She lived till 1438.

Sir John Bourchier held this maner of Earl Stafford, in 1399. — Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, his son, held the same, at the time of his decease 18 May 1409; as did — Idonea, his widow, who dyed 12 September 1410. She held it of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne; by the service of half a knight's fee (n).

Elizabeth Bourchier, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two husbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart. She herself held it of Earl Stafford, at the time of her decease 1 July 1433 (o). Leaving no issue; her kinsman — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Essex; and his grandson — Henry, Earl of Essex, successively enjoyed this estate (p).

Anne, daughter and sole heir of the last, and Marchioness of Northampton, was possessed of it (q): And her husband — William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, having forfeited all for espousing the Lady Jane Grey's interest, this Maner was granted to him, with a few others, for his maintenance (r).

Having so often mentioned this noble Family, we shall beg leave not to enlarge upon it more here; but for a fuller account to refer to p. 304. 307. above; and to the other Volume, p. 80. 254, 255.

This Maner was next in the Beriff family, who had the maner of Shawes in Colchester, and the King's Head inn; and lands also in Aldham. William Beriff, Gent. who dyed 21 November 1594, held this maner of Great Totham, alias Totham-hall, with all its rights &c. of the Queen, as of her maner of East-Greenwich, by fealty only, in free socage: And lands and pastures here, called Shinbornes, Rose Shinbornes, Osey lands, Walcrofts, and Haywards; Likewise a messuage and lands near Totham-hall, called Ongham's tenement. — William, his son and heir, was 48 years old (s).

In 1599 Thomas Wylde Esq; held these maners of Great Totham and Gibcracks, and dying 21 June that year, was succeeded by his son — Thomas, that departed this life 21 June 1606, leaving — Edmund his son and heir (t). The second Thomas married Elizabeth daughter of Richard Coke Esq; by Elizabeth his wife daughter of John Pilborough Esq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer. She dyed 24 December 1606 (u).

Thomas Martin Esq; a Banker in London, was the last possessor of this estate.

The Maner of GIBBECKRAKES

The mansion house lies about half a mile south from the Church.

This was taken from the other capital Maner; but When, we do not exactly find: Only we may guess by the following record. On, or about, the year 1226, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, purchased of Sir John de Rivers, lord of Ongar, 3 knights fees which Hugh de Nevill held under him [B]; and this unquestionably was one of those knights fees. — Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, was possessed of those three knights fees in 1398 (w).

We do not find this mentioned by the name of Gippecrake till the year 1414. And that name it either gave to, or took from, a considerable ancient Family. Richard de Gybbecrake was witness to a deed of Alyne la Despensere, Countess of Norfolk. And, to a grant of Agnes Mercy, Priores of Clerkenwell, of lands in this parish, Robert Gypecrake, Roger de Oveseye, &c. were witnesses. Both those deeds were without date, and probably as ancient as Richard I. or K. John.

There are estates named also Gibbcraks, at Purley, and other parts of this County.

To return to this estate: In 1414, Sir William Marny, of Layer, held a maner called Gippecrake, in Great and Little Totham, and Hebregge, of the Bishop of London. — Thomas was his son and heir (x). — Henry, Lord Marney, who dyed 24 May 1523, held this maner, of Henry Earl of Essex, as of his maner of Totham-hall, by fealty and rent of 9 s. 4 d. His son — John, Lord Marney, had also this estate at the time of his decease, 27 April 1526 (y). He left two daughters coheirs. — Catharine married o George Ratcliffe; and — Elizabeth to Thomas Lord Howard, second son of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, created Viscount Howard of Bindon, 13 January 1558.

Sir Brian Tuke purchased it with Layer-Marney-hall &c. and dyed possessed of it 26 October 1545, leaving — Charles Tuke Esq; his son and successor (z). [For a fuller account of these two Families see under Layer-Marney.]

It came afterwards, with the former, into the Family of Wylde; and then to

Thomas Martin Esq;

FREVILLS

We have a very imperfect account of this estate. Only, that Edward Nalingburst, a lunatic, held, in 1551, a maner called Frevells, lying in Great Totham, with lands and tenements in the two Tothams, Goldanger, Tollebury, and Tollehunt Darcy and Major (a).

FERNE, or Ferne, lands so called in this parish, were given by Robert Mantel to Bilegh-Abbey, founded by him. Upon the suppression of that House they fell to the Crown, having been lett, 11 July 1525, to John Church for 41 years at the yearly rent of 4 l. 7 s. 4 d. (b). In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted them to — William Butts and his heirs. He had license, 22 March following, to alienate them to — John Page. In 1556, — John Alleyn Esq; held them in capite. And, in 1574, — Richard Durant, jun. dyed possessed of them, and of Barrowhills and Barrowmarsh, and was succeeded by his brother — William, who had livery of them that year, and of other lands belonging to the same Monastery (c).

Robert son of Sewin gave to the Nuns of Clerkenwell 140 acres of land in Hangre de Totham, which Malcolm King of Scotland and Earl of Huntendon, had granted to him; and half a wood; and 4 dead trees in his wood of Totham; and pashage for 10 hogs; they paying to him one mark of Silver at Michaelmas (d).

Which of these two was granted to Cardinal Wolsey in 1525, under the title of the maner of Great Totham (e), I cannot ascertain.

LOFTES, or Loughes, is a capital messuage on Broad-street Green in this parish, wherein John Bullock Esq; and his successors lived before Sir Edward purchased Falkborn-hall. John Bullock Esq; at the time of his decease, 10 February 1595, held this messuage; and other messuages called Fowchers, and Lendons, Inhams and Crofhouse, of John Sammes Esq; as of his maner of Little Totham; and of Edward Wild, of his maner of Gipecrake; leaving — Edward Bullock his son and heir (f). — Sir Edward was his grandson. [See in the other Volume, p. 118.]

One of the Wright family of Cranham purchased this estate.

In 1555, John Sammes, yeoman, held in this parish lands called Greyhow, Woodland, Squyers and Cookes alias Dyxley; Garlands; Taylers; Fabyans alias Smythes and Howletts; Wheelers, and Southfeild; Cockerells, and Pynkys (g).

In 1559, John Church of Maldon held here a tenement and lands called Sawens: which were afterwards Thomas Beckingham's (b).

John Goddeshalfe gave a House and Lands, of about eight pounds a year, out of which 10 s. is paid for Lord's rent, and 1 s. 8 d. to the King; the remainder for reparation of the Church.

OVESEY ISLE

is reckoned part of this Parish. It belonged to Turbert above-mentioned; and to Hamo Dapifer at the time of the Survey [C].

[C] Terra Hamonis Dapiferi. Uvesiam tenet idem, quod tenuit Turbertus, T. R. E. pro manerio & pro 14 hidis. Tunc i bordarius. modo nullus. Semper iii servi. i piscatura. Pastura lx ovibus. Val. lx solidos. Lib. Domesd. fol. 56. b. Tit. 28.

For the most part it seems to have gone along with the capital maner; and especially to have been in the Bouchier family.—Sir Hugh Stafford, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, and dyed in 1421, held the maner of Oveseye of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of half a knight's fee.—Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex, at the time of his decease, 4 April, 1483, held the maner of Totham-Oveseye, of the King, as above (i).—Anne, Marchioness of Northampton, the last of this Family, held this maner, or isle, of Ovesey, and 6 messuages, 2 cottages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 200 of marsh, free fishery, and wrec of the Sea, and free-warren, in Ovesey, Great Totham, and Goldanger (k).

It descended to her heir at law, Walter Devereux, Earl of Essex; and was purchased of him by Thomas Wiseman Esq; of Great Waltham; who held it at the time of his decease, 15 July 1584, by the name of one tenement, Isle, or land surrounded with water, in Great-Totham, called Awsey, alias Ovesey, of the Queen, in capite, by knight's service.—Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiseman, were his daughters and coheirs (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 88.]

This Isle was purchased by the late Mr. Charles Coe of Maldon, and is now in his heirs. It is said to contain 200 acres of land.

Within the parish of Totham, upon the shore, are many Tumuli, or Mounts of earth, called Borough-hills, which seem to be the Graves of Saxons and Danes slain in assaulting and defending England. They are just so far down the Stream as the Colliers now come up to unload, which makes it probable that the Danish vessels drew much the same water.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. In a wooden Belfrey, with a Spire leaded, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given by Maurice de Totham, and Hugh de Nevill, to the Nuns of Clerkenwell (m). The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to them in the reign of K. Richard I. and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Priorefs and Convent had the patronage till their suppression, when they came to the Crown.

K. Edward VI. 8 July 1550, granted them to William Morrice, and Edmund Isaack (n).

Since that they were longest in the Families of Aylet, Fresh-water, and Percival, of Heybridge (o).

This Vicarage was augmented in 1719, by Bp. Robinson with 200l. to which were added 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty, wherewith an Estate was purchased.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 716l. 2s. 0d.

5: LITTLE TOTHAM, lies between Great Totham and Goldangre, to which last parish it is united. Though it is small, and not in the best air, the two considerable Families of Heveningham and Sammes chose it for the place of their residence.

There are in it two Maners. 1. The maner of Little Totham. 2. . . . that of Rokhall.

The Maner of LITTLE TOTHAM.

The maner-house, which stands near the Church, is a neat brick Edifice, built by Sir John Sammes: It had a Park of about 80 acres.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, the demesnes were in two hands; Cola, and afterwards one Richard, had the chief part; and Gunner the other: At the time of the Survey, Hugh de Montfort held the former, and Suene the latter which Gunner was permitted to enjoy under him [D]; a case not very common: the former owners being commonly quite dispossessed.

To this Maner that of Goldanger is united, and they both have only one Court, which is kept at Little Totham-hall.

Under Henry de Essex, lord of the Honor of Raley, Henry de Mailler, Mayloch, or Maleche, for by those several names he is called, held 4 knights fees in Totham, with Isabell Franchevill (p), an heiress, to whom he was guardian. This Mailler was probably a descendent from Hugh son of Malger, the tenant at the Survey, under Hugh de Montfort.

In the reign of K. Henry III. this Maner and that of Goldangre came to be vested in a family surnamed Jarpenvil, or Charpenvil; from whom this parish received the appellation of Totham Jarpenvil (q). An heiress of the Jarpenvil Family brought it into that of Heveningham; from whom it came by purchase into that of Browne; and then of Sammes, in which last it continued till of late.

And seeing the Families of Heveningham and Sammes had their seats and residence here, it will be proper to give a particular account of them.

The Heveningham Family deduced their pedigree from Walter lord of Heveningham in Suffolk before the Conquest. The first that we find settled here, was Philip, in the reign of K. Edward I. We shall therefore only set down the Names of his predecessors, as they occur in the pedigree, without their intermarriages. And they were Walter—Walter—Robert—Robert—Ralph—Sir William, who was with K. Richard I. at the siege of Acon, where he overcame and slew Sapher, the governor of the castle there, who had challenged him to a single combat.—Reginald—Richard—Peter—William—Andrew.

Philip de Heveningham, in the reign of K. Edward I. married Maud, daughter of Roger Jarpenville, and had by her Roger, Philip, Richard; Elizabeth:—Roger, married, first, Cecily, daughter of Robert Lord Morley, by whom he had Richard, Walter, John, Roger, Philip; Margaret, Catharine, Cecily Philippa. His second wife was Alice, remarried to William de Maldon.—Richard was father of—Sir John, who married Joane daughter of . . . Rossiter, and had by her John, Philip, Robert, Richard, Christopher; Cecily, Catharine, Isabell.—John, the eldest son, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Rodisham, by whom he had John, Robert, Geoffrey, Roger; Cecily, Anne.—Sir John, the eldest son, married, first, Alice daughter of Sir John Davall, and had by her Thomas, Alice; Joane, and Elizabeth. His second wife was. . . Brown; and by her he had George, that had to wife Catharine, daughter of John Burgoigne.—Thomas Heveningham Esq; was returned for one of the Gentry of this County in 1433 (r). He married Anne, daughter and heir of . . . Yarde, and had by her John, Robert; Anne, and Audrey.—Sir John, the eldest son, married Alice, daughter of Sir Ralph Shelton, by whom he had, Antony, Edward, John, Francis, Erasmus; Elizabeth, and Anne.—Sir Antony, his eldest son and successor, married, first, Catharine daughter of Sir Philip Calthorp, and had by her Henry; Jane, Anne, and Mary. By his second wife, Mary Shelton, he had Arthur, Brigitta, Anne, Mary.—Henry, the eldest son, had two wives, Anne daughter of Sir Edmund Windham, and Anne daughter of Thomas Eden, but left no issue by either.—Arthur Heveningham Esq; the surviving son and heir, married Mary, daughter of Thomas . . . and had by her, John, Thomas, William, Arthur, Henry, Charles, Antony, Arthur, Robert; Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Gilbert, of Finborough; Abigail, of Sir Augustin Pettus of Norfolk; Mary, Anne, and Barbara.—John, the eldest son, married, first, Catharine daughter of Lewis Lord Mordaunt; and, next, Bridget, daughter of Christopher Paston of Norfolk; but what issue he had is not mentioned [E].

As to the Sammes family. John Sammes Esq; lord of the maner of Little Totham, dyed 18 October 1606, aged 74 years (s)—Richard, his son and heir, was father of Thomas, and John.

Thomas married—daughter of . . . Jeffrey of West-Hanington, by whom he had, Mary wife of Richard Thornton; and seven sons. Richard; William, of Marks-Tay, [See in the other Volume, p. 203.] Thomas; John, of Hatfield-Peverell; [See also in the other Volume, p. 133.] Henry; Edward; and Peter. Henry, the 5th son, of Great Totham, married, first, . . . daughter of . . . Hale, of Maldon, and had by her, Henry, of the Inner Temple, and William, both of whom dyed without issue. By his second wife, Anne, daughter of . . . Strutt, of Abberton, he had William, who left no issue; and Edward of London, that married Benetta, daughter of John Wright of Horn Church, and left three daughters.—Edward, the 6th son, who was also of Totham, married Susan, daughter of William Aylet, of Rivenhall, and had by her William, and Elizabeth wife of Benjamin King, of Southminster. William the son, by Margaret, daughter of Peter Witham of Cressing, had Thomas, William, Margaret and Susan.—Richard Sammes Esq; the eldest of these 7 sons, married Margaret, daughter of . . . Lawrence, of Barrow-hill, by whom he had two sons, John, and Thomas; and Susan married to John Mott of Goldangre. Thomas, the second son, was of Colchester, and by Margaret, daughter of . . . Deeks of Witham, had Richard.—John Sammes, the eldest son, was of Great Waltham, and married Grace, daughter of George Mead of Great Easton, by whom he had six sons, John, Matthias, Antony, Samuel, William, and Thomas; the latter baptized in 1634. and four daughters, Mary, wife of Thomas Layston, of Mucking; Deborah, Isabella, and Mildred.

John, above-mentioned, the second son of Richard Sammes son of John first named in this genealogy, was of Langford-hall. He married Margaret, daughter of John Paschal of Great Badow, and had by her three sons, John; Richard, of Coggeshall, from whom descended the Sammes's of Tollethunt-Beckingham; and Robert of Boreham. He had also one daughter married to Thomas Alleyn.—John Sammes of Langford-hall Esq; the eldest son, married . . . daughter of Bartholomew Averell, by whom he had John; and Mary, married first to William Wroth Esq; afterwards to . . . Cotton.—Sir John, the son and heir, was a knight, and governor of Isendike in Flanders, where he lies buried. By Isabella, his wife, daughter of Sir John Gerrard, Kt. Lord Mayor of London (t), he had his son—Sir Gerrard Sammes, also a knight. He married Ursula, daughter of Arthur Champenoun, widow of . . . Saxey, and had by her—Richard, who having taken to wife Frances,

How these Families succeeded one another in this Maner, we shall shew under Goldangre, which went along with it: In the mean time we proceed to or Rook-hall, the other Maner in this parish.

The house is situated about a quarter of a mile out of the road leading from this parish to Heybridge.

Eduuolt, and Aluric, were owners of this estate in Edward the Confessor's reign: At the time of the Survey it was the Fee of the Bishop of London [G].

A family surnamed Wichingham held it under the Bishops. Nicolas Wichingham Esq; who dyed in 1433, held the maner of Little Totham called Rookhalle of the Bishop of London, as of his maner of Stortford; and 1 marsh and 40 acres of arable in Mundon, of the Abbot of Colchester. By Alice his wife he had one son, William, who was dead before him, and left—Robert, aged 22 at his grandfather's decease. He held the same lands, and departing this life in 1451, left—John his son and heir (u), of Great Wychenham and Fishley in Norfolk. In 1493, he settled by deed this maner, and the lands in Mundon, on himself, and Anne his wife daughter of John Bampton in tail. And in 1507, a Fine passed between John More and lies close to the Bay which receives the Stream from Maldon, opposite to the Isle of Osey.

Aungre signifies The Place, as we have observed above, p. 125. But how This came to be dignified with the fine name of Gold, we cannot well conceive.

The owners of the lands in this parish, in Edward the Confessor's reign, were Leuvin Pos-others, plaintiffs, and Edmund Aylmer and Elizabeth his wife, defore' of the maner of Rokehall and lands in Great and Little Totham.

It was next in the Southcott family of Witham. For John Southcott Esq; who dyed 18 April 1585, held the maner or farm called Rock-hall in Little Totham; and the moiety of one messuage or farm there called Fowchers, containing 100 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, purchased of George Scott (w). Fowchers took its name from William Foucher, an owner, mentioned in the Composition made between the Rector of Goldhanger and the inhabitants of Little Totham, 29 October 1440. [For an account of the Southcott family, see in the other Volume, p. 110.]—Sir Edward Southcott sold this estate to

Benjamin Lord, of Maldon; who, in 1720, sold it again to Nicolas Corfellis, Esq; of Wivenhou, grandfather of Nicolas Corfellis Esq; of that place.

Thomas Fabell, who dyed in 1353, held lands and tenements in Great and Little Totham and Hebrugge, containing 1 messuage, 440 acres of arable, 20 acres of meadow, 30 of pasture, 28 of wood, and 4l. rent, of the Prior of Hatfield, by fealty, and rent of 13s. 4d. a year (x).

The CHURCH of Little Totham, dedicated to All-Saints, is small, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. It hath a square spire, partly built of flints, and shingled.

This Church, or rather Chapel, hath been from time immemorial annexed to the Church of Goldangre (y).

Little Totham is rated to the land-tax at 400l.

thagra; Leuvin, and Uluard; and Elric. Those that held them at the time of the Survey, were, Hugh, son of Malger, or de Montfort; Ralph Piperell; and Earl Eustace [H].

These lands were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of Goldangre. 2. The maner of Follifaunts. 3. . . . that of Fawltly. But which of them were what belonged to Montfort, or the two others, we cannot determine.

The Maner of TOTHAM with GOLDANGRE, such is the style of this Maner.

After the general Survey, the earliest possessors we have here were the Jarpenvill family. John de Jarpenvill, who dyed in 1259, held of the King, in capite, 2 carucates of land, by the service of 20s. a year to the ward of Dover castle, worth 10*l.* per annum.—Roger Jarpenvill was his next heir. This Roger had in Goldhangre 300 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 12 of pasture, 7s. rent of assise; and in rent for salt 18s. 6d. At the time of his decease, in 1287, he was found to hold of the King, in ca. in Totham and Goldhangre, 200 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 20 of pasture, 10 of wood, 1 garden, 1 dove-house, and 53s. rent of assise, 300 days work &c. by the service of 3 knights fees, and 40s. yearly to the ward of Dover castle: He held also in these parishes of the Abbey of St. Albans 50 acres of arable, and 20s. rent of assise, by a yearly payment of 34s.

Maud, wife of Philip de Heveningham, was his daughter and heir (z).—Roger de Heveningham, who dyed in 1318, held the maner of Little Totham of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Haghele, by the service of one knight's fee, suit at the Court there, and 20s. to the ward of Dover castle; And of the Abbot of Coggeshall 6 acres in Malervissland, by the service of 10d. a year: And 20 acres of John de Preyers, as of the maner of Tollethunt Gynes, by the service of 4s. a year. Alice his widow, remarried to William de Maldon, held a third part of this maner in dower, and the Advowson of the Church of Goldangre, of the Honor of Haule; and in Little Totham and Goldhangre, 40 acres of land and 56s. rent, of the Prior of Hatfeild-Peverell, &c. till her decease in 1322.—Philip de Heveningham her son, who dyed before her in 1321, held the two other parts of the maner of Little Totham; and two parts of the Advowson of Goldhangre Church, of the King, as parcel of this maner; And 80 acres of land in these two parishes, and 13s. rent of assise, of the Prior of Hatfeild-Peverell, by the service of 22s. a year (a).—John, son of Philip, knighted afterwards, at the time of his decease in 1374, held, jointly with Joanna his wife [I], this maner of Little Totham, by the same service as above; and 1 messuage, and 100 acres of arable, of the Dean of St. Pauls London, and the Earl of Hereford; and 80 acres in Goldangre of John Boufer, by the service of 4s. a year. This family had also estates at Sutton, Estwood, Affingdon, Hakewell, and South-Bemflete. [See above, p. 283. 292.]—John Heveningham, son and heir of Sir John, succeeded his mother in these estates in 1394, being then 35 years old (b). He dyed in 1425, possessed of this maner of Little Totham.—Sir John Heveningham his son (c) held also the maners of Totham and Goldhanger of the Honor of Hagnett, by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee; [See above, p. 98. 100.] and departing this life 10 May 1499, left—Thomas Heveningham, or Henningham, his son and heir, 40 or 50 years old (d).—Sir John Heveningham held these maners, and the Advowson of the Church of Goldanger and of Totham Chapel, at the time of his decease 4 August 1536 (e).—Sir Antony his son held also the same, but of the Honor of Rayleigh, and not of that of Hagnett. He dyed 22 November 1557.—Henry his son and heir was 20 years old (f).—Henry, the eldest son, leaving no issue, his next brother and heir—Arthur Heveningham Esq; after he had manumised the tenants, sold this estate to

John Brown Gent. Attorney at Law, who dyed 17 August 1591, possessed of the maner of Totham with Goldanger, and of the Advowson of the Church and Chapel.—John Brown was his son (g).—Silvestre his widow, with John Brown the son, and William Stark, by licence dated 28 April 1592, sold the maners of Little Totham and Goldanger, and 6 messuages, 3 tofts, 1 dove-house, 2 gardens, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 70 of wood, 300 of heath and furze, 4 of marsh and alder, 4*l.* rent, a free fishery, free-warren, and 2 faldages for sheep, in these parishes, and the Advowson of the Church and Chapel to John Sammes Esq; who dyed 9 October 1602, possessed of them, and of Campes Close, Great Grovewood, alias Brockhole, and the Little Wood, in Little Totham. His son and heir—Sir John Sammes held the same (h): and was succeeded by his son—Sir Gerrard Sammes, Kt. who dyed 28 April 1630.—Richard was his son and heir, who married Frances, daughter of Thomas Still Esq; and had issue Francis, Edward, Anne, Elizabeth, Jane, and Bridget;—Francis married—daughter of—Waldgrave, afterwards wife of . . . Poley. Anne, the eldest daughter, was wife of . . . Germaine of Wickham: and Elizabeth, of the Rev. John Lasby, 26 years Rector of this parish. She dyed in 1681, aged 32.

Mr. Lasby purchased the lordship of this maner, and dyed 9 November 1703, leaving an only daughter—Elizabeth. Upon whose decease without issue, Henry Germaine, son of Anne Sammes, inherited this Maner. He sold it to

John Price, Gent. who left it to his eldest son—Robert Price Esq; Serjeant at law, Recorder of Colchester; he dyed 5 August 1741. It belongs now to

Mr. John Cole, of Colchester, merchant, who hath married Bridget, one of Serjeant Price's daughters.

As for Goldanger-hall, and the demesne lands they were purchased of the widow of Francis Sammes and Henry Germaine, by the Rev. Mr. Henry Barret, Rector of Herthurst in Suffolk, a maner, or Ferm, whose house is about half a mile north-east from the Church, was given to Bilegh-Abbey by Robert Mantel their founder [K].

It was lett to Thomas Whittelocke at the rent of 5*l.* 11*s.* per annum.

Upon the suppression, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1543, to Stephen Beckingham Esq; and to Anne his wife, by the name of the maner of Follyfaunts, and the site of the same maner. — Thomas his son sold it to John Sammes Gent. 1 March 1573 (i).

Alderman Clithero had it, with Joyces and Highams in Tolleshunt-Major, and by female heirs it came to William Waddis and Henry Heath, who sold it, but to whom we do not find.

It has since been in Sir Nicolas Gerrard of East-Ham, Bart. and is, or lately was, in his Family.

Some of the Heveningham family are said to have anciently resided here.

FAWLTY.

The mansion-house lies near the Channel, about half a mile south west from the Church.

This maner, as it is called, belonged, as well as the last, to Bilegh Abbey. John Samys was former here of lands called Weymerfh, Eastmerfh, and Westmerfh in Goldhanger. See above, p. 334 (k).

After the suppression K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, in 1538, farms called Purleigh and Goldhanger alias Falty in Goldhanger, to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. He by license, 20 January the same year, sold the maner of Goldhanger in Falty, to TOLLESHUNT.

In this Hundred are three Parishes of the name of Tolleshunt, or Tolehunt, distinguished from each other by the addition of Mauger or Beckingham; Darcy; and Knights. The name seems to be formed from the two Saxon words Toll, toll, or custom, and hunt. It is otherwise written in records, Touzon.

Robert Trapps, of London, goldsmith, and Joan his wife; remainder to — Nicolas their eldest son and heir, who dyed 7 May 1544, leaving Mary wife of the Lord Giles Paulet, and Alice wife of Henry Brown, his daughters and heirs. Robert Trapps dyed 12 December 1560, and his wife Joan 16 January 1563. A partition being made in July 1565, this was the share of the Lord Giles Paulet and Mary his wife. They two had licence, 9 July 1565, to alienate a marsh, called Fawtry-marsh, in Goldhanger to Humfrey Shelton (l).

John Whigtacres who dyed 23 August 1627, held a messuage and 60 acres of land, with appertenances called Goldhangers, alias Vautie, alias Faultie, in Goldhanger of the King in capite. — John Shaw Gent. was his cousin and heir (m).

This estate belonged to the late Mr. Charles Coe, of Maldon, and now to his family.

Mr. James Buxton; William Marryon; Robert Harrington; John Cooper, &c. have also some Estates in this parish.

Here is a considerable Saltwork, in which is used Rock Salt, brought from Cheshire, mixed with the sea water. It may be presumed that the salt water here would of itself produce some Salt, because the Saltworks of this and Winstree Hundred are frequently met with in Domesday-book.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace, but the Chancel has a south Chapel; all tiled. The Steeple is of stone, and hath four Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the capital Maner, and as such in the gift of the Families of Heveningham, or Henningham, Sammes, &c.

It seems the Advowson was sold with the demesnes to Henry Barrett.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 558*l.*

Here is a Fair May 14, yearly.

7. TOLLESHUNT MAUGER, or BECKINGHAM, is nearest to Goldanger. The addition of Mauger, or Malger, it took from Malger who held it under Robert son of Corbutio, at the time of the Survey [L]. The name is corrupted into Major, or Malgri; and it is also sometimes called Magna, Great, though it is really the least of the three.

The appellation of Mauger it had in the reign of K. Henry III. (n).

It received the surname of Beckingham from Stephen Beckingham, who had it first about the year 1543.

One Sercar was possessed of it in Edward the Confessor's reign.

In this parish there is one Maner; and two other reputed ones, named Heighams and Joyces; and Wykes.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT BECKINGHAM.

The mansion house stands near the north-west corner of the Church-yard. It has a stately Gate of brick remaining, with four turrets, embattled.

This Maner belonged in K. Stephen's reign to Geoffrey de Tregoz, lord of the next parish of Tollethunt Tregoz or Darcy, and was given by him to Coggeshall-Abbey; under the name of one virgate of land at Tollethunt, and 60 acres near the same, and common of pasture there (o).

By an Inquest taken in 1257, it was found, that the Abbot of Coggeshall had in Tollethunt Mauger 7 acres and 1 rood of wood, by the King's perch, within the cover of the Forest of Essex, and 4 acres of heath near the same; and in Tollethunt Tregoz, 7 acres of wood, and 10 of heath (p).

At the time of the Surrender, 5 February 1538, it was lett to John King, for the yearly rent of 34*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* (q).

The same year K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Seymour, brother to the Duke of Somerset. He exchanged it with the King, who, in 1543, granted it to Stephen Beckingham, and Anne his wife, and the heirs of Stephen, by the name of Tollethunt-Major, alias Tollethunt-Grange, and Long-Wyke (r).

The Beckingham family was originally of Wiltshire. Antony, or John, Beckingham, by Alice his wife, daughter of Thomas Tichborn of Hamshire, had 3 sons, John; Thomas; and Stephen.—Stephen, who had a grant of this estate, was thrice married; namely, first, to Anne daughter of Hugh Unton Esq; next, to Avis sixth child of Sir Henry Tyrell of Heron; and last to Elizabeth daughter of William Browne, of Flamberts. By the first wife he had Thomas, Alice, Thomasine, and Elizabeth; by the second he had one son; and by the third, Stephen and another. Stephen, the father, dyed 10 December 1558, and was buried in this Church.—Thomas, his eldest son and heir (s), succeeded him in this and other estates [M]; and dyed 9 October 1596 (t): having had, by Mary his wife daughter of Thomas Hill, Thomas, Stephen, and Avisia.—Thomas, the eldest son, was knighted; and besides the capital mansion house, he held a Park here, and a messuage called Brises's hatch. By Elizabeth his wife he had a son named William, who dyed before him, leaving two sons William, and Henry. Sir Thomas departed this life 3 September 1633, and his grandson William, then aged twelve years and a half, was his heir (u). It is presumed he and his brother Henry survived Sir Thomas but a little while [N]. For Sir Thomas's brother — Stephen above-mentioned was possessed of this estate in 1635, and sold it in 1636, to

Sir Thomas Adams, Kt. Alderman of London. His second son — Sir William Adams Bart. sold it in 1674, to

Mr. Thomas Fox cheefemonger of London, who married Hannah, daughter of Mr. Henry Bigg merchant taylor. She married a second time to Mr. John Bradley, and in 1710, sold the reversion of this maner and estate to

Dr. Daniel Williams, who by will, dated 26 June 1711, settled it in Trustees, namely in the Society for New England, as long as that Society shall continue, upon condition that Sixty pounds a year shall be allowed between Two well qualified persons as to piety and prudence, to be nominated successively by his Trustees, to preach as Itinerants in the English Plantations in the West Indies, and for the good of what Pagans and Blacks lye neglected there: and the remainder to be paid yearly to the Colledge of Cambridge in New England, or such as are usually employed to manage the blessed work of converting the poor Indians there. But if his Trustees were hindred from nominating the said Itinerants under pretence of any statute in New England or elsewhere, he gave the said 60*l.* per annum to the said College in New England, to encourage and make them capable to get some learned Professor out of Europe to reside there, and shall be of their own nomination in concurrence with the Ministers of the Town of Boston in New England. And if the aforesaid Society or Corporation should happen to be dissolved or deprived of their privilege, he gave the said Maner, with all the profits, to the Town of Boston with the Ministers thereof, to benefit the Colledge as above, and to promote the Conversion of the poor Indians. This estate, in 1710, was reckoned worth 120*l.* per ann.

There are three other Estates in this parish, styled in records Maners. They seem to have is one of those Estates, so named from the Higham family, its ancient owners.

The mansion house lies near the road leading from Goldanger to Tollebury [P].

Here lived successively three of the name of Robert Higham, that are buried, with their wives, in this Church. The first dyed 23 June 1427: Leticia was his wife. The second dyed 16 August 1429: Margaret was his wife. The third dyed 4 February 1460: His wife was Johanna, daughter of Thomas Barrington.—The two following are buried in the Chancel of Goldanger Church.—Thomas Heigham Esq; who dyed 31 December 1531. and—Antony 15 November 1540. The latter, at the time of his decease, held the maner of Higham of Sir Thomas Seymour, as of his maner of Tolleshunt Major, by fealty, and rent of 3s. 4d. He had also the maners of Wickhams in Woodham-Ferrers, Harons in Althorn, Batells in Bradwell, &c.—Robert Higham, his son and heir (w), had license, 24 October 1545, to alienate the maner of Higham, with appertenances to Stephen Beckingham. A fine was levied soon after between the said Stephen, plaintiff, and Robert Higham Esq; and Margaret his wife, deforc' for the Maners of Highams, and Joyces; 20 messuages, 1 dove-house, 3 orchards, 4 gardens, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 400 of pasture, 40 of wood, 400 of marsh, and 40s. rent in Tolleshunt Major, and Darcy, Goldanger, and Little Totham (x).

Mr. William Harris is the present owner of this estate.

JOYCES,

as appears by the Fine above-mentioned, belonged to the Higham Family, and was passed to that of Beckingham. It is now a considerable Farm in this parish.

The mansion house lies about a mile and a half south-east from the Church.

Stephen Beckingham Esq; who dyed 10 December 1558, held the maner, or capital mansion and farm of Highams and Joyces, and all other messuages, lands, tenements, meadows &c. in Tolleshunt Major, Goldanger &c. belonging to this maner, or capital messuage.—Thomas his son and heir, held the same, at the time of his decease 9 October 1596 (y).

Christopher Clitherow, of Clitherow in Lancashire, Alderman of London, one of the Sheriffs in 1625, and a Knight, and Lord Mayor in 1636, had this estate. He married, first, Catharine, daughter of Thomas Rowland; and his second wife was Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Cambel, Kt. and Alderman (z). His son—Henry dying without issue, left this estate to his two Sisters, Jemima, and Mary.

Jemima was married to Robert Heath, citizen of London; and had by him a son named—Henry.—Mary, who inherited Joyces, had by her husband Thomas Fettiplace, M. D. several children. Their only surviving daughter Waldegrave Fettiplace, being married to William Waddis of London, cordwainer, left two daughters, . . . wife of . . . Payn, the other unmarried.

This estate belongs now to Mr. Isaac Foster.

WYKES, is another reputed Maner in this parish.

The mansion house stands on Tiptree-heath, near the Parsonage called Renters: It is ancient, and part of it pulled down.

We have no account of this estate till 1525, when we find it granted to Cardinal Wolsey (a). Probably it was part of the endowment of some Religious House.

Sir John Huddilston had license, 1 May 1554, to alienate the maner of Wekes, in Tolleshunt Major, to Thomas Darcy; who, at the time of his decease 27 October 1557, held it, and 2 messuages, 2 gardens, 60 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 120 of pasture, 12 of wood, 160 of furze and heath, and 25s. rent, in this parish, Norton, Monden, and Bramston, [. . .] of the Queen (b).

—Thomas, the eldest son, had it not, but his next brother—Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Osith, dyed possessed of it 25 December 1587, leaving—John, his son and heir (c); afterwards Serjeant at law; who sold it to John Sammes, of Langford-hall, Gent. above-mentioned. For the latter, at the time of his decease 20 May 1608, held this maner of Wekes, alias Wicke; and a messuage called Allens; and the great Tithes of this parish, of the King, in ca. by knight's service: and a capital messuage, lands, and tenements called Renters of Sir Thomas Beckingham, as of his maner of Tolleshunt Major (d). This John Sammes married, first Elena, daughter of Thomas Golding of Postlingford in Suffolk; and his second wife was Anne daughter of John Brett of this parish. By the first he had George, John, Elianor, and Mary; and by the second, John, and Elizabeth.—George, the eldest son and heir, by Abigail daughter of John Rand had John, George, Abigail, and Elizabeth.—John, the eldest son, had for Charities.

Sir Stephen Beckingham gave the Sum of forty shillings for ever to the Poor of this parish; and, for the perpetual payment of it tyed a capital messuage called the Freme, lying in Tolleshunt Darcy.

Sir Christopher Clitherow did give out of Highams and Joyces in this parish Three pounds per annum for ever to the Poor of this parish; paid every Christmas day, at the Communion-table to the Minister and Church wardens, and by them distributed to 12 poor people that take no collection.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled; in a brick-Tower are three Bells.

On the north side of the Chancel was a Chapel called Beckingham's Chapel, with a stately Monument of alabaster finished 15 September 1609, for Stephen Beckingham Esq; But both Monument and Chapel are demolished, and the arch or opening between that Chapel and the Church is walled up.

This Church belonged to the Priory of Caldwell in Bedfordshire, founded by Simon Bassett Alderman of Bedford, in 1152, for Canons of the Order of St. Augustin. The Convent kept the whole profits to themselves, and supplied the Cure by a secular Priest, till Dr. Stokesley, Bishop of London, brought them to agree 7 February 1530, to the erection and endowment of a Vicarage, which is at large recited by Mr. Newcourt (e).

This diligent author has found an Instrument, without date, by which the Prior of Caldwell conveys this Rectory to William Prior of Dunmow. And, accordingly, in Fulk Bassett's Register, the patronage is said to be in the Priory of Dunmow. How it came to be again in that of Caldwell, which presented in 1495, he hath not found. 'Tis very probable it was only leased for a term of years.

If I were to guess why the Priory of Dunmow rented this, it may be that having lands in this Parish, and Caldwell only the Parsonage, it might be for their convenience. That Dunmow Priory had lands in this Tolleshunt, though the memory of them be lost as well as the name, appears from K. Henry VIIIth's grant to Robert Earl of Suffex, of lands called Bargholts, in Great, that is this Tolleshunt (f), amongst other possessions of Dunmow Priory. Perhaps the leasing out the Parsonage gave the House the name of Renters.

It stands on Tiptree-heath, near the Maner-house of Wykes. The Priory of Caldwell leased out, in 1528, the Rectory of this parish to Antony Darcy. And by virtue of that lease, he and his son Thomas Darcy Esq; presented several times to the Vicarage: As did Brian Darcy (g).

In 1608, John Sammes dyed possessed of this Rectory, with all its rights members and appertinances, and the Tithes of hay and corn, and the glebe lands; which he held of the King as of his maner of East Greenwich, by fealty only, in free socage: And the capital messuage, lands, tenements, &c. called Renters, he held of Sir Thomas Beckingham. His son — George Sammes succeeded him (h). They had also the Advowson of the Vicarage. John Sammes sold the premises to Robert Jegen of Kelvedon, Attorney at law.

Capt. John Sammes, by his will dated 18 May 1675, gave to the Vicar of this parish, and his successors for ever, all the Tyth Hay and Grass of his Rectory of Tolshunt Major. But after his death this being not paid, it was at last settled by a Commission for Charitable uses, 4 April 1699, That the sum of Five pounds should be paid, yearly for ever on Christmas-day, unto the Vicar of this parish and successors by the owners of the Rectory or Parsonage of Tolshunt Major called Renters, which estate was tyed by the testator for payment of this bequest. The Minister is obliged to preach a Sermon on Christmas day.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 480*l*.

8. TOLLESHUNT KNIGHTS lies north-east of Tolleshunt-Beckingham, adjoining to the Hundred of Winstree. Besides Tolleshunt-Knights, in Latin Militis, and in French Chivaler, it is called Parva, Little in opposition to the last described parish, which, as we have seen, is sometimes styled Magna; and Tolleshunt-Bushes, [corruptly Bishop,] because the Church lies upon a heath among Bushes. From what Knight it was named, I do not find.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Allmar, Alric, and eight freemen, were owners of the lands in this parish; which Ralph Baignard, and Gonduin, held at the time of the Survey.

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Barnewalden, or Barne-hall. 2. . . . that of Brooke-hall.

The Maner of BARNEWALDEN.

The mansion house is pleasantly situated upon the side of an hill, near a mile north-east from the Church; and hath an extensive view of Mersey island, and out at sea.

Roman pavements were dug up near it, some years ago, several feet under ground.

This is the Maner that belonged at the time of the Survey to Ralph Baignard [2].

One Bernard held it under him, and it may possibly have taken its denomination from him and the Saxon word Pealð, wood, qu. Bernard's wood.

William Baignard, grandson of Ralph, lost this and his other estates for siding with K. Henry the first's enemies; and that King gave them to Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, ancestor of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter: for which reason this was holden of that Family. [See a fuller account of them in the other Volume, p. 427].—Walter Fitz-Robert succeeded his father in this estate. And under him Robert de Tollethunt held one knight's fee in the reign of K. Henry II. (k).

In the reign of K. Edward II. this estate came into the Family of Patteshull. For, in 1316, a fine passed between Walter de Pateshull, and Johanna his wife, plaintiffs, and Thomas de Pateshull deforc' of the maners of Barwaldone and Salcote Verley, with appertenance, and 440 acres of arable, 11 of meadow, 60 of pasture, 25 of wood, and 27 s. rent in Tollethunt Chivaler, Tollebury, Layre Marny, and Wigbergh. And another fine between the same Walter de Pateshull and Walter de Peldon and Alice his wife, for 1 messuage, 47 acres of arable, &c. He dyed in 1330, holding Careteslond of the heirs of Robert Fitz-Walter, and the rest of the Abbess of Berking, John Nicole, John le Boufser, William de Marney, and Richard de Teye, in socage.—Thomas was his son and heir (l). He had also 122 acres of arable &c. in Bardfield Saling, Stebbing, and Finchfield. [See in the other Volume, p. 330.]—John de Patshul had summons to parliament in 1342.

This estate was next in the Family of att Lee; seated at Aldbury in Hertfordshire. John de la Lee was several times Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire. He dyed in 1307. Geffrey de la Lee was Knight of the Shire in several parliaments for the County of Hertford (m). Sir John att Lee, who dyed in 1370, held this maner of Berwaldon; and two turns in the Advowson of this Church, and the Abbot of St. Osith the third turn. He had also 76 acres of arable, 3 of pasture, &c. in Cheping Walden, and the maner of Hertishobury in Fernham.—Walter his son and heir (u), was a considerable man in his time, representative for the County of Hertford in nine parliaments, and a Knight. He had a Park at his maner of Barn Walden in 1384. At the time of his decease in 1395 he was succeeded by his three sisters: For a son of his, named Thomas, was dead before him without issue. The three sisters, were Margery, wife of Robert Newport; Joane, wife of John Barlee; and Alice of Sir Thomas Morewell. [See in the other Volume, p. 625.] Upon the partition of their inheritance, Margery, or Margaret, and her husband R. Newport, had this estate. He dyed 28 October 1428, and she 20 January 1467 (o).—William Newport, their son and heir, held this maner of Berwaldon of the Abbess of Berking, and Lady Fitz-Walter: and dyed in 1434 (p). By Cecily his wife remarried to . . . Bothe, and that held this estate in dower till her decease in 1477, he had—George, born in 1427 (q); who by Margery his wife, daughter of William Tirwhitt, had Robert, and 5 daughters, one of whom was married to . . . Bendish, and afterwards to William Wentworth. He held this estate of the Abbess of Berking only, by the service of 3 s. per ann. and departing this life 27 October 1484, was succeeded by his son—Robert, then 33 years old (r). He held 60 acres, parcel of this maner, of the Abbess of Berking, and lands called Prebeours, other parcel of the same, of Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex, in socage; and the remainder of this maner, of Sir Robert Ratcliffe, Lord Fitz-Water. He held also Peldon lands of the maner of Fillols hall; and lands of John Danyell of Messing: And departed this life 7 November 1518. By Mary his wife, daughter of John Allington, he had John; and Mary, wife of John Newport of Sandon in Hertfordshire.—John Newport Esq; the son and heir, held this maner of Barn Waldon, and Barne Waldon Park, of Robert Radcliffe Lord Fitz-Water, by the service of one knight's fee, and 6 s. 8 d. rent per ann. Also Peldon-land, as above-mentioned: And 80 acres called Manysfeld Wyke, of the Abbess of Berking, and Henry Earl of Essex; and Pater-noster Croft of the said Earl. He dyed 26 May 1524, leaving an only daughter [R],

Grace, married to Henry Parker Esq; son and heir of Henry Parker, Lord Morley (s). He dyed in 1550. His son—Henry, Lord Morley held the maners of Burndon, Tollethunt-knights, and Salcot Verley, at the time of his decease, 22 October 1577. As did his successors of this noble Family, —Edward Lord Morley, who dyed 1 April 1618.—William, Lord

Morley and Montegle, 1 July 1622 (t). — Henry 10 May 1655. They held this estate of the maner of Filloll's-hall. — Thomas, the last Lord Morley and Montegle, sold it to Antony Abdy Esq; Alderman of London: From whom it descended to his son — Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. and then to — Sir John — Sir Robert, and the late — Sir John, who left it to his aunt — Mrs. Cranke, for her life. For a more particular account of the Lords Morley, see the other Volume, p. 512. and for the Abdy family, see above, p. 177.

MANYFELD WIC, that goes along with this estate, stands near the Church.

It belonged, as we have seen, to John Newport; and then to the Parker family (u) [S]. — Sir Martin Lumley, of Bardfield, held in 1634, this estate, and a messuage called Hubbards-farm, in Tollethunt Knights, of the maner of Filloll's hall (w).

The Maner of BROOKE-HALL.

The mansion-house stands on the north side of a Brook, which occasioned the name. It is a mile and a half north-west from the Church.

This estate belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Alric: One Gondwin held it at the time of the Survey [T], being the only Estate he had in this County.

It was early in the Abbey of St. Osith: but by whom given we do not find. The Abbot had free warren in his lands here, by charter of K. Henry III. (x).

The Abbey leased out the demesnes to William Wood for 4 l. rent (y). They were afterwards lett to John Heywood, for the yearly rent of 14 l. 10 s. 1 d. (z). This maner continued in that House till the Suppression, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1539, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, upon whose attainder it was again in the Crown; and that King granted it to his forsaken Queen the Lady Anne of Cleve.

In 1599, Aug. 1. Qu. Elizabeth gave the maner of Brokehall once belonging to St. Osith's monastery, to John Spencer Esq; born at Waldingfield in Suffolk, and Alderman of London. He was knighted, and at the time of his decease, 30 March 1609 [U], held the maners of Brocks-Hall; of Bowre-hall, and Bocking-ball in West-Mersey; and of Rewfalls and East-Mersey; and the Rectories of East-wood, and Newport-pond. By Elizabeth Bromfield his wife he left — Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, wife of the Rt. Hon. William Lord Compton (a). Spencer their son succeeded who was Earl of Northampton, slain on Hopton-Heath near Stafford, 19 March, 1642-3. fighting for K. Charles I.

This estate, as that of Mersey, was sold to Ralph Fox of London, Taylor, who left it to — Daniel his son and heir; Daniel left it to — James Fox, and he to — John Fox his nephew, who kept Court here 19 September, 1715 [W].

It belongs now to Marcellus Osborne, Esq;

Under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, John Filoll held 5 fees and a half in Tollethunt, Little Badewe, Hokle, and Mokelinton. And under Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1386, Sir Richard de Sutton, and Sir John de Bohun held the same (b).

Besides the above-mentioned Estates, Mr. Joseph Beston; John Keys; John Darling, &c. have also some lands here.

Four pounds per annum, to be distributed in bread, were given to the poor of this parish, out of lands in Tollebury, called Rolles.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; tyled. In the Bell-frey which is of wood, with a Spire shingled, are two Bells. It stands low amongst the Bushes.

This Rectory was at first in the gift of the lords of Barnwalden-maner.

In 1370, Sir John att Lee had two turns in the Advowson, and the Abbey of St. Osith every third turn, as mentioned above. Afterwards the Abbey got every other turn. Henry Barlee, a descendent from one of Sir Walter att Lee's Sisters, presented in 1468. At the Suppression of Abbeyes the Crown took the whole Advowson, and have had it ever since.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 554 l. 2 s. 0 d.

9. TOLLESHUNT DARCY lies south of Tollethunt Knights, and between Tollethunt-Beckingham and Tollebury.

It hath been distinguished from the two others by the successive additions of Tregoz, Boys, and Darcy, three considerable Families that have been lords of the capital Maner.

Siward, and Gotra, were possessors of the lands in this parish, in Edward the Confessor's reign: Robert Piperell, and Robert Greno held them at the time of the Survey [W].

From hence arose these three Maners. 1. The maner of Tollethunt Tregoz, alias Boys, alias Darcy. 2. that of Gernons. 3. The maner of Verli.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT DARCY, with VERLI.

The mansion house stands near the south side of the Church yard. It is ancient, and moated round, with a stone bridge over the moat.

In the wainscot of the Parlour are carved the Arms of Darcy; viz. Argent, 3 cinquefoils, gules.

Of Ralph Peverell there is a full account in the other Volume, p. 130, under Hatfeild-Peverell, to which we shall beg leave to refer. — William Peverell his son succeeded him. This estate was holden afterwards of the Honor of Peverell.

In K. Stephen's reign it was in the Family of Tregoz. For that King confirmed lands given to Coggeshall Abbey, in this parish and Tollethunt-Major, by Geffry Tregoz (b). In 1263, K. Henry III. granted free warren to Robert Tregoz in Tollethunt and Blunteshalle, which, together, made two Knights fees (c).

Robert de Valoines who dyed in 1282, held the maner of Tollethunt of the King in capite, by the service of one knight's fee; and in the same maner 200 acres of arable, and 20 of pasture, of John Fillol, by the service of 3 s. 4 d. per ann. — Roese and Cecily were his daughters and heirs. He held also Blunteshalle in Witham (d), by inheritance from Roese his mother, daughter and coheir of William le Blund. Eve was wife of this Robert de Valoines, relict of Nicolas Tregoz, and dyed about 1293. Upon the death of this Eve, there were different claims for the inheritance of Tregoz, which were brought into Parliament, in 1293, Nicolas being dead without issue. He had four Sisters married, whose sons put in their Plea; viz. John de Bois, son of Lucy; James de Burnham, son of Alice; John de Ludham, son of Joane; John de Gernon, son of Hawise.

On the other hand, Hugh de Creppinges moved, that he might have livery of the estate, and not the others, because Nicolas de Tregoz did infeoff him, the said Hugh, of this estate; and put him in possession of it long before his death; untill Hugh demised it to Eve, at will. But, upon the whole, it appearing that the estate had been settled on Nicolas and Eve only for life, remainder in want of issue, to the heirs of Nicolas, the coheirs above-named were put in possession (e). How this Maner was holden by those coheirs, will appear by the following Extracts from the Inquisitions. James de Burnham, who dyed in 1295, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of 3 quarters and an eighth part of a knight's fee, the fourth part of one messuage, 63 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow, half an acre of pasture, 4 of wood, and 7 s. rent: And of the Abbess of Berking, 17 acres of arable, by the rent of 5 d. yearly; and of John Filoll, 4 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow, by the rent of 3 s. 4 d. ob. — Hubert was his son (f). — Thomas de Burnham, at the time of his decease, in 1303, held 60 acres of arable in the maner of Tollethunt Tregoz, which whole maner, with that of Blunteshalle, was holden of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of 2 knights fees.

Alice, his sister and heir (g), sold, in 1306, 140 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 5 of pasture, 3 of wood, 10 of more, 24 s. rent, in Tollethunt; and the fourth part of a messuage in Blunteshall; holden of the King in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of 2 knights fees, and suit at the Court of Hatfeild Peverell; to

John de Boys, and Petronilla his wife: and a Fine passed, in 1316, for the same, under the title of 11 messuages, 168 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 20 of wood, 71 of marsh, 140 s. and 4 d. rent, with appertinances, in the three Tollethunts, Tollebury and Langely (b). So that here was an end of the family of Burnham. John de Boys, at the time of his decease in 1340, held in Tollethunt Tregos 285 acres of arable, 27 acr. and 1 rood of pasture, and 10 s. 11 d. ob. q. rent of assize from the free tenants, of the King, as above, by the service of 5 parts of a knight's fee: and some messuages, 102 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 8 of wood, 12 of pasture, and 5 s. in work of the customary tenants, of the maner of Kelve-don; and of the Abbess of Berking, by the service of 20 d. a year, 80 acres of arable, 2 of pasture, 15 of more, and 13 s. 8 d. rent of assize; and of the Abbot of Coggeshall, by the service of 16 d. a year, 14 acres of pasture; and of the heir of John Gernoun, by the service of a half penny a year, 16 acres of arable. — John de Boys, his son and successor, held the same at the time of his decease in 1361 (i). His son — John de Boys was also possessed of it in 1403, and departing this life 15 August 1419 was buried in the Chapel adjoining to this Church (k).

No more of his posterity is mentioned, but he seems to have had Children, because in the account of the Darcy Family I find, that John, son of Robert Darcy of Maldon, married a daughter and coheir of . . . Boys of Tollebunt-Tregoes. By this match the estate coming to Darcy, might be blended with his other maner here, and so the name of Tregoz, laid aside for Darcy's, who had by this time both maners, that of Peverell, and Gernons.

Seeing this Family had such large Possessions in this parish, and enjoyed them a considerable time, I therefore think it proper to give here a particular account of them. They derived themselves from the same stock as the noble Family of Darcy Earls of Holderness, namely from Norman de Areci, living at the time of the Conquest. This branch, in particular, sprung from Norman Darcy, to whom K. Edward I. granted the marriage of . . . D'amory, of Little Maldon; and he had by her—Henry Darcy, Sheriff of London in 1327, and Mayor in 1337, the first of the family that had lands in Essex; namely the maner of Great Yeldham.—Thomas was his son and heir, who being a spend-thrift, sold his father's lands before the year 1366.—Thomas, his son, was enfeoffed of lands in Thurrock in 1394. By . . . daughter of . . . Torell he had his son and heir—Robert Darcy, of Maldon, steward and executor to Joane Countess of Hereford and Northampton, and who purchased large estates. By his wife, Alice, daughter and heir of Henry Fitz-Langley of Maldon, widow of John Ingoe, he had, Robert, THOMAS; and six daughters, Elienor, married to Sir William Tyrell of Heron; Anne, to . . . Montgomery; Margaret, to William Tyrell of Gipping; Alice, to John Clopton; Elizabeth to Henry Bruyn; Catharine, to Robert Crane. Robert, the eldest son, was of Danbury, and referring to the note below for a further account of him [X], we shall proceed to

Thomas Darcy Esq; [called by some John,] the second son, who settled in this parish, had two wives. The first, or second, for it is not certain which, was, . . . daughter and heir of . . . Bois of Tollebunt Tregoz; with whom I suppose he had this maner; the other wife was Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, or South Okendon, Esq; He is not recorded to have had any issue by the daughter of Bois: But by the other he had—Antony Darcy Esq; his son and heir; Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1511; who married Elizabeth daughter of Christopher Wilkinson Esq; and had by her three sons, Robert, that took to wife Joan daughter of John Bassett Esq; remarried to Francis Bernard, but he dyed 30 March 1535, in his father's life-time, without issue; the second son was Thomas; and the third Antony of Norwich. Their father dyed 18 October 1540; and his wife 24 February 1535, and are both buried in this Church.—Thomas, the second surviving son and heir, born in 1511, married, first, Catharine . . . who dyed 7 July 1535. His second wife, was Anne, daughter of Sir John Munday, Lord Mayor of London, and he had by her Thomas; and Antony; and 3 other sons. She dyed 3 January 1540. His third wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Heydon; widow of Robert Bedingfeild, by whom he had Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Osith, and Arthur that left no issue. She dyed 23 August 1559, and her husband 27 October 1558. They are all buried in this Church.—Thomas Darcy Esq; the eldest son and heir, was Sheriff of Essex in 1580, and dyed 2 September 1586. He married Margaret, daughter of Eustace Sulyard of Runwell Esq; and had by her, Thomas; Eustace; John, who dyed without issue: and six daughters, Bridget; Dorothy; Margaret; Anne; Mary wife of Richard Southwell, of Woodrising in Norfolk; and Elizabeth wife of Henry Maynard, of Great Waltham, Esqres.—Thomas Darcy Esq; the eldest son and heir, married Camilla, daughter of Vincent Guicciardine, of Florence, remarried to Francis Harvey of Ickworth Esq; and had by her Thomas, and two other sons, who dyed young; and six Daughters, Mary, wife of Christopher Nevill, third son of Edward Lord Abergavenny; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Henry Mildmay of Woodham-Walter Kt. younger brother to Sir Thomas Mildmay, of Moulsham-hall, Kt. and Bart. Bridget, wife of Sir George Fenner Kt. Frances, of Sir Henry Vane, Kt. Secretary of State to K. Charles I. and Margaret, wife of John Browne. The name of the Sixth is not mentioned: She dyed young. Their father departing this life 14 November 1593, aged 33 years, was buried in the Chapel belonging to this Church, where a sumptuous monument was erected to his memory.

For an account of Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Osith above-mentioned, and his heirs and successors, see the other Volume. p. 140.

We shall now proceed to shew what Estates the Darcy Family had in this parish. In the reign of K. Henry VI. Robert Darcy held one knight's fee in Tollebunt, late Robert Gedding's, and

(k) Inquis. 4 Hen. IV. and Epitaphs.

[X] This Robert was of Maldon and Danbury; knighted; and Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1420. He dyed about 1449. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, he had, Thomas; Robert; and Elizabeth, wife of William Barty, or Berkley.—Thomas Darcy Esq; the eldest son, was Squire of the body to K. Henry VI. and Edward IV. and dying 22 September 1485, was buried in the Church of All-Saints in Maldon. He married Margaret, daughter and coheir of John Harleston of Suffolk by Mary Bardwell, and had by her Roger; John; Robert, who dyed 28 April 1514, without issue; and Margaret.—Roger Darcy, of Danbury Esq; the eldest son, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1506, and dyed 3 September 1508. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth of Nettlested; that had been married before to John Bouchier Earl of Bath; and to Thomas Windham; he had Thomas, born in 1506; Elienor; Thomasine, wife of Sir Richard Southwell, mother of Elizabeth wife of Sir George Heneage; Margaret; and Elizabeth, wife of John Leigh.—Sir Thomas Darcy, the son and heir, married Elizabeth daughter of John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford. He was created Baron Darcy of Chiche 5 April 1551. And for a more particular account of him, and his posterity, we shall beg leave to refer to the parish of Cice, or St. Osith, where was their Seat and residence.

afterwards

afterwards John de Boys's, called Tollethunt-hall (l).—John Darcy being attainted for his adherence to the House of Lancaster, K. Edward IV. granted in 1471, the maner of Colfond [Tollethunt] Darcie to his brother Richard Duke of Gloucester (m).

This is the first time we meet with the addition of Darcy, but that of Tregoz continued as low as the reign of Qu. Mary and K. Philip.

Antony Darcy Esq; who dyed 18 October 1540, held the maner of Tollethunt Tregozs, alias Tollethunt Darcy, of John Earl of Oxford; then worth 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year; paying to the Sheriff of this County 6 s. He held also the maner Vyrley, of Sir Thomas Semer, as of the maner of Tollethunt Major, worth 30 l. per ann. by fealty, and rent of 2 s. And a messuage, and 40 acres of arable, in this parish called Barons, by fealty and yearly rent of 2 s. And another messuage here, and 20 acres, called Betts, by fealty, and rent of 6 d. both holden of the maner of Typtree.—Thomas Darcy, Esq; his son and heir (n), held this maner of Tollethunt Tregozs, alias Tollethunt Darcie; and 1 messuage, or tenement, 500 acres of pasture, 100 of marsh, 40 of wood, and 10 of meadow, called Skynners Wyke; another messuage, and 35 acres of pasture called Heronshaw; and another messuage, and 30 acres of pasture, called Gerards: and four crofts, or closes, called Formes, Hookes, Flowers, Wyggs; and Bushie leez, 10 acres; He held also in this parish 4 messuages, 30 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 120 of pasture, and 6 of wood; called Lambrokes, all of the Earl of Oxford. And the maner of Virlee, in this parish and Tollethunt Major, of Stephen Beckingham Esq; by fealty and yearly rent of 2 s. And the Parsonage here, with a granary, a curtilage, and a moat, and 31 acres of arable, and Priors hide 30 acres more. Besides lands in other places [Y]. He dyed 27 October 1557, and was succeeded by his son—Thomas Darcy Esq; then 20 years old (o); who departing this life in September 1587, left—Thomas his son and heir. He held the maners of Tollethunt Darcy, and Virley; and Copland wood; with all rents and services, suit at the Court of Mandeville, Court lete, liberties, privileges, &c. also Parkers land, and Bowchers, in the three Tollethunts and Tollebury, newly purchased, then worth 10 l. a year; and Lee-hoo, &c. At the time of his decease, 14 November 1593, he had five Daughters, living, then very young; Margaret, 8 years old; Mary, 6; Elizabeth, 5; Bridger, 2; and Frances, one (p). It is said in the Inquisition, that between the taking of it and the Father's death, Margaret dyed: But when his Monument was put up, Margaret is mentioned as alive, and is said to have been afterwards married to John Browne [Z].

To whom these five coheiresses were married, hath been just mentioned above; namely, Elizabeth to Sir Henry Mildmay, Kt. younger brother of Sir Robert; and his successor at Moulsham-hall, &c.

But before we shew how they disposed of them, it will be proper to give an account of the first and ancientest possessors of the Maners of Gernons, and Verli; before they came into the Darcy family.

The Maner of GERNONS

took its name from Robert Gernon [A], above-mentioned, lord of Stansted Montfichet, upon which account this was holden of that Barony.

As low as the year 1314 the family de Verli had this estate. For then a Fine passed between Philip de Verli, plaintiff, and Walter de Pateshull, deforc. for this maner of Tollethunt-Tregoz, with appertenances (q). Walter, at the time of his decease in 1330, held the maner of Tollethunt Tregoz, of John de Lancaster, by the service of half a knight's fee (r). We find at Stansted, John de Lancaster succeeding there to Gernon's estate. [See in the other Volume, p. 577.]

Stansted being purchased by one of the noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford, this maner came to be holden of them. For instance, Robert de Gedding held a knight's fee under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford: and under Thomas the 8th Earl (s). In 1340, John de Boys held of the heir of John Gernoun 16 acres of arable here, by the service of a half-penny a year (t). And, in 1384, Robert Boys held this estate of the Vere Family (u).—John Boys held, in 1399, a knight's fee under Aubrey de Vere, in Tollethunt Boys, which is the first time that name occurs. The same John Boys is said to hold the maner of Tollethunt Tregoz of the Honor of Bologne, in 1406 (w).

In the reign of K. Henry VI. Robert Darcy held one knight's fee in Tollethunt, late Robert Gedding's, and afterwards John de Boys's called Tollethunt-hall. This estate was forfeited by the attainder of—John Darcy, and given by K. Edward IV. to his brother the Duke of Gloucester, afterwards K. Richard III. as mentioned above.—Antony Darcy, however, did homage for it at Castle-Hedingham in 1504 (x). And, at the time of his decease in 1540, held this maner, called the maner of Tollethunt Tregoos, alias Darcy, of the Earl of Oxford.—Thomas, his son, held the same also, of the Earl of Oxford. And—Thomas Darcy, grandson of the last, left five Daughters coheirs, as we have seen above.

The Maner of VERLI

appears to have been originally part of Gernon's Maner, and to have taken its name from Robert de Verli, above-mentioned, tenant to Robert de Gernon. In persons surnamed de Verli it continued down to the year 1314, as hath been shewn a little above. It was holden of the Maner of Tollethunt Major.

Antony Darcy dyed possessed of it in 1540, as did his three successors of the name of Thomas. Upon the death of the last in 1593, it fell among his five Daughters and coheirs above-mentioned. There belonged to this estate lands called Bradfields, Hightields, Gosfeild, Home-mead, and 3 crofts of Bridge-houle (y).

Having traced down the Maners of Gernons and Verli into the Darcy Family; we shall next see how the coheirs divided these several Estates.

Christopher Nevill, and Mary his wife, had the Hillyfield, Half-Hyde, and other lands; in all to the amount of 290 acres.

Sir Henry Mildmay, and Elizabeth his wife, had the site of the capital messuage of Tollethunt Darcy-Hall; with all edifices thereto belonging; also Hall-fields, Flatting-fields; and other lands to the amount of 243 acres.

Thomas Browne Esq; and Margaret his wife, had the Parsonage-house; Upper Wild-field; the Hoe grounds in Tollethunt Beckingham; and other lands to the amount of 400 acres.

Bridget Darcy had Virleys house, or Newick house; Spooners field; High field; the three Brookfields; and other lands to the amount of 330 acres.

Frances Darcy had the maners of Tollethunt Darcy, and Virley; Skinners wic; 238 acres of closes and marshes to the sea; and other lands to the amount of 402 acres: and the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage.

And the great Tithes growing or arising upon each of those Five parcels were added to each of them respectively; upon which account the owners of those lands have the great Tithes in themselves, and their Tenants do not pay any. The deed of partition is dated 1 June 1608, and a Recovery was suffered.

Let us now see how those lands were afterwards disposed of.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT TREGOZ, alias Darcy, was sold by them, 20 January, 1609, to Richard Hale, citizen and grocer of London, founder of the Free-School at Hertford. He married, first, Mary, daughter and heir of . . . Lambert, by whom he had, William; Alice, wife of Humfrey Walcot, and Mary of Thomas Watkins, Esq; By his second wife he had Richard of Clobury in . . . and departing this life 27 February 1620, was buried in the Church of St. Dunstan in the East, London.—William, the eldest son and heir, seated at King's Walden in Hertfordshire, married Rose, daughter of Sir George Bond, Lord Mayor of London in 1587, by whom he had Richard, William, Roland, George, Thomas, Bernard, John; Alice, Winifred, Anne, Deeves, &c. He dyed 27 August 1634.—Richard Hale Esq; the eldest son, 2 January 1634-5, released this estate to his brother—Bernard Hale D. D. who presented to the living in 1660, and 1662. On the 4th of May 1654, for want of heirs of his own body, he settled this estate upon his brother Roland's son by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Garraway Kt. namely—William Hale Esq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Hertford in 1661 and 1678. He conveyed it, 9 February 1674 to Abraham Hedgthorn, of Colchester, merchant; who 27 July 1675 settled it in jointure on his wife, Anne, daughter of William Bassett, of Keales in Lincolnshire Esq; He presented to this Church in 1675 and 1680, and left four daughters coheirs; Anne married to Nathaniel Redgrave, of Rendham in Suffolk Esq; Sarah, Dorothy, and Susan, that were never married. The 6th of July 1717, his widow and four daughters, sold this Estate, and the Rectory, to Sir Isaac Rebow of Colchester, Kt. He dyed 6 September 1726, and was succeeded by his grandson—Isaac Lemyng-Rebow Esq; who departed this life in 1735. His widow, Mary, daughter of Matthew Martin Esq; hath it in jointure; namely the Maner, the Hall-farm, with another lesser farm, and the Rectory, or Great Tithes except such parts of them as had been granted to the coheiresses with their shares of the Estates.

The Maner of GERNONS,

though no such place is at present known by that name, came from Thomas Darcy and Brian Darcy Esqres. and Sir Thomas Darcy, of Braxted lodge Bart. to Frances, one of his daughters, married to Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York. His son,—Sir Darcy Dawes, enjoyed it after him; whose daughter—Elizabeth brought it in marriage to Edwin Lascelles Esq; and it is now in four Sisters.

As to VIRLE, or Newick-house, Bridget Darcy, who had it for her purparty, was married to Sir George Fenner. He sold Virles, and the mansion house called Newick-house to John Hawkins, of Bocking, Esq; Alderman of London; who held them at the time of his decease 8 September 1632, they being described as lying in Virley, the three Tolleshunts, Tollesbury, Goldanger, and Little Totham, St. Laurence, Salcot Wigborough, Tiptree, Inworth, and Messing.—John his son and heir (z), had a son named—Robert, whose daughter and heir Frances being married to Sir John Dawes, Bart. brought this estate into that Family.

LANGBROKES,

an ancient seat here, formerly reputed a Maner, is about half a mile north from the Church.

It was holden by a branch of the Gernon-family: Whether as part of the maner of Tregez, to which Gernon's mother was heir, nothing at present shows. However, it was, according to tradition, in Richard, second son of Ralph Gernon, who married Sabina, daughter of Simon Lycambro. He dyed in 1458, leaving Helen his daughter and heir, who brought the estate to her husband John Langbroke. His posterity enjoyed it; namely—Richard, father of—John, that had issue—Richard. At length it came to the Darcy's, a younger branch of which resided here, and afterwards at Patf-wick. Sir Thomas Darcy of Braxted-Hall left it to his son, on whose death it came to his sisters, married to Sir William Dawes, William Pierpoint, and Richard Butler, Esqres. Sir Darcy Dawes Bart. had it afterwards, and now his heirs.

SKINNERS-WIC belongs now to James Bonnel Esq;

The house is about a mile and a half south from the Church.

THE NEW-HOUSE, or WHITE-HOUSE farm, was purchased in 1635 by the Trustees of the Charity of Henry Smith Esq; and settled, in 1641, as is more particularly recited below under the article of Charities.

Some time ago, several Roman Urns were found in the fields near this New-house.

Sir Robert Bernard, or the St. John Family's, estates extend into this parish.

Dr. Daniel hath a farm here, late Mr. George Martin's.

And so hath Edward Morley, Gent. one, purchased of the late Samuel Saville Esq;

Thomas Smyth, Gent. James Beal Esq; Mr. . . . Strutt; Mr. Rolfe; Mr. John Keyes; Mr. John Mayn; Mr. Robert Pointer; &c. have also some lands here.

Henry Smith Esq; deserves an honorable men-

(z) Inquis. 8 Caro.

[B] This Mr. Smith has been hardly treated, being called Dog-Smith. There was indeed one of the same name in Surrey that went about begging for a bone for his Dog, from which he picked out a living for himself. But our Henry Smyth, was born at Wandsworth, and lies buried there with an Epitaph now to be seen. Besides what he gave to the Poor in other Counties for their relief, and the setting tion in this place; for, though he was not the immediate Donor to the Poor of this parish, yet it is through his benevolence that this and several other parishes enjoy a considerable Charity [B]. He amassed a very large personal Estate; with part of which was purchased in 1635, of Sir Christopher Nevill Knight of the Bath, and Mary his wife, Richard Nevill Esq; his son and heir, and his wife, a Farm in this parish, called The New-House, or White-House farm, then of the yearly value of 140 l. but now much reduced, so as to be rated but at 75 l.

The uses of this Charity are thus set forth in the Deed, dated 26 January 1626.

The Church-Wardens and Overseers of the Poor, are weekly, or otherwise, to dispose of this Charity, either in clothing, bread, flesh, or fish, among the Poor of their said Parish, which have been inhabitants therein above five years. If any clothing be given to the Poor, it shall be in upper garments; on the right arm of which shall be a Badge with the letters, H. S. that it may be known to be the gift of the said Henry Smith. No poor Person, that takes Alms of the Parish, or are guilty of excessive drinking, profane swearing, pilfering, and other scandalous crimes; or are vagrants; or idle persons; or have been incorrigible, when servants; or do entertain in-mates, shall have any of this charity. The Church-Wardens and Overseers, before they receive any of the mony in this Charity, shall give bond to the Parson, or Vicar, in double the sum settled upon the Parish, That they will apply it according to the afore said directions, and account for the same as follows. The Officers afore said, yearly, on some Sunday between Easter and Whitsuntide, shall publicly and openly give up their accounts of this Charity in their parish-church, immediately after Sermon in the afternoon, of which they shall cause notice to be given the same day after Morning Prayer: And likewise on the next following Sunday shall, after Morning-Prayer, cause the same to be publicly read, and then shall affix for fourteen days in some publick place of their said Church a fair copy thereof, subscribed by themselves, that any person may make exceptions, if there be cause; and at the expiration of the said term, the said copy when amended, if needful, shall be sent to the feoffees, being first signed by the Minister, Church-Wardens, Overseers, and Inhabitants present at the passing of, or amending thereof.

The accounts of this Charity shall be entred in a book to be kept in the Parish for that purpose. The Minister is to certify to the feoffees the receipt of the security afore said, before the Church-Wardens and Overseers do receive any money. Upon default of any of the afore said premises, the Parish to lose the benefit of the Charity for one year.

them to work, Croydon, Kingston, Guilford, Darking, Farnham, Richmond, and Rygate, had each 1000 l. Wandsworth had 500 l. and almost all the rest in the County something considerable. He was a Salter and Alderman of London: and dyed 3 January 1627, or 1637. For a more particular account of him, see S. Dale's Antiquities of Harwich, &c. p. 89. &c.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, hath a north aisle or Chapel, called Darcy's Chapel, being the burial place of that family: but the Chancel is of one pace with the Church; the whole leaved. In a Tower of stone, embattled, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given to the neighbouring Priory of Tiptree; but by whom is not mentioned.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained; of which the Prior and Convent continued patrons till 1525, when they were dissolved, with other small Monasteries, at the instance of Cardinal Wolsey, in order to found and endow his two Colleges at Oxford, and Ipswich. The Dean and Canons of Cardinal College in Oxford presented to this Vicarage in 1527, and 1528. Upon the Cardinal's præmunire the whole devolved to the Crown, and K. Henry VIII. presented in 1546. K. Edward VI. 27 March 1547, granted the Parsonage of Tolleshunt-Darcy to John Dudley, Earl of Warwick (a), afterwards Duke of Northumberland; but, upon his attainder, 19 August 1553, it reverting to the Crown, Qu. Mary I. granted it to Thomas Darcy Esq; who dyed possessed of it in 1587; as did his son Thomas in 1593.

Upon the partition of the Estates of the latter in 1608, the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, were allotted to his youngest daughter Frances Darcy; and passed from her to Hale, and to Hedgethorn, and Mrs. Rebow. But the most part of the great Tithes having been parcelled out among the latter Thomas Darcy's five coheirs, as above related, are now in Seven hands.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 838l. 2s. 0d.

William Pretty, M. A. 18 August 1714, upon Nelson's d. . . . Bishop of London.

10. TOLLESBURY joins on the west to the Tollehunts and Goldanger, and on the east ends in a point against Mersey, having Blackwater-bay on the South.

The name is derived from the word Toll, above-mentioned, and buph, or bynig, a town; This being unquestionably the place where Toll, or Custom, was paid by Ships coming up this bay.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Gudmund, a freeman, was owner of Tolisbery; at the time of the Survey, Eustace Earl of Bologne held it, and it was of the Fee of Ingelric [C]. The Nunnery of Berking had lands here before and at the time of the Survey; Siuuard held some part of it under the Abbess, and afterwards Ralph Piperell.

From the time of the Survey to the year 1329, the name of the Maner of Tollebury doth not occur in records; but that of Tollehunt Guisnes, or Guisnes, from Baldwin Earl of Guisnes, in France, an ancient possessor; and sometimes Little Tollehunt; which seems to be this Estate, and might be denominated Tollehunt, because it extended into the adjoining parishes so named.

It was holden of the Honor of Bologne; and the ancient account we have of it, is as follows. Torbern, Almar, Uluric, and four Freemen, were possessed of this Tollehunt in Edward the Confessor's reign; at the time of the Survey, Earl Eustace held it, and St. Martin's Collegiate Church held part of it under him [D].

This parish is divided into four Maners. 1. The maner of Tollebury, or Bouchier's-hall. 2. The maner of St. Mary of Berking. 3. . . . that of Gorwell and Prentises. 4. Bohuns-hall. The Rectory is also a Maner.

The Maner of TOLLESBURY hath gone through these several names, Tholehunt, Little Tollehunt, Tollehunt-Guisnes, Tollehunt-Bouchier, the maner of Tollebury; and the maner of Over-hall, from its situation, or in contradistinction to some other Hall in this parish that lyes lower.

Bouchiers hall, the mansion-house, is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, about a mile north-west from the Church. From thence there is a pleasant prospect to the Sea and Mersey island.

In 1166, Robert le Hende held a knight's fee in Tollehunt of the Honor of Bologne (b).

In 1210, and 1211, Robert le Hold, which I take to be a corruption of Hende, held a fee in Tolsbir, of the fee of Bologne.

Ernulpb de Hordres gave this estate in marriage with his daughter to Baldwin Earl of Guisnes, who possessed these three knights fees about the reign of K. John. Ernulph had, besides this, lands in Kent, Essex, and Bedfordshire, which he lost by siding with the Barons, and K. John gave them to Alan Marcell, a Monk of Bury (c).

But, upon K. John's death, Ernulph making his peace with the successor K. Henry III. recovered his lands, and dyed possessed of them in 1222, leaving—Baldwin, his son and heir, who paying his relief had livery of his father's inheritance. He granted, or left, this estate to his brother—Robert; and he had a license, in 1247, to impark his wood of Tholeshunt, called Schiricheshall, which had been of old inclosed for a Park (d).

This Robert de Guisnes gave to Fulk Bassett Bishop of London, the homage in this place, of Henry de Merk; a descendent from Adelolph de Merk, that held this estate under the Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey. In 1251, the Earl of Gysnes held Tolleshunt, for two knights fees, and Fulk Bassett Bishop of London held it after him (e). — Philip Bassett, brother and heir of Fulk Bishop of London [E], at the time of his decease in 1271, held the maner of Tolleshunt of the King in capite, by the service of one knight's fee, of the Honor of Bologne. — Alina, or Aliva, Countess of Norfolk was his daughter and heir (f); she was married, first, to Roger le Bigod, Earl of Norfolk; and, secondly, to Hugh le Despenser, Justice of England, slain in the battle of Lewes, fighting against K. Henry III. But K. Edward I. confirmed to her the maner of Tolleshunt, which had been forfeited by her last husband's rebellion (g). This Alina le Despenser, Countess of Norfolk, by a deed without date, conveyed her maner of Tolleshunt to Gynes to Hugh de Essex, in exchange for the maner of North Welde. This was about the year 1280. She dyed in 1281 (h). [See above, p. 149.] Hugh de Essex was descended from a younger son of Henry de Essex, Baron of Raley. He had an only daughter and heir,

Anne, wife of Sir John de Prayers, of Prayers, alias Boure-Hall, in Sible-Hedingham, who brought him this estate. Sir Thomas Prayers, their son, left Margaret, his only daughter, wife of Robert Bourchier, Lord Chancellor of England; and by her this Estate came into the noble Family of Bourchier, Earls of Essex.

Having traced this Maner of Little Tolleshunt, holden of the Honor of Bologne, down to the Bourchier Family, which had before that of Tollesbury, but swallowed up hitherto by the most considerable and extensive one of Tolles- hunt; I shall now shew how long it continued in that Family.

Robert Lord Bourchier kept his first court here, in 1329, and had a Charter for free warren, in his maner of Tollesbury in 1330. He dyed in 1349, holding the maner of Tolleshunt of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of one knight's fee (i). His eldest son—John Lord Bourchier held it in the like manner, by the service of 12 d. a year. As did—Bartholomew son and heir of John (k), whose daughter and sole heir, — Elizabeth, carried it to her two husbands Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robessart. The latter held it of the Honor of Hugenet. She dyed in 1433, and was succeeded by her kinsman — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu (l). He was made Earl of Essex, and held the maner of Tolleshunt of the King of his Honor of Hakenet. His son William being dead before him, his grandson—Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, inherited his estates (m), and dyed 13 March 1540. All this while Tolleshunt comprehended the maner of Tollesbury.

Anne Bourchier, sole daughter and heir of the last, was married to William Parr, Marquis of Northampton. At the time of her decease, 26 January 1570, she held the maner of Tollesbury, and 40 messuages, 20 cottages, 40 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of pasture, 600 of fresh marsh, 2000 of salt marsh, 140 acres of wood, 8 l. rent, wrec of the Sea, and free warren, in Tollesbury, Tolleshunt Knights and Darey, Fering, Salcote Wyborowe, Salcote Virley, Goldanger, and Bradwell near the Sea. Her heir was her kinsman

Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley (n), afterwards created Earl of Essex. [For a fuller account of the noble Families of Bourchier, and Devereux, see above, p. 203, and in the other Volume, p. 253, &c.] Walter Earl of Essex dyed 22 September 1576, possessed of this maner (o) [F]. His son—Robert Devereux, the famous Earl of Essex, jointly with his brother Walter Devereux, and Christopher Blount, sold this estate to

Thomas Gardiner the elder, and Thomas Gardiner jun. Qu. Elizabeth granted them livery of it 30 May 1588, and a fine was levied in Trinity term. Thomas Gardiner Esq; dyed 20 April 1590, holding some tenements in West-Ham, the maner of Tolleshunt, alias Tolleshunt-Bourchier, alias Over-Hall, in Tollesbury, and a farm called Lingwoods Vincents, another called Keldrus and Tyrells, and [E] This Philip was a very eminent man in his time. In 1259, he was made Governor of the Castles of Oxford and Bristol: in 1260, Constable of those of Corff and Shireburn in Dorsetshire: in 1262, keeper of that of the Devizes in Wiltshire: In 1260, Sheriff of the Counties of Oxford, Berks, Somerset, and Dorset: and, the same year constituted Justice of England. He fought valiantly for K. Henry III. at the battle of Lewes, being the last man that kept the field. Hen. de Knighton, col. 2447, and Dugdale's Baron. Vol. I. p. 384.

[F] He had also, in this County, the maner of Little Hallingbury; the maner of Motts and Ramyingemarsh in ; one messuage, 60 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 40 of pasture, and 10 of wood, and Swaynes in Wyvenhoo; a messuage called Bakers; and 40 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 100 of pasture, and 5 of wood, in Goldanger; and the maners of Great and Little Wakering. a farm and tenement called Oldhall, in this parish. He also held the maners of Great and Little-Maldon, and a tenement called Swaynes in Wivenho (p). He had 3 sons, Thomas, Christopher, and Jeremy. His eldest son, — Thomas Gardiner, Esq; married Jane, only daughter and heir of Arthur Breame Esq; and had with her the maner of Bois-hall in Halsted; [see in the other Volume, p. 251.] but dying without issue 18 October 1638, aged 68, was succeeded by his brother — Christopher, who, by Catharine Denbold, his wife, had — Francis his son and heir. He married, first, Timothea, daughter of Sir Henry Bokenham of Thornham in Suffolk, Kt. and had by her Thomas, and Francis. By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Garrard, of Whethamsted, he had no issue. — Thomas, the eldest son, was knighted in 1660, and held this estate. He married Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Kempe of Spains-Hall in Finchingfield: She dyed 10 October 1654 (q). — Francis his brother, succeeded him, and had to wife Jemima, daughter of Robert Bacon of Redgrave in Suffolk, Esq; remarried to Sir John Brattel of the Mint-office in the Tower: She lived till 23 August 1719. — Thomas Gardiner Esq; their son and heir, married Lucy, one of the daughters and Co-heirs of Col. Henry Mildmay of Graces in Little Badow. He dyed 23 August 1707, and she in 1740. They had two sons — Francis, who dyed 9 May 1727, and the Rev. Henry Gardiner, Rector of Woodham-Ferrers, who departed this life in 1736, both unmarried. They had also two Daughters, Lucy, wife of Sir Richard Bacon, of Gillingham, premier Baronet, and Jemima, wife of Mr. John Joseph, Chirurgion. — Lucy had several children that dyed young; and Jemima had one daughter — Jemima, married to Mr. Robert Duke of Colchester. They have two sons, and one daughter [G].

Mr. Thomas Hallam, or his executors, had this estate afterwards. — Mary, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her husband, Philip Bennet Esq; about the year 1733. He dyed 11 December 1761, leaving one son, — Philip Bennet Esq; the present possessor; and one daughter named Mary.

There has been a Park enclosing Bouchiers-Hall. Another old Park called Shiricheshall joins to Tollshunt-Knights.

The Maner of ST. MARY of BERKING was so named, because it belonged to the Nunnery of Berking [H]: and continued in it till the dissolution of Monasteries.

The maner-house, called Tollebury-Hall, stands south of the Church.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted this estate by the name of the maner of Tollebury, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, a few days before he created him Earl of Essex (r). Upon his attainder it reverted to the Crown, and was appointed for the maintenance of the Lady Mary, afterwards Queen.

On the 12th of February 1562, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. He being so imprudent as to espouse, with more zeal than discretion, the cause of the Queen of Scots, was attainted and beheaded in 1573. However, — Thomas, his son by his second Lady, Margaret daughter of Thomas, Lord Audeley, being restored in blood, in 1584, this Lordship was given him by Qu. Elizabeth in 1595, by the name of the maner of Tollebury, alias Tollebury-hall, and the site of the same, and a corn and fulling mill (s). In 1597 he was summoned to Parliament by the title of Sir Thomas Howard, Baron Howard of Walden, and created Earl of Suffolk 21 July 1603. By Catharine, daughter of Sir Henry Knivet he had 7 sons, Theophilus, Thomas, Henry, Charles, Robert, William, and Edward; and four daughters. [See in the other Volume, p. 549.] He dyed 28 May 1626. — Henry his 3d son; then — William the 6th son; and at length — Sir Edward Howard, Knight of the Bath, his 7th son, succeeded him in this estate. The 29th of April 1628, he was created Baron Howard, of Escrick, in Yorkshire, which was the estate of his mother, coheiress to her uncle Thomas Lord Knivet, of Escrick. He departed this life 24 April 1675. By his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Lord Butler, he had, Thomas, William, Cecil, Edward: and Anne, married to Charles Earl of Carlisle. — Thomas, Lord Howard of Escrick, the eldest son, succeeded his father; but had no issue, by Elizabeth his wife daughter of John Earl of Peterborough; so that the title and estate came to his next brother — William Lord Howard of Escrick; the same that was an evidence against William Lord Ruffel. He married Frances, second daughter of Sir James Bridgman, brother of Sir Orlando, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and had by her, Charles; William, Edward, and Henry, which three last dyed young: and two daughters Mary, and Frances. — Charles, the eldest son and heir, succeeded his father [I]. About the year 1702, he sold this estate to

[I] By the date of the first Courts of these several noble possessors, we may guess in what year each of them became possessed of this estate. Thomas Earl of Suffolk kept a

Peter Whetcomb Esq; a Turkey-merchant. He dyed in 1704, leaving two Daughters, Mary, and Elizabeth, in minority. — Mary was married afterwards to Thomas Paget, Esq; of the Bed-Chamber to Prince George, and related to the Earl of Uxbridge; and — Elizabeth to Francis Darrell, or Dayrell Esq; son of Sir Marmaduke Darrell. These two coheiresses, and their husbands, conveyed this maner and estate to

Henry Cornelison, Esq; of Bracksted-lodge. [See in the other Volume, p. 139.]

It was purchased with that estate by Peter Du Cane Esq; together with Tollesbury-Wic in this parish.

GORWELL and PRENTISES are styled Maners, but subordinate to that of Bourchier's-hall, of which they hold by the service of half a knight's fee; and keep no courts.

Prentises is at the South-west end of this village; and Gorwell-hall, or Gerwells, about half a mile from it, on the right hand side of the road leading from hence to Maldon.

They both belonged to Bilegh-Abbey; and, at the time of the suppression, were lett in farm to John Hogan for 21 years, at the rent of 9l. 14s. 4d. (t).

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted them to Thomas Lord Cromwell (u).

Upon his disgrace they returned to the Crown, and were allotted with the maners of Tollesbury, Boneshall, and High-hall, for the maintenance of the Lady Anne of Cleve, as she was styled; if she lived in England (w). After her decease they came again to the Crown, and continued there till 29 June 1566, when Qu. Elizabeth granted them to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester (x).

Mr. Roberts, of Kent, had them some time ago, and alienated them to Mr. Robert Taylor, of London.

Andrew Wharton, of the Middle Temple Esq; was the next possessor. He sold Gorwells to Mr. Francis Jessop, of Bedford, and the latter sold it again to John Goodman, of Tollethunt-Knights, yeoman.

It belongs now to his nephew

Mr. John Wilkin.

Prentises was alienated by Mr. Wharton to Mr. Hawes of Chelsey, whose daughter brought it in marriage to John Purcel, of Clifford's-inn, Gent.

It is now the estate of Henry Lamb, Esq;

The Maner of BOHUNS-HALL, otherwise Bowns-hall, vulgarly Bones-hall.

The mansion house stands a little below the Church.

To what Religious House, whether St. Martin's le Grand, or Tiptree, or to whom else, this belonged originally doth not appear. For we do not find mention of it till 1539, when it was granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, by the name of the Maner or Farm called Boneshall in Tollesbury (y). Upon his attainder it came to the Crown.

In 1589, it belonged to Francis Craddock Esq; and Gervase Howley, who had license, 22 February that year, to alienate it to Margaret Whettell (z). But, the same year, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to

Thomas Mildmay, and others; to hold in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee (a). They had license, 1 March 1603, to sell it to

James Altham Esq; afterwards Serjeant at law, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and knighted

At the time of his decease 21 February 1616; he held this maner of Boones-hall. — Sir James Altham Kt. his son and heir, then 29 years old, succeeded him, holding it in capite, as above. He departed this life 15 February 1623-4, leaving — Sutton Altham, his son and heir, born 27 August 1622, and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Frances (b). Sutton dyed 19 July 1630, whereupon his two Sisters, — Elizabeth, then 10 years old, and Frances, 9, became his coheirs (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 33. 60. 488.]

To whom it belonged afterwards for a while we do not find.

Osmond Beauvoir, of Downham Esq; purchased it some years ago; and it belongs now to — Osmond Beauvoir Esq; Rolls farm belongs to Mr. Robert Bailey; and the Mill house farm to Mr. Robert Spooner.

Mrs. Montgomery; Mr. Kirby; Mr. Edward Monk; William Corbet; Samuel Chinnery; Robert Keyes; William Brand; Moses, and John Fletcher, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Mr. John Taylor gave three pounds a year, out of lands in Tollethunt Knights, to such poor labouring men of this parish as could maintain themselves without assistance from the parish.

Here is a Fair June 29.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Tower embattled are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged, with one of the Maners, to Berking Nunnery. The Rectory, or great Tithes were appropriated to it; and a Vicarage ordained, about the year 1373; the Advowson of which continued in the Nunnery till its suppression; when both Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage came to the Crown.

The 10th of February following, they conveyed them to Thomas Freshwater Esq; and John Freshwater, and their heirs; and they presented to the Vicarage in 1616. Pursuant to a decree in Chancery, they sold the premisses, 3 March 1627, to Thomas Sandford Gent. and his heirs. William Sandford succeeded him, and presented in 1670, and 1677. John Sandford, of Bishop's Stortford Esq; sold the Rectory in 1720, to Samuel Rusb, of the Park, in South-wark Esq; and it hath continued in his heirs ever since. But the Advowson of the Vicarage seems to be in other hands.

This Rectory is a small Maner. The Parsonage was on the South side of the street, but is now down, and only a Barn standing. To this Maner belong 30 acres of copyhold, and 10 acres of demesne lands, and some Houses; and all the great Tithes of the parish.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1584 l. 2 s. od.

W I N S T R E E,

JOINS on the West to that of Thurstable; has that of Lexden on the North; is bounded on the South by the Sea; and on the East by the River Colne. In its greatest length from west to east it is about nine miles; and from north to south where broadest about five miles.

The name is derived from Wina, a name not uncommon among the Saxons, or win, victory, and treo, or treop, a tree, or wood. The Normans disguised, or corrupted it into Wensifstrea, Wensifstreu, and Wensetre; and some have turned it into Winstred.

This Hundred belonged anciently to the Priory of West Mersey (d), granted to it undoubtedly by Edward the Confessor.

Upon the Suppression of that Alien Priory it came to the Crown, and hath ever since been under the power of the High Sheriff of Essex for the time being.

As to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, it is within the Archdeaconry of Colchester.

In this Hundred are twelve Parishes, of which I treat in the following order.

Layer Marney.	Peldon.
Layer Breton.	Great Wigborough.
Layer de la Hay.	Little Wigborough.
Abberton.	Salcot Verli.
Fingringbo.	West Mersey.
Langenbo.	East Mersey.

It may seem unaccountable to some, why these two small Districts, of Thurstable and Winstree, should be dignified with the name of Hundreds, when Becontree and Harlow are reckoned but Half-Hundreds. The way of accounting for that, is, That when, in the Saxon times, the Hundreds were divided and settled, the former were better peopled, and fuller of inhabitants, than those of Becontree and Harlow, which were then chiefly Forest. For, on this coast there were then many Salt-works, and a great deal of Navigation and Commerce carried on.

L A Y E R.

In the north part of this Hundred, adjoining to that of Lexden, are three contiguous Parishes, so called, distinguished by the Names of their ancient most considerable owners, the Marneys, Bretons, and de la Hay.

The name is otherwise written in records Layre, Leyre, Legra, Lega; and may be derived either from the Brook running through them, which is supposed to have been called by the Britons, or Saxons, Lare, or Lire.

There is such a Saxon word as Legepe, burial, but how it could be applied to this place I am not able to judge.

The word deratiocinavit, used here, signifies, he recovered by due course of law. For Derationare, according to Du Fresne, signifies, 'litigare, in jure agere, jus suum disceptare, ad rationem ponere, causam suam coram judice rationibus probare.' The old French word for it is 'derainer, ou desrener;' words used in the Laws of William the Conqueror, § 27. and the Grand Coutumier de Normandie. In our Common Law, the word deraign generally signifies to prove, to make out.

The learned T. Madox's observation is, That 'William I. being seized of the whole Kingdom of England in demeane, retained a great part of it in his own seisin; and other part thereof he granted and transferred to others. He found the Archbishops and Bishops, and several of the Abbots and Pri-

Bishop

Bishop of this see continued in possession of them we do not find. The Marney Family held the chief of them as early as the reign of K. Henry II. under Henry de Essex (e). However this parish is mentioned as holding of the Bishop of London, as low as the year 1627 (f).

The capital MANER here is that of Layer-Marney, so denominated from the noble Family of Marney, who enjoyed it from the reign of K. Henry II. to that of K. Henry VIII.

Their name was anciently written de Mareni, sometimes de Marinis, but most usually de Marney [L].

About the year 1166, William de Marney held a knight's fee under Henry de Essex, of the Honor of Hagnet. — Werry de Marinis was excused by a writ of K. Richard the First, in 1194, from paying scutage for that King's ransom, being after the rate of 20s. for each knight's fee (g). In 1206, a Fine passed between — William de Marinis, pet' and Roger son of Hugh de Marini, tenant, for half a hide of land with appertenances in Legre, the right of the said Roger, and his heirs (h). In 1254, — Ralph de Mareny, uncle of William son of Roger de Mareny, held lands in Layer-Marney (i). And in 1262, William de Marney purchased lands here of Robert le Carpenter and Mary his wife (k). To this William K. Henry III. in 1263, gave leave to impark his Wood of Lire within the precincts of the Forest of Essex. And at the same time he had liberty granted him to hunt within the said Forest. He had obtained before a license for free warren in his maner of Layer-Marney (l). In 1318, either this William, or another — William de Marney, and Catharine his wife, and their son Robert, joined in conveying, by fine, this maner, with appertenances, and the Advowson of the Church, to Robert de Bryche [or Birch] who reconveyed them to William and Catharine for their lives, remainder to their son Robert, and the heirs male of his body; and in failure of such, to the right heirs of William (m). To this — Robert de Marney K. Edward III. in 1335, granted in fee, his Park of Lire, within the bounds of the Forest of Essex, which had been granted to his father William by K. Henry III. He married . . . daughter of . . . Gernon, and had by her — William his son and heir, who by . . . daughter and coheir of . . . Venables, left — Robert his son and successor. He was knighted, and having married Alice, daughter and heir of Richard Layer of Suffolk, and widow of Sir William Bruyn of South Okendon, had — Sir William Marney, High-Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1402. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Richard Sergeaulx: They had 3 sons, Thomas,

William, and John; and a daughter, Anne, married to Sir Thomas Tyrell, of East-Horndon, where they both are interred. At the time of his decease, in 1414, he held the maner of Layer-Marney, with the Advowson of the Church, of the Bishop of London, by fealty, and the service of 18s. rent per an. And the maner of Arden-Hall in Horndon, and Horndon-house, with 100 acres of land; a messuage in South-Okendon; the maner of Gipperake in the Tothams, and 100s. rent out of the maner of Little-Leighes; — Sir Thomas his eldest son and heir, dyed in 1417, leaving only a daughter that was never married. His next brother — William dying single; the third son — Sir John Marney inherited the estates (n); and left — Henry, his son and heir, a man of great abilities and courage; privy Counsellor to K. Henry VII. and K. Henry VIII. [M]; Knight of the Garter; Captain of the guard; made Keeper of the Privy Seal 4 February 1522; and 9 April following created Lord Marney. He departed this life 24 May 1523, and was buried in the Chancel of this Church, with a monument. He held the maner of Layer-Marney of the Bishop of London, as of his Castle of Stortford, by fealty, and rent of 16s. 8d. per annum; and lands and tenements in this parish, Wigborough, and Messing, called Heyns; and other lands, called Betts or Bygods, holden of Sir Robert Drurye, Robert Ratcliffe Lord Fitz-Walter, Sir John Veere, Sir Thomas Tey, John Fitz-James, John Tyrell, William Cartlixewe, and Thomas Ashebye, as of their maner of Laer Marney, by fealty, and rent of 8s. 8d. a year. I suppose this maner was then in those trustees. He held also Ulcomys in Great Wigborowe and Messing; and Tothamstent, alias Sawins; besides Giberake &c. (o). By Thomasine, his first wife, daughter of Sir John Arundel of Lanherne in Cornwall, he had John, Thomas; and Catharine wife of Thomas Bonham, of Stanway Esq; By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Nicolas Wifield, Lord Mayor of London in 1450, he had one daughter, married to Sir Henry Bedingfield. — John, Lord Marney, his eldest son, succeeded him, and departed this life, 27 April 1525, possessed of the same estates as his father; and, besides, of Bodwalls, Ewell more, &c. in Inworth (p). He was twice married. By his first wife, Christian, daughter and heir of Sir Roger Newburgh, he had two daughters, Catharine married first to George Ratcliff, afterwards to Thomas Lord Poynings; and Elizabeth, to Lord Thomas Howard, son to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, created Lord Howard of Bindon. Bridget 4th daughter of Sir William Waldegrave, widow of Thomas Finderne Esq;

1160, to 1181. See Newcourt, Vol. I. p. 34. 213.

[M] K. Henry VIII. made him a grant, in special tail, of the maners of Little Brickhill, Burton, and Elington, with the Advowson of the Churches, in Buckinghamshire; and the Borough of Buckingham; fallen to the Crown upon Edward Duke of Buckingham's attainder. Pat. 13 Hen. VIII.

of Little Horkeſley, was Lord Marney's ſecond wife by whom he had no children.

Of the Lord Marney's coheirs this Maner was purchaſed by Sir Brian Tuke, [mentioned above, p. 117.] Secretary to Cardinal Wolſey, &c. At the time of his deceaſe, 26 October 1545, he held the maner of Layer Marney, and ſeveral lands, tenements &c. thereto belonging; and the Hall meadow, 15 acres; and the Wyke or the Dayrey; and Howfeild in the tenure of Robert Cammocke; alſo Layer Marney Park, and Wood; tenements called Andrewes, Brownings, and Montchenſe's; the Smithe-houſe; 50 acres parcel of this maner, in Great Wygborow; 4 fields called the Parſonage lands; and a tenement called Machyns; all holden of the Biſhop of London, as of his Caſtle of Stortford, and maner of Feryng Bery: He had alſo the New Park, in Meſſing; the maner of Thorp and Thorp-hall and Eaſtlee, in South-Church; [See above, p. 299.] the maner of South-weald; and lands in Naveſtock, Kelvedon-Hatch, Horn-Church, and Havering &c. (q). He married Griſild . . . that dyed 28 December 1538, and had by her, Maximilian, Charles, George; and three daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Reginald Scot; Alianor, of John Maynard, of London; and Mary, of George Touchet, Lord Audley.—Maximilian and—Charles both dyed, as far as we can find without iſſue; the latter 29 March 1547 (r).—George Tuke Eſq; the third ſon, then 23 years old, ſucceeded him; and married Margaret daughter of William Morice of Cheping-Ongar Eſq; by whom he had Brian, Thomas, and Peter. He departed this life in 1573: what iſſue—Brian had by his wife . . . daughter of Pennant, we do not find.—Thomas, the ſecond ſon, married twice. By the fiſt wife Jane, daughter of Edward Bettenson, no iſſue is recorded: But by the ſecond, who was a daughter of Edward North of Walkingham in Nottinghamſhire, he had —Thomas Tuke Eſq; born in 1612. Peter Tuke Eſq; [N] ſold this maner and eſtate to

Sir Samuel Tryon, Kt. and Bart. of Bois-hall in Halſted. [See in the other Volume, p. 251.] He dyed 8 March 1627, holding this maner of the Biſhop of London, part of which was in the tenure of George Tuke: He held alſo a meſſuage here, lately purchaſed of Brian Tuke Eſq; —Samuel, his ſon and heir, then aged upwards of 10 years (s), ſold this eſtate afterwards to

John Ellys, woollen-draper in St. Paul's Church-yard, and Alderman of London; who ſold it again to Nicolas Corſellis, of London, an eminent merchant. John Corſellis, his kinsman, was naturalized in April 1664 (t). Nicolas was ſon of Zeager Corſellis, of Rouſſilier in Flanders, by Joyce his wife, daughter of . . . Vanacker of Amſterdam, or Antwerp. He married Suſan, daughter and coheir of Peter Baldo, of Leyden in Holland, merchant; and, according to Sir Edward Byſhe's Viſitation of London in 1664 (u), had two ſons, James ſon and heir, and Nicolas. Departing this life 19 October 1670, aged 70, he was buried in this Church, with a monument ſet up by his kinsman and executor John above-mentioned. — James married . . . daughter of Peter Fountain of London, merchant, and had by her, Nicolas; Nicolas, brother of James, married Martha, daughter of Maurice Thompson Eſq; (w) ſiſter of John Thompson Eſq; and aunt of Maurice created Lord Haverſham, and had by her Nicolas, John, and Charles, that dyed infants.—Nicolas, ſon either of James, or his own brother Nicolas, [for by all the accounts I have ſeen it doth not clearly appear which he was,] was educated at Lincoln-College in Oxford, and Barrifier of Lincolns-inn: He departed this life 27 January 1727, and was buried in this Church. By Elizabeth his wife, youngſt daughter of Richard Taylor, of Chiſwick Eſq; he had, Nicolas, born at Wivenhou 3 November 1697; Martha, that dyed unmarried; and Elizabeth wife of Capt. James Kettle, one of the elder Brothers of the Trinity-Houſe. — Nicolas Corſellis Eſq; the ſon and heir, was educated, as well as his father, at Lincoln-College, where he took a Batchelor of Law's Degree. In 1741 he married Frances, daughter of Sir Cæſar Child, Bart. by whom he had two ſons, Nicolas, and Nicolas-Cæſar. To the latter he left by Will this eſtate: and dying 10 December 1761 was buried in this Church. Nicolas, the eldeſt ſon, is ſeated at Wivenhou-hall, and hath married Mary, ſecond daughter of Thomas Goodell, Gent. by whom he hath 4 children. [See in the other Volume, p. 188.]

It appears by an Epitaph in this Church, that the Family derived themſelves from Frederic Corſellis, who fiſt found out the Art of Printing [O]. We ſhall not enter here into a diſcuſſion of this curious point, but refer to thoſe that have treated of it in the fullſt and moſt accurate manner; namely M. Mattaire Annales Typographici; Hiſtoire de l'Origine et des premiers Progrès de l'Imprimerie, Haye, 1740, 4°. without a name, but written by Proſper Marchand; Mallinkrot's Collection; Dr. Con. Middleton's Diſſertation; and Palmer's Hiſtory of Printing. Dr. Gerard Meerman, of Rotterdam, who hath lately published two Volumes in 4°. upon this ſubject, and left it as doubtful and obſcure as he found it, aſſerts (x), that it was Laurence ſon of John, deſcended from Theodoric, a natural ſon of Arnulph Earl of Holland, who was the inventor of that excellent art. He was not ſurnamed Coffer, as Malinkrot imagined (y). Cornelius was his undeſſervant and book-binder at Harlem [P]. Mr. Ames obſerves, that the name of Freder. Corſellis was never found as Printer

The demesnes of this Maner are upwards of 400 acres of rich pasture-land, that hath not been broke up many years.

Mr. Corfellis hath also a Farm in this parish called Stevenson's; and another called Thorington.

Laver-Marney-Hall, built as is supposed by Henry Lord Marney, was a grand and capacious House, wherein many persons could be conveniently lodged. The Building was square, enclosing a Court, with a grand Entrance towards the South. This Entrance, or Tower as it is called, still standing, is eight stories high; from whence there is a beautiful and extensive prospect out a great way at Sea, and all round, though this is a flat country. What appears in it about the windows &c. as stone-work, is only white brick earth, framed in moulds. The windows were adorned with many escutcheons of Arms [2]. The Plate of this Tower, which was delivered with the first Part of this History, is to be placed here, facing page 408.

HEYNS, is a capital Messuage in this parish, on a place called Heyns-green; formerly reputed a Maner, but not so now.

The first mention we find of it is in 1523, after the death of Henry Lord Marney. He held lands and tenements called Heyns in Leir-Marney, Great Wigborowe, and Messing (z).

It belongs now to St. John Esq;

CAMOCKS, is another capital messuage and large brick house, in this parish, so named from its ancient owners the Camock family.

John Camock of Laver-Marney, Gent. was father of—Robert Camock, who dyed 1 March 1585, holding the messuage called Duckes, Bigwoods, Goofes and Felces, with other lands thereto belonging, in Laver-Marney, of Peter Tuke Esq; as of this his maner, by fealty in free socage. He held also lands in Laver Breton, Great and Little Birch, Eastthorp, Messing, Langenhoo, East Mersey, Maldon, &c. [R] (a).

The second piece, Quarterly, 1 & 4 argent, a chief or, with a lozenge, gules. 2^d & 3^d argent, a fret sable, a chief argent.

He married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Richard Badby of this place, by whom he had, Thomas, born in 1545, and five daughters. By his second wife, Mary, daughter of John Everton, he had no issue.—Thomas, the son and heir, married, first, Ursula, daughter of John Wyrley of Dodford, in Northamptonshire, and had by her 4 sons and 5 daughters. Living in the Earl of Warwick's Family, he ran away with his daughter Frances, as is related above, p. 323, and had by her two sons, and eleven daughters. He lies buried in the Church of All-Saints in Maldon.

It was purchased by the Rev. James Boys, Vicar of Coggeshall, and Rector of Aldham. Upon his death in the year 1725, it came to his eldest son—James Boys Esq; Counsellor at law, who by Susan his wife had James; and nine daughters. By will he entailed this and other estates upon his son, and his heirs; and in case of failure of his issue, he entailed them upon his daughters, Mary, Lucy, and Martha, for their lives, and the life of the longest liver of them; then to go to the sons of his eldest daughter Dorcas Siday, and the heirs male of their bodies; and for want of issue, to the sons of Mary, Lucy, Martha, Catharine, Susan, and Elizabeth. Their father dyed 14 Novemb. 1753.—James, the son, Vicar of Messing, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Robert Seaman of Colchester, but dying 20 April 1756, without issue, this estate came to Lucy, married to the Rev. Charles Ley, who hath several children.

Jeffrey's is also Mr. Ley's.

Laver-Wic, or THE MORE, is another estate, the House of which stands in this parish, but the lands lye mostly in Salcot Verley. See under that parish.

Mrs. Laurences; and Esdras Cooke, have also some Estates here; and part of Sir John Shaw's, and Sir Roger Burgoyne's lands extend into this parish.

Henry Lord Marney, by his will, ordered a new Brick Alms-house to be built with apartments for five poor men, and one common Kitchen, roofed with timber and tiled; Also a garden enclosed with a brick-wall: They were to have yearly, twenty loads of wood in their yard; out of the profits of his lands; each of them towards their maintenance 10d. every week; and a gown of Ruffet-frize ready made; every year, against Michaelmas. This building is said to have stood by the Pond coming to the House. It was of short continuance; for Qu. Elizabeth in 1592, granted the Almshouse in Laier Marney, to those two greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe (b).

In a low parlour window, were Fourteen coats, Chiefly Marney & Venables, Throgmorton, & Finderne. The 4th was Davenport, Argent, a chevron sable, between 3 crosslets fitché, of the 2^d impaling Throgmorton.

There were also other Coats in the Chamber windows.

Here is also a farm of above 100l. a year, given by Mrs. Prisca Coburne to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, for the relief of such persons as shall be judged incurable. I believe it is called Rockingham's.

The CHURCH dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is large, and hath a north aisle: formerly leaded, but now tiled, the Churchwardens having sold the lead to make bullets during the civil wars in the last century.

The eastern part of this aisle, though not separated from the rest, where it joins to the Chancel, is called the Chapel. It was begun by Henry the first Lord Marney, who directed in his will, that this Chapel which he had begun should be new-made, with a substantial roof of timber covered with lead, and the windows to be glazed with imagery. Likewise that a tomb of marble should be in the wall betwixt the Chancel and the same Chapel, with his image, and those of his two wives; Thomasine on his right hand, and Elizabeth on his left. In this Chapel he ordered mass to be celebrated by two Priests for his soul, the souls of his wives, and of his ancestors.

John Lord Marney, by his Will, dated 10 March, 1524, appoints his own burial in the middle of the new isle, or Chapel, and the Tomb to be of such stone as his father's, or else of gray marble. He appointed also an Image of brass for himself; and, on either side of his Image, one for each of his two wives. Also that at the west end there should be an Altar for a Priest to sing for him perpetually. He gave 250l. towards new building of the Church.

In the Tower, which is of brick, and embattled, are 4 Bells.

William de Marney by license dated in 1330, founded in this Church a College, for a Warden and two Chaplains for two Chantries, which he endowed with thirty acres of land and the Advowson of the Church. This is, according to the license granted; but Mr. Newcourt mentions not the Advowson: And that part of the endowment may have been retracted before the settlement. In the return of the Chantry lands, in the reign of K. Edward VI. one Priest only is mentioned, appointed by John Lord Marney, as it is said by mistake instead of William, who assisted also in the Cure. The yearly value of the lands with which it was endowed was then 10l.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

In 1434, Sir Nicolas Thorley, Robert Darcy Esq; and John Symons presented to it, as Lords of Layer Marney (c), but it doth not appear how their right accrued. At all other times the right of presentation was clear.

Layer-Marney parish is rated to the land tax at 804l.

It hath right of Commonage upon Tiptree-heath.

is east of Layer-Marney. In records it is written Layer Breton, or Britton; and also Layer Barley alias Breton; which names it received from its ancient possessors.

The owner of the lands in this parish, in Edward the Confessor's reign, was Ailmar; Ralph Piperell, and his under-tenant Turolde, held them at the time of the Survey [S].

Here is only one MANER, and the mansion house stands at a little distance west from the Church.

The name of Breton occurs in the List of those that came over with William the Conqueror (d): and the adventurer so called might be one of those who attended Alan Fergent, Earl of Bretagne, at the Battle of Hastings, where he then commanded the rear of William's army.

However, the surname of Breton, le Breton, and Brito, is of great antiquity in this County.

Lewis Brito granted to the Church and Monks of St. John's in Colchester his messuage, with appertinances, in Hercheffede. His son, Ralph Brito confirmed the same; and, moreover, granted to them two parts of the tithes of all his demesnes in Leyre-Breton [T], to hold by the service of 8d. a year. His widow Adeliza granted [T] Those demesnes were about 220 acres. There having been great disputes about these Tithes, between the Abbey and the Rector of Layer-Breton; Simon, bishop of London, 13 November 1364, decreed, That the Rector and his successors should receive those Tithes, paying the Abbot and Convent the yearly sum of two marks, at two terms, viz. them 10s. 8d. a year in Legra, in perpetual alms, for the good of her husband's soul. Their son, Robert le Bretun, gave to the same Monks 11 acres in Legra, for the Souls of his father and mother, who were buried in that Abbey (e).

In the reign of K. Richard I. Robert de Bretton held lands in and about Ardley, and was a benefactor to St. Botolph's Priory in Colchester (f). In the reigns of K. John and K. Henry III. William le Bretun held two knights fees in Lehere in Essex: And Sir John le Bretonne was a Knight banneret in this County in the time of K. Edward I. (g).

In 1325, a Fine passed between William Bretonn, plaintiff, and John Breton, Parson of . . . and Robert son of Hamon de Bryche, deforc' of the maner of Laver-Breton and the Church, by which they were settled on William for life, and after his death on Nicolas his son, and Isabell his wife, and the heirs of the said Nicolas (h). William le Breton presented to the Living in 1329 [U]. Nicolas Britton succeeded his father, and presented to the Church in 1395, and 1397. Alice his wife dyed 6 May 1392, and was buried in this Church with an epitaph.—Richard de Breton held half a knight's fee in Leyr Breton, near Colchester, and was taxed 10s. for his reasonable relief for the marrying of Blanch the eldest daughter of K. Henry IV. with Lewis afterwards Duke of Bavaria, in 1402. The further account we have of this family, is, That William Breton married . . . daughter of . . . Haynes Gent. and had by her William, and Grace wife of . . . Ratcliff. — William, married Anne, daughter of . . . Denham, by whom he had Henry, Francis, William, John, and Thomas, which two last dyed without issue. We hear no more of this family here: They removed to Monckton-Farley in Wiltshire, and seemed to have had no concern here after the year 1420.

The Walden Family, mentioned above, p. 131, 155, appear next possessed of this estate. Elizabeth, widow of Sir John Walden, presented to the Living from 1431 to 1442. Leaving no issue, her husband's two sisters, Catharine, wife of John Barlee junr. and Margaret wife of John Langley, inherited his estates. [See in the other Volume, p. 497. 570. 612.]

Catharine had this for her purparty, and presented to the Rectory in 1465. Her husband John Barlee dyed in 1445 (i). He left two sons, Henry, and William. — Henry, the eldest son, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1467. He held this maner of Laver Breton of Richard Duke of Gloucester, as of his Castle of Hedingham (k); that had been given to him by his brother K. Edward IV. upon the attainder of John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford: By which it appears, that this maner held of Hedingham-Castle. He had also the maners of Wickham Bonhunt, Elfenham, and Moulsham in Wigborough. Departing this life in 1475, he left, by Anne his wife relict of Sir John Colvile — William, his son and heir 24 years old.

He was so imprudent as to assist Perkin Warbeck, for which he forfeited his estates; but was pardoned, and restored to them by K. Henry VII. in 1500. At the time of his decease, 17 March 1520, or 1521, he held, besides the above, the Advowsons of the Churches of Tolleshunt in le Bushe, and of Little Salcote: and was succeeded by his son — Henry Barlee Esq; then 34 years old (l). He was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1523, and dyed 12 November 1529, possessed of the abovesaid estates. By Anne his wife, relict of Edward Lord Gray, he had William; Antony: Anne, wife of Philip Gunter; and Margaret, and Elizabeth. — William, his eldest son and heir (m), was born in 1511. He married Joyce, daughter of John Perjent, and departed this life in 1565, leaving two daughters coheirs Dorothy, and Anne. The latter became wife of Richard Barlee. [See in the other Volume, p. 571.]

Dorothy, the eldest daughter, having this for her purparty, was married, first, to . . . Clapton Esq; by whom no issue is recorded. But by her second husband Thomas Leventhorp Esq; of Albury in Hertfordshire, she had Thomas, and four daughters. At the time of his decease, 8 June 1588, he held this maner of Leer Barlee, alizs Leer Breton, of the Earl of Oxford (n). — Thomas Leventhorp Esq; the son, dying without issue, his Estates came among his four sisters and coheirs, namely,

Anne, married to Richard Franck; Ellen, to John Langmore, next to John Capel, Esq; and lastly to . . . Sidney; Elizabeth, to Francis Hubert; and Dorothy, to Simeon, son and heir of Sir John Brograve of Hamels in Hertfordshire. In 1621, Simeon Brograve and Richard Frank Esqres; John Capel, second husband of Ellen; and John Brograve Esq; held the maner of Laver Breton, and the Advowson of this Church, and of the two others above-mentioned. A fine was levied in 1627, by Sir Leventhorp Frank, and his brother Thorniff, who sold their share, namely a 4th part, to

Thomas Coteale Esq; (o) Simeon Brograve, and others, who had the other parts, presented to this Church in 1632. The next owner of this maner upon record, was

Isaac Rebow of Colchester Esq; knighted 27 March 1693. He presented to this Church from 1677 to 1692, and dyed 6 September 1726. His grandson — Charles-Chamberlain Rebow Esq; inherited after him, and departed this life in 1754. By Mary Nevill, his wife, sister of the Rt. Hon. William Lord Bergavenny, he left an only daughter, named Mary, married to Thomas Adams Esq;

William Day, Esq; had a Farm in this parish, which he sold lately to Mr. Edward Morley; who also purchased another farm adjoining of Joseph Worral: It had belonged to Antony Westup, and to one Ruffel. Mr. Everard hath also a farm upon Laver-Breton-heath.

lies east of the two last. It took its name from the ancient Family of De la Haye.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Alric, a freeman, and Luivin, another freeman, were possessed of the lands in this parish; At the time of the Survey, they were holden by Eustace Earl of Bologne, and Hugh de Montfort. What Eustace held was, The Maner of Layer de la Haye; and Hugh de Montfort's, made up afterwards The Maners of Blind knights, and the Rye. For there are those three Maners in this parish.

The Maner of L A Y E R D E L A H A Y E.

The mansion house stands on the north side of the Church, and is large and fair [W].

This Maner is what Earl Eustace held [X]. It came early into the Family surnamed De la Haye. Maurice de Haia; his son Ralph; Maurice, and Walter de la Haie, sons of Ralph; and William, son of Ralph, were benefactors to St. John's Abbey (p).

About 1210, and 1211, William de la Haye held one fee and a half in Leigre and Meresey, of the Honor of Bologne; and one knight's fee of Henry de Essex, of his Honor of Raleye. A Fine was levied before the King's Justices, in 1250, between Henry de Essex plaintiff, and Ralph de Haia, deforc' of Customs and Services, which Henry demanded of the said Ralph, for a tenement in Leyre; Ralph promised to pay 40s. for scutage when it should fall out, and 9 marks of silver for his relief, and cost of suit (q). Ralph, at the time of his decease in 1253, held in the vill of Lega de la Hay of the King in capite, 120 acres of arable, ten of wood, two of meadow, and one mark of rent; it belonged

This relates to the name of Tey, a possessor here, who living in the time of the wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, had a significant device, Not to be hanged for Talking.

[X] There seems to have been about this time an owner who took his surname from the place. For William, son of John de Leyere, held some land in Leyre, by the Serjeancy of keeping one horse with one sack and one broch, for the service of the King in his wars in Wales, at the King's cost, worth 10s. per an. to the Honor of Bologne, and he owed suit for it to the Court of that Honor. He held also in this place, of Henry de Essex, 140 acres of arable, one of meadow, 20 of wood, and 29 s. 8 d. rent of assize, for one knight's fee. And 60 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, and 6 s. rent of assize, of the Fee of Earl de Ferrers, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. Likewise, in Quendon 100 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 52 s. work: and in Rettenden, 200 acres of arable, 7 s. rent &c. (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 40.] His next heir was William de Monknesey, or Montchenfi, who succeeded him here, and from him this place was called for some time Legre de Montchenfi [Y].

In 1264, a Fine was levied between Lucia widow of Ralph de la Haye petent' and William de Munchenfi tenent' of the maner of Leghere de la Haye, which Lucia claimed as her reasonable dower, wherewith her husband Ralph had endowed her when he espoused her at the Church-door: William granted to her this maner for her life, in the name of dower; the reversion of the same to come to him, the said William, and his heirs for ever.

In 1313, there was another Fine between William de Montchenfi and Alice his wife plaintiffs, and Osbert de Aldham deforc', of the maner of Leyre de la Hay, the right of Osbert; who regranted it to the said William, and Alice, and his heirs (s) [A].

William de Montchenfi, at the time of his decease in 1286, held among others, this maner of Leyer del Haye, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of half a knight's fee; payment of 2 s. yearly to the Prior of St. Ouen at Roan, for ward-penny, and suit at the King's Court of Wytham, from month to month.—William, his son and heir, held the same, in 1301, of John de Frowyck, of the fee

In 1330, it was one of the fees of Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, and holden of him, by the name of Leyre-Hay, of his maner of North-Weld (u).

Hugh de Nanton held, in 1353, Chestwood, 40 acres, parcel of the maner of Leyre del Hay; Afterwards John de Nanton, and Agnes his wife, remarried to Thomas Bretoun in 1358, held this maner of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's service.—Edward Nanton, was son and heir of John (w). It was called from them the maner of Nanton.

Soon after it came into the Family surnamed de Tey; and seated at Aldham and Marks-Tay, under which see a full account of them in the other Volume, p. 197, 198. 202. Roger de Tay married Edith de la Haye, and had by her Thomas, who by Emma his wife daughter of . . . Nawton had Martin de Tey. His great great grandson, — Sir Robert Teye held the maner of Leyre de Hay of the King as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of half a knight's fee: He dyed in 1426. His son—John, held the same, and departing this life in 1440, left—John, his son and heir, who had it at the time of his decease in 1445 (x).—Robert Tey, of Copford, was the next possessor of this estate. He dyed in 1473 (y).—William Tey Esq; his son and heir, held the same at the time of his decease, 8 June 1502 (z); as did his son—Thomas Tey Esq; [B]; who dying 20 April 1543 (a), was succeeded by his son—John. He departed this life 29 May 1568.—Thomas Tey, Esq; his son and successor, got a license, 12 September 1596 (b), to sell this lordship to

The mansion-house is about a quarter of a mile south-east from the Church.

This estate was given to the Priory of St. Botolph's in Colchester; and confirmed to it, with the Church of Legra, by K. Richard I. [D]. It is said to have been given to them for the maintenance of certain Knights who had lost their eyes or limbs in the Crusades. It continued in this Priory till the suppression, and then the Maner, Rectory, and Advowson of the Church were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1536, to

Sir Thomas Audeley, Chancellor of England (d); who had them at the time of his decease 8 May 1544 (e); and bequeathed them by will to his brother Thomas for life, and after his decease to his eldest son—Thomas Audeley Esq; The latter dyed possessed of this maner 31 December 1572, and of several parcels of land thereto adjoining containing 60 acres, called Wards, Gyles, Harveys, Heath-house, Hotts, Savyas, Symmes, Bealdes, Graftons, Underwoods, Glevers and Clevers; and of the Rectory, and Church (f).—Robert, his son, held the same, and dying 27 September 1624, was succeeded by his son—Henry, then 20 years old (g), afterwards knighted. He married, in 1628, Anne Packington, by whom he had Thomas; Henry who dyed young; Catharine, wife of Henry Barker; Mary, and Abigail: These two last were never married. By his second wife, Anne Daniell, he had Henry.—Thomas, the eldest son, dying unmarried and intestate — Henry, his brother inherited the Estates. But being a spendthrift, he mortgaged this, among the rest, to James Smyth, of Upton Esq; He departed this life, unmarried, 12 October, 1741, and was succeeded by his great nephew—Sir Trafford Smyth Bart. who also dying unmarried in December 1765, was succeeded by his nephew—Sir Robert Smyth, Bart. who hath likewise the maner of Rye in this parish; Bere-church, and other considerable Estates in this neighbourhood. The Maner of RYE.

The mansion house is about half a mile north-east from the Church.

This was most probably derived from Eustace's maner.

John de Ry gave it to St. John's Abbey, being described as 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 8 s. rent in Leyre de la Hay. The license in mortmain was dated 28 December 1290. See History of Colchester, p. 142.

It continued in the Abbey till K. Henry the VIIIth's time.

Then Thomas Marshall, Abbot of St. John's, alienated this maner of Rye in Leir de la Haye to Thomas Audeley Chancellor of England, by license dated 20 May 1538 (b). He dyed possessed of the maner or messuage called the Rye, in Laver de la Hay, with appertenance; and 20 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 100 of pasture, and 20 s. rent, called Wardes, &c. as above, under Blind-Knights (i). His nephew—Thomas most probably had it, though it is not set down in the Inquisition taken after his death, but it is in that taken after his son—Robert's, in 1624. He held the maner of Rye, and one messuage and 70 acres of arable, in this parish; and 4 messuages, 100 acres of arable, and 6 of pasture, with appertenance (k). It came as the former from the Audeley family to Laver-Wic; The Farm upon the Hill; and other lands here, belong also to Sir Robert Smyth; and some to Mr. Charles Tiffen; and Henry Cole.

Laver-Cross is a cluster of Houses in this parish, where formerly stood a Cross.

The Church, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a stone Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner of Blind knights, to St. Botolph's Priory, as we have seen above; and the grant was confirmed by K. Richard I. The Monks, or Canons, engrossed the whole Tithes to themselves, and supplied the Church either with one of their own body, or a deputy, so that it became a mere Curacy, and so continues. Though the parish is pretty large, and the value of the tithes considerable, the allowance to the Curate is only a

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Siward, a freeman; and two other freemen, enjoyed the lands in this parish; They were held, at the time of the Survey, by Eustace Earl of Bologne, and his under tenant Ralph de Merci; and by Ralph Peverell; and Odo, under Suene.

In 1364, June 24, there was an Exchange between the Abbey of St. John's and the Priory of St. Botolph's of the Tithes of Blindknights and the Ry: that is the Priory granted to the Abbey the Tithes both great and small of Blindknights, for the Tithes both great and small of the Ry; which the Prior and Convent were to receive whether the maner of the Ry was in the hands of the Abbey, or lett to farm (l). But the Abbey received several portions of Tithes in this parish (m).

The whole Tithes, with the advowson or donation of the Curacy, were granted to the Lord Chancellor Audeley; and came to his nephew Thomas, and his descendents above-mentioned. Sir Henry Audeley, by Indenture 6 June 1628, upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington, settled, among other things [E], all the Tithes as well great as small, of what nature or kind soever, and the farm called the Graftons, upon her, and her issue in taile male; and in trustees, to raise portions for the Daughters, if there should be no son.

Thomas Audeley Esq; dying in 1697, without issue and intestate, his Estates, settled as above, came to his two sisters and coheirs, Mary Audeley, of London, spinster, and Catharine wife of Henry Barker of Monkwick. By the marriage of Mary it came to Francis Canning, of Foxcote in Warwickshire Esq; He dyed 6 February 1732-3, Francis Canning, Esq; his son and heir, hath married Bridget, daughter of Thomas Goodel, Gent. eldest sister of Mrs. Corfellis, of Wivenhou; and hath several children.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 824l.

This is what belonged to Earl Eustace [F].

After Earl Eustace, the next mention we find of this maner is in 1247, when Osbert de Brightlingesey, held of the King in capite, of the Honor of Bologne, one carucate of land in Adburgeton by the service of half a fee; Aveline, wife of Peter de Aldham, Joane, wife of Roger de Blakeham, and Roese, wife of Richard Munerum, were his sisters and next heirs.—Aveline, the eldest, surnamed afterwards de Ramefeye (n); undoubtedly because remarried to a man so called, sold this estate to William de Montchensi, who conveyed it to the Abbey of St. Osith [G], that held it in pure alms of the heirs of the said William (o).

It continued in this Convent till John Colchester, Abbot of St. Osith, by license dated 1 August 1538, alienated it to Sir Thomas Audeley; then Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation (p), who, by will, gave this maner to his executors for twelve years; and then to his brother Thomas for life, and after his decease to his nephew — Thomas Audeley, Esq; and his heirs. At the time of the Lord Audeley's decease, this maner was 14 l. a year (q). It passed from him to his brother, and to his nephew, both named Thomas; and then to — Robert, and to — Sir Henry Audeley, Kt. The latter settled it, with the maner of Badcocks in this parish, upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington, in the manner related under the Church of Laver de la Hay.

The Maner of BADCOCKS.

The mansion house stands about a quarter of a mile north-west from the Church.

This is the part that Ralph Peverell, and Odo, held at the time of the Survey [G].

No mention occurs of it afterwards for a long time; except what follows should relate thereto.

Alice le Despenfer, daughter and heir of Philip Basset, at the time of her decease, in 1281, held in Leghere, in the parish of Ardburthetone, and Peltingdon, a capital messuage 150 acres of arable, and four of meadow, out of which she paid 10 s. per ann. to James de Adburthton, and to William son of Ranulph 14 s. and to the ward of Stortford-Castle 18 d. — Hugh le Despenfer was her son and heir (r). It seems to have been the land which Thomas Whot and John Henny gave to St. Botolph's Priory, in Colchester. For, in 1398, they obtained a license to give to that Monastery 3 messuages, 242 acres of arable, 17 acr. of meadow, and 21 d. in Adburton, Peldon, and Leyre del Hay (s).

We do not find it by the name of Badcocks till 1523; then, Thomas Springe, who dyed 13 June that year, held the maner of Adburton, called Badcocks, with appertenances, and 20 acres of land called Bradfield, and 12 called Tolmanis; and a tenement called Smythes, all in Adburton, of the Dean and Chapter of St.

Paul's, by the service of 50 s. a year, worth 10 l. (t). By this it appears to be the same Estate as Alice le Despenfer had, which held first of the Bishop of London, and afterwards of the Dean and Chapter. — John Springe was heir to his father. [Concerning this Family, see above, p. 228. and in the other Volume, p. 185. 284.]

Thomas Lord Audeley, dyed 8 May 1544, possessed of the maners of Abberton, and Badcocks, with appertenances (u). We do not find a grant of it to him, but he might easily hook it in under the general words in his patent, of all other rights and hereditaments in the town of Colchester and the suburbs of the same, Leyre de la Hay, Peldon, Abberton, Fyngringhoo, Great and Little Wigborow, &c. part of the possessions of the Priory of St. Botolph's; granted to him in the fullest manner (w). His nephew — Thomas Audeley Esq; had this maner at the time of his decease 31 December 1572; and was succeeded by his son — Robert (x); whose son — Sir Henry Audeley, Kt. settled it upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington. And it came, as the Tithes of Laver de la Hay, to

Francis Canning Esq;

The Rev. Richard Boys; Mr. George-Kettle Stephens; Joseph Balley; Thomas Wiltshire; Robert Quarles; Mrs. Nevill, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is small, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a brick Steeple there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of St. Osith till 1538, when the Abbot alienated it, with the Maner, to Sir Thomas Audeley (y). About the beginning of this century, Henry Audeley Esq; sold it, with other Livings in and about Colchester. Sir Francis Dashwood Bart. purchased it afterwards, in order to make an exchange of it with the Crown for the Living of West-Wycombe in Buckinghamshire, where he had a Seat: So that this Living of Abberton is now in the King's gift.

5. FINGRINGHOU is the north-east corner of this Hundred. The name of it is otherwise written in records, Fyngeringho, Fyngrynghoo, Fingrithe: which name seems to be formed from the Saxon words, Fing-ter, ing, and hou. In Æthelfledes will it is called Fingringpaho.

No mention of it occurs in Domesday-book; but it doth in the Charter of K. Edward the Confessor, in 1046, whereby he granted West Merse to the Abbey of St. Owen at Roan in Normandy (z): so that most probably it was reckoned, at the Survey, part of that Abbey's demesnes, and included in their valuation.

Here is only one MANER.

Fringringho-hall, the mansion-house, stands on the south side of the Church.

The

The grant of Edward the Confessor to the Abbey of St. Audoen, or Ouen, was confirmed by William the Conqueror, and K. Henry II. (a). K. Henry I. granted to that Monastery free warren here [H]: which privilege was confirmed by K. Henry II.

This Maner belonging to a Priory Alien, namely in France, was seized by K. Edward III. in 1337, or 1338, during his wars with that Kingdom. [See in the other Volume, p. 407.] However he seems to have afterwards given it up again, at least for a while; for the Prior of Mersey presented to the Vicarage in 1368: but the King himself, having resumed it, presented in 1373, and his grandson and successor K. Richard II. in 1393 (b).

John Doreward, who had a grant of it, with the maner or Priory of Mersey, presented to the Vicarage in 1401; and dyed possessed of this maner, or Priory, in 1420; as did Isabell his widow in 1426. She is said to hold it of the Archbishop of Canterbury in alms (c). For K. Henry V. having, in 1414, entirely suppressed the Priories Alien, he had granted, 2 May 1422, the Priory of Mersey, and the maners of Fingeringho and Pete-hall belonging to it, after the death of Isabella Doreward, to Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, who made these maners part of the endowment of his College of Higham Ferrers, in Northamptonshire (d).

The Master and Fellows presented to the Vicarage from 1434 to 1534. And what they held in this parish, was, a messuage, 300 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 200 of pasture: another messuage, and 30 acres of land: and another messuage, and 13 acres of land.

Upon the dissolution of Religious Houses, these estates fell to the Crown.

In 1542, K. Henry VIII. granted this maner, with appertenances, and the Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, to Robert Dacres Esq; and his heirs; together with the Half Hundred of Winstree. He dyed 20 November 1543, leaving—George, his son and heir (e).

But K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553, granted this maner, with those of West-Mersey, and Pete-hall, and the Rectory, and Advowson of this Vicarage, to

Thomas Lord Darcy, of Chiche, and his heirs; with fisheries, and other ample privileges (f). He departed this life, 28 June 1558. As did —John Lord Darcy, his son and successor, 3 March 1580 (g).—Thomas Lord Darcy his son succeeded him, and was created, 5 July 1621, Viscount Colchester, and 1 November 1626 Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639, Thomas his son being dead before him without issue, his estates descended among his four daughters and coheirs, Elizabeth, Mary, Penelope, and Susan. [For a fuller account of this noble family, see under Chiche St. Ofish.]

Elizabeth, the eldest daughter was married to Sir Thomas Savage, of Rock-Savage in Cheshire, Kt. and Bart. He dyed in 1635. Elizabeth his widow, Countess Rivers, and divers trustees, by lease and release, 24 October 1648, conveyed this maner of Fingringhoe, with appertenances, to

George Frere, or Freer, of London, merchant. He left it by will to his nephew

John Goddard, Gent. from whom it descended to his son —John Goddard, who, 26 August 1707, sold it to Marmaduke Rawdon, Gent. He was son of Marmaduke Rawdon, of Hoddesdon in Hertfordshire, Esq; by Hester, or Esther, daughter of Abraham Corfellis, of East-Smithfield, London, merchant, brother of Nicolas Corfellis, Esq; mentioned above, p. 407. [I].

Marmaduke, the son, was an Attorney at law in Colchester. By Dorothy his wife, eldest daughter of John Freman, of the same place, Gent. he had Dorothy, who dyed young, and Hester. She was married, first, to Mr. Plomer, of Hoddesdon, by whom she had no issue; afterwards, to Joseph Keeling Esq; but dyed 5 September 1756, without any children by him. She conveyed to him this estate, 26 March 1751; and he took to his second wife, 6 January 1757, Mrs. Alice Slaney, by whom he has Joseph-Slaney; John; William; and Mary [K].

A Customary of Fingringhoo, Peete-Hall, and West-Mersey, made at a Court held at Peete-Hall the Tuesday after Whitsontide by Thomas Bonham Esq; King's Steward and William Pirton Esq; Bailiff of the said maners in 1520.—Thomas Camock general Surveyor to the Lord John Darcey Aug. 12, 1572, took a draught of it; The Lords are to have all manner of advantages of the Admiralty of the sea within the Towns of West-Mersey, Fingringhoo and Peete-Hall, and the finder of the said wreck to have half thereof, or the like advantage after the use of the Admirall Court. The Lord, or his farmer, must keep a common bull, or boar. The eldest daughter succeeds to copy-hold estates not partable.

[H] The grant was in these words, Henricus Rex Anglie, Ricardo Episcopo Londoniensi, & Hugoni de Brook, & omnibus Baronibus suis Francis & Anglicis de Essex, salutem: Sciatis me concessisse Holgotto Abbati Sancti Audoeni de Rotomago totum Manerium de Fyngherynghoo in Warennia, & totam terram que ad illud pertinet, & defendo super decem librarum foris factura ne aliquis in ea fuget, neque bestiam in ea capiat, nisi ejus licentia. Et sit in mea defensione sicut mee Dominice Warennie, & siquis intus forisfecerit capite de eo Rectum meum, & Abbati facite habere Rectum suum. Testibus Cancell' Ranulfo, Ricardo Capellano Custode Sigilli, & Willielmo de Say, apud Oysett. This grant was confirmed by K. Henry II. with a prohibition that no body should hunt, or catch a hare, within this maner, without the leave of the said Abbey, or their officers. And the Privilege was allowed before the Justices itinerant in the time of K. Edward II. Placita forinseca, temp. Edw. II.

[I] Arms of Rawdon. Argent, a fesse, gules, charged with a Lion current, or, between 3 pheons heads, sable; on a dexter canton, a rose, gules, pierced, argent. Crest. Upon a closed helmet, on a green hill, a griffin with wings expanded, or.

[K] Arms of Keeling. Sable, a Lion erect holding in his paws an escocheon with a cross crosslet fitché. Crest. Out of a mural crown, a demi-lion, as above.

The Corporation of Colchester, by the Charter of K. Richard I. confirmed by other subsequent ones, had the Fishery in the river Colne from North-bridge to West-ness; which they thought included all the Creeks within the same, but Marmaduke Rawdon Esq; recovered from them the Fishery in the Creeks called North and South Geden, as belonging to his Maner of Fingringhou.

Mr. James Hurlock, and Mr. John Luffe have also some lands in this parish.

John Frere Esq; gave 52 s. per ann. to be distributed on Sundays to the poor in bread, paid out of the Hall estate.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, consists of a body and north and south aisles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled: In the Tower, which is pretty lofty, and chiefly built of flints, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, to

Robert Middleton,	24	April	1703,
James Chalmers, M. A.	7	December	1709,
Robert Wetherell, Cl.	9	May	1717,
John Milton, M. A.	25	July	1749;

the Priory of St. Ouen at Roan in Normandy. The Rectory was appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained, to which they presented in 1321, and 1329; as did the Prior and Convent of their Cell of West Mersey in 1368. John Doreward presented in 1401, and the Master and Fellows of the College of Higham Ferrers from 1434 to 1534. Both Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage were afterwards granted to Robert Dacres, and then to Thomas Lord Darcy, in whose posterity they continued many years (b). They are now in the heirs of the late Mr. William Hickeringill of Colchester, and in Richard Hunt, Esq;

About fourteen acres of land, called Hame, or Church-lands, were given for the reparation of the Church.

6. LANGENHOU, lies south of Fingringhou, near Mersey. It is otherwise written in records Langhou, Lagenho, Langenso, and Langynhoo; a name formed from the two Saxon words, Lang, and hou, that is, long hill.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Ingelric was possessed of this estate; and Eustace Earl of Bologne held it at the time of the Survey [L].

Here is only one MANER.

Langenhoo-hall, the mansion-house, stands on the south side of the Church.

The first mention we find of this parish after Eustace, is in 1284, when John le Despenser, and Margaret his wife, daughter and heir of Clement de Ryseing, recovered 2 carucates of arable land, and 60 acres of wood in Langeho, of Almarie Petche (i).

(b) See above, and Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 266, 267. 2 Edw. III.

The Lord Fitz-Walter was lord paramount of this maner. Under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, Lionel de Bradenham held half a fee and a quarter in Langenso (k). This Lionel was a very incroaching and troublesome man, and endeavoured to appropriate to himself the Geden, part of the Royalty of the river Colne belonging to the Corporation of Colchester, pretending that they lay within his maner [M]; and inclosed them with piles. A commission being thereupon granted, in 1362, to Robert de Herle, Lord Admiral, to enquire by the oaths of legal men and true, after several Sessions and adjournments it was declared and adjudged, by advice of Counsel, that Lionel de Bradenham had nothing to do there. However he still continued his encroachments, and another writ was issued, in 1363, to enquire of the matter, and of several enormities committed by him. In 1364, he was forced to sue for a pardon, in which it is set forth, that he was guilty of many felonies, and had besieged Colchester for a quarter of a year with 200 men, attempting to burn it, and retained at his house in Langenhoo several thieves or robbers as his servants, and had caused three or four people to be drowned in the South-Geedon, for which he took sanctuary (l). In 1368, he passed this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, to John de Sutton, the son, Richard his brother, and others (m). The Sutton family was of Wivenhou.

Sir John de Sutton held it, as one knight's fee and a quarter, under Walter Lord Fitz-Walter, that dyed in 1386 (n).

John de Boys held, in 1406, half a fee here, under Walter Lord Fitz-Walter. His father John Boys held the same under L. de Bradenham, in 1361 (o).

This Estate was next in the Browne Family, mentioned above, p. 137. and in the other Volume, p. 469.

John Browne, who dyed in 1468, held the maner of Langenho, of the Warden of the College of Higham-Ferrers; — Thomas his brother succeeded him and left it to — Robert his son and heir, who held this maner of the Master and Fellows of the College as of their maner of Pete Hall. He departed this life 30 April 1489, — William was his son and heir, then aged 15 years (p). — John Browne Esq; at the time of his decease 27 October 1530, held the maner of Lagenhoo and Advowson of the Church, and one messuage, one mill, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 1000 of pasture, 100 of wood, 3000 of marshland, and 6 l. rent in Lagenhoo, Aber-ton, Peldon, Fyngringho, and Bere Church, of John Earl of Oxford, by fealty; worth 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year. — George Browne, Esq; his eldest son and heir (q), held also this maner, and Advowson of John Earl of Oxford, as of his Castle of Henningham: and departing this life 26 February 1558, was succeeded by his son — Wistan Browne, Esq; who, besides this maner, held a moiety of lands and tenements in this parish called Lexendens, Evelletts, and Wades (r). He dyed 1 August, 1580; As did — Sir Antony, his son and heir, 14 April 1589. The latter leaving no issue, his two Sisters, Catharine, and Jane, inherited his estates (s). [For a more particular account of this family, see above p. 118. 138.] Catharine was married to Nicolds Waldegrave Esq; and Jane, first, to Edward Wyatt, and afterwards to Gamaliel Capel, Esq; They all jointly kept a court here, 27 March 1585 (t). As did the said Nicolas, and Sir William Petre, 26 September 1605.

Nicolas Waldegrave, Esq; at the time of his decease 19 June 1621, held the maner of Langenhoe, and a moiety of the Advowson of the Church, of the Earl of Oxford, by fealty only. — Philip was his son and heir (u).

William Lake Esq; and Thomas Whitebread Gent. kept a court here 7 October 1628; and Richard Weston, Earl of Portland, and Lord High Treasurer, 8 October 1632, and 25 October 1636. It doth not appear by what right, but most probably as trustees; for the Maner continued afterwards in the Waldegrave family.

Philip Waldegrave Esq; kept his first court here 11 September 1666. He was succeeded by his son — John; and he by his son — Philip Waldegrave, Esq; The latter dyed 24 February 1720-1. Having no issue, he gave this estate, and that of Borley, to his kinsman, the eldest branch of the Family,

The Rt. Hon. James, Lord Waldegrave: created Earl Waldegrave 13 September 1729; who dying 11 April 1741, was succeeded by his eldest son — James, Earl Waldegrave: and he dying 8 April 1763, was succeeded by his brother — John Earl Waldegrave. [See above, p. 182, and in the other Volume, p. 318.]

Langenhoo-wic belongs also to his Lordship.

There is a sort of island southward of Parrock, between Mersey-Creek and Parrock, of about forty or fifty acres, belonging to Earl Waldegrave, called Pewet-Island, and lett with the Hall.

Mr. Francis Butcher's daughter; Mr. Mark Lay; Parish Fisher, &c. have also some lands here.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, or St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled: adjoyning to the north wall of the Church are the ruins of an oratory, or Chapel. In a Tower of stone there is 1 Bell [N].

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner.

The parish is rated to the land-tax at 479 l.

the former part of the name, I do not know from whence it is derived.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Turchill a freeman, and another freeman, were possessed of the lands in this parish; at the time of the Survey, William the Deacon held one part, and Suene and his under tenant Odo the other part [O].

They were divided afterwards into two Maners.
1. The maner of Peldon-hall. 2. The maner of the Rectory.

The Maner of PELDON.

Peldon-hall, the mansion-house, stands on the north side of the Church.

This estate was granted by William the Conqueror to William the Deacon, about the year 1086, towards rebuilding the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, which had been newly destroyed by fire [P]. Hence this maner came to be holden of the Bishops of London.

It was so by a Family furnamed from it de Peltindone. In 1282, Walter de Peltindone enfeoffed John de Nevill, and Margery his wife, in this maner, viz. in one messuage, 360 acres of arable, and one wind-mill, which he held of the Bishop of London, by the service of one knight's fee (w). And, in 1332, John de Langwoode did by fine release his interest in this maner of Peltindon, and the Advowson of the Church, to — Hugh de Nevill (x). — John Nevill, of Essex, who dyed 25 July 1358, held for his life, and the life of his wife Alice, this maner of Peltindon, with the Advowson of the Church, of the Bishop of London, by the service of half a knight's fee: remainder to William de Bobun, Earl of Northampton, and his heirs. Alice presented to this Church in 1384 and 1390, and dyed in 1394 (y). [See above, p. 304. 385. and in the other Volume, p. 79. 242. 371. 515.]

Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Lord Chancellor of England, was possessed of this maner and that of Langham: But being forced to quit the realm, for being reputed one of K. Richard the second's evil counsellors, his estates became forfeited. His son, Sir Michael de la Pole, and Catharine his wife, daughter of Hugh Earl of Stafford, petitioned for a restitution of these maners in 1389 (z). But it doth not appear they recovered this.

Some time after it was in the ancient Family of Teye, particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 202.

Robert Teye, who dyed in 1426, held the maner of Peldon, or Peltindon, and the Advowson of the Church, of the Bishop of London, by fealty, and rent of 4 s. per ann. And

4 acres which made up the croft called Seven acre: And the maner of Newhall, of the said Bishop. — John, his eldest son and heir, held also the same, at the time of his decease in 1441 (a). As did his son and successor — John Teye, Esq; who departed this life in 1462 (b), leaving — Henry, his son, born in 1455, afterwards knighted, and Sheriff of this County in 1488, and 1500. He held this maner, and Advowson, of the Bishop of London, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6s. 8d. By Margaret his wife, daughter and coheir of John Grene of Gosfield, which dyed 24 September 1520, he had Thomas, born in 1483; William, and John: Departing this life 9 September 1510, he was succeeded by his eldest son — Thomas (c), who was knighted; and at the time of his decease, 31 December 1540, left four daughters coheirs; namely, Margaret, wife of Sir John Jermye; Elizabeth, wife of Marmaduke Nevill, third son of Richard Nevill, Lord Latimer; Mary, wife of Sir Thomas Nevill, brother of Marmaduke; and Frances, married first to William Bonham Esq; next to Edward Bocking; and lastly to Thomas Bonham (d). Upon the partition of Teye's estates, this fell to the share of Bonham. But, by what means we cannot discover, it came to the Crown: For, K. Henry VIII. 2 September 1545, granted it to

Sir William Petre, Kt. and Anne his wife, and his heirs (e). The 18th of December following, they exchanged it with the King, being then valued at 34 l. a year, for the maner of Cherstowe in Devonshire, and the Parsonage of Ging Mountney in this county (f). K. Edward VI. 4 April 1551, granted this maner, and the advowson of the Church, to

Sir Thomas Darcy, Kt. afterwards created Lord Darcy, and to the heirs male of his body (g). He dyed possessed of it 28 June 1558, as did his son — John Lord Darcy, 3 March 1580 (b) [2]. — Thomas Lord Darcy, son of the last, was created, 5 July 1621, Viscount Colchester, and 14 November 1625, Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639. A son of his, named Thomas, was dead before him without issue; so that his four daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, Penelope, and Susan, divided his great estates. [For a more particular account of this Family, see under St. Ofith.]

James granted it, 13 December 1613, to William Noy, and John Dackmore Esqres. in trust for the Darcy family.

Sir Thomas Savage, Kt. who dyed 20 November 1635. Her father Earl Rivers, by his will dated 14 March 1636-7, appointed her his executrix. The 26th of October 1647, she settled this estate in trustees, viz. Richard Viscount Lumley, Henry Nevill of Cressing-Temple, and Isaac Creme, Gent. in order to have it sold. Accordingly it was purchased by

Mr. Thomas Reynolds, who kept his first court here 10 September 1650. He was born near Ipswich in Suffolk, of good parentage; and settling in Colchester became an eminent clothier, by which he accumulated a considerable estate. He built the large brick house without East-gate, now belonging to John-Blatch Whaley Esq; and was Mayor of Colchester in 1662. By Margery, his wife, daughter of Samuel Decoster, of London, merchant, who dyed 15 April, 1649, he had four sons and four daughters. He himself departed this life 29 April 1665, aged 61 years, and was buried in the south aisle of St. James's Church in Colchester, where a monument is erected to his memory. — Samuel Reynolds Esq; his eldest son and heir, was chosen one of the Burgesses in Parliament for Colchester in 1681, and 1688. He married Judith, daughter of Thomas Samford, of Colchester Esq; by whom he had Samuel, George, Thomas, John; Judith, and Susan. And dying 23 August 1694, aged 52 years, was buried near his father, under a black marble grave-stone, with an epitaph. — Susan, the youngest daughter, was married, first, to Mr. George Jolland; afterwards, to the Rev. Francis Powell. She dyed in 1750, having had by her second husband, William-Samuel Powell, William; and Susan. — Samuel Reynolds Esq; eldest son and heir of Samuel, who dyed in 1694, married Frances daughter of Charles Pelham, of Brocklesby in Lincolnshire Esq; a branch of the noble family of Pelham Duke of Newcastle, and had by her, Samuel who dyed several years ago without issue, and — Charles. The latter married . . . daughter of . . . Anderson Esq; and had a son and a daughter, who both dyed young. He himself departed this life in 1760, and by will left this, and other estates at Little Bentley &c. to his kinsman,

The Rev. William-Samuel Powell, D. D. Archdeacon of Colchester, and Master of St. John's College in Cambridge [R].

The RECTORY is also a Maner, and had 30 acres belonging to it at the time of the Survey. It keeps a court, and hath some quit-rents. Out of it is paid a pension of three pounds a year by the Rector to the Crown.

Thomas Tey, of Layer-Marney Esq; who dyed 20 April 1543, held lands and tenements called Newports; in Peldon; and a capital messuage called Samptons Wyke in Peldon and Sampton; and all those lands, tenements &c. belonging to the said capital messuage and the Wyke; and closes called Abbots nine acres, Abbots twenty acres, Abbots seven acres, and Abbots four acres called Woodcroft, in Peldon and Sampton, with appertinances, formerly belonging to the Abbey of St. Osith: and another messuage with a croft adjoining called Poysecroft, alias Tye-house feild, in Peldon, with commonage in the West-streete; and two crofts here called Stonerock, and Brakefeild, late Thomas Morrant's, of Great Wigborowe: also a messuage and lands called Nevards, in Leyr de la Hay, and Bretton, and Great Birch: all which he held of William Bonham Esq; and Frances his wife; as of their maner of Peldon (i).

Mrs. Great; Mr. William Mendham; John Ward; Thomas Green; John Wayland; John Eley; Samuel Bullock, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Tower of stone there is 1 Bell.

It appears by Domesday-book, that here was a Church at the time of the Survey, but whether it be the same as is now standing, is quite uncertain.

This Rectory was many years appendent to the Maner. But was alienated from it by Samuel Reynolds Esq; and hath since passed through several hands.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 894 l.

Two contiguous Parishes so named stand west of those we have been last describing. The name is formed from the two Saxon words, Þig, a battle, and bunx, or buph, a fort, or castle. These parts were much exposed to the incursions of the pirating northern Nations, as I have frequently observed, and therefore here might be some fortification to oppose their landing; in or near which some remarkable Battle was fought.

What renders it most probable, is, that near the Church of Great Wigborough there is a Tumulus, probably thrown up to cover the slain; which, upon wasting of the bodies, may have sunk to its present low state.

The name is otherwise written in records, Wiegheberga, Wigheberga, Wigberwe, Wykebyrh.

8. GREAT WIGBOROUGH is the largest of the two, as the name denotes.

The Nunnery of Berking had part of this parish before and after the Conquest; Aluric, a freeman, had another part, which Hugh de St. Quintin held at the time of the Survey.

These produced two Maners, 1. The maner of Abbess-hall. 2. The maner of Moulsham.

The Maner of ABBESS or ABBOTS-HALL took that appellation from the Lady Abbess of Berking [8]; or from the Abbot of St. Osith, who had a Maner here.

The mansion house is large, and lies about a mile south west from the Church, towards and not far from Salcot-Verley.

This Estate belonged to the Cellereffe of the Nunnery; and the collector of Wigberwe paid 10l. by even portions at the two feasts of St. Michael and Easter (k).

It continued in that House, or in St. Osith, till the dissolution of Monasteries. K. Henry VIII. granted it, 10 April 1540, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (l).

Upon his attainder it soon fell to the Crown again, and was appointed toward the maintenance of Lady Mary, afterwards Queen Mary I. In 1545, the same King granted to Charles Tuke Esq; and his heirs, the maner of Abbots-hall in Wigborough, and Abbots grove 12 acres; to hold in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee (m). He dyed 29 March 1547, possessed of Abbots-hall, and the grove, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 20 of wood, 40 of marsh, 100 of furze and heath, and 6l. rent, holden of the King, as above. He held also, in this parish, Layer-Marney, and Messing, a messuage, called Vyners, and 40 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 20 of wood, 40 of marsh, and 20s. rent, of John Danyell Esq; by fealty, and other lands in Wigborough, and Layer Marney. — George Tuke, Esq; his son and successor, held the same at the time of his decease (n). [Concerning this family, see above, p. 407.]

Qu. Elizabeth, 12 February 1562, granted the maner of Wigbarghe, otherwise Wigberghe, or Great Wigborough, Salcote, and Tollesbury, &c. to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk (o). He was reckoned the greatest subject in England, but imprudently forming a design to marry Mary Queen of Scots, and entering into a conspiracy against Qu. Elizabeth, he was arraigned 16 January 1572, and beheaded 2 June following, and his estates were confiscated to the Crown. He married, first, Mary second daughter, and one of the heirs of Henry Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel. His second wife was Margaret, only surviving daughter and sole heir of Thomas Lord Audeley of Walden. By the former he had — Philip, who bore only the title of Earl of Arundel, and by the second, Thomas. — Philip, the eldest son, was restored in blood by a special act of parliament in 1580, but afterwards being thought guilty of disloyal practices, and condemned to dye, his estates came to the Crown, and Qu. Elizabeth presented to this Living in 1591. — Thomas, the second son, being restored in blood in 1584, Qu. Elizabeth granted him, in 1594, this Maner with the Advowson of the Church. He was summoned to Parliament in 1597 by the title of Baron Howard of Walden, and created Earl of Suffolk 21 July 1603. [See in the other Volume, p. 549.] (p). Departing this life 28 May 1626, he was succeeded by his eldest son and heir — Theophilus, Earl of Suffolk, who, at the time of his decease 3 June 1640, transmitted this estate to his eldest son and heir — James Howard, Earl of Suffolk. He sold it, 17 March 1647, to Chaloner Chute, Esq; and John Aylet, of Fering Gent. together with the maner of Salcote in Wigborowe, for the sum of 3500 l. (q). John Aylett conveyed it to

Sir Mark Guyon, of Coggeshall, Kt. who presented to the Rectory in 1688. He bequeathed this estate, by will 10 March 1689, to his son William; and, if he dyed without issue male, to his two Daughters, Elizabeth, and Rachel. The first became wife of Edward Bullock, of Falkborne-hall Esq; but dyed in child-bed, as well as her child, within the month.

Rachel, the other daughter, was married to Thomas Guyon Esq; and afterwards to John Bullock, of Dynes-hall in Great Maplested Esq; younger brother of Edward above-mentioned. They had issue John, who did not marry; and — Rachel. She dyed unmarried, and, without a will, in 1765; whereupon her real estates descended to her kinsman, and heir at law, John Bullock, of Falkborn-hall Esq; who enjoys This, among the rest; and her personal estate came to her kinsman, Lieutenant-Colonel Mordaunt Cracherode, Governor of Fort St. Philip in Minorca. [See in the other Volume, p. 118, and 279.]

The Bullock Family had been long seated, and had Estates before, in this neighbourhood, particularly at Loftes in Great Totham. [See above, p. 384.] Edward Bullock, who dyed 10 February 1595, held in Great and Little Wigborowe, a messuage and lands called Skippetts; a messuage, and 30 acres, and crofts of land adjoining, with appertenances, of Sir John Cotton, as of his maner of Copthall, by fealty, and rent of 14d. per ann. and other lands elsewhere (r) [T].

The Maner of MULSHAM took its name from William de Mulsham, who had it formerly: It is otherwise called Moulsham. The House stands a little way north-east from the Church.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Aluric, a free-man, had this estate: Hugh de St. Quintin held it at the time of the Survey [U].

It was afterwards holden of the Honor of Mandeville, by the Families of Pateshull, att Lee, Barle, and Leventhorpe. But as we have given a full account of them, a little above, under Tollefont-Knights and Laver-Breton, p. 393. 410. we shall beg leave not to enlarge upon them here. The Arms of Pateshull are on the roof of the Chancel of Salcot-Wigborough Chapel [W].

In the Feodary of the Honor of Castle-Hedingham we have the following succession of the lords of this maner. Wigborowe and Salcot-Virley, Maner called Mulshams. Walter de Pateshull in 1351. Robert Gedding in 1356. Walter at Lee in 1384. John at Lee,—John Barley, and Sir William Thirlewhite, in the time of K. Barley* in 1505.—Richard Franke Esq; Simeon Brograve, and John Longmer Gent, in right of Mary, Dorothy, and Helen, their wives; and Elizabeth, wife of Francis Huberd Gent, sisters and coheirs of Thomas Leventhorpe Esq; held this maner of the Honor of Castle-Heningham, by one knight's fee.

SALCOT-WIGBOROUGH, is a Hamlet to Great-Wigborough. The Lord of Gr. Wigborough maner has a Pound near this Church. The name seems to be from a Salt-work, or store-house here; for Cote signifies a little house, or building. In Peldon we find one Saltwork, to which the water might be conveyed from Pisleet creek. Salcot, though now a poor decayed Village, is reported to have been a Market Town [X], and a considerable place, the Streets having been paved. The fair and Part of this estate belonged to Sir John Peakes, Lord Mayor of London in 1687. His only daughter and heir Margery brought it in marriage to Sir John Shaw, of Eltham Bart. [X]. He dyed 11 December 1721, leaving his son and heir—Sir John Shaw, Bart. In September 1716, he married Anna Maria one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Thomas Barnardiston of Kedington-hall in Suffolk Bart. and departing this life 4 March 1738 9, was succeeded by his only son—Sir John Shaw, Bart.

A third part of this estate belonged to the late John Wake, of Colbe-Priory, Esq;

The Hyde, an estate here so called, belongs to Mr. Kilham.

Philip Roberts Esq; Mr. Philip Havens, and Mr. Massingarb, have also estates here.

And Mrs. Houffaye has two farms.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Stephen is of one pace with the Chancel, leaded. In a Tower of stone are 2 Bells. It stands on the top of a hill, from whence there is a very extensive prospect at Sea, and all round.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the capital maner, and in the gift of Berking Nunnery till its dissolution. K. Henry VIII. granted it, 10 April 1540, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (y). Upon his attainder it fell again to the Crown, and continued in it till Qu. Elizabeth gave it, with the maner, to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. His son Thomas Earl of Suffolk had it with the Maner, as related above. James Earl of Suffolk alienated it, and it was in Sir Mark Guyon in 1680.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 891 l. 1 s. 0 d. and Salcote-Wigborough, at 142 l. 2 s.

lofty building of the Church, now a Chapel to Wigborough, and the Chantry here, give some countenance to the tradition.

The Church stands near the Creek, which parts it from that of Salcot-Virley; they are so near one another as to have founded a tradition, ever to be met with in the like case, that two sisters not agreeing, each built a Church for herself. This is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled; the Tower has one bell. 'Tis not improbable, that this and Salcot-Virley were once the same vill, as the name seems to shew. The

This steddiness procured him a seat in Parliament, without the trouble of canvassing; besides the dignity of Baronet: and especially the advantageous place of being one of the farmers and collectors of the Customs. difficulty of passing the Creek to go to Church, might induce the lord of Virley to build one for his tenants. This, which is now esteemed but a Chapel, makes much the greater appearance.

In this Church there was formerly a Chantry, well endowed [Y].

9. LITTLE WIGBOROUGH lies south-east of the other, nearer the sea.

Got, a freeman, was possessed of this estate in Edward the Confessor's reign: Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Vital, held it at the time of the Survey [Z].

Hamo Dapifer, Steward, or Sewer, of Normandy dying without issue, left his great possessions to his elder brother Robert Fitz-hamon, whose eldest daughter and coheir, Mabel, brought this in marriage to Robert Earl of Gloucester, natural son of K. Henry I. He dyed in 1147. His eldest son—William, by Hawise, daughter of Robert Boffu, Earl of Leicester, left at the time of his decease in 1173, three daughters, Mabel, Amice, and Habel. Amice, the second, was married to Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford; and in her right her eldest son—Gilbert de Clare inherited the Earldom and Honor of Gloucester.

Here is only one MANER.

Copped-hall, otherwise Cipped, or Cipt-hall, stands near the east end of the Church.

Under the Earls of Gloucester, this maner was holden by an antient Family surnamed Senanz, de Cennants, Senance, Septvance, or rather Sept Vanns, de Septem Vannis, i. e. of Seven Fans. Robert Senanz, who dyed in 1253, held of Ralph de Suford, in this parish, 300 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, pasture of marsh worth 22 s. 7 d. a year, and rent of assise from the free tenants 37 s. 3 d. ob. qa. and 2 pounds of pepper; by the service of 2 knights fees, with dower.—Robert, his son and heir, was 3 years old (t). Under Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford,—Robert de Cennants held two fees in Wykebyrh (u). Of Elizabeth de Burgh, Lady of Clare, William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, held jointly with Richard Dallese, this maner of Wiggebergh, in 1354. His nephew—John was his heir (w). And yet we find it after that in the Sennanz family. For in 1364,—William de Septvanz granted this maner to William de Boudon, and his heirs: And, in 1376,—William, son and heir of Sir William de Septvance, released to Walter de la Lee, and Robert de Teye, Kts. &c. all his right in the maner called Copped-hall in Little Wygebergh, with the Advowson of the Church (x). However,—Robert Senance held, in 1398, two fees in Little Wigbergh, under Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, who had one lets in Wigberue (y).

John de Boys and Thomas Bataile had this maner, and presented to the Living, in 1390.

The next possessor of this estate upon record was Richard Bukland, Esq; who dyed in 1435. He held this maner of Little Wiggebergh, called Copped-hall, with the Advowson of the Church, of Richard Duke of York, as of his Honor of Clare, by knight's service. The son of his daughter—Agnes, namely, Richard Wichingham Esq; was his next heir (z).—Agnes, most probably daughter of these, and wife of Nicolas Sharpe Esq; held for the term of her life, this maner of Copped-hall, and lands, tenements, rents and services, in Great and Little Wiggebergh, Salcote, and Peldon, with the Advowson of this Church, of Cecily Duchels of York, as of her Honor of Clare, by fealty, and yearly rent of 1 d. Remainder to Thomas Cotton, Esq; born in 1444 [A], and to Joanna his wife, daughter of the said Nicolas and Agnes: Agnes departed this life in 1484 (a).

Thomas Cotton, married, first, Margery, daughter of Philip Wentworth, by whom he had a daughter. By his second wife, Joanna above-mentioned, he had Robert, John, Leonard a priest, William; and Etheldreda, wife of John Bassingbourn. At the time of his decease, 20 July 1499, he held this maner of Copped-hall, with the Advowson of the Church, of the Honor of Clare, as above (b). His eldest son and heir—Sir Robert Cotton, of Landwood in Cambridgeshire, held also the same, and dying 18 July 1517, left, by Alice his wife, daughter of . . . Thornborough, and widow of Sir Nicolas Griffin,—Thomas, his son, then 10 years old. He departed this life, 30 March 1526.—John, his posthumous son (c), succeeded him; and dyed in 1593. By Isabella his wife, daughter of William Spencer, he left his son and heir—Sir John Cotton, of Landwood, Kt. who otherwise written Saleott-Verley, and Vyrley, or Salcott cum Verley, and sometimes styled Little Salcot, stands opposite to the other Salcot, on the north side of the Creek. It is very thinly inhabited, having only three farm-houses, and about four cottages. The greater number of people, chiefly Seamen, live in the other Salcot.

In them they have continued ever since.

10. SALCOT VIRLE.

This parish had the additional name of Verli from Robert de Verli, who held it at the time of the Survey under Robert Gernon: It had belonged before to one freeman [B]. Robert de Verli had also Laver Breton, and a Maner in Tollethunt-Darcy, now united to the capital maner.

In this parish there is only ONE MANER.

Verli-hall, the mansion house, stands near the Church.

The Family of Verli, though at first holding under Gernon, came at length to be proprietors here. For by an Inquisition upon the death of Aveline, wife to Edmund, second son of K. Henry III. in 1275, it appears, that Robert de Verley held four knights fees of the Barony of Stansted; belonging to Gernon; viz. Tollethunt Darcy, Little-Birche, Saltecote, Copford, and Samantune (d). By which two last is meant part of Copford, and an estate here, and in Peldon.

As to the succession of the Verli, or Verley, Family, it stands thus. Robert above-mentioned was father of—Robert, whose son and heir was—Sir Philip de Verley, who had—Robert, that married Margaret, daughter of Sir Ralph Gernon, by Alianor his wife, daughter of Robert De Vere Earl of Oxford; his son and heir was—Philip, who had two sons,—John, that dyed without issue, and—Roger.

In 1314, Philip de Verli passed this estate to Walter de Pateshull, as appears by a fine between Walter de Pateshulle, plaintiff, and Philip de Verli impedient, of the maner of Salcot-Verli, and Advowson of the Church (e). Walter, at the time of his decease in 1330, held the maners of Berwalden and Salcote Verly, and lands as mentioned above, p. 393. in Wykbergh, Tollebury, Leyre-Marny, and Tollethunt-Knights. —Thomas was his son and heir (f), who must have had a son—Walter, else the Feodary of Stansted agrees not with that of Hedingham, which finds Walter alive in 1351. [See under Great Wigborough.]

This Estate was next in the ancient family of Att Lee, of Albury in Hertfordshire, already mentioned above, p. 393. and in the other Volume, p. 96. 473. 625. Sir John att Lee, who dyed in 1370, held two fees in Salcote Verley under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford, and the Advowson of the Church of St Marys at Salcote, &c.—Sir Walter, his son, held the same fees under Thomas the 8th Earl of Oxford, and departing this life in 1395, left three Sisters coheirs; namely Margery, wife of Robert Newport; Joane, wife of John Barlee; and Alice wife of Sir Thomas Morewell (g). [See in the other Volume, p. 625.] Upon partition of the Estates, this came to the share of Margery, and her husband Robert Newport. He dyed 28 October 1428, and she 20 January 1467. Their son and heir—William Newport, at the time of his decease in 1434, held this maner of Salcote Virley, of John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford.—George, his son and successor, held the same at the time of his decease 27 October 1484 (h). And—Robert his son and heir held it of John the 14th Earl of Oxford, under the name of the maner of More, with appertenenances, in Salcot Vyrley and Tollethunt Knights. He dyed 7 November 1518.—John Newport Esq; his son and heir (i), held the maners of More and Salcott-Virley, and Mill-feild, of John Earl of Oxford; and departing this life 26 May 1524, left an only daughter, Grace, then only eight years old, contracted in marriage with Henry Parker Esq; son and heir of Henry Lord Morley (k). He dyed in his father's life time, in 1550, leaving—Henry, his eldest son and heir, who became Lord Morley, upon his grand-father's death in 1556, and held this maner, at the time of his decease 22 October 1577. — Edward, Lord Morley, his son succeeded him at the age of 24 years (l); and dyed 1 April 1618. His successors were — William, and — Henry, Lords Morley and Montegle. [See in the other Volume, p. 515.] The latter sold this estate to Antony Abdy Esq; Alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1630. [See above, p. 177.] He gave this to his third son — John Abdy, created a Baronet 22 June 1660, and styled of Moors in Salcot, an estate in this parish which hath chiefly gone along with this, as we shall shew presently. Sir John dying without issue, this estate came to his heirs, seated at Albins, and hath descended to them with the neighbouring maner of Bernwalden in Tollehunt-knights. It is at present in Mrs. Crank.

The MORE, styled above a Maner, and belonging to the same Family, is not now acknowledged a distinct Maner, but included in that of Salcot-Verle. It was holden of the Earls of Oxford by Walter de Pattenhull in 1351; by John atte Lee in 1360, and Sir Walter att Lee in 1371; by John Barle, and William Tirwhite; by William and George Newport, in 1446, and 1502; by Robert Newport, in 1518, and by John Newport in 1524 (m).

ABBOTS-WIC; The lands of this estate extend into Salcot-Verli, but the house stands in Great Wigborough. It belongs to Mrs. Crank.

This is reckoned amongst the four knights fees, or part of them, which Robert de Verli held under Edmund second son of K. Henry III. as above said.

The Abbot of St. Osth held one knight's fee under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford, in 1358; which is supposed to be this estate (n).

In the Rental of the lands belonging to the Barony of Stansted, it is called one fee in Salcote Wigbergh and Samanton in le Peeke.

This Samantun belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to two Freemen: Odo, bishop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Ralph son of Turolde, held it at the time of the Survey [D].

Great Panes, an estate here so called, belongs to Mr. Harrison.

And Little Panes to Mr. Philip Havens.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is very small, and tiled. The Tower being fallen down, there is only a small timber inclosure which contains 1 Bell [E].

This Rectory was appendent originally to the Maner of Salcot-Verli, and in the gift of the Families of Pattenhull, and att Lee or de la Lee. When, after Sir Walter att Lee's decease, the estate came to be divided between his sisters, Margery wife of Robert Newport, Joane wife of John Barlee, and Alice as recited above; the Presentation came to be alternate between the Newports who presented from 1410 to 1519, and the Barlees from 1409 to 1557. It hath of late been alternate between the Abdy Family, and that of Rebow; namely Sir John Abdy's heirs, and Charles-Chamberlain Rebow Esq; the latter it seems by a right derived from the maner of Moulsham in Great Wigborough (o).

Salcot is rated to the land-tax at 142 l. 2 s. 0 d. and Virley at 244 l. 2 s. 0 d.

M E R S E Y.

This is an island at the confluence of the River Colne, and of the River Blackwater or Idumanus, where they discharge themselves into the German Ocean. It is parted, on the west and north, from Winstree Hundred by a Channel or Fleete called Pyefleet, which produces the best Colchester-Oysters.

The name is formed from the Saxon words, Mepe, the Sea, or a marsh, and ig, an island: unless the first part of the name should be derived from the word Mæpa, the extremities, or a boundary, this being a boundary here against the sea; but the former appears to me the most probable. It is otherwise written in books and records Meres-ig, Mæres-ige, Meresai, Mere-saia.

This place appears to have been the Residence or Seat of some considerable Roman General, and unquestionably of the Count of the Saxon Shore:

For here are striking Remains of the Magnificence of that people; and this Island stood most convenient for preventing the piracies of the Northern rovers either up the Colne-water or Blackwater-bay.

Upon repairing West-Mersey-hall, and making a new Garden, a fine piece of Mosaic Work was discovered. In the Year 1730, Cromwel Mortimer M. D. Fellow of the College of Physicians, and Secretary to the Royal Society, son of John Mortimer of Toppingho-Hall in this County, went down to examine it, and to take a draught of that part of the Pavement which lies in the Hall-yard. The account he gave of it, with his conjectures on the whole, is as follows: On the right of the gravel-walk which goes from the Green to the Hall-door, about a foot deep, he found the south-east Corner of the Pavement. He first met with a white bordure, twenty-one inches wide, composed of Tessellæ three quarters of an inch square; then a narrow list of black, [E] In the west window of the Church was this Coat, in antique fashion, Gules, a cross azure, charged with 5 leopards faces, or.

three inches wide; and within this a white list, about the same wideness; which three seem to have run through the whole Pavement without interruption: And all the Tessellæ of these parts are but half inch square. Next to the white list runs a wreath or chain, five inches and half wide, of black, blue, and white, beautifully disposed in shades, which ran the whole length of the eastern side, and making a return at the south-east angle, is interwoven with another short wreath, of red, yellow, and white, disposed in shades in the form of an S made square, but separated by a narrow white list, except where they cross each other. Just beyond the red wreath, on the south side, was a white square bordered with black, in the middle of which was a large rose of four leaves, shaded with red, yellow, and white; within this square ran a narrow white list, east and west; close to this, a black, blue, and white wreath, like that on the east side; and within that another white list, an inch and three quarters wide, which seemed to run round the whole work: At the south-east angle of this white list begin two parallel lists of a sort of fret-work, five inches wide and near five foot long, running south and north, joined at the north end by a return of the frets: These frets are alternately shaded with black, blue, and white; or red, yellow, and white; enclosing a white space four foot and half long, and nine inches wide, containing a wreath of six ivy leaves, the stalks and edges of the leaves blue, the middle of the leaves alternately shaded, one with black, blue, and white; the other with red, yellow, and white. At the north end of this fret-work was a square white space, which seemed to be the middle of the east side. Close to the west side of this fret-work ran another white list, an inch and three quarters wide, extending the whole length from south to north. Next to this is a wreath of red, yellow, and white, five inches wide, of the same length with the foregoing. And joining to this is another white list, of the same length, but only two inches and half wide. Then comes a very narrow black list, one inch wide, which seems to run quite round the larger middle square. Along the south and east side of this middle square is a row of diamonds or lozenges, twelve inches in diameter, bordered with white, each containing a knot or wreath crossing at right angles, and alternately composed, one of black, blue, and white; the other of red, yellow, and white; disposed in shades: The intermediate triangular spaces being each divided into three smaller triangles, the middle one being white, the three outer ones blue. Encompassed by these lozenges and triangles, at this south-east corner, was a small square, two foot on each side, surrounded by a narrow black list, within which is a wreath of red, yellow, and white, in shades, five inches wide, enclosing a small white square, bordered with a double list of black and white, having in its middle a Rosaceous flower like the Lotus, consisting of four large leaves lying uppermost, composed of red, yellow, and white; and the points of four other, lying underneath, appearing between in such another small square as this. Wherefore the Doctor concludes there are three of these lesser squares on the east side of the Church-yard pales. And upon digging a hole in the Church-yard about four foot deep, exactly ranging with the first-described lesser square, and west of it, he found such another square, like to it in all particulars, with the same bordure of lozenges round it; wherefore he concludes, there are but two of these lesser squares on the south side.

From these circumstances the Doctor conjectures, that the whole Pavement was of an oblong rectangular form, extending twenty-one foot and half from north to south, and eighteen and half from east to west; having at each angle the blue and red wreaths interwoven; next to them, two of the square white spaces with the large rose in each on the north and south side, with an oblong white space between in the middle of each of these sides. On the east and west sides are the fret-works with the ivy leaves repeated on each side the white space in the middle of each of these sides. Then a red wreath on the east and west sides, and a blue wreath on the north and south sides of a larger square, which forms the middle of the Pavement, containing three of the lesser squares in a row on the western side, and three on the eastern side; all the intermediate Spaces being filled up with the lozenges and triangles.

The Minister and Sextan informed the Doctor, that the whole Church-yard was paved at the same depth, and that most of the coffins are placed on these Pavements, which are of different sorts in different parts of the Church-yard: That in the Chancel they found a Pavement consisting of red Tessellæ, one inch and half square, and forming the rays of large stars: That, west of the Church, they were composed of small tiles, two or three inches square: And that once two old brass Coins were found here. The Doctor revisited this place in 1740, and then saw a grave dug in the Church-yard, eastward of the Church, and due south of the south-west corner of the grand Pavement, where he found part of a Pavement composed of nothing but red Tessellæ; an inch and half square.

From the diversity of these Pavements, contiguous to each other; and, according to the account of the Minister and Sextan, extending near one hundred foot from east to west, and about fifty from north to south, the Doctor imagines, that the grand Mosaic Pavement was not merely the Substratum of a General's tent, but that all these Pavements rather belonged to the Villa of some Roman Prætor, who was invited by the delightfulness of the situation to make this his Summer abode; like that at Weldon in Northamptonshire, discovered in 1738, on the estate of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Hatton.

The Farmer who dwells at West-Mersey-Hall, informed the Doctor, that several small pieces of brass, such as Buckles, Hasps, Styli, and the like, have been found about his yards and orchards; and shewed him a very curious piece, dug up a few years ago: It is a ring of brass, five inches diameter, with small holes in the Border of it, probably to sew a leathern bag to, fastened at top to a swivel, with a loop to pass a belt through. The Doctor takes it to have been the rim of some military pouch; most likely the bag of a Fundator, or Slinger, to carry his stones in.

On

On the other side of the Idumanum, on St. Peter's-Sands, which at low-water are uncovered for a league in the sea, the Doctor met with several curious natural productions, such as star-Fish, sea-apples, various Fuci and Conservæ, some as beautifully ramified as those which have formed the Dendrites or Mocho-Stones. He picked up several pieces of Roman Pateræ, some of which are to be seen in the British Museum.

There, are some Roman Tumuli, or Barrows, in the Island: and the Hill above Manwood Bridge in the road to Colchester, the ancient Camulodunum, is called Roman-hill.

The earliest, nay almost all the mention we find of this Island in Historians, is, that it used to be a sort of Shelter for the roving and plundering Northern nations.

In the year 994, after K. Ælfred had beaten the Danes at Fernham, they fled up the Colne into this island; where the King's army besieged them as long as their provisions lasted. The year following, the remains of several bodies of Danes, and such as had retired into this island, having made incursions into divers parts, took refuge again into Mersey-island: but not caring, or not being able, to winter in the island, they sailed up the Thames, and towed their ships up the river Lee as far as Hertford (p).

A Block-house, or small Fortification, was at the South-east corner of the Isle, to defend the place, and the passage up the river Colne, but now ruinous. The Parliamentarians seized it during the siege of Colchester in 1648. Its present name is the Block-house stone.

During the Dutch wars in the last century, a Camp was kept here to prevent their landing.

This Island is divided into Two Parishes, one called West, and the other East, Mersey; from their situation with regard to one another.

distinguished into two Maners; The Maner of West-Mersey belonging to the Priory of St. Audoen, or Ouen, at Roan in Normandy; and the Maner of Bocking-hall, to the Priory of St. Saviour's in Canterbury, to which it was given with Bocking. The former was subdivided into the Maners of Peete-hall, and Boure-hall.

The Maner of WESTMERSEY.

West-Mersey-hall stands near the Church.

This Maner was given by K. Edward the Confessor, in the year 1046, to the Priory of St. Ouen, at Roan in Normandy [F], as I have observed just now.

That Priory was found possessed of it at the time of the Survey [G]:

On this estate, near the east end of the Church, was founded a Priory by Roger Fitz-Ranulph, dedicated to St. Helene, or St. Peter. It was of the Benedictine Order, and a Cell to the Priory of St. Ouen, which held it, with the Maner and Half Hundred of Winstree, as of the gift of St. Edward King of England.

The time of its foundation is not mentioned, but it must have been soon after the Conquest: For the donation of K. Edward was confirmed by William the Conqueror, and K. Henry II. Some singular privileges belonged to this House; among the rest, that they held these estates in free, pure, and perpetual alms, without any service; and that, on the death of a Prior, the demesnes were not to be seized into the King's hands, by way of custody of the Temporalities (q).

Upon the wars between England and France, the Priories Alien being suppressed, and their revenues given by Parliament to K. Henry V. in 1414; that King, 2 May 1422, granted this Priory and Maner of Mersey, with appertinances, to

This Grant is signed by the King, and signed and confirmed by nineteen of his Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Officers, and great men.

There are still some traces remaining of Deramy's Diche, namely a Ditch or Hedge running from Ponestream on the south-west part, to the north-east side near Braceflete. The Flete mentioned in the grant, is justly supposed to be Pycflete.

Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, and his brother William, Archdeacon of the same. The Archbishop settled it on the Collegiate Church founded by him at Higham-Ferrers in Northamptonshire, his native place, for eight secular Canons, four Clerks, and six Choristers. But the Abbot and Convent of St. Ouen having, with the license of K. Henry IV. and of the Bishop of Enachdun in Ireland, granted this estate to John Doreward and Isabell his wife for their lives; the College of Higham did not come into possession of it till after the death of Isabell in 1426 (r). It continued annexed to that Church till the final Dissolution of Religious Houses, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. in 1542, granted the site of the maner of Westmersey, a maner there called Pete-hall, the maners of Westmersey, Fingringhoo, and Pete, with appertenances, the Half Hundred of Wynstree, the Rectories of West-Mersey and Fingringhoo, and the Advowson of the Vicarages there, to Robert D'Acres and his heirs, to be held in capite by the service of the 20th part of a knight's fee. At the time of his decease, 20 November 1543, he held the maners of West-Mersey, Pete-hall, and Fyngrynhoo, with appertenances, and the Rectories and Advowsons of the Vicarages of those Churches, and 200 messuages, 200 tofts, 2 mills, 200 gardens, 3000 acres of arable, 2000 of meadow, 2000 of pasture, 500 of wood; and 100l. rent, with appertenances, in West-Mersey, Pethall, and Fyngrynhoo; and left — George his son, 10 years old (s).

But K. Edward VI. granted them, 1 June 1553 to Thomas Lord Darcy, of Chiche, and his heirs (t). They all passed, from him, as the Maner of Fingringhoo, to — John Lord Darcy, and to — Thomas Lord Darcy, created 5 July 1621 Viscount Colchester, and 1 November 1626 Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639, without issue male surviving. — Elizabeth Countess Rivers, widow of Sir Thomas Savage, Kt. and Bart. was his eldest daughter and coheir. Her father, Thomas Lord Darcy Earl Rivers having left her his Executrix, she sold this Estate of West-Mersey-hall, or Priory, 4 October 1649, to John Kidby, M. A. Rector of Shenfeild. He dyed in 1694, and having married Anne, daughter of Edmund Plumb of Hawkdon in Suffolk, had by her, among other children, — Edmund, his second son, Rector of East and West-Hanningfeild, in Essex, who dyed in 1718. By Anne his wife daughter of Thomas Selyard, of Penshurst in Kent, Esq; son and heir of Sir Thomas Selyard, Kt. he had — John Kidby, M. D. of Balliol-College in Oxford; who leaving no issue, and a will he had made not being legal, it came to his uncle's daughter and heir at law — Miss Kidby.

The Quit-rents of this Maner are now 28 l. per annum, formerly 32 l.

The Maner of PEETE

is not confined to the Island, but extends beyond

Pyefleete upon part of the continent; and some of its demesnes lye in the parish of Peldon.

Peete-hall, the mansion-house, is about a mile and a half north out of the island, near Peete-bridge.

The causeway leading hence to Colchester is from Peete-bridge, by Peete-Tye, cross Abberton-Green, over Manwood-Bridge, by the side of Blackheath, and enters the Town on the east of St. John's-Abbey.

Le Peete, that is this estate, is mentioned by name in Edward the Confessor's grant to St. Ouen's Priory. And was granted in 1542, by the name of the maner of Pete-hall, to Robert Dacres, with the maners of Fingringhoo and West-Mersey (u), as above-mentioned.

K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553; granted it, with the rest, to Thomas Lord Darcy (w); and it passed with them to his successors — John Lord Darcy, — Thomas Lord Darcy, Viscount Colchester, and Earl Rivers. His eldest daughter, Elizabeth, Lady Savage, and Countess Rivers, sold this, with Fingringhoo-hall 24 October 1648, to

George Frere, merchant, who bequeathed it to his nephew

John Goddard, Gent. His son, — John Goddard left a son — John, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Gardiner, Mayor of Norwich in 1685: A son that he had by her dying an infant, he devised this estate to be sold, after his wife's decease, for payment of his debts, giving the remainder to

Mr. Thomas Bayles, of Colchester:

The latter sold it in 1728 to Mr. Jacob Browne.

The Maner of BOWER-HALL.

The mansion house is about a mile and a half north-east from the Church.

This belonged, as well as the former, to St. Ouen's Priory, and the College of Higham-Ferrers.

It appears by Sir Thomas Montgomery's will, 28 July 1487, that he then held the maner of Bowre-hall in Mersey.

John Abell, who dyed 10 January 1524, held, of the Warden of the said College, the maner of Bower-hall; lands and tenements called Merchants; and other lands and hereditaments in West-Mersey, Peldon, Leyer de la Hay and Bretton, and Salcott (x).

At the dissolution, it came to the Crown. In 1558, K. Philip and Qu. Mary granted it to Sir Thomas White, being parcel of the possessions of Thomas Bacon and Anne his wife (y).

Qu. Elizabeth, 1 August 1599, granted it, with the maner of Brookhall in Tollethunt-Knights, to John Spencer Esq; Alderman of London; who dyed possessed of it 3 March 1609 (z). [See above, p. 394.]

Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her husband William Lord Compton, afterwards Earl of Northampton. He kept his first court here 14 October 1617. — Spencer was their eldest son and heir. He sold this estate to Ralph Fox, of London, merchant-taylor; and he kept a court here 12 October 1627. He was succeeded, as in Brooke-hall, by — Daniel, — James, who dyed 18 May 1710, and — John Fox.

It now belongs to Marcellus Osborne, Esq; who hath married Mrs. Fox.

The Maner of BOCKING-HALL.

The mansion house stands about 2 miles east north-east from the Church.

This maner, or estate, was originally part of the possessions of two noble Saxons, Ætheric and Leofuine, who gave it, in the year 1006, to the Church and Priory of St. Saviour in Canterbury, with the Lordship of Bocking in this County, for the maintenance of the Monks (a). Being reckoned a member of Bocking maner, it hence took the name of Bocking-hall.

The Priory of St. Saviour, then dedicated to the H. Trinity and thence so called, had this estate at the time of the Survey [H]. It continued in that Church till 20 March 1539, when the Priory and Convent of Christ's Church, for it was then so styled, surrendered their revenues to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. upon his settling a Dean and Canons in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury instead of the Monks, 26 May 1542, made this maner of Bocking in Marsey part of their endowment. But, 23 November 1545, they assigned it, with others, to the King, in discharge of 200 l. a year which they were obliged to pay for the maintenance of Scholars at Oxford and Cambridge (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 390.]

It continued in the Crown till 1 August 1599, when Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Bocking, with appertinances; and the site of the same; and marsh and lands, 18 acres, called Le Rey; and 20 acres more, parcel of this maner; to John Spencer, Esq; to hold of the Queen, of the Honor of Hampton-Court, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and not in capite. He held it at the time of his decease, 3 March 1609, with the maners of Bowrehall and Brookhall (c).

Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to her husband William Lord Compton, afterwards Earl of Northampton. [See above, p. 394.]

John Convers, Gent. had it some years ago:

And afterwards Arthur Winsley, of Colchester,

Nathanael Cooke,	B. A. 11 September 1708,
John Brownsmith,	B. A. 7 March 1731,
Stephen Aldrich,	B. A. 20 April 1733,
Charles Lind,	B. A. 2 May 1738,
Joseph Brockwell,	M. A. 13 July 1748,

Esq; who made it part of the endowment of his Hospital in the parish of St. Botolph's in Colchester.

Besides the Estates above-mentioned, there are others in this parish belonging to George Wegg; and James Round; Esquires; and to Mr. Thomas Cook; Mr. William Smythies; Mr. Thomas Wiltshire; Joseph Wayland; James Abbot; Edward Kempton; William Weaver; Edward Webb; the widows Wayland, and Wakelin; two called Maydors, and Northcourts; and the Barrow-hill farm, so called because there is a Tumulus near it: this and another belong to Mr. John Hawes.

There is a dry passage into the Island at low water, every eight hours, over a Beach or causeway, called the Strode or Stronde, signifying a bank or road on the side of a creek, the sea, or a river. For the support and repair of this Strode there is an Estate in the Parish of about 30 acres, more or less, called the Stroud lands and Churchfields. There was formerly elected a Strode-keeper: And in K. Henry the VIIIth's time there was a Church house, now down and forgotten. These lands are holden of the Maner of West Mersey-hall, by feoffees, in trust for repair of the Strode and Church: all is put into one bag; whether disposed of according to the Will of the donor, is uncertain.

Some lands in this parish were formerly holden of the Honor of Bologne: namely by William de la Haye, and Ingelram de Blendett, in 1210: and by John de Blendett in 1256 (d).

Here is a Fair on Whitsun-Tuesday.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, stands near the south-west corner of the island. It consists of a body and a south aisle; but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church went along with the Maner to St. Owen's Priory; and the great Tithes were appropriated to their Cell here, and a Vicarage ordained to which they presented till suppressed. It was afterwards in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Higham-Ferrers College from 1435 to 1525. And then came, with the Maner, into the Darcy family, and since into that of Kidby.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 858 l. 1 s. 0 d.

The Vicarage was holden many years by sequestration.

Survey [I]. [See an account of him above, p. 272, 273.] His grandson—Henry de Essex forfeiting his estates on account of his cowardise, in K. Henry the Second's reign; this was granted probably to the same person that had Stanford-Rivers.

For, in 1210, and 1211, Richard de Rivers held Mersey of the Honor of Haganet (e); it being lett to him by the King, and worth 15 l. a year (f) [K].

Whether he came into this by marriage of Maud de Lucy, as he did into Stanford, which bears his name nothing shews, [See above, p. 128. and in the other Volume, p. 115.]—William de Rivers had free warren in Martsey, in 1267 (g). At the time of his decease in 1276, he held this maner of Est Mersey of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Reylie, by the service of half a knight's fee.—John, his son and heir, followed him two years after, departing this life in 1278, and left—William, his son (h) under age, and in wardship to Giles de Fenes [L].—John, son and heir of this William, gave K. Edward I. in 1302 or 1303, fifty shillings for his relief for this half knight's fee, which his father William had holden of the King in capite in Meresly (i).—Sir Richard de Rivers was possessed of this estate in 1325: At the time of his decease in 1332, he is styled lord of Est Mersey, and husband of Alice de Luckambroc. He left—Robert his son and heir (k).

In 1390, Alice daughter of Alianor Mary, and wife of Edmund de la More, released to Sir Robert de Swynborne, and Ralph Chamberlain, and their heirs, all her right in the maner of Est-Mersey (l). This Sir Robert Swynborne married Joane daughter and heir of Sir John Boutetort, with whom he got a considerable fortune. By her he had 5 sons who dyed without issue; and two daughters, Alice, wife of John Helion; and

Margery wife of Nicolas Berners Esq; [See in the other Volume, p. 233. 564.] These last had an only daughter

Catharine, married to Sir William Fynderne; who in her right became possessed of this, and other great estates. He dyed 15 May 1462; as did his son—Sir William 18 December 1515; and—Thomas Fynderne Esq; their son, 10 March 1523 (m). The latter leaving no issue, the estates descended to

Anne, wife of Sir Roger Wentworth, of Gosfield. She was daughter and heir of Humfrey

Tyrell, of Warley Esq; by Isabell, daughter and heir of John Helion Esq; whose mother Alice was one of the sisters and coheirs of Thomas, son of Robert Swynborne, above-mentioned. [See in the other Volume, p. 235. 332. 381.] Sir Roger dying 9 August 1539, was succeeded by his eldest son—John Wentworth Esq; who, 1 July 1544, exchanged this maner with K. Henry VIII. for that of Wethersfield, as appears by an Inspecimus in 1615 [M]. [See more concerning this family of Wentworth in the other Volume, p. 372. 381.]

This estate belonged in the last century to one Col. Edward Bellamie, citizen and fishmonger, who dyed 28 August 1656, aged 59, and was buried in this Church, with an inscription. Of one of his successors it was purchased by

Sir Ralph Creffeld, of Colchester, Kt. who departed this life 22 June 1732, and was succeeded by his grandson—Peter Creffeld Esq; He dyed in November 1748.—Thamar, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to James Round, Esq; eldest son of William Round of Birch-hall Esq; He hath also here Bromans; Paulfreemans; Block-house, and Ivy-house.

The Maner of REUSHALL, otherwise Reveshall, or Rufall, and Northlands, was visibly so named from the Rivers family, part of whose inheritance it was.

The mansion house is above a mile north from the Church.

We find no account of this maner till 1368, when William, son and heir of Hugh Groos, is recorded to hold a moiety of the maner of Reueshale in Merseye, of Lionell de Bradenham, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee (n). He was also lord of the Maners of Little-Bentley, New-hall in Tendring, and Hamstall in Wikes. His moiety of the maner here was settled by his brother—Sir John Groos in trustees for maintenance of a Chantry Priest in the new Chapel of Bentley Church, who was to have 8 l. 3 s. and two hundred fagots from the three maners above-mentioned. The lands apportioned for that purpose, were, the moiety of one messuage, 240 acres of arable, 130 acres of marsh, and 30 s. rent in Est-Merseye, holden of Sir John Sutton, by knight's service. This moiety, according to the same Grant, was conveyed to the Abbey of St. Osith, who were to keep his Obit, and, I presume, pay the Chantry money (o) [N].

The other moiety was granted to the Abbey by Alice, late wife of Thomas Shepey, daughter and heir of Walter de Wotton (p). [See under Little Bentley.]

Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor, had a grant of this estate at the Suppression, for at the time of his decease, 8 May 1544, he held the maner of North-Lands in East-Mersey (q). He gave it to his brother — Thomas Audeley, of Bere-Church, Esq; who dyed 31 December 1572, possessed of the maner of Northlands, alias Revevshall, in East-Mersey. — Robert his son and heir succeeded him (r), and had for successors — Sir Henry Audeley, Kt. — Thomas, and — Henry Audeley, Esqres.

The latter waiving his estates, this came into the possession of James Smyth Esq; From him it hath descended to — Sir Robert Smyth, of Bere-Church, Bart. [See above, p. 14.]

This estate contains about 101 acres.

There is another Estate, or capital Farm, in the southern part of this parish, called Rufalls.

Sir William Capell, who dyed 6 September 1515, held the maner of Rufalls, with appertenances, of Sir William Findern, as of his maner of Est-Mersey. — Sir Giles Capell was his son and heir (s).

In 1558, Qu. Mary and K. Philip granted this maner, late parcel of the possessions of Sir Giles Capell, to Sir Thomas White (t).

Sir John Spencer, who dyed 3 March 1609, is recorded to have held this maner of Rewfalls and East-Mersey, with the site of the same, and 1 messuage, 1 garden, 1 orchard, 300 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 40 of wood, and 100 of furze and heath, with appertenances, in Rewfalls and East Mersey; of the King, as of his maner of East-Greenwich, in free and common socage. — Elizabeth, his daughter, was married to William Lord Compton (u). See above, p. 394.]

Other Estates in this Parish, are, North-house, and Martels, Mr. William Smythies's. — Nashes, Bockets, Frankland, and Eastland, George Wayland's. — Milners, and Nevards, John Damyon's. — Cambridges, Brookland, Grey-goose, Nashes, Babells, Jollys, Burrows, Bulls, and Gores, Ezek. The Church, dedicated to St. Edmund, consists of a body and a north aisle, and the Chancel hath a north Chapel, all tiled. The Tower, of stone, is a sea mark, and formerly supported a Beacon. In it are now only 2 Bells, but in times past five.

This Rectory was given by Robert son of Suene to the Priory of Prittlewell founded by him, and continued in the gift of the Prior and Monks till the suppression of Monasteries, except for some years during the wars between K. Edward III. and France. At the general Dissolution of Religious Houses, the Advowson fell to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever since.

The Parsonage is a Maner, and keeps Court lete and Court baron, having 8 copyholders who pay 21 s. 7 d. a year.

T E N D R I N G,

IS a peninsula, being bounded on the South and East by the Sea; on the North by the River Stour, which divides it from Suffolk; on the West by the Colchester Channel and the Hundred of Lexden.

In its form it is almost round; fifteen miles from east to west, and about thirteen miles from north to south.

It takes its name from the Parish of Tendring, standing near its center, where the Hundred courts were originally held.

This Hundred was disafforested by K. Stephen, as appears by the Copy of his Charter below [O].

About fifty years ago, this Hundred was very much covered with wood, and full of foul and bushy ground, but hath been since much cultivated and improved.

The persons to whom this Hundred is recorded to have been granted at different times, with the Castle of Colchester, by several Kings, are as follows.—Stephen Haregood, in 1214.—Guy de Rochfort in 1256.—John de Burgh in 1273. Richard de Hoebrook in 1275.—Sir Robert de Benhall in 1364.—Henry Duke of Lancaster in 1404.—Margaret, Queen of K. Henry VI. in 1446.—Sir John Howard in 1461.—Thomas Kendale in 1485.—John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, in 1496.—Sir Thomas Darcy in 1541.—Antony Kempe Esq; in 1553.—Henry Mack-William Esq; in 1558.—Sir John Stanhope in 1599.—James Hay Earl of Carlisle obtained the reversion in 1629, to him and his heirs for ever. He released it to—Archibald Hay in 1636. The latter conveyed it to—Sir John Lenthall: and Lenthall to—James Northfolk Esq; in 1656. From him it came to his son—Robert Northfolk; and then to—Martha sister of Robert, wife of Hope Gifford Esq; (w).

On the death of Mrs. Gifford her Heiress conveyed this Hundred to the Rev. Mr. Francis Powell, who sold it to Mr. Henry Briggs, and of him it was purchased in the Year 1750, by Charles Gray Esq; the present possessor, and by that means re-annexed to Colchester Castle from which it had been for many Years separated.

This Hundred includeth a Stewardship and Bayliwick. The donation of the office of Steward of the Hundred, and the nomination of the Bayliffs, belong to the proprietor of the Castle of Colchester. Within this Hundred there is kept a Court Baron at Manningtree, every three weeks, for complaints of debt &c. And a Court-lete, or View of frank-pledge, once a year, within twelve days after the Nativity of Christ, for the Parishes of Tendring, Ardley, Lawford, Mistle, Little Bromley, Beaumont, and Alresford. The Waste grounds, and Woods thereupon growing, within the precinct of the View of frank-pledge, belong to the Lord of the Hundred; and the offenders in felling the woods, and incroaching on the wastes, or other like offenders, are punished at the court. Waifs and strays within the Parishes aforesaid, and divers others within the Hundred, belong also to the lord [P]. And he hath an Acre and more of land, called the Bayliff's Acre, in Tendring.

The Steward has kept the Sheriff's Torne at Tendring, twice in every year, according to the form of the statute. And to this Torne the parishes of Ardley, Lawford, Little Bromley, Elmsted, Alresford, Great Bentley, Frating, Tendring, Mistle, Beaumont, Great and Little Oakley, Great Holland, Weeks, Bradfield, Wrabnes, and Ramsey, do owe suit and service. This Hundred doth not render any account into the Exchequer; and though the Sheriff of Essex useth to execute process and writs therein, he cannot constitute the Bailiff of the Hundred (x).

I. ARDLEY, is the north-west corner of this Hundred. It is a large Parish, and through it runs the road to Maningtree and Harwich.

The name is derived from the British word Ardh, high (y), and ley, pasture, untilled land.

It is otherwise written in records Aerlege, Ardlee, Ardelegh, Ardeleye, Erdelega, Erleia, Hardley.

The lands in this parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to six Freemen; to two Freemen; to Osbert; and Scapie: At the time of the Survey, the persons that held them, were, Roger de Ramis; Hugh de Gurnai; Robert Gernon; and Geoffrey de Magnaville.

Hence arose the following Maners. 1. The maner of Picotts. 2. The maner of Bovills, and Bradvills. 3. The maner of Mose, or Moos-hall. 4. Martells hall.

The Maner of PICOTTS, otherwise Pigotts, and Pycottys.

The mansion house stands near the west end of the Church: It is vulgarly called Picketts-hall.

This is the part that belonged to Roger de Ramis [2]; of whom and his family having given a particular account in the other Volume, p. 175, 403. I shall beg leave to refer thither, and not repeat it here.—Roger, son of Roger de Ramis, was possessed of this estate in the reign of K. Stephen, and gave the Church to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, as I shall shew presently.

Under this noble Family de Ramis, which held these lands of the King, in capite, by the service of half a knight's fee, they came to be holden early by a family surnamed Picott, and continued in it several years. [See some account of it in the other Volume, p. 411. 601.] In 1194—Ralph Pikot owed 50s. for a relief for half a knight's fee in Reines and Ardeley, of the fee of Henry de Essex: And, about 1210, he held of Roger de Ramis one carucate of land in Erdele (2).—Sir William Picot, his son, was living in 1226, and the jury of Tendring Hundred certified before the Judges itinerant at Chelmsford, that he held 10l. rent in land by the service of keeping one hawking horse (a).—Sir William, his son and heir, held the same, at the time of his decease in 1283. His son—Sir Ralph Pycott, about 1329, sold this maner of Ardelegh to

William de Tey; it being holden of the King, as of the Barony of Reynes, by the service of half a knight's fee (b). In 1350,—Robert de Teye, Lionell de Bradenham, and Milo le Frenshe, enfeoffed Richard de Sutton, and Anne his wife in this maner of Ardeleigh, which was holden of the King in capite, as of the Barony of Reynes, by the serjancy of keeping one sparrow-hawk at the King's Charge (c). In 1400, his son and heir—Robert Teye released his maner called Pycotts, in Ardeleigh, to

John Bobun, and others (d). Notwithstanding which, the Tey family appears afterwards possessed of this estate. For—Robert Tey, who dyed in 1426 or 1427, held the maner of Pycotts of the King, in socage, by fealty, and rent of 2s. to the King. And his son—John Teye Esq; held the same at the time of his decease in 1440, or 1441, leaving—John his son and heir. This latter held also the maner of Ardeleigh; of which, 200 acres of arable, 40 of wood, and 6 of meadow, parcel of the said maner of Ardeleigh, were called the maner of Pycottes, and holden of the King, by the service of one sparrow hawk yearly, or 2s. for the same, in lieu of all services. He departed this life in 1462.—Henry, his son and heir, was but 7 years old (e). In 1522 a fine was levied between John Willoughby, Thomas Baldry, and others, plaintiffs, and—Thomas Tey Esq; and Mary his wife, deforc' of the maners of Pycottys, Bovylls, and Mofse-hall, with appertenances, and 1000 acres of arable, 300 of meadow, 400 of pasture, 200 of wood, and 15 pounds worth of land by the year, the right of Thomas Baldry (f). The fine was to lead to some use not expressed. This Thomas Tey was son of Henry above-mentioned; and a knight. At the time of his decease, 31 December 1540, he held the maner of Piggotts-hall of the King as of his Honor of Swanscomb, by fealty, and rent of 12s. per annum. His four daughters were his coheirs, namely, Margaret, wife of Sir John Jermeye, of Brightwell in Suffolk; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Marmaduke Nevill, third son of Richard Nevill Lord Latimer; Mary, wife of

Sir Thomas Nevill, brother of Sir Marmaduke; and Frances, married first to William Bonham Esq; next to Edward Bocking; and lastly to Thomas Bonham (g). [For a fuller account of the Tey family, see above, p. 412, and in the other Volume, p. 202, 203.]

Upon partition of the Tey estates, this fell to the share of Sir Thomas Nevill, in right of Mary his wife [R]. She dyed 28 October 1544, leaving — Thomas Nevill, her son and heir, 9 years old (b).

William Cardinall, of Great Bromley Esq; was the next possessor of this estate upon record; which he held of the Honor of Swanscomb, and dying 7 August 1568, was succeeded by his son — William Cardinall, Esq; (i).

John Strut, of Hadley in Suffolk, Gent. had it afterwards; and Mrs. Dawson, of the same place. It belongs to Mrs. Dawson, of Gorton.

The Maner of BOVILLES and BRADVILLES is placed next, because we find it styled parcel of the Maner of Ardleigh, in the Inquisition taken in 1462.

It had its name from some ancient owners about the reign of K. Henry II.

The mansion house is about half a mile south and by west from the Church.

This Maner is what Hugh de Gurnai held at the time of the Survey [S]: One of his successors, named also Hugh, forfeited it to the Crown in the reign of K. Henry II. [See in the other Volume, p. 319.] Besides this maner, they had only Fordham and Liston in Essex.

Richard de Bovill, from whom it takes its name, was a considerable man in this place, and a benefactor to St. Botolph's Priory in Colchester in 1189. And, both he and William de Bovill; were, also, benefactors to the Abbey of St. Osith (k).

This maner was holden of the Honor of Clare.

It was as well as the former in the Tey family.

In 1320, a fine passed between William de Teye, plaintiff, and Robert de Teye, and Anne his wife, deforc'd for one messuage, 3 mills, 240 acres of arable, 50 of wood, 8 of alder, and 5 s. rent in Ardley, the right of the said Robert. To have and to hold to the said William and the heirs of his body, of the foresaid Robert and Anne for ever (l). — Robert de Teye enfeoffed in this maner

Richard de Sutton for the term of his life; who held it, about 1361, of the Honor of Clare by the service of one knight's fee. And Gilbert de Clare Earl of Gloucester kept a lete in Ardley every year: The chief pledge paid for himself and his decennary 2 s. the common fine (m). The said Richard and Anne his wife held this maner under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1398 (n). It was again in the Tey family in 1400. For then — Robert, son and heir of Robert de Tey, released his tenement of Bovilles and Bradvilles to John de Bohun (o). — John Teye, Esq; who departed this life in 1440, held this maner of Bovylles and Bradvilles of Richard Duke of York. And his son — John Teye held, in 1462, of Cecily Duchess of York, 100 acres of arable, 8 of wood, 2 of meadow, parcel of the maner of Ardleigh, called Bovills and Bradvills. — Henry, his son and heir (p), dyed 9 September 1510, and was succeeded by his son — Sir Thomas Tey, who, at the time of his decease, 31 December 1540, left four daughters, as related above.

Frances, the youngest, brought it in marriage to her first husband Thomas Bonham Esq; whose son — Thomas Bonham, upon her decease in 1575, paid ingress fine; and sold it, in 1582, to John Southwell. He alienated it, the year following, to Edmund Bedingfeld, Esq; and the latter conveyed it, in 1584, to Richard Bridgewater, L. L. D. After whose decease, — Judith, his widow, came into possession in 1587. Their son — Richard Bridgewater dyed 10 May 1589, leaving — Richard his son and heir; who conveyed this estate, in 1635, to William Theedham, Gent. Of him it was purchased in 1645, by James Arwaker: But the purchase seems not to have gone on, for Bezaleel Gael bought it of William Theedam in 1649; and sold it again to Henry Lamb, of Colchester, in 1665. His son — Henry succeeded him in 1677. And it belongs now to — Henry Lamb, Gent.

The Maner of MOSER, otherwise Moose-hall, Moyes-hall, and vulgarly More-hall.

This was, as well as the former, parcel of the Maner of Ardleigh in 1462.

The mansion house stands near 2 miles south-west from the Church, on the right hand side of the road from Colchester to Ardley.

It is what belonged to Robert Gernon at the time of the Survey [T]. His successors, seated at Stansted-Montfichet, were—William,—— Gilbert——Richard, and another——Richard.

The latter dying about 1258, without issue, his noble inheritance was divided among his three sisters, Margery, wife of Hugh de Bolebec; Aveline, wife of William de Fortz, Earl of Albermarle; and Philippa, wife of Hugh de Playz.
[See in the other Volume, p. 576, 577.]

This appears to have fallen to the share of Aveline, and her husband the Earl of Albemarle.
He dyed in 1241. Their son and heir—William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle, had three sons, who left no issue; and two daughters.

Aveline, the youngest daughter, and only surviving child and heir, was married, in 1269, to Edmund Crouchback, Earl of Lancaster, second son of K. Henry III. But departed this life in 1292, without issue. In her right, her husband held 14 knights fees, as of the inheritance of Richard de Montfichet: and Richard de Pevelin held under him 4 knights fees part of this estate, some of which lay in Ardelegh, and Braham.

After that we hear no more of this estate till we find it in the Tey family. Robert Tey held the maner of Mosehall in 1426, and his son—John in 1440, whose son—John Tey (q), at the time of his decease in 1462, held 200 acres of arable, 20 of wood, and 4 of meadow, parcel of the maner of Ardleigh, called Mose-hall. He was succeeded by his son—Henry (r); whose son and heir—Sir Thomas Tey held the maner of Mose-hall, with appertenances in Ardleigh, Grynsted, Dedham, and Markes, of the King as of the Priory of St. Botolphs in Colchester, by fealty, and 8s. rent a year; and dyed in 1540.
His four daughters were his coheirs, as above-mentioned (s). This maner is said all along to be holden of the Priory of St. Botolph's. By the Inquisition taken in 1462, it appears that one part of the maner of Ardleigh held of the Priory of St. Botolph's in Colchester, namely of the lands they had in Ardley of the fees of Ralph Martell, and Richard de Bovill (t).

In 1570, Peter Penant held Mose-hall of the Honor of Clare.

Then it was in William Theedam, Gent. who sold it to:

John Wall; and from him it descended to his son—Daniel Wall, Vicar of Bromfield; and after him to his four children: One of them —Sherman Wall, of Chelmsford, apothecary, alienated it to

Ralph Creffield Esq; He dyed 12 December 1723.

Charles Gray Esq; who married his widow, enjoys this estate for his life.

The Family have also a Brick house, formerly a seat, in this parish, about half a mile north from the Church:—And a Farm in which the widow of Peter Creffield Esq; son of the said Ralph, remarried to Edmund Affleck Esq; is jointured.

MARTELLS-HALL

vulgarly called Martyns-hall, is the other Maner in this parish.

The mansion-house stands about three quarters of a mile south from the Church.

This is what Geffrey de Magnaville held at the time of the Survey [U].

And it was afterwards holden of the Honor of Mandeville.

The name of Martell it took from a family, that had it as under-tenants, soon after the Survey: They had also Martells-hall in Rivenhall.

William Martell, son of Geffrey, and Albreda his wife, founded the Priory of Snapes in 1155, and gave it as a cell to St. John's Abbey in Colchester. And Ralph Martell had a fee here, part of which he gave to St. Botolph's Priory in the same town (u).

In the reign of K. Henry II. Ralph Martell held one knight's fee here, of Geffrey de Mandeville Earl of Essex.—William was his son (*). Felicia, widow of William, dyed in 1252.
—Ralph, her son, at the time of his decease in 1259, held 10l. in the vill of Hardeley, of the Earl of Hereford, by the service of one knight's fee.—John, his son and heir, held this maner, and departing this life in 1307, was succeeded by his son—William (w). — John Martel, who was living in 1317, married Alice daughter of Benedict de Cokefeild: A fine was levied between them two, plaintiffs, and Ranulph de Cokefeild, deforc' for this maner, with appertenances (x). — William Martell Esq; was the next possessor, and after him—Thomas; that held this maner of the Dutchy of Lancaster: It lay in the parishes of Ardeley, Dedham, Elmefted, and Grynsted. He dyed 26 June 1424, and lies buried in this Church. His next heir was Elias Doreward, son of Walter, and grandson of Elias Doreward, by Anne daughter of John son of Benedict de Cokefeild (y) [W]. He departed this life in 1426, leaving by Joane his wife, three children. Elizabeth; Margaret; and William, only two years old. His widow was remarried to Nicolas Mortimer: and departed this life in 1456. William the son dying in 1438 under age, and without issue,

Elizabeth his sister, wife of David Mortimer, and 22 years old, succeeded him in this and other estates (z). She dyed in 1452. They had two sons Robert and David. — Robert Mortimer, the eldest son, held this maner of the King, as

David, the younger brother dyed 30 March 1494; it seems without issue, for his niece Elizabeth was his heir. They had also the maner of Great Bromley, and considerable estates at Dovercourt and Harwich.

Elizabeth Mortimer, abovesaid, was married to George Gilford (a). They levied a fine of this estate in 1528, and sold it soon after to William Mannock, of Giffords-hall in Suffolk Esq; He dyed possessed of it 8 June 1558, being succeeded by his son—Francis Mannock Esq; then 35 years old (b); who dyed 3 November 1590.—William, his son dyed 15 March 1617.

—Sir Francis, his son, was created a Baronet 1 June 1627, and dyed 20 November 1634. His successors were — Sir Francis, who conveyed this estate to his youngest son — Thomas Mannock Esq; of Great Bromley-hall. He dying without issue, his estates descended to his nephew — Sir Francis Mannock, of Giffords-hall, Bart. and after his decease 27 August 1758, to his eldest son — Sir William Mannock, of Great Bromley, Bart. He departed this life in March 1764, leaving an only child. — Sir William Mannock, Bart. a minor.

For a further account of this Family, see the Baronetage, Vol. II. p. 57. and the other Volume, p. 456.

The quit-rents of this maner are 2l. 11s. 8d.

BADLEY, or Bedley-hall, is called another Maner in this parish.

The house stands about a mile out of the road from Colchester to Maningtree.

The account we find of it is this. William Gilbert of Colchester Esq; who dyed 10 December 1603, held the maner of Badley-hall, with appertinances, in Ardley, and Badley meadow; and a messuage and lands called Croffes. His heir was, — William Harris alias Wolfe, jun. son of Margaret, only sister of the whole blood to the said William Gilbert (c).

It belonged some time ago to Capt. Philips, of Harwich; and now to Mr. Edward Lugar.

Edward Waldegrave Esq; who dyed 13 August 1584, held, in this parish, of the maner of Martins-hall, lands and tenements called Babbis; and of the maner of Shawes, Newbolls-land; parcel of Bradleys; Paines lands, parcel of the same, of the maner of Picotts-hall; and other lands called Bradleys and Babbis (d).

In the reign of K. Henry III. Baldwin Filioll held, in Ardeleye, land worth 40s. by the serjeancy of keeping one Mife (e). — Richard Filioll, who dyed in 1259 or 1260, held this land, called the maner of Arle, of Robert Fitz-Walter. — John was his son and heir (f).

Abells and Knatchbulls, a parcel of about 40 acres in this parish, near the Ipswich road, were conveyed by John Potter to Edmund Styles, 6 November 1601.

Ardley-wic, about a mile and a half west from the Church, belongs to Mr. Robert Baines of Dedham.

Mr. Thomas Baines; John Nuthall Esq; in right of his wife; Mr. Thomas Ingram; John Chaplin; Philip, James, and John, Lugar; Thomas Crofs; William Trotman; Robert Lufkin; John Boughton; Samuel Allen; William Kendall; John Barter; William Beale; Thomas Sidney; John Bones; John Hazel; &c. have also lands in this parish. And here is a Farm, purchased by the Governors of Qu. Anne's bounty, for the augmentation of the Rectory of St. Martin's in Colchester.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, consists of a body and a south aisle: the Chancel is of one pace, rebuilt with brick some years ago, and less than it was before. The south aisle is leaded, the rest tiled. In a stone Tower embattled are 6 Bells. The south Porch is large, and handsomely built with a mixture of free stone and flints [W].

This Church was given, in the reign of K. Stephen, by Robert son of Roger de Ramis to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, in free and perpetual alms (g). In 1237, the Abbot and Convent gave the Advowson to the Church of St. Paul, and to the Bishop of London and his successors, reserving to the Abbey, and to the Vicar of this place 13 marks yearly. Soon after, the Advowson of the Vicarage being reserved to the Abbot and convent, and their successors, with an endowment of ten marks yearly to the Vicar, and a pension of 3 marks to the Abbey; the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to the Archdeacon of Colchester; and so continue, being his corps. As for the Advowson of the Vicarage it fell, at the Reformation, to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever since.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1282 l. 3s. 6d.

2. LAWFORD lies east north-east of Ardley, bounded on the north by the river Stour.

The name is otherwise written in records Lagford, Lalleford, Halleford, and Halford.

K. Harold had the chief part of this parish before the Conquest: Upon his being then defeated and slain, it fell to William the Conqueror. Another part belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Aluric, a freeman; Eustace, Earl of Bologne, held it, and Adelolf, under him, at the time of the Survey.

From hence have arisen three Maners. 1. The maner of Lawford-hall. 2. . . . that of Dale-hall. 3. The maner of Abbots. Besides two other smaller ones.

The Maner of LAW FORD.

Lawford-hall, the mansion house, stands pleasantly, a little way from the Church, and hath a fine prospect on the north. The old part was built by Edward Waldegrave Esq; in 1583, as appeared by a date, but is now taken down; and the new was rebuilt by Edward Green Esq; the present possessor.

This is the chief part, that belonged to Earl Harold, and K. William [X].

In 1269 Peter de Leykam held one fee and a half in Lalleford (b). This is the first time we find it in private hands.

Benedict de Cokefeild, who dyed in 1341, held the maner of Halleford, with the advowson of the Church, of Gilbert de Lay, as of his castle of Frome, by homage, and service of 9 marks a year. And 1 toft, 40 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 30 of pasture, and 40 of marsh, of Robert de Burchier by knight's service. — Edmund was his son (i). From this Benedict it was afterwards called Benett-hall, and the maner of Cokefeilds.

Sir Hugh Stafford, at the time of his decease in 1421, held, in right of Elizabeth his wife daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, one fee in Lalleford called Benethall (k).

From Anne, daughter of John, son of Benedict de Cokefeild, it descended to the Doreward family. For, in 1424, upon the death of Thomas Martell, sufficiently mentioned under the foregoing parish of Ardley, who held this maner of Halleford called Cokefeild of the Lord de Bouchier; Elias Doreward, son of Walter, and grandson of Elias husband of Anne daughter of Benedict de Cokefeild, was found to be his next heir (l).

This estate was next in the Say family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 593, and from them took the name of Lawford-Says. Sir John

Say, who dyed in 1478, held the maner of Halleford, with the advowson of the Church, of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of her castle of Frome: and the other lands, as above set down, of Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex. William Say was his eldest son and heir 24 years old (*). —

Thomas, the second son had some estates in Essex. [See in the other Volume, p. 321. 592.]. Agnes, widow of Sir John, that had been married before to Sir John Fray, dyed also in 1478, and Elizabeth Waldegrave; Agnes, wife of Sir Geoffrey . . . ; Margaret, wife of Sir John Lenam; Catharine, of Humfrey Stafford Esq; and Alice, of Henry Tracy Esq; were her coheirs, the daughters of her first husband (m). — William Say, the eldest son, who was knighted, had two daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, married to William Blount Lord Montjoy; and Mary, to Henry Bouchier Earl of Essex.

Elizabeth, and her husband the Lord Montjoy, to whom this estate was allotted, had one daughter Gertrude, married to Henry Courtney Marquis of Exeter. But he and his Lady being attainted, in 1538, for corresponding with Cardinal Pole, their estates became forfeited to the Crown (n).

Thomas Lord Darcy, and his son — John, held the maner of Lawford, at the time of their decease in 1558, and 1580 (o).

Joanna, daughter and heir of George Ackworth of Luton in Bedfordshire Esq; brought this estate to her husband Edward Waldegrave Esq; third son of George Waldegrave of Smalbridge in Suffolk Esq; In a precept to the Sheriff in 1566, the estate appears to have extended then into Lalford, Ardleigh, Dedham, Great and Little Bromley, &c. and besides the maner of Lawford-hall, alias Lalford-Saies, contained a yearly rent of 10 l. and lands and tenements called Stephens Wicklands; and a salt marsh called Freebornes marsh. The Rectory, or great Tithes, of Boxsted belonged also to Edward Waldegrave (p). Besides one son of his own name, he had four daughters; Anne wife of Humfrey Monox, of Domest. fol. 1. Tit. 1.

Waltham-stow, Esq; Mary, of Isaac Astley, of Melton in Norfolk; Barbara, or Bridget, of Thomas Keightley of Greys, Esq; Margery, of William Clopton of Groton in Suffolk. He departed this life 13 August 1584, aged 70, and was buried in this Church, by his wife, with an epitaph.—Edward Waldegrave Esq; his son and heir, was twice married. By his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew Averill of South-minster, he had one daughter, named Anne; and by his second wife, Sarah, daughter of John Higham of Suffolk, widow of Sir Richard Bingham, he had also a daughter named Jemima. At the time of his decease 12 February 1621 the former was 30 years old, and the latter 17 (q). He held of the King, in capite, the maner of Lawford, alias Lawlesford-hall, with appertenances, and 220 acres of arable, pasture, &c. also lands called Broadfeild, and Wormeseywood; likewise the maner of Dale-hall; a meadow called Stewards hope, and 3 acres, once belonging to St. John's Abbey in Colchester; all in this parish: And the maner of Bretton-hall in Great Stambridge; and the Rectory of Wixe.—Anne, his eldest daughter was married to Drue Drury Esq; and Jemima, the youngest to John Lord Crew of Stene, son of Sir Thomas Crew Kt. Serjeant at law, descended from the ancient family of Crew of Cheshire. These latter had for their purparty the maners of Lawford-hall, and Dale-hall. Their children were, four sons, Thomas; John; Nathanael; Waldegrave: and two daughters, Jemima, married to Edward Montague, Earl of Sandwich; and Anne, to Sir Henry Wright, of Dagenham, Kt. and Bart.—Thomas Lord Crew, the eldest son, married, first, Mary daughter of Sir George Townshend of Rainham, Bart. and by her had John, who dyed young; and two daughters, Anne, wife of . . . Jolliff, of London, merchant; and Temperance, married, first, to Rowland, son and heir of Sir Rowland Alston of Woodhall in Bedfordshire, Bart. afterwards to Sir John Wolstenholme, Knight of the shire for Middlesex. By his second Lady, Anne, daughter and coheir of Sir William Airmine of Osgod in Lincolnshire, Bart. widow of Sir Thomas Wilberhall, Thomas Lord Crew had four daughters; Jemima, married to Henry de Grey, late Duke of Kent; Airmine, to Thomas Cartwright, of Ayno in Northamptonshire, Esq; Catharine, to Sir John Harpur, of Calke in Derbyshire, Bart. and Elizabeth, to Charles Butler, Earl of Arran, Lord Butler of Weston, brother to James Duke of Ormond. Thomas Lord Crew dying thus without issue male, was succeeded by his next surviving brother, The Rt. Hon. and Rev. —Nathanael Lord Crew, consecrated Bishop of Oxford in 1671, and translated to Durham in 1674. He married, first, Penelope daughter of Sir Philip Frowde, Kt. and, next, Penelope daughter of Sir William Forster of Northumberland; but by neither had any issue.

Of the Lord Crew this maner and estate were purchased by Thomas Dent, D. D. Prebendary of Westminster, who dyed in January 1721-2. By Alice his wife, daughter of . . . he had two sons, Charles, and William, and four daughters [X].—Charles Dent, Esq; his eldest son and heir apparent, one of the Commissioners of the Salt-duty, dyed before him 20 December 1718, leaving, by his wife Mary Southwell, only one daughter, named Catharine, who was married . . . to Edward Green Esq; of Staffordshire. They have two sons, Edward, and Charles; and two daughters, Catharine, and Mary.

The Maner of DALE-HALL.

The mansion house is about half a mile east from the Church.

This is what belonged to Aluric before the Conquest, and to Eustace Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey [Z].

It was afterwards in a family furnamed Dale, from which came the present name.

Sibilla, wife of Sir Thomas Dale, held, at the time of her decease in 1416, the maner of Dale in the vill of Lalleford, of the King, in ca. as of his Honor of Bologne, by the service of half a knight's fee.—Thomas de Dale, her grandson, aged 6 years, was her heir (r).—John Dale, who dyed in 1479, held this maner of Halford; and left his son—William, 8 years old (s). At the time of his decease 24 October 1536, he held this maner of Dale-hall in Lawford, and 20 messuages, 400 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 100 of wood, and 40 of furze and heath, of John Earl of Oxford. He had three daughters, Anne, first wife of Alexander Fettiplace Esq; [A]; Joanna, wife of William Wallascott; and Elizabeth, wife of . . . Lynne: This last was dead before him, and had left a daughter, Margaret, two years and a half old. Anne, his eldest daughter was aged 30 years at the time of his decease, and Joanna 24 (t).

[A] Thomas Fettiplace, of Shifford in Berkshire, married Beatrix daughter of John King of Portugal, and had by her —John Fettiplace Esq; who was his third son, servant to K. Henry V. buried in the Church of St. Margarets Lothbury, London. By Jane, daughter of Edward Fabian and widow of John Horn Alderman of that city, he had —Antony, that married Mary, sister of Sir Adrian Fortescue, widow; and had by her—Alexander above mentioned, of Swinbroke, whose first wife was Anne Dale; and his second, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Ashfeild of Chessham in Berkshire Esq; but what issue he left doth not appear.

Thomas

Thomas Lord Darcy was the next possessor of Dale-hall, and dying 28 June 1558 was succeeded by his son—John Lord Darcy, who departed this life 3 March 1580 (u).

In 1590, Qu. Elizabeth granted this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, to Peter Wilcox, and William Wynn (w).

But it came soon after in the Waldegrave family. For Edward Waldegrave Esq; who dyed 12 February 1621, held the maner of Dale-hall, with appertenances, and 200 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, wood, and marsh in Lawford, in the tenure of Richard Sheldrake, William Lynne, &c (x). It descended as the former to the Lord Crew.

It belongs now to Mrs. Burton of Maningtree.

ABBOTS, anciently styled a Maner, was so named because it belonged to St. John's Abbey in Colchester. It is otherwise called Abbots Lawford.

The mansion house lyes on the south side of the Church.

After the dissolution of Abbeyes K. Henry VIII, 9 April 1545, granted the messuage called Abbots in Lawford, belonging lately to St. John's Abbey, to John de Vere, the 16th Earl of Oxford, and the Lady Dorothy his wife, and his heirs. He had license 3 May following, to convey it to John Rither, John Christmas, and John Seaman (y). The 12th of July next ensuing J. Rither had license to alienate it to John Clarke: And he had license, 20 October 1557, to alienate the same to—Richard Clarke (z). He dyed 10 March 1595, leaving—John his son and heir. Fifty acres then part of this estate, he had purchased of Edward Waldegrave (a). And some part of it was called Stewards hope.

Henry Keeler, at the time of his decease, 12 April 1610, held this messuage of Abbots, with appertenances, of the King in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee.—Francis his son and heir was 9 years old (b).

This is now but an inconsiderable estate; and not acknowledged as a Maner. It belonged lately to — Thomas Archer, and purchased of him by

Edward Green Esq;

FEYTES, alias Shawes, is another small thing, partly in this parish, and partly in Dedham and Ardley, that hath born the name of a Maner. It pays 10 s. a year to Lawford-hall; and yet receives quit-rents to the amount of 35 s. a year.

Sir John Raynesforth, who dyed 15 September 1559, held the maner of Feytes, with appertenance, of the Queen, as of the maner of Parke-hall, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 9d. in lieu of all services (c).

It belonged lately to Thomas Lufkin; and afterwards to Mrs. Lufkin of Dedham: now to Mr. John Richardson of Colchester.

Besides the estates above-mentioned, . . . Parish, of Ipswich, Esq; hath two farms; and the widow of Mr. Turner a considerable one in this parish.

Mr. Peckfale gave a house, at the Church-gate, to the Sextan for the time being for ever; provided he keeps it in repair, and pays 8 s. yearly rent to Lawford-hall.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, stands high, with an extensive and pleasant prospect, especially on the north.

Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, and tiled. In a stone Tower are 3 Bells. The Chancel is a fair and spacious fabrick, and the stone-work on the inside most curiously wrought.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner.

Some years ago it was purchased by St. John's College in Cambridge, of Dr. Dent.

The Parish is rated to the land-tax at 896l. 2 s. 0d.

it was holden by Walter the Deacon, and Richard Fitz-Gislebert.

Hence it came to be divided into two Maners: namely, 1. The maner of Little Bromley-hall. 2. . . . that of Braham-hall.

The Maner of LITTLE BROMLEY.

The mansion house stands near the Church; and is upon that account styled Church-hall.

This maner is what belonged to Walter the Deacon [B]. Walter had two sons, Walter Mascherel, and Alexander; and one daughter named named Editha. He was ancestor of the noble family surnamed de Hastings, whence came the Barony of Hastings, consisting of 10 knights fees. Robert de Hastings had it in the reign of K. Henry II. and Little Easton, was the head of that Barony in this County; which by the marriage of the heiress of Robert de Hastings came to the Loveins. One knight's fee was in Bromley, Easton, and Godmanston in the County of Dorset; Wikes in this neighbourhood was another of their knights fees. Little Bromley continued many years in this family of Hastings, which took the surname of Godmanston from their lordship near the town of Dorchester.

Under Matthew de Loveyn, who dyed in 1302, Robert de Godmanston held 4 knights fees in Bromlegh, and in Godemanston (d).—John, his son and heir, held under John de Lovayne, in 1347, four knights fees in Brumle and Godmanston, and paid to the maner of Easton 4 l. (e).—Walter de Godmanston, most probably his son, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1381, and presented to this living in 1364, as did his son—William from 1395 to 1408.—John Godmanston, his son and heir, presented to the living from 1432 to 1446. He was returned as one of the Gentry of Essex in 1433, and was Sheriff of Essex &c. in 1452.—William, his son and successor, presented to the Rectory in 1464 and 1467 (f). He lost his life at Barnet field, 14 April 1471, fighting for K. Henry VI. being a retainer to John de Vere the 13th Earl of Oxford. And with that noble Earl, and Sir George and Sir Thomas de Vere of Wivenhou, attainted of treason by act of Parliament, in 1472. He held this maner of Little Bromley of Henry Earl of Essex; and the maner of Frempton, and advowson of both Churches; and one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 6 of wood, 20 of pasture, in Bromley, Frempton, Misteley, and Ardeley (g). But the noble family of de Vere, and He by the name of William Godmanston of Bremle, Squier, were restored to their honors and estates, in the Parliament that met 27 November 1485 (b) [C].

Joane his widow, having this estate in dower, was remarried to Gilbert Hussy. They presented jointly to this Church in 1491, and she alone in 1495 and 1498. After her decease, Philippa, sister of William Godmanston inherited this estate. By her husband Henry Warner, Gent. she had—Christiana, married, first, to William Brown Esq; who presented alone to the living in 1503, and they two jointly in 1524. Her second husband Humfrey Dymock presented in 1536, in her right.

Sir Ralph Chamberlain had next this estate. His heir was married to Gray; whose daughter and heir

Mary was wife of Henry Cockain, and presented to this living in 1579. Their daughter and heir

Dorothy was married to William Pirton, of Little Bentley Esq; They sold this estate, in 1593, to

Paul Bayning, Alderman of London, it then consisting of 200 acres of arable, 12 of wood, and 8 of meadow; and he paid his ingress fine to the Honor of Clare. He conveyed it again to them in 1598, and they sold it to

Sir Francis de Vere, that brave General, who so distinguished himself during the wars in the Low Countries. He dying 28 August 1608, without issue surviving, was succeeded by his next brother—John de Vere, of Kirby-hall in Hedingham-Castle Esq; who, at the time of his decease 10 March 1624, held this maner of Little Bromley-hall, alias Church-hall: and so did his next brother and successor—Horace Lord Vere, Baron of Tilbury. He departed this life 2 May 1635, leaving five daughters coheirs. Elizabeth, married to John Lord Haughton; Mary, married first to Sir Roger Townshend, afterwards to Mildmay Fane, Earl of Westmoreland; Catharine, first to Oliver St. John, and next to John Lord Paulet; Anne, to Thomas Lord Fairfax; and Dorothy, to John Wostenholm Esq; The Lord Vere's widow survived him till 25 December 1671, and presented to this living in 1663, 1664, and 1671. [For a more particular account of this family, see the other Volume, p. 335, 336.]

Catharine, the third daughter, married first to Oliver St. John, Esq; afterwards to John Lord Paulet; had this for her purparty. The latter sold this estate, 25 November 1675, to

Mr. John Warner, of Sudbury, clothier, who by will, 1 June 1676, bequeathed it to his daughter

Elleanor. She brought it in marriage to her husband the Rev. Richard-Allington Harrison, Rector of West-Wickham in Cambridgeshire. They had an only daughter Mary, married to Mr. Thomas Newman, who was Mayor of Sudbury, more than once; being his third wife. He bought this estate of his father-in-law Mr. Harrison 24 March 1714, and left by this wife an only son—The Rev. John Newman.

This estate was formerly very considerable, containing about 300 acres of demesne land, and 600 acres holden by copy of court-roll.

The Maner of BRAHAM-HALL, vulgarly Breame-hall, otherwise called Nether-hall to distinguish it from Church-hall.

This maner and estate paid a sparrow-hawk, or 6s. 8d. a year, to the maner of Little Easton.

This is what belonged to Richard son of Earl Gislebert in this parish [D]. His successors took the surname of Montfichet.

Aveline, one of the sisters and coheirs of Richard de Montfichet, brought this estate to her husband William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle, about the year 1258. Their only surviving child—Aveline was the first wife of Edmund second son of K. Henry III. and in her right he enjoyed 14 knights fees, as of the inheritance of Richard de Montfichet: and Richard de Pavelin held 4 of them under him, some of which lay in Brabam and Ardelegh. [See above, p.]

It was soon after in a family surnamed de Brumle, or Bromley. In 1347, John de Brumle held the sixth part of a knight's fee in Little Brumle under John de Lovayne, for which he paid a sparrow-hawk on 15 August yearly (i).

Sir John de Brabam, who from hence took his surname, held lands and tenements in Great and Little Bromley, Benteley, Misteley, and Lalleford, in 1357. His heirs held 1 fee in Little Bromle under Albrey de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, in 1400 (k).

There went with this maner lands and tenements called Braham-hall, Marshall, Boltons, Stacyes, and Alphrithes, which were holden of the Honor of Clare, and afterwards of the Dutchy of Lancaster; and paid a relief.

In 1430, John Godmanston paid 27 l. to the feodary of the Dutchy of Lancaster, for the maner of Little Bromley called Marshall and Boltons, purchased of John Cornwallys.

And in 1507 William Brown Esq; made a payment for the maner of Marshall and Boltons, formerly John Braham's and afterwards John Godmerston's in this parish.

So that this maner passed, as the other maner, from Godmanston to Brown: and then to Gray, and Cockain; whose daughter and heir brought it to her husband

William Pirton, Esq; He and his wife sold this estate in parcels; namely BRABAM-HALL, with 78 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, and 8 of wood, holden of the Honor of Clare, to Charles Cardinal, attorney at law, who paid 54 s. for ingress fine, in 1592. He had it in 1626. His son—Robert Cardinal sold it in 1640, to Richard Marlow, of East Bergholt. His son—and then his grandson—John Marlow, of Ipswich, grocer, inherited it after him. It belongs now to the daughter of John Marlow [E], widow of Mr. Sparrow, of Ipswich.

STACYES and ALPHRITHES were sold to Paul Bayning Esq; for which he paid an alienation fine of 6 l. in 1615.

These belong now to Richard Rigby, of Mistley-hall, Esq; is the largest of the two Bromleys, and stands more southerly than the last.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Brihtmar enjoyed this lordship: At the time of the Survey, Ralph Linel held it, and West Manetun [F]. Geffrey de Magnaville had the service of this land.

It was divided afterwards into these two Maners.

The maner of GREAT-BROMLEY.

The Hall, which is the maner house, stands near the north-west corner of the Church-yard.

The noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford were lords paramount of this place: and William de Langvaley held it under them, in K. his wife, daughter of Alan Basset, an only daughter

Hawise, who being put under the wardship of Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, and Chief Justice of England, he disposed of her in marriage to his son—John de Burgh: she departed this life in 1249.—John, their only son and heir, had livery of his mother's lands in 1274; and, at the time of his decease, in 1280, left three daughters; Devorguill, second wife of Robert Fitz-Walter; Hawise, wife of Robert Gresley; and Christian, a nun at Chicksand. [See in the other Volume, p. 190. 511.]

Robert Fitz-Walter enjoyed a moiety of this estate in right of his wife, by the courtesy of England, till his decease in 1325 (m).

Robert Gresley dyed in 1284, and Hawise his wife in 1299. She held a moiety of the maner of Brumleigh of the Earl of Oxford, by the service of half a knight's fee.—Thomas was their son and heir, who departing this life without issue, was succeeded by his sister Joane de Gresley. She was married to John son of Roger De la Ware, and brought a fine estate into that family (n).

One of Robert and Devorguill Fitz-Walter's daughters being married to John le Mareball, brought him part of this estate.—Sir William le Mareball was father of—John, who dyed without issue, in 1316; and of a daughter named Hawise, married to Robert de Morle, that held this estate by the courtesey of England; and dyed in 1360. Their son and heir—Sir William de Morle held a moiety of this maner of Great Bromle, and of the Advowson of the Church, of the Earl of Oxford, by knight's service: As did—Sir Thomas, his son (o). From this family it was denominated Bromley-Morley; But we do not find that it continued any longer in their heirs. [For a more particular account of the Morley family, see the other Volume, p. 511. &c.]

The other moiety of this maner which was in Gresley, came into the Doreward family; but whether by marriage or purchase doth not appear. Thomas Doreward, of Stisted and Terling, had two sons, Martin and Elias. Amicia, or Alice, his wife survived him, and presented to this Living in 1336 (p).—Elias, the younger son, married Anne, daughter of John, sister of William, and of Thomas, Martell, of Martells-hall in Ardley, and had by her—Walter, who presented to this Church in 1380. He made his will 23 August 1423, and left a son; and one daughter, Anne, married to . . . Multho.—Elias Doreward Esq; the son and heir, inherited Martell's Estates in right of his grandmother Anne above-mentioned [G]. He dyed in 1426. By Joanna his wife [remarried to Nicolas Mortimer] he left three children, William, Elizabeth, and Margaret.—William, who was only two years old at the time of his father's decease, departed this life in 1438, under age, and without issue; as did the two younger sisters.

Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, was married to David Mortimer Esq; (q) who presented to this living in 1441. They had two sons, Robert, and David.—Robert Mortimer, Esq; the eldest son, held a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley, with appertenances, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Castle of Hedingham, by fealty and suit of court, worth 20 l. also the maner of Martell-hall in Ardley, and large estates in Dovercourt, Tendring, and Thorp [H].—David, the younger brother, held a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley called Morleis, of the Earl of Oxford, worth 20 marks.—Robert, the elder brother, dyed 22 August 1485, leaving an only daughter, Elizabeth, ten years old (r). David, whether as guardian to his niece, or that some estates fell to him upon his brother's dying without issue male, held at the time of his decease the maner of Bromley, with the Advowson of the Church; and a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley called Morleis, of the Earl of Oxford; and Martells-hall. He left no issue; for his niece

Elizabeth was his heir. She was then 18 years old, and the wife of George Guilford (s); second son of Sir Richard Guilford, Controller of the Household to K. Henry VII. They levied a fine of this maner, and advowson of the Church, in 1525 (t); and had one son named John; and two daughters, Mary, wife of Owen West, second son of Thomas West, Lord De la Ware; and Anne, married, first, to Walter Wodland, and afterwards to Richard Lynne.—Sir John Guilford, the son and heir, married, first, . . . daughter of . . . Fitz-William, by whom he had a son named Richard. By his second wife, Barbara, daughter of Thomas West, Lord De la Ware, he had several sons and daughters. In 1537, a fine passed between

William Cardinal Gent. plaintiff, and Sir John Guilford and Barbara his wife deforc. of the maner of Great Bromley, 4 messuages, 1 dove-house, 4 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 500 of furze and heath, and 20 l. rent in Great and Little Bromley (u). And 13 November 1542, this maner, and the Advowson of the Church, were conveyed by them to the said William Cardinal; who presented to the Living in 1554; and twice afterwards (w). He was an active Justice of the Peace for this County (x). By his first wife, Joane, daughter of . . . Gurdon, of Affington, Esq; he had William; and 3 daughters; Fides, married to Henry Appleton; Rose, to George Sayer; and Joane, to Robert Veysey, Esquires. By his second wife, Lætitia, daughter and coheir of William Knightly, widow of John Clipsby, he had Charles, Edward, Stephen, John, Robert; and Julian, married to Robert Derehaugh. He dyed 8 August 1568, holding this maner of Great Bromley, and the

and pasture, called Painterise: in Tendring, and Manytree, one messuage, 300 acres of arable, wood and pasture, and 3 s. rent:—Lardiner-hall in Thorp: and 200 acres of arable &c. called Folton-hall. Inquis. 2 Hen. VII.

Advowson of the Church, of the Earl of Oxford, by the service of one knight's fee and yearly rent of 2 s. He had also the maners of Coldhall in this parish; Piggots in Ardley; Moverons in Elmsted: and estates in Bradfeild.—William Cardinal Esq; the eldest son and heir, born in 1535 (y), married Mary, daughter of Henry Wentworth of Le Mount Esq; and had by her Anne his only daughter and heir, married to Sir Clement Higham, of Barrow-hall in Suffolk, who presented to the living in 1600.

But still the Maner doth not seem to have gone out of the Cardinal-family. For, 5 June 1607,

William Cardinal, and Edward his brother, did by indenture convey the maner of Great Bromley, and Advowson of the Church, to Nicolas Timperley, and Edward Newport Esq; and the heirs of the latter. These two conveyed the premisses, by indenture dated 4 November 1618, to

Thomas Bowes Esq; This family came originally from York. Thomas Bowes was father of Sir Martin Bowes, Lord Mayor of London in 1545, who had Martin Bowes of Jenkins in Berking Esq;

Thomas Bowes Esq; the purchaser of this estate, afterwards knighted, was a Justice of Peace for this County 50 years; and cruelly busy in the prosecution and execution of some poor silly persons, called Witches [I]. He dyed 3 October 1676, and was buried in the Patron's Chapel in this Church. By . . . his wife, daughter of . . . D'Ewes, he had, Thomas; William, Rector of Tendring, buried here 19 April 1670: and some daughters: Cecily, the eldest, was buried 21 April 1674.—Thomas Bowes, Esq; the eldest son and heir, married Elizabeth daughter of Richard Harlakenden, of Earl's Colne Esq; and, had by her, Thomas Harlakenden; and Mary, wife of John Haynes, of Copford-hall, Esq; He was buried in the Chapel here 28 December 1680.

—Thomas-Harlakenden Bowes Esq; [the son, married Elizabeth, only daughter of Sir Thomas Smith, of Stutton in Suffolk, Kt. and had Thomas baptized 7 October 1686, Elizabeth, baptized 5 January 1687, married to Thomas Mason of Maningtree Esq; and Bridget now the widow of Read Grimston, of Chapel, Gent. These two daughters had no issue. I do not find when he dyed [K]. But, about the beginning of this century, this estate was purchased by Thomas Mannock Esq; youngest son of Sir Francis Mannock, of Giffords-hall in Stoke, Bart. He had three wives, The first was Mary, daughter of Thomas Varvell of London Esq; barber to K. Charles II. and the third, Mary, daughter of Galloway, Gent. but he had no issue by any of them. Charles Beard, and Charles Smith, trustees for Thomas Bowes Esq; conveyed this maner with appertinances by indenture, 3 June 1704, to Sir Cecil Bishop, Bart. and Richard Snow, in trust for Mary, the wife of Thomas Mannock Esq; and her heirs; by way of jointure, most probably. She dyed 15 September 1720, and her husband leaving no issue, Bromley-hall, and Martells hall, fell to the heir at law,—Sir Francis Mannock of Giffords-hall, Bart. and, after his decease, 27 August 1758, to his eldest son—Sir William Mannock, Bart.

(y) Inquis. 10 Eliz. June 27.

[I] An account of it was published at the time, under this title, "A true and exact Relation of the several Informations, Examinations, and Confessions of the late Witches, arraigned and executed in the County of Essex. Who were arraigned and condemned at the late Sessions, holden at Chelmsford before the Right Honorable Robert, Earl of Warwick, and severall of his Majesties Justices of Peace, the 29 of July 1645. Wherein the severall murthers, and devilish Witchcrafts, committed on the bodies of men, women, and children, and divers cattell, are fully discovered. Published by Authoritie, Lond. 1645. 4^o." The Examinations were taken before Sir Harbottell Grimston, Kt. and Bart. and Sir Thomas Bowes, Kt. in March and April 1645. By the Account it appears, That the following persons were executed, on the imputation and accusation of Witchcraft.—At Chelmsford, Elizabeth Clarke alias Bedingfeild; Elizabeth Gooding, of Maningtree; Anne Leech, of Mistley; Elizabeth Harvie, of Ramsey; Joyce Bones; Susan Cock; Margaret Landishe; Sarah Hating; Rebecca Jones, of St. Osith; Anne Cate, alias Maidenhead, of Great Holland.—At Maningtree, Hellen Clark; Anne West; Anne Cooper; Marian Hocket.—Margaret Moone dyed by the way to execution; and Rose Hallybread in gaole. . . . I am sorry to see among the rest of the informers and evidence, John Edes, Clark; and Joseph Long, Minister of Clacton.

For a specimen of the extraordinary Proceedings against those unhappy persons; who, if they said or confessed all that is imputed to them, were fitter for a mad house than the gallows; we shall set down the last article in that very scarce Book.

"The testimony of Sir Thomas Bowes, Knight, which he spake upon the Bench, concerning the aforesaid Anne West, shee being then at the Barre upon her tryall. . . . That a very honest man of Maningtree [one Goff, a glover,] whom he knew would not speake an untruth, affirmed unto him, that very early one morning as he passed by the said Anne West's dore, about foure a clock, it being a moon-light night, and perceiving her dore to be open so early in the morning, looked into the house, and presently there came three or foure little things in the shape of black rabbits, leaping and skipping about him, who having a good stick in his hand, struck at them, thinking to kill them, but could not, but at last caught one of them in his hand, and holding it by the body of it, he beat the head of it against his stick, intending to beat out the brains of it; but when he could not kill it that way, he took the body of it in one hand, and the head of it in another, and indeavoured to wring off the head; and as he wrung and stretched the neck of it, it came out between his hands like a lock of wooll; yet he would not give his intended purpose, but knowing of a Spring not farre off, he went to drowne it; but still as he went he fell downe, and could not goe but downe he fell againe, so that he at last crept upon his hands and knees till he came at the water, and holding it fast in his hands, he put his hand downe into the water up to his elbow, and held it under water a good space, till he conceived it was drowned, and then letting goe his hand, it sprang out of the water up into the aire, and so vanished away: and then coming backe to the said Anne West's dore, he saw her there standing in her smock, and asked her why shee did set her impes to molest and trouble him? to whom shee made answer, that they were not sent him to trouble him, but were sent as scouts upon another designe."

Every Reader must think it quite extraordinary, that Sir Thomas, who sat upon the Bench, should turn evidence, and be judge and jury too. And, as to Goff's declaration, who doth not see, that he took the locks of wool, which the poor industrious old woman was spinning so early, and so wind happened to blow about; for rabbits leaping and skipping? The man fell down, because he was unquestionably drunk.

[K] Thomas Bowes Esq; his son, lived at Upton in West-Ham. He married, 22 June 1722, Adriana, daughter of . . . Vernatti and Petronilla his wife, with whom he had a fortune of 5000 l. in consideration of which he settled on her a jointure of 400 l. a year, and 80 l. a year during coverture. He dyed 12 March 1747-8, without issue, possessed of an estate of 1500 l. a year, part of which was the General Post-Office in London lett at 326 l. per ann. and ten other messuages adjoining.

He dyed in March 1764, leaving an only son —Sir William Mannock, Bart. a minor.

The quit-rents of this Maner are 14l. os. 8d.
and the Reve's rent 1l. 13s. 4d.

The Maner of COLD-HALL.

The mansion house is about three quarters of a mile south from the Church.

There is very little account of this Maner. It went mostly along with the other.

John Seyntcler, who dyed 26 August 1493, held this maner of Coldhall in Great Bromley, of David Mortimer, as of his maner of Great Bromley, worth 5 marks. — John, his son, then 14 years of age, and afterwards knighted, held the same at the time of his decease 25 November 1546; also the maners of Mevaromes in this parish and Fratyng; of Nevaromes in Brykelsey;
St. Clere's, and Frodewyke in St. Osth, &c.

— John, his son and heir, was then 23 years old (z). He passed by fine, in 1549, the maners of Cold-hall, and Moveronnes, with six messuages and lands in Bromley, Frating, Elmsted, Allesford, and Great-Bentley, to William Cardinal, Gent. (a).

part extends as far as the river Colne. The two Saxon words Elm, and sted, signify Elm place: it abounding undoubtedly with Elms when it received that name. It is otherwise written in records Almefteda, and Enmefted.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Robert son of Wimarce was possessed of this parish: Suene, and his under-tenant Sincus, held it at the time of the Survey [L].

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Elmsted. 2. . . . that of Motts, and Bannings marsh.

The Maner of ELMSTED.

Elmsted-hall, the mansion house, stands pleasantly on the south side of the Church.

In the reigns of K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. John, this lordship, with the maners of Stapleford-Tany and Great Stanbridge, were in a Family surnamed Fitz-William. Richard Fitz- William held them (c); and was succeeded by — William Fitz-Richard, or son of Richard;

Mr. John Jacobs; Mr. Mays; John, and Henry, Gardiner; and William Smith, have also some estates, and lands here.

Belchers wood in this parish belongs to Cay's-College.

In 1574, William Lyttylbury held a messuage, and 60 acres of land in Great Bromley, called Morrants (b).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. George, is an elegant structure, consisting of a body and two aisles. The Chancel hath a south Chapel called the Patrons Chapel. The roof of the Church is lofty, and of curious workmanship: and there was abundance of painted glass in the windows, of the Apostles and Saints. In the Tower, which is high and handfom, are 5 Bells.

This valuable Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner of Bromley-hall, till Thomas Bowes Esq; sold the perpetual Advowson to John Fre-man of Colchester Gent. who sold it again to John Morley of Halsted Esq; by whom it was conveyed to Samuel Fiske of the same Town, apothecary. In his family it continued till lately, when it was alienated.

carucate of land in Enmefted; 2 carucates in Stapleford; and 2 in Stanbridge, of the fee of Reyleigh; by the service to the King of 8 knights fees.

Margery, his daughter and heir, brought them in marriage to her husband Sir Richard de Tany (d). He obtained a licence, in 1253, to keep a Market, and a Fair, at his town of Elmsted (e): from which I suppose a village in this parish, about a mile south from the Church, is called Elmsted-Market to this day. At the time of his decease, in 1271, he held this maner of Elmsted, with the Advowson of the Church, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reley. He held also the maners of Stapleford Tany, Great Stanbridge, Chighenall St. James, and Lat-ton. — Richard, his son and heir, held the maners of Elmsted, Stapleford, and Estwyck, in 1296: and yet it is recorded the same year that John de Taney held the maner of Elmsted jointly with his wife Julian, and that of Staple-ford. — Roger, or Robert, his son, held the maners of Elmsted and Stapleford, at the time of his death in 1301 (f). — Laurence de Tany, his son and heir, held the maner of Elmsted of Departing this life in 1317, without issue, his sister Margaret inherited his estates. Margaret his widow had this maner in dower, and was re-married to Sir Thomas de Weston; who enjoyed this estate during his life [M] (g). [For a more particular account of the Tany family, see above, p. 179. 318. and in the other Volume, p. 79. 487.]

Margaret de Tany, sister and heir of Laurence, became wife of John de Drokenesford. He dyed in 1341, but was not possessed of this estate, which his father-in-law Thomas de Weston held till his death in 1354 (b). — Thomas de Drokenesford, or Trekenesford, son of John, held this maner of Elmeftede at the time of his decease in 1361 [N], and left

Anne, his only daughter and heir, 4 years old (i). She was married to Thomas Mandeville, Esq; afterwards knighted, son of Walter Mandeville, of Black-Notley. Their son and heir, — Sir Thomas Mandeville, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Wauton Kt. had, Thomas, Joane, and Alice. — Thomas dyed in August 1499, possessed of the maners of Elmefted, Stapleford Tany, Black Notele, Bromfield, and Chatham-hall in Great Waltham. Having no issue, he was succeeded by his two sisters,

Joane, wife of John Barry Esq; and Alice, wife of Helmingius Legate, or Leget (k). Joane had this for her purparty; and, after her husband Barry's decease, took to her second husband

William Pirton, of Ipswich, Esq; by which marriage this Estate came into the Pirton, or Pyrton, family; of this and the neighbouring parish of Little Bentley. — John Pirton his son was father of — Sir William Pirton, who held this maner of Elmefted, with appertenances; and one messuage, 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 70 of furze and heath, in Elmefted market, of John Earl of Oxford. He departed this life 1 July 1490, and was succeeded by his son — William, then 30 years old (l). The time of his death is not mentioned. His son — William Pirton Esq; held this maner of the King as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the service of 1 knight's fee, and departed this life 24 June 1533, leaving — Sir William Pirton, his son and heir, 40 years old (m); who held this maner, and 16 acres of wood called Mounpeleres wood, alias Market-wood, in this parish. He dyed 6 November 1551, and was succeeded by his son — Edmund, then aged 21 years (n). At the time of his decease, 20 October 1609, he held this maner, with divers other lands thereto belonging; of the Honor of Raleigh. His successor was his cousin — Edmund Pirton Esq; (o). He dyed 9 October 1617, and his brother — William, then 25 years old, was his next heir (p).

This estate belonged afterwards to Sir Harbottle Grimston, Kt. and Bart.

And then to . . . Rich, of Kent. About the year 1692, Richard Rich sold it to John Hurlock, Gent; who dyed 22 December 1710. He married Catharine, daughter of Mr. Hugh Till, of Shadwell, and had by her, John, James, Mark; Catharine, Anne, and Elizabeth. This estate being purchased with the mother's fortune, and settled on her, she gave it to her second son — James, charged with an annuity of 40 l. a year to John the eldest son. James married Martha, sister of George Brooke of Halsted, Gent. many years Deputy-Clerk of the Peace, and hath had by her two sons, James; Brooke, Rector of Lammarth; and three daughters, Catharine, married to Mr. Peter Davey, of London, bookfeller, now his widow; Elizabeth; and Anne-Mary [O].

The Maner of MOTTS, and BANNINGS MARSH.

We have little or no account of this Estate. Mr. John Wallis of Colchester bought it some years ago; but sold it again.

Elmsted-Park was purchased by the Governors of the Charter-house.

The Earl of Hardwick hath some woods in this parish.

Christmas-grove, and Hou-wood, here, belong to Cay's College in Cambridge.

Nicolas Corfellis, Esq; hath an estate in Elmsted. Peter Creffield Esq; had also a good farm here; which his widow, remarried to Edmund Affleck Esq; enjoys as part of her jointure. — And the following persons have lands here, Thomas Martin, Esq; Mr. Roger Siday; Daniel Blyth; Thomas Davall, Gent. Mr. Thomas Seaman; Hugh Simons; William Lugar; John Benneworth; John Bocking, &c. Cockains lies partly in this parish.

Here is a Fair, May 4.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Anne and St. Laurence, consists of a body and a south aisle, or Chapel: The Chancel is of one pace; the whole tiled.

The Chapel is repaired by the owner of Elmsted-hall, who is upon that account exempted from Churchwardens rates. The Steple which is of stone, and built over the Church-porch, at

This Church was a Rectory, and presented to by the owners of the Hall, till 20 March 1382, when Albrey de Vere the 10th Earl of Oxford, and Clement Spice, gave two acres of land, and the Advowson of this Church to the Abbey of St. Osith, to find a Canon of their House, or a Secular Priest, to perform divine service in the Church of that Abbey, every day for ever, for the souls of Robert de Naylinghurst, and all the faithful departed this life. The great Tithes were appropriated to that Abbey, and a Vicarage ordained 14 December 1411, which continued in the Abbey's gift till its dissolution; when both came to the Crown (r). The great Tithes belong now to Mr. John Simons. Thomas Sutton Esq; having given 500 marks to Jesus College in Cambridge, with that they purchased the Advowson of the Vicarage. It was augmented with Qu. Anne's Bounty in 1720. Between the south Chapel and the body of the Church lyes a man in wood in compleat armour, cross-legged, and drawing his sword, supposed to be for Fitz-William, or Tany, and reckoned the oldest of that kind in this County.

BENTLEY.

Here are two parishes so named, distinguished from each other by the addition of Great, and Little.

The name is derived either from Bent, a sort of grass [O], or Bent a place where rushes grow; and ley, pasture, unploughed ground.

Besides Bentley, or Benteleigh, it is otherwise written in records Bendtleia, Benecléia, Benedeia, Benetleia.

6. LITTLE BENTLEY

lieth northward of Great Bentley.

The lands here were holden, in Edward the Confessor's reign, by two persons called Eluvin, and Wisgar; and, at the time of the general Survey, by Alan Earl of Bretagne, and Richard Fitz-Gilbert Lord of Clare, by the names of Benetleia, and Menetlea: their under tenants being Hervey de Spain, and one Roger [P].

These two Lordships became afterwards united into one Maner; called of which the mansion house stands on the south side of the Church.

Who were the first possessors of it after the said two Earls, we have no account. But, in Edward the 11d's reign, it was in a Family surnamed Le Gros, which had several estates in other parts of this County [Q]. Among which we find mention of William—Walter—and Hugh le Gros; within the compass of about ten years. In 1366, Alesia, and her husband Hugh de Groos, held this maner of the Bishop of London, by homage, and the service of 4 s. a year to the ward of Stortford castle. She dying about that time (s), was succeeded by her son—William de Groos, who surviving her only two years, had for successor his brother and heir—Thomas de Groos (t): and he likewise enjoyed it but a little while. For—Sir John Groos dyed about 1383, possessed of the same (u).

Sir Richard de Sutton, who dyed in 1395, held, of the Bishop of London, this maner, and advowson of the Church and of a Chantry here (w): He had also the maner of Wivenhou.—Thomas was his son and heir.

The next possessor was Sir Bartholomew Bourgbier; summoned to parliament from the first to the 10th of K. Henry IV. How he came by this estate I do not find; unless it was from his first wife Margaret widow of Sir John de Sutton. His second wife was Idonea Lovee, widow of Edmund son of Sir John de Brookesborne [R]. At his death, in 1409, he left the premises to his wife Idonea, which survived him about a year (x).—Elizabeth Bourgbier, their only daughter and heir, had two husbands. The first was, Sir Hugh Stafford youngest son of Hugh Earl of Stafford, who in her right took the title of Lord Bourghier; was summoned to parliament 12 Henry IV; and attended K. Henry V. in his wars in France; but dyed without issue in 1421 (y). Her second husband, was Sir Lewis Robessart, a native of Hainault, knight of the Garter, standard-bearer of England, and summoned to parliament 3, 4, 5, and 7 Hen. VI. but by him also she had no issue. He dyed 13 January 1430. She herself departed this life 1 July 1433 (z); and was buried by her second husband in St. Paul's Chapel in Westminster-Abbey. Her next heir was her cousin, — Henry Bouchier, Earl of Eu; son of Sir William Bouchier, grandson of Sir William brother of John Lord Bourghier her grandfather.

Soon after it came into the Pyrton-family, which had likewise Elmsted-maner, but made this place their chief residence: of which ancient family we find this account.

William Pyrton of Ipswich Esq; by Joan, widow of John Barry, sister and coheir of Tho. Mandevill; [concerning which see under Elmsted, Black Notley, Stapleford-Tany, and Bromfield] had issue — John, father of — William, afterwards knighted; a brave warrior; captain of Guisnes in Picardy, who dyed 1 July 1490, and lyes buried, in the Chancel of this Church, with Catharine his wife: She deceased 10 September, 1501. They had five sons, and five daughters (a). — William, the eldest son, was Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1502; resident at Digswell in this last named County; and, by . . . daughter of . . . Langley, had Margaret wife of William Roberts of Little Bracksted Esq; and William his son and heir; who held the maner of Little Bentley, and all lands and tenements thereto belonging, and parcels of land called Northlond, Moyes, and Boylond, with the Advowson of the Church; of the Bishop of London, of his castle of Stortford, as his father had done before, by fealty and rent of 19s. 4d. (b). He married Agnes, daughter of John Tymperley; and dyed 24 June 1533 (c), leaving — Sir William Pyrton, his son, then aged 40; and two daughters, Catharine wife of Thomas Sherington, and Agnes of . . . Bishop. Sir William married Margaret daughter and coheir of William Salford, and dyed 6 Nov. 1551. — Edmund his son and heir, had to wife Constance, daughter of Thomas Lord Darcy of Chiche, and was high-Sheriff of Essex in 1574. He dyed 20 Octob. 1609, and was succeeded by his cousin and next heir — Edmund Pyrton Esq; who departed this life 9 Octob. 1617, leaving — William, his brother and heir. Their father was slain at the battle of Newport in Flanders, whose father had been 45 years a justice of peace for this County [S]. The last named Edmund; or William, sold this estate to

Paul Bayning Esq; This family was originally of Neyland in Suffolk. — Richard Bannyng, or Bayning, dwelt at Dedham, about the end of the fifteenth Century. His son — Richard, married Anne, daughter and coheir of Robert Raven of Creting St. Mary's in Suffolk [T], and had — Richard, of Dedham; who married Anne, daughter of John Barker of Ipswich, by which he had — Paul, [and Andrew a very eminent merchant in Mincing lane, that dyed without issue, 21 Decemb. 1610, aged 67. See under Powers in Little Waltham.] Paul was a citizen and alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1593 (d). He accumulated a very great fortune by merchandizing: so advantageous was Trade even in its infancy, which Sir Thomas Gresham, Sir Andrew Judde, Thomas Sutton, founder of the Charter-house, and our two brothers, Paul, and Andrew, raised immense and incredible Riches by. These two have a monument erected to their memory in the Chancel of the Church of St. Olave Hart-street; by which it appears that Paul dyed 3 Septemb. 1616, aged 77 (e). He had two wives. The first was, . . . daughter of . . . Mowse of Needham or Creting in Suffolk, by whom no issue is recorded. His second wife was Susan, daughter and heir of Richard Norden, of Mistley, (remarried after his decease to Sir Francis Leigh Kt. and Bart.) [U] He dyed 1 Octob. 1616, and was buried in St. Olave's Church above-mentioned, leaving his only son and heir — Sir Paul Bayning Kt. then aged upwards of 30. He was created a Baronet 25 Novemb. 1612. constituted Sheriff of Essex in 1617, advanced to the title of Baron Bayning of Horksley in Essex 27 Febr. 1627-8, and to the further dignity of Viscount Sudbury in Suffolk the 8th of March following. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Henry Glemham Kt. by Anne Sackville, daughter of Thomas Earl of Dorset, by which he had Paul his son and heir; and four daughters; Cecily, married to Henry Pierpont Viscount Newark, eldest son of Robert Earl of Kingston; Anne to Henry Murray Esq; one of the grooms of the bed-chamber to K. Charles I; afterwards created, 17 March 1673, Viscountess Banning of Foxley [W]; Mary, first to William Villiers Viscount Grandison, afterwards to Christopher Villiers Earl of Anglesea, thirdly, to Arthur Gorge Esq; and Elizabeth to Francis Lord Dacre [X], created, 6 Sept. 1680, Countess [U] She dyed in 1623. Sir Francis Leigh, of Kings Newnham in Warwickshire, was created in 1628 Lord Dunsmore, and in 1644 advanced to the title of Earl of Chichester. He dyed in 1653. He had no issue by his said second wife.

[W] They had three daughters, — Elizabeth, married, first, to Randolph Egerton, of Betley in Staffordshire, Major-general of the horse to K. Charles I. and Lieutenant-Colonel of K. Charles the 2d's own troop of guards, who dyed in 1631. Her second husband was Charles Egerton Esq; — Mary was married in 1673 to Sir Roger Bradshaigh of Heigh in Lancashire: and — Jane to Sir William Bowyer.

[X] She took to her second husband David Walter of Godstow in Oxfordshire Esq; groom of the bed-chamber to K. Charles II. and lieutenant of the ordnance, by whom she had no issue.

of Shepey. He dyed at his house in Mark-lane, 29 July 1629, possessed of a very large real estate, as appears by the particulars below [X], and of an immense personal estate, of a hundred and fifty three thousand pounds fifteen shillings; viz. in debts, 13675 l. 15s. 0d. and in ready money 17000 l. without the jewels, plate, and household-stuff (f). His widow was remarried to Dudley Carleton Viscount Dorchester.—Paul, Viscount Bayning, his son and heir, born in 1616, paid the king 18000 l. for the fine of his wardship, and for charges about the same 185 l. He dyed at Bentley-hall 11 June 1638, and was buried in a vault in this Church. By his Lady Penelope, only daughter and heir of Sir Robert Naunton, Kt. Master of the Court of Wards and Liveries, and once Secretary of State, [remarried afterwards to Philip Earl of Pembroke] he had two daughters, Anne; and Penelope born in November after his decease.

Anne, the eldest was married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and last Earl of Oxford, of that most noble and ancient family. Her large fortune was a seasonable and necessary supply, and recruit to the Estate of that family, which had been greatly impaired, and almost ruined, by the passionate extravagance of his ancestor, Edward Earl of Oxford, in Qu. Elizabeth's reign (g). But by this Lady, which dyed in Sept. 1659, he had no surviving issue [Z].—Penelope, the youngest daughter, was married to John Herbert, Esq; youngest son of Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery; remarried to John Wentworth Esq; She dyed in 1657, without issue.

This Estate becoming the purparty of the Earl of Oxford, and his Lady (h), they caused to be pulled down the stately and magnificent feat of Bentley-hall, which had been erected by Paul Bayning Esq; in K. James the 1st's reign, and sold the materials, wherewith many houses in Colchester and elsewhere are still adorned.

About 1680, they sold the reversion of this, and other estates, to—Edward Peck, of Little Samford Esq; Serjeant at law, Edward Rigby of Covent-Garden Esq; Mrs. Pierpont &c. And after the Earl of Oxford's decease in 1703, the survivors of them, and the heirs of the rest, joined in obtaining an act of Parliament, to settle the division of the said Estates (i). Whereupon this was allotted to

William Peck Esq; the Serjeant's grandson. [See under Little Samford.] His son—William Peck Esq; succeeded him. But, about 1740, he alienated this maner and estate to

John Moore Esq; of Southgate in Middlesex. Who again in 1761, sold it to Sir Percy Brett Kt. Captain of a man of War, and Commodore; for the sum of 8800 l.

The Peck-family had three other good Farms in this parish, which were purchased of the late William Peck Esq; by Charles Reynolds Esq; lord of the maner of Peldon. And, by his will, he has left them to his first cousin the Rev. William-Samuel Powell, D. D. who is the present possessor. [See above, p. 419.]

Mrs. Burton; Mr. Jacob Brown; Benjamin Carrington; Richard Smith; Stephen Lufkin; Joseph Nun; John Root, &c. have also Estates in this parish.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, consists of a body, and north aisle, both leaded; as is also an adjoining vault for the burial of the Bayning-family. The Chancel is of one pace, and tyled. At the west end, there is a Tower of stone, containing 5 Bells.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner, till about 1730, when it was conveyed by the late William Peck Esq; to John Watson Cl. in exchange for the Rectory of Little Samford. Mr. Watson sold it to Richard Bridgman, Cl. or Mr. Henry Harrington, of Long Melford.

Here was formerly a famous Chantry, of which we find the following Account.—Sir John Groos, brother and heir of William, son of Hugh Groos, who dyed 7 Ric. II. granted to Sir Richard le Sutton, and Sir John Chertefeye, and to Tho. Hinton, and Richard Heynes, all his Maners, lands, &c. with the advowson of Little Bentley Church, and the reversion of his rent of Lutherne in Essex, and a water-mill in Suffolk; upon condition, that if the said Sir John Groos dyed without heir of his own body, his next heir should, within one year after his decease, rebuild the Old Chapel belonging to this Church, and found therein a Chantry. Accordingly, three years after, the said Sir Richard le Sutton, and the rest, founded here a Chantry for one Chaplain, called Grose-Prefte, and endowed it with one acre of land in this parish, and the yearly rent of 8 l. 3s. 0d. and two hundred fagots out of their woods in the maners of Little Bentley, New-hall in Tendring, and Hamnestall in Wykes (k).

At the suppression of Chantries, the return made of this, was, That the Priest was to sing mass here, and help to serve the cure; and that this was 'a great Towne, having yn yt 'above the numbre of . . . howseling people' (l).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 407 l.

lies South-ward of the other, and part of it extends as far as a Creek that communicates with the river Colne. Near the Church there is a very pleasant Green.

Uluuin was owner of this parish in Edward the Confessor's reign: Alberic de Vere, ancestor of the noble and long flourishing Family of the Earls of Oxford, held it at the time of the Survey [A].

That Family had a Seat here, in which they often resided. Thomas, the 8th Earl of Oxford, made his will here 1 August 1370, and Maud his widow, 20 January, 1412.

Their Seat stood behind the Church, in Hallfeild; but is so entirely demolished, that no signs remain of it but the moats and fish-ponds. There belonged to it a large Park.

Here is only one MANER.

The mansion house is on the north side of the Church.

This lordship was holden by the noble family of De Vere, by Barony, as Coln and Hengham, for being Great Chamberlains of England, and as part of the Earldom of Oxford (m). Hugh de Vere, the 4th Earl, held it so; as did likewise Robert, — Robert, — John, and — Thomas; the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Earl of Oxford (n), and their successors.

Upon the attainder of John the 12th Earl, in 1461, this estate fell to the Crown, and was by K. Richard III. 25 July 1485 granted to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, and confirmed to him 28 February 1486 (o). But upon the accession of K. Henry VII. to the throne, it was restored to the De Vere family, Earls of Oxford: and continued in them [B] till Edward the 17th Earl wasted his estates: And they being extended, by a warrant from the Lord Treasurer, dated 23 July 1590, for a debt of 11000 l. to the Crown, This was sold to . . . . Glascock. Afterwards it was purchased by Roger Townshend Esq; of the neighbouring parish of Wivenhoo. [See in the other Volume, p. 188, and for a more particular account of the De Vere family, p. 293.] Sir Roger Townshend dyed 11 June 1590. He held this maner of the Queen, in capite, by knight's service. — Sir John Townshend, Kt. his son and successor held the same; as did his grandson — Sir Roger

Townshend, Bart. (p) — Sir Horatio Townshend sold it, with the maner of Wivenhou, to Nicolas Corfellis, of London, merchant. He sold it again to George Papillon, of London, merchant, son of David Papillon Esq; by Anna-Maria, daughter of . . . Calendrine, of Lubeck, sister to the famous . . . Calendrine, Pastor of the Dutch Congregation in London. He married Mary, daughter of . . . Nicholson, and had by her, Samuel; Mary, wife of Samuel Hall, of Hackney, Esq; Anne, wife of Mr. Thomas Gledhill; and another. — Samuel Papillon, of Hackney, merchant, succeeded his father, and married Fiducia, daughter of . . . Steere, by whom he had, David, John; and several other children that dyed young. — David, the eldest son and heir was father of — John Papillon, Esq; of Inglefield in Berkshire [C]. The Estates the family have here, are the Maner, the Hall, the Lodge, and the Parsonage-glebe.

Cay's College, or St. John's, have an estate in this parish; and woods called Great and Little Catlins.

The owners of the other estates are, General Honynwood; Admiral Elliott; Mr. John Barrodel; John Heckford; Stephen Lovekin; James Fenn; Mrs. Drury; Mr. Lowther; Richard Carrington; William Sherlock; Daniel Paton; John Clark, &c.

Here is a Fair July 15.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, stands pleasantly on the west side of a beautiful Green. It is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tiled. The Doors of the Church have elegant round arches, decorated with roses &c. On the South side there is a porch, ruinous. The Tower is about 18 or 19 yards high, and built of flint and stone intermixed, chiefly rag stone like iron, and many appear like a heap of gravel petrified together: some of the stones are laid askant. In this Tower there are 5 Bells. The Church is partly cieled; the Chancel not at all: at the west end of the Church there is a Gallery.

This Church was given by Alberic de Vere to the Monks of Abingdon in Berkshire, and the Priory of Earl's-Coln, founded by him for a Cell to that Monastery. The Grant was confirmed by his son Alberic de Vere, and K. Henry I. The great Tithes were appropriated to Colne-Priory, 1 March 1321, by the Bishop of London; who in July 1323, ordained a Vicarage here, reserving the collation of it to himto Theophilus Adams, and Thomas Butler (r). Part of the great Tithes belong now to Mr. James Wilder of Ipswich: Other parts have been purchased by the owners of some of the estates here.

lies west of the two Benteleys. The situation of it is in general high and pleasant, and most of it well watered.

It is otherwise written in records, Freting: and the name seems to be derived from Fpea, a lord, and ing, meadow, or pasture; with the insertion of a t between them, to help the pronunciation.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, it belonged to Retel: Ralph Peverel, and his under-tenant Turolde, held it at the time of the Survey [D].

This parish was divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The maner of Frating. 2. . . . that of Mevaromes.

The Maner of FRATING.

The mansion house, called the Hall, stands on the north side of the Church, and is large.

This maner belonged originally to the Honor of Tutbury, and was holden of it by the noble Family of Ferrers, by the service of one knight's fee.

Under them, persons surnamed de Frating held it in the reign of K. Edward II. John de Frating, who dyed in 1308, held the maner of Frating of William Bagod and Elianor his wife by the service of one knight's fee, as of the dower of his said wife, by the assignment of William de Ferrar. He had also lands in Great Bromley, and Great Bentley [E].

Alice de Frating, his only daughter and heir (s), brought it in frank marriage to her husband Robert de Chedderworth; and they settled this estate by fine, in 1320, and 1321, being described as 200 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 12 of wood, with appertenances, in Great Benteleigh, &c. (t). Under Henry de Ferrar, or Ferrers, who dyed in 1343, — Thomas de Chedderworth, Cl. held this as one knight's fee; then worth 10l. a year. He departed this life in 1336 (u).

John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, held the maner of Fratinge of Sir William de Ferrers by knight's service (w).

Dr. Robert Wells held this maner, of the Honor of Tutbury, by the service of one knight's fee: and one Turn here for the Dutchy of Lancaster, the common fine being 12 d. (x).

This Estate was next in the Ford family. John Ford, of St. Osith, married . . . daughter of . . . Tey, and had by her, John; William, that dyed without issue; and two daughters, Anne, and Alice. The eldest son — John Ford, of Great Horkelesley, by Catharine his wife, daughter of Thomas Johnson, of Stoke, had John; and three daughters, Anne, wife of John Parker; Elianor, first wife of Thomas Bendish; and Margery, of Richard Hovell of S. Hillington, in Norfolk. He dyed 30 November 1611, aged 67, and his wife in September 1619. — John, the son and heir, married Etheldred daughter of Henry Morris: but doth not appear to have left any issue; for his sisters became his coheirs [F].

Elianor, and her husband Thomas Bendish Esq; of Bumpsted-Steple, had this maner, which they held of the King, of his Honor of Tutbury, by knight's service; with other lands in this parish, and some adjoining, named Christmasses, Belches, Gateland and Crabtrees, the Pounding and Swallows, Heckford, Hull-wood, and Pipsgrove. He dyed 23 February 1602, and was buried, with his first wife, in a Chapel by the north side of this Church, under the east Window, where a handfom monument is erected to him. — Thomas, his eldest son and heir, then 36 years old, succeeded him (y). [For a more particular account of this family, see in the other Volume, p. 351.] Thomas Bendish Esq; was created a Baronet 22 May 1611. He sold this estate to

Dr. Peirce, who gave it to Gonville and Keys College in Cambridge, and that Society have been possessed of it ever since.

There is in this parish, and in Great Bromley, and Brightlingsea, a Maner or Maners, styled Mevaromes, Mewarons, Moverons, which are reasonably supposed to have been so called from ancient owners surnamed Monviron, or Muntviron. That in Brightlingsea is the ancientest upon record. They all centered in the St. Clere family, mentioned before under Great Bromley. Sir John Seynt Clere, who dyed 25 November 1546, held the maner of Mevaromes in Fratyng and Bromeley, of William Cardinall, as of his maner of Great Bromley. — John, was his son and heir (z).

We find it next in the Beriff family, which anciently resided in a house called Jacobes in Brightlingsey; and several of them are interred in the Church there, under fair marble stones; the first of them in 1496, which shews them to have been persons of some note [G]. Augustin Beriff had issue — William, who married Catharine, daughter of William Draper of Aldham, and had by her, William, and John. The eldest son — William Beriff of Colchester, Esq; held the maner of Morons alias Moverons, in Frating and Bromley, and a capital messuage in Colchester and Greensted. He dyed 5 January 1627, and was succeeded by his son — William. John, the other son, had estates in Alresford, Thorington, Great Bentley, Peldon, and Langenhau; and departing this life 22 October 1624, left — John his son and heir (a). William aforesaid married Frances, daughter of . . . Sidmore of Ipswich, and had by her John;

9. THORINGTON

lies south of Frating.

The name of this parish is otherwise written in records, Thoryton or Thoriton, Thureton, Thuritone, Thurton, Torindune, Toriton: and is apparently derived from the Saxon Deity Ðop, and the words ing, and tun, a meadow, and town, &c.

In Edward the Confessor's reign this belonged to Adstan; at the time of the Survey it was one of the 39 Estates which Odo bishop of Bayeux held in this County; Ralph was his under tenant; but it had been unjustly taken by Tuold of Rochester [H].

Here is only one MANER.

Thorington-hall, the mansion-house, stands on the north-west side of the Church.

About the reign of K. Henry II. this estate

Anne, wife of William Armitage, of Doncaster, and Mary. — John, was succeeded by — Richard Beriff Esq; who lived at this place. His daughter was married to — James Harvey, of Cockfield, in Suffolk Esq; But having no issue, Mrs. Beriff gave this and other estates to

Jacob Brand, second son of Jacob Brand, of Polsted-hall Esq; He dyed without issue; and it is now in his elder brother — William-Beale Brand, of Polsted-hall, Esq;

The Estate belonging to General Honeywood, and mentioned above under Great Bentley, extends into this parish: as doth also a wood, late Sir Ralph Creffield's, now Mrs. Affleck's. — Mr. Thomas Barr hath likewise some lands here.

The CHURCH is small, of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tiled. In the Tower are 3 Bells.

The patronage of this Rectory belonged to St. Botolph's Priory in Colchester, and continued in their gift till the suppression of Monasteries. K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Audeley, Lord Chancellor; who by his will, dated 19 April 1544, left it to his brother Thomas Audeley Esq; in whose posterity it continued till Henry Audeley Esq; alienated it to David Kinneir, Cl. Some years ago, it was purchased by St. John's College in Cambridge.

The Parsonage-house hath been greatly improved by the present Rector, Mr. Fowler.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 211 l. 3 s. od.

was in the Family of Anesty, from which it passed to those of Montchenfy, Vere, Valence, Hastings, and Beauchamp.

Hubert de Anestie, or Ansty, held, in 1199, ten knights fees in Essex and Hertfordshire, and paid scutage for them (b). His son — Nicolas left an only daughter and heir, Dionysia, that was married to William de Montchenfy, baron of Swainscamp in Kent: whose sister Joane was wife to William de Valence Earl of Penbroke, brother by the mother's side to K. Henry III. William and Dionysia de Montchenfy had two children, William that dyed without issue, in 1289; and Dionysia, wife of Hugh de Vere, second son of Robert the 5th Earl of Oxford, who in her right became Baron of Swainscamp. They both dyed in 1313, and leaving no issue of Thuriton by the service of a quarter of a knight's fee. Though he was thrice married, yet he dyed without issue, 23 June 1324 (c) [H]. He had three sisters, Isabell, Joane, and Agnes, [See above, p. 238, and in the other Volume, p. 35. 138. 342.] After the decease of Adomar's third wife, Mary de St. Paul, in 1376, the estates were divided between his three sisters heirs. Isabell was married to John de Hastings Lord Bergavenny; Joane to John Lord Comyn of Badenoch; and Agnes, first to Maurice Fitz-Gerald, afterwards to Henry Balliol, but left no issue.

As the heirs of Isabell had this estate, we shall just carry down the succession of them. John de Hastings, Baron Bergavenny, dyed in 1324. — Laurence, his son, Earl of Penbroke, in 1348. — John, in 1375 (d). — John de Hastings, Earl of Penbroke, who came into possession of this estate, was killed at a tournament, 30 December 1389, in the 17th year of his age. He married Philippa, daughter of Edmund Mortimer, the third Earl of March, but left no issue. Julian, mother of Laurence de Hastings, re-married to William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, held this maner, in dower, till her death in 1367 (e).

Upon the violent death of John de Hastings, last Earl of Penbroke of this family, his heirs were found to be, Sir Richard Talbot, son of Gilbert, son of Elizabeth one of the daughters of Joane sister of the abovesaid Adomar de Valence; Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Le Scrope; and Philippa, wife of John Halesham, daughter of David de Strathbolgi, late Earl of Athol, son of David son of Joane; another daughter of the foresaid Joane sister of Adomar (f). [See in the other Volume, p. 35. 138.] But they did not inherit this estate, for John de Hastings Earl of Penbroke, had settled them on his mother's sister's son,

William de Beauchamp, a younger son of Thomas Earl of Warwick, together with the Barony of Bergavenny. At the time of his decease, 8 May 1411, he held this maner of Thoriton, of the King in ca. and was succeeded by his son — Richard de Beauchamp (g), created Earl of Worcester in 1419, slain in 1422 at the siege of Meaux in France. His mother Joane, who held this maner in dowry among others, survived him till 1435. He had an only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth, 18 years old at the time of her grandmother's decease, and then married to Sir Edward Nevill, fourth son of Ralph Earl of Westmoreland, who in her right became Lord Bergavenny. He dyed 18 October 1476, his Lady being dead before him (h). They had two sons, Richard who lived but a few years, and — George: He departed this life in 1491 or 1492, leaving — George, Lord Bergavenny, his son and heir. In 1521, he sold this maner, and that of Redgwell, for the sum of 920l. to

John Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, and Hugh Ashton, Archdeacon of York, executors to Margaret Countess of Richmond, foundress of St. John's College in Cambridge, for the use of that Society. [See in the other Volume, p. 35, 36. 138. 342.]

This Maner is a considerable Estate, with the demesnes which are divided into several Farms; particularly the Marsh-farm, or Dairy-house, standing among the marshes.

Another Farm among the marshes, is the property of Mr. John Baker. — The Rev. Edward Arrowsmith purchased of John Cooke two Farms, now belonging to his daughter, married to Philip Roberts Esq; — Mrs. Everard hath also a Farm here.

Great Hockley Wood, 38 acres, and Little Hockley Wood, 4 acr. and a half, in this parish and Frating, belong to Cay's College in Cambridge.

Here is an alms-house for two dwellers.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, consists of a body, tiled; and north aisle, the length both of Church and Chancel, leaded: In the Tower, built of a mixture of flints and stones, are 5 Bells.

John Deth, who dyed 20 April 1477, and lies buried in the Belfrey with an Epitaph, was a great benefactor to this Church: so that it was then either built, or repaired [I].

This Rectory hath been always appendent to the Maner, and ever since the year 1531 in the gift of St. John's College.

is a kind of peninsula, bounded on the west by the river Colne.

The name is formed from the two Saxon words Alp, or Alep, Alder, and forð, a ford;

i. e. Aldersford. It is otherwise written in records, Aleford, Allesford, Elesford.

In the Confessor's reign the owners of the lands in this parish, were, one Edward; Edwold: and Algar: At the time of the Survey, Eustace Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant

[I] In the north aisle of the Chancel were the Arms of Hato, held what had been Edward's; Edwold's part was the Bishop of London's fee; Richard FitzGislebert had what was Algar's; and Algar was permitted to hold it under him [K]; one of the few instances of that kind that occur after the Conquest.

These lands were divided afterwards into these two Maners. 1. The maner of Alresford. 2. . . . that of Cokayne.

The Maner of ALRESFORD.

Alresford hall, the mansion-house, stands a little way south-east from the Church.

The earliest account we have of this Maner, after the Survey, was in 1211, when Geoffrey de Fercles held 3 knights fees in Alesford, of the Honor of Bologne (i).

Lucy de Apleford, who dyed in 1270, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, in the vill of Alesford, 1 messuage, 220 acres of arable, 3 of pasture, 60 of wood, 3 of marsh, and 20s. 9d. rent by one fee, and suit at the court of Bologne from month to month. — William was her son and heir (k).

The next possessor upon record was Andrew de Thunderle, who, at the time of his decease in 1311, held of the King, in ca. at Alesford, 1 messuage, 120 acres of arable, half an acre of meadow, 9 acr. of pasture, 140 of wood, 17s. 2d. ob. by the 4th part of a knight's fee, a race of ginger, and a stalk of clove-gilly flower, and suit at the Court of Bologne, as abovesaid. — Philip, was his next heir (l).

In 1312, a fine passed between Anfrid de Staunton, plaintiff, and John son of William de Botiller, deforc' for the maner of Allesford, with appertenances, and the Advowson of the Church (m). He held, jointly with Margery his wife, the maner of Alesford, and Advowson of this Church, of the Bishop of London, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, 1 messuage, 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 52 of pasture, 240 of wood, and 16s. 8d. rent, by the service of half a knight's fee. This was in 1337, the time, we suppose, of his death. Margery, his widow, held the same, at the time of her decease in 1343. But what held of the King, was then 1 messuage, 280 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 14 of pasture, 120 of wood, 24s. rent: and what held of the Bishop, was 1 capital messuage, 200 acres of arable, 8 of pasture, 20 of wood, and 20s. with the Advowson of the Church. — Hugh Gros was her cousin and next heir (n). Though there was an unity of possession, we find that the two Maners mentioned at the Survey, were still kept distinct.

This Estate was next in the knightly family of de Coggeshall, and their successors, the Dorewards, Thursbies, and Beaupres.

Sir John de Coggeshall, who dyed in 1361, held in the vill of Alisford 1 messuage, 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 52 of pasture, 240 of wood, and 16s. 8d. rent, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of 4s. a year. — Sir Henry, his son and heir, held also this maner of Alesford. He married Margery, daughter and heir of Humfrey de Stanton, and had by her — Sir William de Coggeshall (o), who leaving no issue male, his large inheritance came among his four daughters and coheirs, Blanch, Alice, Margaret, and Maud. [See above, p. 261, and in the other Volume, p. 162, 373; wrong printed 371.]

Blanch, the eldest daughter, brought this estate to her husband John Doreward, of Bocking, Esq; Speaker of the House of Commons, &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 385.] They had four sons, and by his will dated 25 August 1456 he gave this maner of Alresford, among others, to his eldest son — John Doreward Esq; who departed this life in 1476, leaving — John, his son and heir. At the time of his decease in 1480, he held the maner of Alresford, the Advowson of the Church, and a mill here, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne (p). He was succeeded by his uncle — William Doreward, Esq; who, by Margery his wife, eldest daughter and co-heir of Sir Roger Arlick of Norfolk, had John and Elizabeth, married to Thomas Fotheringhay, of Woodrising in Norfolk Esq; — John, the son and heir, among other large estates, held this maner of Alresford, with appertenances, and 160 acres of arable, 348 of pasture, and 16 of meadow, in this parish, Fratinge, Thorington, and Wivenho, of the Bishop of London: and 1 messuage, 140 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 52 of pasture, 60 of wood, parcel of the maner of Alresford, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Bologne, by the service of half a knight's fee. He dying in 1495, without issue [L], the three Daughters of his sister Elizabeth Fotheringhay shared his estates. They were, Margaret, wife of Nicolas Beaupre; Elena, wife of Henry Thursbie Esq; and Christiana.

[L] There is some variety in Authors about the person whom he married. Some call her Margaret daughter of . . . Lyhert; and others Margery, daughter of John Nanton, Esq; wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (q). [For a more particular account of this Doreward family, see in the other Volume, p. 162, 192, 299, 384.]

Margaret Beaupré, the eldest daughter, had for her share 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 52 of pasture, 60 of wood; that is, the part which was holden of the King; and dyed possessed of it 10 February 1513, leaving — Edmund Beaupré her son and heir, 13 years old (r). In 1556, his kinsman, Edward, son of Henry Thursby, passed to him, by fine, the maners of Alresford and Esthall, a view of frank pledge, free-warren, and a fishery in this parish. He was possessed of them, besides his own share, and of the Advowson of the Church, at the time of his decease 14 February 1558.

Mary, wife of Richard Barwicke, and Anne Wright, were his two daughters and coheirs (s). The whole estate seems to have centered in Mary Barwick. Her husband presented to the living from 1568 to 1578. She departed this life 26 June 1586, holding part of this maner of the Crown, as above described, together with separate fisheries in the salt waters called Alresford Ford; by the hundredth part of a knight's fee; and the residue of the maner, lands, tenements, &c. half a water-mill, in this parish, Frating, and Thorington, of the Bishop of London. — Thomas Barwick, her son and heir was then 30 years old (t).

William Tabor, Doctor of the Civil Law, who dyed 19 April 1611, held the maner of Alresford and Esthall, and divers lands, tenements &c. thereto belonging, in this parish, Thorington, and Wivenhoe; of the Honor of Bologne. He had also Westwicke, in Bradwell near the sea; Edmund Oates alias St. John's house, with divers other estates in Writtle; and in Moulsham, &c.

— Martha, his only daughter and heir, then 5 years old (u), brought it afterwards in marriage to

John Browne, Esq; who sold it to John Hawkins, of Braintree, clothier. By his will, dated 3 September 1633, he bequeathed it to his eldest son — John Hawkins Esq; The latter left it to his only daughter and heir

Christian, that was married to Sir John Dawes of Lyons in Bocking, Bart. Of his heirs it was purchased by Benjamin Feild, of London, wine-cooper. His son — Benjamin Feild, of Lombard-street, goldsmith, sold it in 1720, to

Matthew Martin, of Wivenhoe Esq; He dyed 20 July 1749, and was succeeded by his eldest son — Samuel Martin Esq; upon whose decease, without issue, 16 May 1765, it descended to his brother — Thomas Martin Esq; Counsellor at law. [See in the other Volume, p.]

took its name from an ancient Family, that had estates in these parts, as appears by the following records.

In 1279, a Fine passed between Richard de Skeketon, plaintiff, and John de Cokaine, defendant, for two parts of 1 messuage, 1 carucate of arable land, 20 acres of wood, 20 of pasture, and 6 marks rent, with appertenances, in Elmestede, Benetleye, and Brumley (w).

By lease and release, 18 and 28 June 1332, Benedict de Cokefeld conveyed the maner of Cokayne, with appertenances, to Sir John de Sutton, of Wyvenhoe. The year following, John de Drokenesford, and Margaret his wife, passed by fine this maner of Cokayne, with appertenances, to Sir John de Sutton, and Agatha his wife (x). His younger son — Sir Richard de Sutton, who dyed in 1395, held this maner of Cokayne, of the heirs of Sir Thomas Mandeville, in free socage, by the service of 19d. a year — Thomas was his son and heir (y). [For a more particular account of this family, see above, p. 176. and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Who were the possessors of it for a while, we do not find: It hath been some years in the same hands as the last.

THE LODGE, a reputed Maner in this parish, lyes near the river Colne. The House is about half a mile south-west from the Church.

It belonged to Mrs. Kinaston of London. She sold it to James, and Jonathan, Phoedam, of Wivenhoe, brothers, and mariners. — Jonathan, son of James, enjoyed it afterwards. But it being deeply mortgaged, the Family were forced to part with it; and it was purchased by — Samuel Martin, Esq;

Selby Thorowgood Esq; hath an Estate here; Mr. Nathanael Cardy; William Crooks, &c. have also some lands here:

Thirteen shillings and four pence a year are paid to the Poor, out of a piece of land in this parish.

Here are two Almshouses, but without endowment.

THE CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Spire shingled are 2 Bells.

This Church was built by Anfrid, or Anfrey, de Staunton, above-mentioned, as appears by his Epitaph in old French in the Chancel.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

The parish is rated to the land-tax at 395l. 3 s. 0d.

II. BRIGHTLINGSEY

is very nearly an Island, formed by some branches of the Sea, and the river Colne. There is but one passage into it, on the road from Thornton-croft, except when the tide is out, and then one may go over the Ford at the bottom of the Creek.

The name of it is otherwise written in records, Briſticeſia, Briſtriceſeia, Briſhling, Briſhtling, Briſhlinges, Briſhtlingefeſe, Britlyngeſeye, Briſhtlingeſea, Briſkelleſey.

The name ſeems to be taken from a perſon, or owner, named Briſtric or Brightling, and iſland, or ea, water.

J. Speed imagined (z), that this was the iſland where the remains of the Daniſh army ſheltered themſelves, after their defeat at Fernham by K. Ælfred: But it was in Merſey, as I have obſerved above, p. 426.

The Town is about a mile ſouth from the Church, by the Sea-ſide. It drives a great trade in Oyſters. And here is a Houſe for extracting and preparing Copperas.

This little Town is a member of the Cinq-Ports [M], and belongs to Sandwich in Kent. The perſon that took care of their affairs here was called a Deputy, as appears by the Epitaph of William Beriffe, who was one, and is buried in this Church. The Privileges of the Cinq-Ports were formerly very great and extenſive; but, we apprehend, have been much curtailed, and many of them are grown obſolete or diſuſed.

Before the Conqueſt, King Harold was poſſeſſed of this Lordſhip: at the time of the Survey, it was in the Crown, i. e. in William the Conqueror [N]: He gave it ſoon after to Eudo Dapiſer.

BRIGHTLINGSEY-HALL,

the maner-houſe ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church. But the ſeat where the lords of the maner uſually reſide, is about half a mile ſouth from the Church, between it and the Town.

Eudo made this maner part of the endowment of St. John's Abbey, which he founded in Colcheſter: And his grant was confirmed both by K. Henry I. and K. Henry II.

This maner continued in St. John's Abbey till its diſſolution, when it came to the Crown. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy-Seal (a). It reverted to the Crown upon his attainder, and continued in it till 1576, when Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Brightling-ſea, and the maner-place called Brightlingſea-hall; and all the demefnes belonging to this maner, and the inn-marſhes and out-marſhes, to

Thomas Henneage Eſq; (b) afterwards knighted, and one of Qu. Elizabeth's Privy Council. [See a particular account of him above, p. 46—48.] He dyed 17 October 1595. — Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, then 38 years old, was the wife of Moyle Finch, Eſq; (c) created a Baronet 22 May 1611. She herſelf was created, 8 July 1623, Viſcounteſs Maidſton; and advanced to the title of Counteſs of Wincheſſea 12 July 1628. Sir Moyle dyed 18 December 1614. He or his wife ſold this eſtate to Richard Wilcox, or Wilcocks, of London, Gent. whoſe father was of Shropſhire. He married Alice, daughter of George Parkhurſt of Ipſwich, Gent. and had by her, George; Thomas; Nathanael; and 2 daughters, Mary, wife of Robert ſecond ſon of Sir Edward Barkham, Kt. and Sarah, of Peter Daniel, of Tabley in Cheſhire, Eſq; He departed this life 4 May 1624 (d).

—George Wilcox, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon had Samuel who dyed in minority; and leaving no iſſue, was ſucceeded by his next brother—Thomas Wilcox, of Tottenham High-Croſs Eſq; of the body to K. Charles I. He married Mary, eldeſt daughter of John Wakering, of Kelvedon Eſq; by whom he had — Dionyſius, born in 1629; and Mary [O].

Col. George Thomſon was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate, and had it from 1660, to 1686. He left it by will to

Capt. John South, who ſold it, in 1694, to Isaac Brand, of London, that ſined for Sheriff of that City. He bequeathed it to

John Colt, and his heirs male. He was fourth ſon of Robert Colt, Cl. Rector of Semer in Suffolk, deſcended from the ancient Family of Colt, of Colts-hall, in Cavendiſh, Suffolk. Colt, Esq; the eldest son and heir, dyed unmarried, in 1759. One of his sisters and coheirs was married to the Lord Trimleston, of the Kingdom of Ireland; and the other to Sir Thomas Kemp, Bart.

By virtue of Mr. Colt's will, Sir John Kemp, Bart. and Benjamin Mee Esq; being appointed trustees for sale of these Estates; of them they were purchased in 1763, by Nicolas Magens Esq; a rich merchant. He was very charitable and bountiful to his neighbours; and just to the tenants of the maner; but, to their great loss and concern, enjoyed it little more than a year, dying 18 August 1764.—His widow is now possessed of it, and hath his good and beneficent qualities.

Six pounds a year out of this maner were granted by K. Henry I. to St. Mary-Magdalens Hospital in Colchester; confirmed by K. Henry II. (e). That sum is now paid to the Master of the Hospital, by the King's Receiver.

The chief Customs of this maner, are as follows. If a tenant dyeth, seized of any customary tenements, his youngest son shall inherit, or for want of such son, his youngest daughter, and for want of such daughter his youngest brother or sister. Also the wife shall have no dowry of her husband's customary lands. If two or more persons have a joint estate in any customary lands that are heriotable, there is no heriot due till after the death of the latest liver.—If a man have an estate of inheritance, and the wife an estate for life, in any customary lands or tenements, being heriotable, the man being dead, and having any quick cattle at the day of his death, the heriot shall be seized by the bayliff and appraised by the tenants, and the wife shall have the use and occupation of the same heriot during her life, putting in sureties to the Court for the true payment of the price of the same heriot at her death.—The customary tenants, which have an estate of inheritance, are not punishable for felling or cutting down any wood or timber growing upon their customary lands, putting it to what use they think fit; nor for taking down or carrying away any houses, timber, or other parts of them, so that they keep and maintain a sufficient house upon the same to make a dwelling, or else to compound with the court for the same dwelling house.—Every tenant of this maner may for his tenement, according to the custom of the maner, put upon the Commons one sheep and a half for every acre that he holdeth of the same maner, and as many hogs as he may reasonably keep, so that they be lawfully ringed and yoked, and every cottager one barrow-hog only, being likewise lawfully ringed and yoked.

The Quit-rents of this Maner are 21l. 13s. 11d. $\frac{1}{2}$.

is another Maner in this parish, dependent upon the former.

The mansion house stands about half a mile from the Church.

This estate is otherwise called Monviron, Merwarones, Maronis, Morehams, Morehouse; and was so named from its ancient owners, the family of Monviron, Muntviron, and by contraction Mun'um.

Osbert de Brightlingesey, who dyed in 1247, had three sisters, coheirs; Aveline, wife of Peter de Aldham; Joane, wife of Roger de Blakeham; and Rhoeſe, wife of Richard Mun'um (*): who, we suppose lived here.—In 1260, John de Muntviron had a grant of free-warren in Brightlingesey, and Haylesley (f).—Mariote, daughter and one of the heirs of John de Monviron, claimed against William de Harewold and Cecily his wife, the right she had in all the lands and tenements which were fallen to her upon the death of her said father, in Wrightlingesey, Frating, Bromley, Thuriton, Purle, and Woodham Walter; and the Advowson of Hexelslee Church (g).

We have no mention of this estate for a long while after, till we find it in the family of St. Clere. John Seyntcler, who dyed 26 August 1493, held the maner of Maronis in Brightlingesey, of the Abbot of St. John's in Colchester, as of his maner of Brytlingesey (h).—Sir John St. Clere, his son and heir, at the time of his decease 25 November 1546, held the maner of Newaromes in Brykelsesey, parcel of the possessions of St. John's Abbey, by fealty, suit of court to the other maner, and yearly rent of 28 s. 8 d. and lands called Drybookes.—John, his son and successor, was 23 years old (i).

In 1554, Laurence Warren, and Joane his wife, passed this estate by fine to Thomas Darcy Esq; He held this maner of Moverons, alias Morehous, with 10 messuages, 10 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 800 of pasture, 30 of wood, in Brightlingesey, Thorington, and Alresford, late Laurence Warren's, of the maner of Brickelsesey. Departing this life 26 October 1557, he was succeeded by his son—Thomas Darcy Esq; (k). One of his successors—Sir Thomas Darcy, Bart. sold it to

Robert Barwell, of Witham, bay-maker: and his son—Newman Barwell sold it again in 1718, to

John Colt Esq; from whom it descended to his son,—Isaac-Brand Colt, Esq;

Nicolas Magens Esq; purchased it with the other.

Henry Lamb, Gent. Mr. Philip Havens; Mr. John Baker; Mr. William Smythies, &c. have also some estates in this parish.

John Sympfon, Rector of St. Olave Hartstreet, London, a native of this place, gave 52 s. a year to the Poor of this parish, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, out of some lands in the parish of Kirby in le Soken, once the estate of Samuel Mott of Colchester, Gent. afterwards of Cook of Thorington-hall, in right of his wife, daughter and coheir of John Westbrowne.

William Whitman of this parish, by his will proved 2 April 1730, left Seven pounds a year, issuing out of lands in Kirby, Walton, and Little

Here is a Fair August 1.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, stands on a hill, being a sea-mark, and visible several leagues off. It is a lofty stately building, consisting of a body and two aisles, leaded; but the Chancel is tiled. The Steeple is 31 yards 12 inches from the ground to the battlements. In it are 2 Bells, and a Saints bell; but there are frames for five.

This Church originally belonged, as well as the Maner, to St. John's Abbey. In 1237, the Abbot and Convent gave the Patronage of it to the Church of St. Paul, and Bishop of London, and his successors (1). Soon after, the Dean and Canons appropriated it to the Lights of St. Paul's Church, and a Vicarage was ordained, which hath been ever since in the Bishops Collation, and exempt from the Archdeacon's jurisdiction.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 11111. 2s. 0d.

12. CICE, CHICH, or ST. OSITH.

This large parish is the South end or side of this Hundred, along the Sea-shore. The rental of it is above 3800l.

From whence the Saxon name Cice (m) came we cannot learn: As for that of St. Osith, it was borrowed from the Lady Osgith, or Osith, daughter of Frithuwald, King of I know not what place, by Wilburga daughter of Penda king of Mercia. She was born at Quarendon in Aylesbury parish, and brought up with an aunt of hers at Elestborough in Chiltern-hills, three miles from Aylesbury. She had made a vow of virginity, but was obliged by her father against her will to marry Sighere the Christian King of the East Angles, however, the marriage was never consummated; for, in the absence of her husband, she veiled her head, which he at last consented to, and gave her his village of Chic, where she began to found a Church, dedicated to the honor of St. Peter and St. Paul; and instituted a Nunnery of Maturines, or of the order of the Holy Trinity. Inguar and Hubba spoiled the monastery of St. Osiths, and caused her head to be cut off at a fountain near Chich, where she used to wash herself with her virgins. She was buried before the door of her Church. Her body was removed from St. Osiths to Aylesbury 46 years, for fear of the Danes, and then brought back again (n). Her festival was on the 7th of October.

The reader is to observe, that he is not to expect much of Chronological truth or exactness in the Lives of Saints.

Besides Cice, the name of this place is otherwise written in records Cica, Cicce, Cita, Cihc, Ciz.

This Parish was anciently part of the royal demesnes, that is of the lands belonging to the Kings of England.

K. Cnut granted it to Godwin, the great Earl of Kent, who gave it to Christ's-Church in Canterbury, with licence of K. Edward the Confessor (o). It was taken from that Church at the Conquest: For, at the time of the Survey, it belonged to the Bishop of London [P].

The rest of the lands, that had belonged, before the Conquest, to one Edward, and to Siuuard; were held, at the time of the Survey, by Eustace Earl of Bologne [Q]; and Ralph Peverell, and his under-tenant Turolde.

The Bishop of London's part, and what was Eustace's, made afterwards the chief Endowment of the Monastery here; being divided into these several Maners: The maner of Chiche St. Osith. — Ampners-wic; — Coket-wic; — Howic; and — Welwic. — Earl Eustace's Share, belonged also chiefly to the Monastery, that was divided into the Maners of — Earls-hall: and — Wyers, or Wiston-hall.

Of these Maners we shall give a particular account, when we come to shew how they were granted away after the Suppression of Abbeys.

Ralph Peverell's part produced the Maners of — Chich-Ridell, and — Frodwick, or Fro-wick.

ST. OSITH'S MONASTERY, and its Revenues, being the most considerable part of this Parish, we shall treat of it first.

The Maner of Cice belonging to the See of London, Bishop Richard de Belmeis, or de Beaumes, who was consecrated in 1108, obtained it from the Church of St. Paul, in order to build and endow his Monastery here; giving in exchange for it 14 pounds in land in Lodesword; and six pounds in land yearly in Sudminster, which he had bought of Robert de Wigecot (p).

Before the year 1118, he founded here a Religious House for Canons of the order of St. Augustin.

The Endowment and Possessions of this Monastery, were, The Maner of Cice St. Ofith, with its large demesnes; and the Maners of Ampnerfwick, Coketwice, Howick and Welwick, given them by the founder Richard de Belmeis. Earls-hall; Wyers-hall, or Withston-hall; Plumpton and Downeland; South-fleet, all in this parish: And these lands, besides, which they were found possessed of at the Dissolution; namely Great and Little Marshalls, Goldlands, Mayes, Coblands and Cowlands; Brokehouse, and Peryfeild: in South-fleet, Mychells, Larkendownes, Butterspittle, and Grene lane: Peverells, Rathisland; Daltes: Wrenn Park; Makenfeild, Morepitells, and Goldelands: the Fenn: messuages and lands called Martynes, Ballards, Jervis or Jervis-cators, Gricks, Hathewicke, Johns, and Whitebreads: Popefeild, Upper-bordland, Horsepastures, and Tykelgrove, belonging to the maner of Welwick; and Bantons rents (q). They had also the maner of Birch-ho, in Kirby, given them by Walter Makerell and Ermegard his wife; 100 acres in Messing, of the gift of Robert de Reymes: Cost-hall in Brentwood, given by William de Wokindon (r).—They had, besides, the following Maners in this County; Abberton; Samptons in Peldon; the maner of Abbots in Wigborow, of Broke-hall in Tollethunt-Bushes, Canne-hall in Great Clacton; those of Ramsey, Mayland-hall, the Ray in Southminster; of Abbots in Shalford; Mile-end-hall near Colchester: a parcel of land in Bromley, a farm called Edlins in Mistley; and lands in Mersey.—In Suffolk, the maners of Burnt-Illeigh, Stow-market, and Stutton: and lands in Dalham, Ovesdon, Denham, and Tunstal (s). These last were given them by Adeliza, wife of Alberic de Vere, the first Earl of Oxford, who had a son a Canon here, that wrote the Life of St. Ofith (t).

And the Rectories, or great Tithes, and Advowsons of the Vicarages, of Althorn, Great and Little Clacton, Elmsted, Little Holland, Mayland, Ramsey, Shopland, South-minster, Ugley, and St. Ofith; Peterham, in Kent; the advowson of Abberton Rectory; and Brentwood-Chapel; the alternate presentation to Tollethunt-Knights: a portion of Tithes in Tendring, and Shalford. The site of a Chapel in Moulsham, Chelmsford (u). Besides Rents of assise in several places.

Here were two Parks.

The amount of all those Revenues was found at the time of the Surrender, 28 July 1539, to be 758 l. 5 s. 8 d. Speed. 677 l. 7 s. 2 d. Dugdale.

The Abbot, Prior, and eighteen Canons, subscribed to the King's Supremacy, at the time of the surrender, which shews what number were maintained here.

A List of the Abbots may be seen in Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 456. and in Br. Willis's Hist. of the Abbies, Vol. II. p. 80.

The Advowson or Presentation to this Abbey was granted to the Bishop of London in 1205 (w).

Of the above Estates, or Maners, COKETWIC was so called, because Richard de Belmeis bought it of Ernulphe Coket (x). And EARLS-HALL because it was what belonged to Eustace Earl of Bologne. The addition of Wic, in most of them, denoted that they were considerable grazing farms: a term still used in many parts of England.

The site of the Monastery was converted into a Seat by the Lord Darcy: Part of it only is standing, and the Seat of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

In 1545, an act of Parliament passed for erecting St. Ofithes into an Honor.

Soon after the Surrender, K. Henry VIII. granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, the site of St. Ofith's Monastery, and the maners of Chiche St. Ofithes, Barnton, Coketwyke, Wigbarugh, Erles-hall, Westwike, Howyke, Le Wyke, Wyershall alias Withston-hall, Canon-hall, Abbots-hall, Costed-hall, Mile-end-hall, Broke-hall, and Birch-hall: a messuage and marsh called Le Raye in Southminster: lands and tenements called Plomptons and Downeland, with the Tithes, and all other messuages, lands, tenements &c. here, belonging to the Monastery of St. Ofith. The great and little Park of St. Ofith: And the appropriate Rectories of Chiche, alias St. Ofithes, Great and Little Clackton, and Little Holland; and the Advowsons of those Vicarages. To hold in capite, by the service of a whole knight's fee (y).

Upon his attainder the premisses reverted to the Crown. K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553, for the sum of 3974 l. 9 s. 4 d. $\frac{1}{2}$, granted to Thomas Lord Darcy, Kt. of the Garter, and Chamberlain of his Household, the maners of Chiche St. Ofith, Ampnerfwic, and Welwic; the Rectory and Church of Chiche; and the several parcels of land in this parish, mentioned above; together with two water-mills, a fulling mill, and three fulling stocks: and the Maners of West-Merley, Fingringhou, and the Rectories, and Advowson of the Vicarages, of those two parishes; and the maner of Pete-hall. To hold to him, and his heirs and assigns for ever, by the 40th part of a knight's fee (z).

Having given above, p. 396, 397, and in the other Volume, p. 28. 140. an account of some branches of the Darcy Family, we shall here give an account of the most considerable branch of it, which obtained this estate, and was ennobled, namely, Sir Thomas Darcy, Kt. He was son of Roger Darcy of Danbury Esq; Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1506, and Squire of the body to K. Henry VII. by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Henry Wentworth of Nettlested Esq; that had been married before to John Bouchier, Earl of Bath, and next to Thomas

Windham.—Sir Thomas Darcy, the son, born in 1506, had several considerable employments under K. Henry VIII. and under K. Edward VI. &c. He was created Baron Darcy of Chiche, 5 April 1551, and afterwards constituted one of the Knights of the Garter: and departed this life at his house in Wivenhou, 28 June 1558, possessed of the estates set down above from his patent, and other considerable ones [R]. Having married Elizabeth, daughter of John de Vere Earl of Oxford, he had by her, John; Alberic; Robert: and two daughters, Thomasine; and Constance, wife of Edmund Pirton of Little Bentley.—John Lord Darcy, the eldest son and heir, married Frances, daughter of Richard Lord Rich, and had by her Thomas; John: and Mary, wife of Robert, Lord Lumley. He dyed 3 March 1580-1, and was succeeded by his eldest son—Thomas, Lord Darcy, who taking to wife Mary, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Kitson, Kt. had Thomas that married . . . daughter of Sir John Fitz, of Tavistock, widow of Sir Alan Perci, but dyed before his father without issue; and four daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Thomas Savage, of Rock-Savage in the County of Chester, Kt. and Bart. Mary, wife of Roger Manwood, Esq; Penelope, married, first, to Sir George Trenchard, Kt. afterwards to Sir John Gage, of Fixley in Suffex, Bart. and Susan. This Lord Darcy was created 5 July 1621, Viscount Colchester for life, remainder to his son-in-law Sir Thomas Savage; and 4 November 1626, advanced to the title of Earl Rivers. He departed this life, 21 February 1639, and was buried here (a). Sir Thomas Savage, upon whom the titles were entailed, dying before him, 20 November, 1635, his widow

Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, took the title of Countess Rivers. She was greatly molested during the unhappy Civil wars in the last century; no less than 1697ol. 9s. 10d. being taken from her for rents, sales of wood and timber, &c. (b). By Sir Thomas Savage she had 7 sons, John, Thomas, Francis, William, James, Richard, and Charles: and 6 daughters, Jane, married to John Paulet, Marquis of Winchester; Dorothy, to Charles Howard, Earl of Berkshire; Elizabeth, to Sir John Thimbleby, Kt. Anne, to Robert Brudenel, afterwards Earl of Cardigan; Catharine, a nun; and Henrietta-Maria, to Ralph Sheldon, Esq; The eldest son—Sir John Savage, Bart. succeeded his father in 1639 in the title of Earl Rivers. His first wife was Catharine, daughter of Henry Parker, Lord Morley and Montegle; and his second wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Ogle Esq; By the first, he had,

Thomas, John, Richard: and four daughters, Elizabeth, married to William Lord Petre; Jane to, George Bridges, Lord Chandos, she had two other husbands afterwards; Catharine; and Mary. Their father, John Earl Rivers, departed this life 10 October 1654.—Thomas, Earl Rivers, the eldest son and successor, had two wives, namely, 1. Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Emanuel Scroop, Earl of Sunderland: and 2. Arabella, only child of Robert Bertie, Earl of Lindsey. By this last he had no issue; but, by the first, he had, Thomas; Richard: and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Annabella. He departed this life 14 September 1694. Thomas, the eldest son, dyed before him. He had married Charlotte, daughter to Charles Stanley Earl of Derby, but leaving by her only one daughter Charlotte, that never married: the next brother, the Hon.—Richard Savage, succeeded to the honor and estates in 1694; and dyed 18 August 1712. He was Lieutenant-general of horse, Lord-Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of this County &c. He married Penelope, daughter of John Downs Esq; by whom he had Elizabeth, married to James Barry, Earl of Barrimore. Having no legitimate issue male surviving, he gave his estates here to his natural daughter, Bessy. She was married to the Rt. Hon. Frederic Zulestein de Nassau, Earl of Rochford: and in 1721 an act was obtained for settling the estates of Richard late Earl Rivers, pursuant to an agreement made between Frederic Earl of Rochford and Bessy Countess of Rochford his wife, James Barry Earl of Barrymore, and Lady Penelope his daughter, and John Earl Rivers, &c. His Lordship departed this life 14 June 1738, leaving two sons, William-Henry; and Richard-Savage de Nassau. — William-Henry, Earl of Rochford, the present possessor of this estate, is Lord-Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of this County, &c. His Lordship hath been employed in several honorable Embassies, and is now Ambassador extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Court of France. By his Lady, the Hon. Lucy Younge, he hath no issue. But his brother, the Hon. Richard-Savage, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edward Spencer Esq; widow of James Duke of Hamilton, hath several children. For a more particular account of these noble Families we shall beg leave to refer to the Peerages.

Besides the Abbey's Maners and Estates, there were other Maners in this parish called Chiche-Ridell; and Frodwick, or Frowick. They sprung from what Siuuard possessed in Edward the Confessor's reign, and Ralph Peverell at the time of the Survey [S].

From the Peverell family this estate came, by the marriage of Margaret daughter and heir of William Peverell of Nottingham, to William de Ferrers. In 1252, William de Ferrers, of Groby; son of William, and brother to Robert de Ferrers the last Earl of Derby of this family, had, of the gift of his father, the maners of Woodham-Ferrers, Stebbing, and Fairsted, and one messuage in Chiche, all in Essex, to hold to him and his heirs, by the service of five knights fees (c).

The Maner of ST. CLERES.

The mansion house is about a quarter of a mile south-east from the Church.

This estate took its name from the ancient Family of St. Clere, mentioned above, p. 443. and in the other Volume, p. 28.

Juliana, daughter of Peter de Kertlington, and wife of Alexander de Raines, gave to Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, all the homage and service which Ralph Fitz-Walter of St. Osith owed her, for the tenement he held of her in St. Osith de Chiche in Suffeete.

By the Feodary of the Honor of Castle-Hed-ingham, it appears, that these lands called St. Cleres-wic, and St. Cleres Park, were held under the Earls of Oxford by the following persons.

—Ralph son of Walter de Osith, and Cecily St. Clere, in the reign of K. Henry III.—Philip de St. Osith, in 1273. Next — William St. Clere: and his son and heir — John in 1334. — Thomas Sencler held half a fee in Chiche under Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl of Oxford; and under his successors Robert, and Alberic, in 1384 and 1406 (d). In 1446 and 1454, — William St. Clere held the 12th part of a knight's fee in Chich, paying 4d. yearly to the maner of Bentle. — Sir John Seyntclere, who dyed 25 November 1546, held the maner of Chichridill, alias St. Cleres-hall, in St. Osith, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Castle of Hennyngham, by the third part of a knight's fee, then of the yearly value of 30 l. He had also the maner of Frodewyke, as we shall see presently. — John was his son and heir. In 1555, he passed by fine this maner, and lands in Bentley, Cutteridge, and Willie, to John Gason, Esq; (e).

It was soon after in the Darcy Family. Thomas Darcy, of Tollethunt Tregos Esq; who dyed 27 October 1558, held 2 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 300 of marsh, with appertenances, in this parish, late John Seyntclere's, of Thomas Lord Darcy, as of his maner of Chiche, then worth 40 l. a year (f). [For a further account of him, see above, p. 396.] — Brian Darcy, Esq; his son by his third wife, had this estate after him; which he held, at the time of his decease 25 December 1587, together with St. Cleres-wic, and other estates (g) [T]. He married Bridget, one of the daughters of John Corbet, of Sprowston in Norfolk Esq; by whom he had, John; Robert, Jane, and Penelope; which three last dyed without issue, and are buried with him in this Church. — John Darcy, Esq; the eldest son and heir, born in 1560, was a serjeant-at-law, and dying 15 March 1638 was also buried in this Church. By Dorothy his wife daughter of Thomas Audley of Bere-Church Esq; he had Brian who left no issue; and — Thomas; The latter dyed before his father in 1632, having married in 1621, Mary, daughter of Sir Andrew Astley, of Writtle, Kt. by which he had Mary, and — Thomas, posthumus, created a Baronet 20 June 1660. He married, first, Cecily daughter of Sir Symonds D'ewes, and had by her Anne, who dyed young. By his second wife, Jane, daughter and heir of Robert Cole, he had Robert, who dyed young; Thomas, born in 1668; Brian, born in 1669; William; John, and Elizabeth, which two last dyed without issue. [See in the other Volume, p. 140.]

Of the heirs of the Darcy family it was purchased by Mr. Richard Daniel; and belongs now to — Dr. Richard Daniel.

FRODEWICK, or FROWICK-HALL, is another Maner, or reputed Maner, in this parish.

At the time of the Survey, it seems to have been a distinct village, called in Domesday book Forowica, and belonging to Earl Eustace.

Anciently it belonged to a Family surnamed from it de Frothewyke, or Frowyck. John de Frothewyke, who dyed in 1312, held one messuage, and 2 carucates of arable in the village of Frothewyk, Chiche Ridell, Crustwic, and Earl's Chiche, of the heirs of Ralph de St. Osith, in capite, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee. — Laurence was his son; whose heirs held a knight's fee in Chiche Ridell, under Henry de Ferrers, in 1343 (h).

John de Seyntclere, at the time of his decease, 26 August 1493, held the maner of Chych-Frodwick in St. Osith, of Sir John de Bowcher Lord Ferrers of Groby. His son — Sir John Seyntclere held also this maner of Frodewyke, and a tenement called Fenhowse in the parish of Chiche, of William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, who had married Anne, daughter and heir of Henry Bouchier Earl of Essex (i).

This Estate is now divided into two, Great Frowick hall, and Little Frowick-hall.

Great Frowick-hall is about a mile and a half north from the Church, and to it belongs the north Chapel of the Chancel.

. . . Thwaytes, Gent. had it some time ago; one of whose heirs was married to . . . Spilman.

It was afterwards in the Harlow family, that resided here for some generations. Martha daughter of John Harlow, Gent. and her husband William Berney, of this place, Gent. sold it to John Daines, or Denes, yeoman. He had, by

His second wife was Martha, sister of William Weoley, of Weley-hall.—John, the eldest son, married Elizabeth, daughter of Antony Boradale, of Brightlingscy, and had by her, John, James, Adam; Sarah, Hannah.—John Denes, the eldest son, dyed 4 October 1704, in the 55th year of his age, and was buried here, with an epitaph. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Heckford, of Great Bentley, by whom he had, John, Edward; Elizabeth, Hannah, and Sarah.—John Denes, or Dines, is the present possessor.

Little Frowick-hall, stands not far from the other.

All the account we find of it, is, That it belonged, some years ago, to Thomas Green, of East-thorp, Esq; and now to

Mr. John Baker. [See in the other Volume, p. 180.

Mr. Thomas Martin; Samuel Gordon; &c. have also some lands here:

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, and St. Peter and St. Paul, is large, consisting of a middle pace and north and south aisles; all tiled. In the Steeple are 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, by Richard de Belmeis, to the Monastery here: and the Tithes being appropriated to them, they served the Cure by one of their own Canons. Since the suppression, it hath been a Donative, or perpetual Curacy.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 1873l. 1 s. 8 d.

In 1317, a Market was kept here, as appears by the presentment below [U].

Talbot LLoyd, M. A. is the present perpetual Curate of this parish.

13. MISTLEY, with MANING-TREE.

Having surveyed the Western part of this Hundred, we return to describe the middle and more inland parts of the same.

Mistley, the parish we begin with, hath Ardley and Lawford on the west, Bromley on the south, Wickes and Bradley on the east, and the Stour or Channel on the north.

The name is formed from the Saxon words, Mistel, the herb basil, and ley, pasture; this place probably abounding with that sort of herb. There is another Saxon word Mist, a mist, but how it could be applicable particularly to this place I do not understand.

This parish belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Alric, or Aluric, and Alestan: At the time of the Survey, it was divided into three Maners, holden, by the wife of Henry de Ramis; by the Countess of Albemarle, under the title of Sciddinchou; and by Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Nigel, by the name of Dicheley.

The Maner of MISTLEY.

Mistley-hall, or Sciddinchou-hall, stands pleasantly on an eminence, with a good prospect, especially on the north. It was new built by Richard Rigby Esq; and much improved by his son the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Esq; with fine plantations of trees &c.

This maner is what the wife of Henry de Ramis held [W]. It was at first called Old-hall, but where the mansion house stood, is at present unknown. From the decay of it arose another named New-hall; which is about 2 miles south from the Church. They were anciently set down in records by those distinct names, and two capital messuages so called. But neither of them occurs in the Inquisitions post mortem, till about the year 1387. Then Thomas Hardyng had in Mistleigh 1 messuage, 50 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of underwood, called le Newhall; and in the hamlet of Manytree 1 messuage, and 1 cottage; and in Lalleford, a water-mill, and 2 crofts of land. The same year, he released to Richard Wythermershe and Thomas Sankyn Parson of Little Bentele, his right in all those lands and tenements, which he had formerly granted them (k). In 1414, — William, son of Thomas Hardyng, released to Joanna de Bohun, Countess of Hereford, Essex and Northampton, being in possession, all his right in those lands in Mistleygh, Little Bromley, Little Bentley, and Wrabenase, called Newhalle; with the advowson of Mistleigh-Church (l).

The next mention we find of this estate is in 1543; when a Fine passed between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and William Ford, and Elizabeth his wife, deforc' of the maners of Old-Hall and New-Hall in Myseley, and Little Bromley, with the advowson of the Church; to be the right of the King (m).

This estate being thus vested in the Crown, K. Edward VI. in 1552, granted to Sir John Rainesforth, the maner of Old-hall, and New-hall, with appertenances, and a capital messuage called Old-hall and New-hall in Myseley; lands called le Thorne; and the advowson of this Church; To hold of the King, in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee: Also the maner of Abbots, alias Edlins, here, to hold in socage (n).

This Maner of ABBOTS was so called, because it belonged to the Abbey of St. Osith: and, under the name of Estlines in Mistley, was lett at the time of the suppression, to Thomas King for 3l. 6s. 8d. rent (o). Abbots is two miles and a half south from the Church.

As Sir John Rainsforth became possessed about the same time of the Maner of Mapingtree, and that henceforth these three Maners of Old-hall, New-hall, and Maningtree, came to be mentioned together in the Inquisitions; we shall therefore give an account of it here.

MANINGTRE, or MANYTRE, is a name that doth not occur in Domesday-book [X], but Sciddinchou is the appellation it is there mentioned by. 'Tis otherwise written in records, Scidmechau, Sedingho, Sidingho, Shedham, Chedingham, Chedingho; and the maner-house is called Sheddou-hall, or Sharing-hall. It stands about a mile from Maningtree, upon a rising ground.

Maningtree is not so considerable for being a Maner, as for being a Town by the south side of the river Stour; where a pretty considerable Trade is carried on in Deals, Coals, Corn, Iron, &c. and from whence the best Whittings, and a quantity of other Fish are brought to Colchester. There is a Market in it weekly on Thursdays; and a Fair June 15 [Y]. This place is however only a Hamlet in Mistley-parish.

Sciddinchou belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Aluric; at the time of the Survey, the Countess of Albemarle held it in demesne [Z]. This Countess was Adeliza, half-sister to William the Conqueror, wife of Eudo Earl of Champagne, to whom Odo Bishop of Bayeux gave Albemarle or Aumarle in Normandy, and William the 1st. and Earldom of Holderneffe (p).

By an extent taken of this maner of Sindingho, in 1279, it appeared, that it comprized one messuage, 1 garden and curtilage, worth 10s. a year; in arable ground, eight score acres and ten, worth 3d. an acre; 7 acres and a half of meadow, worth 2s. an acre; 28 acres of pasture, worth 6d. an acre; in the herbage of a wood felled, of 27 acres, 10s. a year; item a water mill worth a mark yearly; a dove-house worth 4s. two acres of marsh worth 12d. yearly; Rents of assise, 6l. 19s. 8d. in work of customary tenants 7s. in tolls, 40s. It was holden of the Countess of Albemarle, together with the maner of Godlisford in Suffolk, by the service of half a knight's fee, and not of the King in capite. Isabell, widow of Hubert de Ruly, held a third part of it in dower (q).—In 1311, Geoffrey, son of William de Rully, or Ruylli, of Ramesey, released all his right in the maner of Schidingho to

The Abbey and Convent of Legh, or Canon Leigh in Devonshire. For Maud de Clare, Countess of Gloucester and Hereford; having changed the Priory of Legh, [founded by Walter Clavell, for Canons of the order of St. Augustin,] into an Abbess and Nuns, or Canonesse, of the same order, she gave them this her maner of Sydynghaw. And Sir Robert de Insula released to them, in 1319, his right in all the lands and tenements he held in Shidingho, and Manitree, with appertenances (r).

This estate continued in the Nunnery till 19 February 1538, when it was surrendered to the Crown (s).

In 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Manytree alias Schidinghoo, and all the lands tenements &c. in this parish, Lawford, Little Bromeleigh, Ardleigh and Bradfeild, to Sir John Rainsforth, and his heirs; to hold in ca. by the tenth part of a knight's fee (t). At the time of his decease, 16 September 1559, he held the maner of Manytree, alias Chedingho, with appertenances, and the Crane, the Key, and Key-house, of the Queen, in ca. as above: and a Chapel called our Lady in the Oates, and the Gild or fraternity of Manytree: also the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and the Rectory of Mistley, of the Queen, in ca. by the 40th of a knight's fee; and the maner of Abbots alias Edlyns, of the Queen, by fealty only, in free socage. He had two wives, viz. 1. . . . daughter and heir of Edward Knivet. 2. Winifred daughter and heir of John Pyme; but left no issue by either, so that his heirs were the descendants of his mother's sister Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Humfrey Starkey, namely Christopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne, wife of Henry Josselyn.

To explain this a little. Sir Humfrey Starkey, created Serjeant at law in 1478, and constituted Chief Baron of the Exchequer in 1486, had four daughters, coheirs, Catharine, Elizabeth, Emma, and Anne. The latter was the mother of Sir John Rainsforth, first wife of his father Sir John Rainsforth.—Elizabeth, the second daughter, was wife of Thomas Blodlowe, whose father was Sheriff of London in 1472. They had two daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, and Catharine. Elizabeth was married first to Andrew Edmonds of Cressing-Temple Esq; father of Christopher Edmonds Esq; above-mentioned, of Lewknor in Oxfordshire, and a knight. [Elizabeth's second husband, was Sir John Williams of Tame, by whom she had Isabel, wife of Richard Wenman Esq; and Margery wife of Henry Lord Norris, of Ricot.] Catbarine, the other daughter and coheir of Thomas Blodlowe, became wife of John Goodwyn Esq; and had by him a son named John.—Emma, the third daughter and coheir of Sir Humfrey Starkey, was married to Henry Torell Esq; whose descendent Humfrey Torell left an only daughter and heir Anne, born in 1541, and married to Henry Josselyn Esq;

Christopher Edmonds, and his wife, had license 20 September 1561, to alienate the fourth part of the maners of Manytree, Shedinghoo, Old-hall, New-hall, Abbots alias Edlings, in Mistle, with appertenance, to

John Goodwyn (u). In 1567, a precept was directed to the Sheriff, to cause John Goodwyn Esq; and Anne his wife, and John Lucas Gent. and Mary his wife, to perform their agreement with Francis Saunders Esq; and William Walter senior, about these maners; with view of frankpledge, free-warren, and other liberties and franchises, and the advowson of this Church (w). By license dated the 18th of April 1576, John Goodwyn, and Elizabeth his wife, alienated a moiety of the maner of Maningtree, and of 60 messuages, 20 cottages, 10 tofts, 4 water-mills, 4 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 4 of pasture, 400 of wood, 600 of heath and furze; with free warren and franchises, &c. in Manytree, alias Mistle, to

John Barker, Esq; who purchased the other moiety, 7 October 1577, of Henry Josselyn Esq; and Anne his wife (x). Mr. Barker dyed 26 May 1589, possessed of the premises, leaving — Robert, his son and heir aged 26 years (y), who sold this estate to Paul, Viscount, Bayning. At the time of his decease, 29 July 1629, he held the maner of Shedingho and Maningtree, of the King, in capite, by the tenth part of a knight's fee; and the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and advowson of this Church, of the King, in ca. by the 40th part of a knight's fee; likewise the maner of Abbots in this parish (z). — Paul, Viscount Bayning, his son and heir, departed this life 11 June 1638. He had only two daughters that inherited his very large fortune and estates, Anne; and Penelope, the latter of which dyed in 1657, without issue; though she had two husbands.

Anne, the eldest daughter, was married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and last Earl of Oxford of that most ancient family: But also left no issue. About 1680, the Earl sold the reversion of this, and other estates to

Edward Rigby Esq; William Peck Esq; Mrs. Pierpont, &c. After the Earl's decease in 1703, the survivors of them, and the heirs of the others, joined in obtaining an act of parliament to settle the division of the said estates: Whereupon this was allotted to Edward Rigby Esq; His son and heir, — Richard Rigby Esq; married Mrs. Anne Perry, and had by her a son, and two daughters, Richard; Anne; and Martha, wife of Col. John Hale. He departed this life in November 1730, and his widow Anne in February 1741. Their son, The Rt. Hon. — Richard Rigby Esq; Privy Counsellor in England and Ireland; and Master of the Rolls, and late Vice-Treasurer, of this last kingdom; is the present possessor. He hath in this parish New-hall, White-hall, Abbots farm, Fords; and Dikeley-hall of which last we proceed to give an account.

The Maner of DIKELEY.

Dikeley-hall, is about a mile and a half south from the Church.

The owner of it in Edward the Confessor's reign was Alestan: Robert Gernon held it at the time of the Survey [A]. As he was lord of Stansted-Montfichet, this estate held therefore of that Barony: and came with it to the De Vere family.

One Norman de Dikeleye, who took his name from hence, was a benefactor to St. Osith's monastery (a).

It seems afterwards to have belonged, as well as the former maner of New-hall, to Thomas Hardyng, and to have received from thence the name of Hardynge. For David Mortimer, and Robert Brooke of Dedham, held, in the time of K. Henry VI. one knight's fee in Dikelegh near Manytree, called Hardynge in Mistle (b).

Paul Viscount Bayning, at the time of his decease in 1629, held the messuage called Dykel-hall, and Dykel-hall-wood, of the King, as of his Hundred of Tendring, in free and common socage (c). He was succeeded by his son — Paul Viscount Bayning, who departed this life 11 June 1638.

Anne, his eldest daughter and coheir, brought this, among the rest of her large fortune, to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and last Earl of Oxford of that noble family. About the year 1680, the reversion of this estate was purchased by Edward Peck Esq; and passed from him, as the estates at Little Bentley, to his son — William, and his grandson — William Peck, Esqres. [For a more particular account of the Bayning family, see above, p. 446, 447, and for those of de Vere, and of Peck, see the other Volume, p. 292. 526.] This estate belongs now to the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Esq;

The Lord Viscount Grimston has two farms in this parish, called Marjorams, and Bock-ins. Thomas Hickerlingill Esq; Mr. Simey; and Philip Long &c. have also some lands here.

At the Thorn, the late Richard Rigby Esq; built a village of about 50 brick-houses, convenient for tradesmen, and well-inhabited. He also built several Granaries, Warehouses, a large Malting-office; and made good Quays, and Coal-yards.

The old Church, dedicated to St. Mary, stood almost a mile south-east from the new one. The Church-yard is inclosed, and a Vault with a portico over it remains, for the burial of the Rigby-family. The new Church stands at the Thorn; and was consecrated by the Bishop of London 6 June 1735. It is a neat edifice. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was generally appendent to the capital Maner. But from 1390 to 1395 it was in Geoffrey Cockfield; and from 1432 to 1458 in Robert Darcy (d); which do not appear from records to have had that maner.

MANINGTREE, as we have already observed, is only a Hamlet in this parish; and the Church or Chapel there is a Chapel of ease to the mother Church of Mistley. About the year 1616, it was built out of the ruins of the ancienter Chapel, that stood on a rising ground not far from the site of the new Church. It consists of a body and two aisles supported by pillars of the Tuscan order. At the west end there is a Turret with one Bell.

In this place was formerly a Guild or Fraternity called Trinity Guild, the yearly value of which amounted to 8 l. 5 s. 4 d. There was in it one pair of Organs valued at 26 s. 8 d. two hand-bells 16 s. four bells esteemed at 38 c. weight, at 15 s. per hundred; three chalices of silver, parcel gilt, weighing 29 oz. at 4 s. 6 d. the ounce and more; one pax of silver, parcel gilt, 6 oz. at 4 s. 8 d. per ounce; in ready money of the Trinity guild 4 l. In the Certificate of Chantry-lands, the account of this place is, 'The said Town ys a great Towne, and also a haven Towne, having in yt to the number of 700 of howseling people: The said Chapple ys distant from any Parish Church one mile and a quarter.'

Mistley is rated to the land-tax at 429 l. 1 s. 0 d. and Maningtree at 265 l. 1 s. 6 d.

BRADFIELD

lies east of Mistley, being bounded on the north by the river Stour.

The name is formed from the Saxon word Brad, broad, and field.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Aluric Camp was possessed of this parish: which Roger de Ramis, and Roger Pictaviensis, held at the time of the Survey [B].

These lands occur afterwards, in records, under the several denominations of The Maners of Bradfeld-hall, Over-hall, and Franke-hall; which were one and the same: and The Maner of Nether-hall.

Bradfeld-hall, or Over-hall, stands in the upper part of the parish: The mansion house, which is large, and formerly considerable, was the Seat of the Harbottle and Grimston Families. It is about three quarters of a mile south-west from the Church.

Nether-hall lyes near the water-side, about half a mile north from the Church. This was the chief Maner.

At present there are but two acknowledged Maners in this parish. 1. The maner of Bradfeld-hall. 2. The maner of the Rectory.

The Maner of BRADFELD-HALL.

The earliest account we have of this Estate after Roger de Ramis, was

In the year 1312, when William Franke, or Frankes, the elder, of Herewich, granted all his maner of Bradfeld, to John de Brokesbourne, and Joane his wife (e). She was either daughter, or a near relation, of the said Franke. The next year Franke settled by fine this estate on John de Brokesbourne: who, jointly with Margery his wife, in 1332, settled the maner of Bradfeld near Manicetree, with appertenances in Bradfeld, Mistley, Wrabnese, and Dedham, on himself, and his said wife (f).

The Brokesbourne family took their name from a place so called, in the parish of Wics.

John de Brokesbourne above-mentioned, at the time of his decease in 1342, held, jointly with Margarer, or Margery, his wife, the maner of Bradfeld of the heirs of Robert de Ralph, by the service of one knight's fee, and tene-ments in Kirby and Walton: he held also for his life, in Mistley 1 messuage, and 100 acres of arable, of Robert Fitz-John, by the service of 8 s. remainder of this last to his sons William, and John. — Robert de Brokesbourne, his eldest son and heir, succeeded him in the maner of Bradfeld (g).

In 1343, he granted to his mother Margery, and the heirs male of her body by his father, the maner of Bradfeld, and one messuage, 480 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, 50 of pasture, 130 of wood, 12 of alder, and 40 s. rent, in Bradfeld, Mistley, and Dedham: and to his mother, and Sir John de Sutton, to whom she was remarried, and to her heirs male, he granted all that messuage and lands which his father had purchased of William de Boxtede, and Hamers land, and Stebbinges land in Bradfeld (b). He appears to have dyed without issue. For in 1384, when his mother [then wife of Sir John de Sutton] departed this life, her heir was found to be her other son—Edmund de Brokesbourne (i). He married Idonea Lovey, to whom K. Richard II. confirmed, in 1396, the grant of a free-warren made to John de Brokesbourne in 1312, in all their lands in Bradfeild, Mistle, Wrabnese, Ramsey, Dover-court, Wykes, Brokesbourne, and Tendring (k). She was remarried to John Glevant; and her third husband was Bartholomew, Lord Bouchier. [See in the other Volume, p. 253.] For the term of her life she enjoyed, among many others, the maner called Over-hall, with lands and tenements in Bradfeild, of the gift of Ralph Chamberleyn and William Brett to her former husband Edmund de Brokesbourne; holden of the heirs of Hubert de Raleigh, by the service of half a knight's fee (l). This is the first time, we find mention of the maner of Over-hall. Idonea dyed in 1409; By her second husband, Edmond Brokesbourne, she had a daughter, Alianor, born in 1393; married, first, to John Fitz-Raufe, Esq; (m) afterwards to Sir William Rainsford, to whom she brought this estate. At the time of his decease, in 1433, he held the maner of Frankhall in Bradfeild, of Humfrey Duke of Gloucester, as of his castle of Colchester, by the service of 1 knight's fee; and the maner of Strondelond in Ramseye of Robert de Roydon.—Henry Rainford, then fifteen years old; is said to be their son and heir (n); but we find nothing more of him in records. Alianor, the mother, dyed 30 July 1437.—Sir Laurence de Reynsforth, most probably another son of theirs, who dyed 18 September 1490, held the maner of Bradfeild-hall, with appertenances, of John Earl of Oxford; and the maner of Netherhall of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of her maner of Parkhall, by the service of 2d. a year; and several other estates. He was succeeded by his son and heir—John Reynsforth Esq; 30 years old (o); afterwards knighted. At the time of his decease, 16 September 1559, he held the maners of Bradfeild-hall and Over-hall, and divers messuages, lands, &c. in Bradfeild, Tenderinge, Kirby, Walton, and Ramsey; and the maner of Nether-hall, of the Queen, as of her maner of Parke-hall: with several other maners and estates (p) [C]. Though he had two wives, namely, . . . daughter and heir of Edward Knivet; and Winifred, daughter and heir of John Pyme, yet he left no issue; so that his large estates came among the descendents of his mother's sister Elizabeth Starkye; namely Christopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne wife of Henry Josselyn. [See this more at large, above, under Mistle, and Maningtree.] Which of these coheirs had this estate, and how long it continued amongst them, doth not appear.

In 1568, William Waldegrave Esq; was lord of the maner of Bradfeild (q).

Soon after, it came into the Grimston family, and hath continued in it ever since. They derive themselves from one Silvester, who was standard-bearer to William the Conqueror at the battle of Hastings, and had Grimston in Yorkshire, from whence he took his surname. For a particular account of their descents and inter-marriages we shall beg leave to refer to the Peerages; And shall begin with the first of the Family, that came to reside here. It was Edward Grimston Esq; [D] son of Edward Grimston Esq; by . . . daughter of . . . Sturrow, of Ipswich, widow of . . . Hall. He was one of the Burgesses in Parliament for the burgh of Aye in Suffolk in 1589; and marrying Joane, daughter and coheir of Thomas Ryssy, of Lavenham in Suffolk Esq; got with her a very considerable fortune. She dyed 23 January 1604. Her mother was Joane, daughter of John Harbottle, of this place, and of Crowfield in Suffolk Esq; At the time of his decease, 16 August 1610, he held the maner of Bradfeild hall, with appertenances, and Bradfeild-Park, with lands in Bradfeild, Tenderinge, Mistle, Ramsey, and Kirkeby; the Cock-meadow, and lands called Brights, in Bradfeild; the maners, or tenements, of Faytes, and Margeries, in Bradfeild, Mistle, and Wicks; a messuage with 100 acres called Pilcocks in Tenderinge; also the maner of Skirmans fee, or Printon-hall; Keties wood, and several parcels of land in Bradfeild, Mistle, Lawford, &c. By his wife, Joane Resby above-mentioned, he had two sons Harbottle, and Henry; and a daughter named Mary, wife of Thomas Cornwallys Esq; Henry, the second son, married Frances, daughter of Ralph Coppinger, of Stoke in Kent Esq; by whom he had William, Henry, Thomas; Cecily, Elizabeth, and Mary.—Harbottle Grimston Esq; the eldest son and heir, was knighted, created a Baronet 25 November 1612, and elected Knight of the Shire for Essex in the 2d, 3d, and 4th Parliaments of K. Charles I. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Coppinger Esq; sister to his brother Henry's wife, and had by her Edward, Harbottle, Henry, Thomas, William; and Elizabeth, married to Christopher Harrys of Shenfield in Margaretting Esq; The 19th of February 1647, he departed this life in the 70th year of his age, as did his wife 12 December 1649 aged 70, and were both buried in the Chancel of this Church. Edward, the eldest son, dyed in 1624, aged 24 years; He married Elizabeth second daughter of Thomas Marsham Esq; by whom he had Edward, and Elizabeth, that both dyed in minority; so that Sir Harbottle, the father, was succeeded in title and estate by his second son—Sir Harbottle Grimston,

Having studied the Law in Lincolns-inn, he became eminent in that profession; and one of the leading men in the Long Parliament, being Burgeſſes for Colcheſter, as he was in all the Parliaments of K. Charles II. after the Reſtoration. But he aiming only at the redreſs of grievances, and having no intention of ſubverting the government as the other furious tools of ambition, he conſequently was one of thoſe real Patriots who were ſecluded or turned out of the Houſe of Commons. Upon the Reſtoration he was choſen Speaker of the Healing Parliament, and appointed Maſter of the Rolls, which office he enjoyed till his death 31 December 1683. He had two wives. The firſt was Mary, daughter of Sir George Croke, Kt. one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas; which dyed 21 May 1649, aged 35 years. By her he had fix ſons, five of whom dyed before him; and two daughters. Mary married to Sir Capel Luckyn, of Meſſing-hall, Kt. and Bart. and Elizabeth to Sir George Grubham-How, Bart. Sir Harbottle's ſecond wife, was Anne, daughter of Sir Nicolas, or Nathanael, Bacon, of Culford-hall, Kt. widow of Sir Thomas Meautys, of Gorhambury, Kt. One daughter that he had by her dyed young. — Sir Samuel Grimſton, Bart. the only ſurviving ſon of Sir Harbottle, born 7 January 1643, ſerved in ſeveral Parliaments for St. Albans, being ſeated near that Burgh, at Gorhambury, which his father had purchaſed of Hercules, nephew and heir of Sir Thomas Meautys. His firſt wife was Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter of Heneage Earl of Nottingham, by whom he had one daughter, Elizabeth, married to William Saville, Marquis of Halifax. By his ſecond wife, Anne, youngeſt daughter of John Earl of Thanet, he had Edward, born 22 July 1674, and Mary born in 1675, but they both dyed young. He himſelf departed this life in October 1700, in the 52d year of his age. Having no ſurviving iſſue, he ſettled a large eſtate upon his kinsman, William Luckyn Eſq; ſecond ſon of Sir William, of Meſſing-hall, and grandſon of Sir Capel Luckyn above-mentioned, by Mary daughter of Sir Harbottle Grimſton, upon condition that he ſhould take the ſurname of Grimſton. In 1713, 1714, and 1727, he was choſen member of parliament for St. Albans, and 3 June 1719 created Viſcount Grimſton, and Baron of Dunboyne in the County of Meath in Ireland. His lordſhip departed this life 15 October 1756. By his wife, Jane, daughter of James Cooke, citizen of London, he had 19 children. Samuel, the eldeſt ſon, married Mary, daughter and heir of Henry Lovel Eſq; youngeſt ſon to Sir Salathiel Lovel, Baron of the Exchequer, and had by her a daughter who dyed an infant; he himſelf departed this life 19 June 1737. His widow was remarried to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Viſcount Barrington. — James, the next brother, is the preſent Lord Viſcount Grimſton.

Bradfield MANESTUNE, or Manſton, is a Hamlet in this pariſh, by the ſide of the Channel; called otherwiſe Mountherd alias Jakes. There was formerly in it a Chapel ſtyled our Lady in the Oats, it being dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Alfeſin enjoyed this maner in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey it was holden by Roger de Ramis [D]. About the reign of K. Henry II, William de Ramis conveyed it to Aubrey de Vere, Earl of Oxford; to hold as a quarter of a knight's fee (r). Part of it had belonged to Ralph Fitz-Adam, and next to Philip de St. Oſith, who paſſed it to John ſon of Vincent de Kirkby; and the latter granted and releaſed to Robert Earl of Oxford a meſſuage and lands in Manſton Bradfeild, Ramſey, and Weeks, paying to the chief lords all due ſervices, and to himſelf a clove gilly flower. — Richard, — Robert, and — Gilbert de Kirkby, and — John de Weſtwick, held it, under the Earls of Oxford. In 1358, and 1370, Nicolas Launch, John Aleyn, and their partners William Adam, William Treydevers and Nicolas Baker, held half a fee in Manſton, under John, and Thomas de Vere, the 7th and 8th Earls of Oxford (s). — William Aleyn, and Richard Herd, William St. Clere, and John Somercote, held it in the time of K. Henry VI. — Thomas Pepper, in K. Edward the Sixth's reign. — Antony Balls held Mountherd alias Jakes in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign. And, in 1568, — William Cardinall Eſq; held divers meſſuages, lands &c. in Bradfeild, called Mountherds, otherwiſe Jakes, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his caſtle of Hedingham, by the tenure called Manſtohoulede, and yearly rent of 3s. 4d. This Church was given by William de Ramis, in free and perpetual alms, to the Prior and Convent of St. Bartholomew, Smith-field: which grant was confirmed by K. Henry III. 15 July 1253. Afterwards the great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained, which continued in their gift till the suppression; when both the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage came to the Crown. The Prior and Convent of St. Bartholomew's had here 16 messuages, 111 acres of arable, which were holden by their tenants in villenage by several services. There belonged to the Church one messuage containing 2 acres, and in three crofts 31 acres of arable, and 5 acres and a half of wood: and there belonged to the Vicarage one messuage, and 16 acres of land. The Prior and Convent had View of Frank-pledge of all their tenants, who came upon summons to the next Court after Michaelmas, and collected among themselves, and paid 2s. to the Ward of Colchester-castle. is the next parish in order, lying east and south of Bradfield.

The name is otherwise written in records, Wica, Wics, Wikes, Wykes, Wixe; and is derived from the Saxon word, Wic, signifying a village, castle, farm, or dairy.

In this parish are four Maners. 1. The maner of Wickes, or Park-hall. 2. . . . that of Carbonells. 3. The maner of Hamstall. 4. The maner of the Abbey, or Nunnery.

The Maner of Wics, or Wykes, otherwise Park-hall, is the capital maner in this parish.

Queen Edeva had it in Edward the Confessor's reign; And, at the time of the Survey, it was holden by Walter the Deacon [E]. He left two sons, Walter surnamed Mascherell, and Alexander styled de Waham or Wix; also a daughter named Editha. Alexander having no issue by his wife Aelia, granted his lands of his own acquiring in Wikes and elsewhere [F], within the Hundred of Tendring, to Ralph son of William son of Robert; for which his lord William, son of Robert, and father of Ralph gave him 30 marks of silver, and one saddle-horse (u).

the Rectory or Parsonage came to be styled a MANER.

Both Rectory, and Advowson of the Vicarage, continued in the Prior and Convent till their suppression; when they came to the Crown.

After that, they were in William Waldegrave Esq; and then in the families of Goodwin, and Barker, of Miffley, till after 1620. Paul Viscount Bayning purchased them of Barker; and he and his son enjoyed them—Anne, eldest daughter of the last Lord Bayning, brought them in marriage to her husband Albrey de Vere, the 20th Earl of Oxford. He sold the reversion of this estate, as that of Miffley, to Edward Peck, and Edward Rigby Esqres.—Edward Rigby, Esq; had the impropriate Tithes, and the advowson of the Vicarage, in 1706; and they belong now to his grandson, the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Esq; who hath also in this parish about Seventy acres of land; one part of which is called Cricks.

Bradfield parish is rated to the land-tax at 530 l. 2s. 6d.

From this Walter descended the noble Family surnamed de Hastings, lords of the Barony of Hastings, which consisted of 10 knights fees; one of which lay in Wikes, and for which Robert de Hastings paid to the scutage of Normandy, in 1206 (w). The succession of this family of Hastings is thus recorded (x): Robert, — Alexander, whose wife was named Adeliza. — Ralph, — Robert, — William, had 3 sons, Robert, Ralph, and John. — Ralph confirmed to the Church of St. Mary de Wikes, and to the nuns, the gift of Alexander de Waham his father's uncle, which his father William and his brother Robert had confirmed to them.

Little Easton was the head of the Barony of Hastings: Delicia daughter and heir of Robert de Hastings being married to Godfrey de Lovain, brother of Henry Duke of Brabant, brought him the Barony of Hastings, and the 10 knights fees thereunto belonging, of which Wikes was one. [See in the other Volume, p. 430.] Godfrey was succeeded by his son — Matthew de Lovain, or Loveyn, living in the year 1260; whose son — Matthew de Loveyn was father of — Thomas, that dyed in 1345; as did his son — John in 1347 [G]. The latter left two daughters coheirs, Alianore; and Isabel who dyed in 1359, without issue (y).

her great inheritance to her husband Sir William Bourgher, to whom she was married on or about the year 1365.

Under the families of Loveyn, and Bouchier, this estate was holden by the other great families of Bassët, le Despenser, and Bohun. Philip Bassët, who dyed in 1272, held of Matthew de Loveyn, in capite, by the service of 20s. a year, the maner of Wyke by the law of England, of the inheritance of Halewife his wife.—Aliva, Countess of Norfolk, wife of Roger Bigot, was his daughter and heir (z). Her second husband, Hugh le Despenser held of Matthew de Loveyn, a quarter of a knight's fee in Wykes (a). Probably, Roger Bigot Earl of Norfolk, gave it up to the Crown with his other estates. [See in the other Volume, p. 260. 269.] For, by grant of K. Edward III. in 1332, William de Bobun, afterwards Earl of Northampton, had this maner in general tail, with several others in the Counties of Berks, Oxon, Buks, Lincoln, and Nottingham (b). At the time of his decease in 1360, he held this maner of Sir William Boucher (c). His son—Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton, held the same at the time of his death in 1372 (d) [H]. He left two daughters coheirs, Elienor, married to Thomas of Woodstock Duke of Gloucester, and Mary to Henry, Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV.

Upon partition of the Bohun estates between K. Henry V. son of Mary, and Anne daughter and heir of Elienor;

Anne had this for part of her share, together with a Park; then worth 26l. 13s. 4d. a year. From this Park, undoubtedly, the mansion-house had the name of PARK-HALL. It stands about a mile west from the Church.

Anne brought this estate into the noble family of the Earls Stafford. [See above, p. 193.] But upon Humfrey Stafford's, Duke of Buckingham, being killed at the battle of Northampton in 1460, fighting against K. Edward IV. his estates were confiscated to the Crown.

K. Richard III. on the 13th of July 1483, granted it, among others, to Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, cousin and heir of blood to Humfrey Bohun Earl of Hereford, and rightful inheritor of such inheritances as were of the same late Earl: but, upon his being beheaded not long after, all his estates reverted to the Crown (e).

In 1595, Qu. Elizabeth granted the Park of Wikes, with appertenances, to Gilly Merick; to hold of the Castle of Hertford, by fealty (f).

It belonged afterwards to John Philipson, of Harwich, Esq; Commissary to the Packet-boats, son of John Philipson, of Kendall in Westmoreland, Gent. by Elizabeth daughter of Roger Colman, of Harwich, Gent. He married first, Rachel daughter of Robert Lane, by whom he had,

Elizabeth, and three other children that dyed young. By his second wife, Grace, daughter of Kendrick Edisbury, Esq; he had John, and Grace. He dyed 3 March 1742.—John Philipson, Esq; his son and heir, was elected one of the Burgeesses in Parliament for Harwich in 1741. 1746. and 1753. and departed this life 28 November 1756 [I]. By Susanna his wife, daughter of Richard Burton Esq; Commissioner of the Navy, he had one daughter and heir Susanna, married to Robert Bristow Esq; They have one daughter, named Susanna.

The Maner of CARBONELLS seems to be derived from the capital maner of Wikes, which we have been treating of.

The House stands in a field near the Church.

It took its name from ancient owners.

In 1280, John Carbonell received 14s. yearly of Aliva le Despenser, daughter and heir of Philip Bassët above-mentioned, for the maner of Wykes, which she held (g).

K. Edward I. in 1301, granted to Robert Carbonell free-warren in his lands in Wykes; and in Newton, and other parishes in Suffolk; which grant K. Richard II. confirmed, in 1393, to Margaret Boteler &c. (h).

John Mannock Esq; who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Carbonells, and lands in Wikes, Ramsey, Bredfeild, and Manston, of Elizabeth, Queen of K. Edward IV.—George was his son and heir (i).—William Mannock Esq; son of George, at the time of his decease 8 June 1558, held the maner of Carbonalls, of the Queen, as of her Duchy of Lancaster.—Francis Mannock Esq; his son and successor (k), held also this maner of Carbnells in Wikes, and departing this life 3 November 1590, left—William his son and heir, who dyed 15 March 1615.—Francis Mannock, Esq; son of the latter, was created a Baronet 1 June 1627; and departed this life 20 November 1634.—Sir Francis Mannock, Bart. his son and heir, dyed 26 April 1686, and was succeeded by his son—Sir William Mannock, Bart. who departed this life 26 January 1713-14. The lord paramount of this maner was Sir John de Sutton.

For Alesia wife of Hugh de Groos, of Little Bentley, held jointly with him, in 1366, the maner of Hamstall in Wikes, of Sir John de Sutton, by homage, and the service of one pound of cummin, yearly. — William de Groos, her son and heir, dyed in 1368, possessed of the same; leaving — Thomas his brother and heir (m).

Sir Richard de Sutton had this estate in 1383; and dying in 1395, was succeeded by his son — Thomas (n).

Margery, widow of John de Brokesbourne, being remarried to Sir John de Sutton, this estate, or part of it, seems to have come into the Brokesbourne-family. For, in 1409, when Idonea, formerly married to Edmund de Brokesbourne, and then wife of Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, dyed, she held 40 acres of arable, 30 of wood, 10 of meadow, 20 of pasture, and 30 s. rent in Wikes, called Hamstalls, of the Bishop of London, by fealty only (o). In right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Bartholomew Lord Bouchier, Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bouchier, had this maner called Hamstall in Wikes (p).

It was afterwards in the Pirton family, of Little Bentley. Catharine, widow of Sir William Pirton, that dyed 10 September 1501, held the maner of Hamptall with appertenances of the Prioress of Wykes, by fealty and yearly rent of 12 d. — William, the son and heir, then 40 years old, held also this maner, of the Earl of Oxford &c. at the time of his decease 24 June 1533 (q). He was succeeded by his son — Sir William Pirton, who departed this life 6 November 1552, leaving — Edmund, his son and heir (r). He dyed 20 October 1609, and his successor was his cousin — Edmund Pirton Esq; who dying 9 October 1617, was succeeded by his brother — William. [See above p. 446.] The latter sold this estate to

Paul Bayning, Esq; [M] from whom it passed, as the maners of Little Bentley, Mistleigh, &c. to his son — Paul, and then to his grandson — Paul, Viscount Bayning, and to — Paul, Viscount Bayning, son of the latter, who departed this life 11 June 1638. He had two daughters co-heirs;

Anne, married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and last Earl of Oxford, and Penelope to John Herbert Esq; youngest son of Philip Earl of Pembroke, but neither of them left any surviving issue. The Bayning family held this maner of the Bishop of London. This estate being vested in the Earl of Oxford, he sold the reversion of it to

Edward Peck, Esq; And it came to his grandson — William Peck Esq; upon the Earl's death 12 March 1702-3. His son — William Peck Esq; sold it to

Samuel Reynolds, Esq; from whom it is come to

The Rev. William Samuel Powell, D. D. [For a more particular account of the de Vere family, see in the other Volume, p. 292. and for that of Peck, p. 526.]

A NUNNERY

here, for Benedictine Nuns, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded in the reign of K. Henry I. by the sons of Walter the Deacon; namely, Walter surnamed Mascherell; Alexander his brother, and their sister Editha. They endowed it with two carucates of land in demesne, 7 villanes, in Wikes, and the Church, with a garden; and the third part of this vill, or parish, with appertenances; also 10 s. rent in Fintmores; and the Church of Chattlesham, in Suffolk. The foundation was confirmed by K. Henry II. who added five acres of assarts in Tolleshunte, and gave permission to the Nunnery to assart as far as a hundred acres in Essex; together with ample privileges and exemptions (s). From subsequent benefactors they had, in this County, lands or tithes in Purley; messuages and lands in Tendring, Mysteleghe, and Great Okele; the Church of Wormingford, given by Walter de Windlesores; and Christian his mother; in Suffolk, lands in Chattlesham, Wulverston, Swilland, liberties in Hintlesham, and the advowson of Bildeston Church (t). In 1331, John de Brokesbourne obtained license to give 1 messuage, 160 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 10 of pasture, 15 of wood, and 20 s. rent, in Wykes, Mistleigh, and Tendring, holden of William de St. Clere, to the Prioress and Nuns of Wykes, and their successors for ever (u). And, in 1363, Sir John de Sutton of Wivenhoo, got leave, to grant them 1 acre of arable, in Tendring, and the Advowson of the Church (w). But this grant did not take effect, for they never presented. Christina, daughter of Ralph de Wyndesore, gave them a moiety of the Advowson of the Church of Burnham; and Ralph de Hoding half a mark's rent in Hammer.(x). They had also a yearly rent of 13s. 4d. out of two messuages and 4 acres of land in Fordham; and an annuity of 5s. out of Barnston-hall.

Joane second daughter of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester; and afterwards Edmund, Earl Stafford, had the Advowson of this Priory (y).

At the suppression it was valued at 92l. 12s. 3d. a year.

Cardinal Wolsey having obtained, in 1525, the Pope's bull for dissolving the lesser Monasteries, in order to endow with their revenues his Colleges at Oxford and Ipswich; accordingly, Mary Abbess of Wixie, the same year, surrendered this House to the Cardinal: and the King having confirmed the surrender, this maner was settled on Cardinal College in Oxford. But in 1527, Dr. Higgons Master of this College conveyed the Nunnery of Wixie to Cardinal College in Ipswich. Upon Wolsey's incurring a præmure in 1528, this estate became vested in the Crown by act of parliament. Two years after, K. Henry VIII. granted the site of the maner of Wixie to Sir Adam Fortescue, by way of exchange. The same King granted afterwards this estate to Edward Gilbert, and Alice his wife. They had license, 26 January 1561, to alienate the maner of Wikes Abbey which they held of the Queen, in ca. to William Veysey, and Robert Veysey or Vescèy, and Johanna his wife (z). We find it described as the maner of Wikes-hall alias Wikes-Abbey, and 10 messuages, 10 tofts, 1 dove-house, 10 gardens, 600 acres of arable, 80 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 100 of wood, 100 of marsh, 100 of furze and heath, and 56s. 8d. rent, in this parish, and elsewhere (a). — William Veysey, son of Robert, at the time of his decease, 4 July 1577, held the maner of Wixie, and the site of the same; and lands, meadows, and pastures, parcel of the demesnes of this maner; some called Edmund lands, Wichell, Forethenall lands, and Windnall. He married Joanna daughter of William Cardinal of Great Bromley. — William was his son and heir (b). He was succeeded by — Robert; and he by — William Veysey.

Of the Veysey family it was purchased by . . . Warner, of Little Waldingfield Esq; From him it descended to his three daughters and coheirs, Catharine, Elianora, and Anne. The eldest was married to Henry-Vere Graham Esq; and had by him several daughters. — Elianora, one of them, was married to Sir William Bunbury, Bart. — Kitty, was married to the Rev. Langhorne Warren; and — Anne to Humfrey Hanmer Esq;

John Abell held, in 1524, of the Priorefs of Wykes 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 40 of pasture, and 4 of wood, with appertenances, called Spynells, in Wykes and Bradfeild (c).

The Nunnery did not stand where is now Wics-hall, built by the Veseys, on the south side of the Church; but it stood in a field not far off, where the moates are, or lately were, still visible; and on the site of it large trees were grown up.

POND-HALL, about half a mile north from the Church, belongs to Thomas Hickerlingill Esq;

Here is a Fair August 31.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, was of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The steeple stood at the east end. The Revenues of this Church consisting only of a small stipend of 6l. 13s. 4d. a year, and no divine service being performed for so small a trifle, the Church was suffered to grow ruinous, and at last fell down. A small Church was rebuilt, partly with the remains of the old one, by a subscription amongst the Clergy and Gentry, about the year 1740.

This Church was given to the Nunnery in this parish by the founders, Walter Mascherell, and his brother, and sister; and their grant, with the Church by name (d), was confirmed by K. Henry II. The whole Tithes were appropriated to the Nuns, and they employed some Clergyman to serve the Cure for the small stipend above-mentioned; and so it was found at the suppression. It hath continued ever since a perpetual Curacy. In 1719, it was augmented by lot with 200l. by the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty: and 200l. more were raised by the neighbouring Clergy and Gentry.

In 1530 K. Henry VIII. granted the farm of the Rectory of Wixie to Windsor-College.

Qu. Elizabeth, in 1595, granted the Rectory of Wikes, with all the Tithes, to John Welles, and Henry Best, to hold in socage (e).

Edward Waldegrave, of Lawford-hall Esq; who dyed 12 February 1621-2, held the Rectory of Wixie with appertenances, of the King, in fee-farm, by the yearly rent of 55s. 8d. — Anne, wife of Drue Drury, and Jemima afterwards married to John Lord Crew of Stene, were his two daughters and coheirs (f).

The Tithes are now divided. Part of them belongs to Thomas Hickerlingill Esq; — Mrs. Dundas has the Tithes of 800 acres of arable, and of 64 of wood. — And Mr. Ralph Bull hath another part.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 929l. 3s. 0d.

Earl of Bologne; the Bishop of London; Ralph Peverell: and their under-tenants.

They were divided afterwards into five Maners:

1. The maner of Tendring-hall, or Old-hall.
2. that of Gernon's.
3. and of Bretts-hall.
4. The maner of New-hall.
5. . . . The maner of Harestills; alias Hahams-hall.

The Maner of OLD-HALL

The mansion house stands a little way north-west from the Church.

This Maner is what belonged to Earl Eustace at the Survey [N].

Eustace's grand-daughter and heir, Maud, brought this, among the rest of her great inheritance, to her husband K. Stephen.

In the reigns of K. Henry II. and K. John, Oger de Curton held two parts of a fee in Tendring, of the Honor of Bologne (g).

Sir Andrew le Blund [O], by a deed without date, gave his maner of Tendring with the Advowson of the Church, to his daughter and heir

Catharine. She was married to Sir Richard Battaile, or Betaile, lord of Wivenhoo maner, [See in the other Volume, p. 187,] and had by him two daughters, coheirs, Margery, married to Sir William de Sutton, and Anne to Peter de Taleworth.

Margery, and her husband Sir William de Sutton, took this maner for their purparty, in 1298.

—Sir John de Sutton, their son and heir, had two sons, John, and Richard. He was living in 1366, but I do not find the time of his death.

—Sir John, the eldest son and heir, held the maner of Tendring-hall, with the advowson of the Church, of the heirs of Sir Hugh Blount, by knight's service; and a tenement called Eldefhonsland: He held also a tenement called Gernons, in this parish, of the heirs of Hugh Groos, by knight's service. Departing this life in 1393, he was succeeded by his brother — Sir Richard de Sutton, who held these same estates at the time of his decease in 1395. — Thomas, his son, succeeded him (b) [P]. But this estate seems not to have continued in that family, or their heirs; but to have come into the Doreward family. For, in 1406, John Doreward Esq; in consideration of his acquitting K. Henry IV. of 200 marks his Majesty owed him, got a license to give the maner of Tendring-hall to the Abbey of St. John Baptist in Colchester (i). But this not being performed by Doreward in his life-time, the grant became void. His son, — John Doreward Esq; founding an Hospital in Bocking, in 1438, endowed it with the maner of Tendring. And, the year following, William Talworth of Little Holand Esq; who had some interest in this maner, as a descendent of Peter above-mentioned, released to John Doreward; and his heirs, all his right in the maner called Le Olde-hall in the vill of Tendring (k). [See in the other Volume, p. 388.] His son — John Doreward Esq; at the time of his decease in 1476, held the maner of Oldhall, with the advowson of the Church of Tendring, of William Pyrton Esq; as of his maner of Bentley, by fealty. His son — John Doreward Esq; held also the same at the time of his decease in 1480 (l). Having no issue, he was succeeded by his uncle — William Doreward Esq; who left, — John, his son and heir; and Elizabeth married to Thomas Fotheringhay Esq; Upon John's decease in 1495 without issue, the three daughters of his sister Elizabeth Fotheringhay shared the large inheritance of that wealthy family. They were, Margaret, wife of Nicolas Beaupre; Elena, wife of Henry Thursbie; and Christian, wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (m). [For a more particular account of the Doreward family, see above, p. 289. 452. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 315. 385.] — Anne, widow of John Doreward Esq; father of the last John, was during her life lady of this maner and had for her second husband Thomas Fenys. Under her Catharine Pirton, widow of William Pirton Esq; held this maner, at the time of her decease 10 September 1501. — William Pirton, her son, was then 40 years old (n).

Edmund Arblaster, or Arbalaster, Gent. who dyed 7 September 1560, held the maners of Tendring-hall, alias Oldhall, and Gernons, with the Advowson of the Church; and a messuage called Bretts-hall, with divers lands, meadows, pastures &c. therewith usually lett, of Sir William Pirton, as of his maner of Bentley. — Edmund, his son and heir, held the same at the time of his decease 10 April 1565; and having no issue, was succeeded by his three sisters and coheirs, Jane, wife of Henry Wentworth, Gent. Prudence, wife of William Scott, Gent. and Margaret, of William Mallows, Gent. They had also the Maner of Little Holland (o). Between them were these Estates divided. — John Heton Gent. and Margaret his wife, [late the wife of William Mallows; it seems] had a third part of the maners of Tendring-hall, Garnons, and Bretts-hall. — Henry Wentworth Esq; and Jane his wife, had the maners of Garnons, and Tendring-hall. What part William Scott had, is not mentioned. After having levied several Fines in 1568 and 1569, Jane wife of Henry Wentworth Esq; sold the maners of Tendring hall alias Old-hall, and Gernons, and a capital messuage called Brettes-hall, to

William Drury, Esq; or Sir John his son. This Family was of Rougham in Suffolk, and descended from Sir Roger Drury, who married Margaret, daughter and coheir of . . . Naunton. His successors were, — Sir William, — Thomas, — John, — John. This last married Elizabeth, daughter of John Goldingham of Belsted in Suffolk Esq; one of the three daughters and coheirs of Thomasine Liffon her mother, and had by her three sons, Robert who dyed in his life-time in 1540, leaving by Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Tey of Laver de la Hay Esq; Sir Robert &c; John Drury, the second son, was of Eaton in Norfolk. — William Drury Esq; the third son, and the purchaser of this estate, was L.L. D. Judge of the Prerogative Court, and Master in Chancery. He lived at Bretts-hall in this parish. By Mary his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Southwell of Woodrising in Norfolk, he had John, George, William, Robert; and two daughters, Bridget, married to . . . Babington, of Worcestershire Esq; and Elizabeth to Charles Clere, of Stokesly in Norfolk, Esq; He dyed 7 May 1589, holding of Edmund Pirton Esq; as of his maner of Little Bentley, a capital messuage called Brettes-hall, and the maner of Tendring-hall, or Old-hall, and 2 parts of 50 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 50 of pasture, and 4 of wood, dividable into three parts, called Gernons. — John Drury Esq; his son and heir, then 16 years old (p), was afterwards knighted. He held the maner of Tendring-hall, and Advowson of the Church, and the capital messuage or maner of Bretts-hall, with appertenances in Tendring, Weeley, and Great Bentley, of the maner of Little Bentley; also a messuage and lands called Oldhouse, Oldhouse lands, and Chesley feild; and Boughtons mill and lands in Tendring and Weely. By Anne his wife, daughter of Edmund Saunder of Charlton in Surrey Esq; he had John, Southwell, William, and Robert: He departed this life 18 December 1619, and was succeeded by his eldest son — John, then aged 16 years (q). His son — John sold this estate to his uncle — Robert Drury, Gent. who lived here [2]. He married . . . daughter of . . . Welby, of London, merchant. Whether he had any issue doth not appear: but he left this estate, by his will dated 14 April 1691, to

James Clarkson, Esq; that took to wife Mary daughter of William Beriff of Mevaromes in Frating, and had by her Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, that brought this estate in marriage to her husband Henry Wale, of Little Bardfield, Esq; They had two sons James, and Henry. — James Wale Esq; succeeded his father. — Henry Wale Esq; his son and heir, is the present owner of this estate.

The Maner of GERNONS.

The site of this is at present unknown. But that here was such a maner, is manifest from records. It took its name from the Gernon family to which it originally belonged, and for that reason was holden of their Honor of Stansted-Montfichet, and of their successors the family of de Plaiz. Under Giles de Plaiz, who dyed in 1303, Roger Michell, and William de Billingford held 2 fees in the vill of Tendring (r). In 1327, Thomas de Poninges held half a fee in Tendring, under Richard de Plaiz: and William Baud held the same, in 1360, under his son Richard de Plaiz (s).

Some think, that this is what belonged in this parish to Thremhall Priory: but it is not certain. See in the other Volume, p. 580.

The first time we find it mentioned by the name of Gernons, is in 1384, when Margery wife first of John de Brokesbourn, and afterwards of Sir John de Sutton, held in dower from her second husband Sir John, a certain tenement in the vill of Tendring, called Gernons. — John de Sutton had it in 1393 (t).

In 1512, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford held the maner of Garnons in Tendring of William Pirton Esq; and was succeeded by — John the 14th Earl (u).

It went along with Old-hall from 1560 to 1569. After that it was divided between the coheirs of Arblaster, and part came into the Wentworth family, and from them into that of Drury; namely two parts out of three.

Paul Viscount Bayning, at the time of his decease, 29 July 1629, held a messuage called Garnons, and lands therewith occupied, of the Bishop of London, as of his maner of Little Bentley, in free socage, by fealty, then worth 3 s. 4 d. (w), which shews that it was only a part of the demesnes.

We find them described, in 1569, as one messuage, 1 toft, 2 gardens, 40 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 40 of pasture, 30 of wood, 10 of heath and furze, 6 of more, and 20 s. rent (x).

As far as we can find, Gernons is incorporated into some of the other maners; or is one of those estates in the parish, which go by other names.

In 1337, Anfrid de Stanton held here, of the Bishop of London, 2 messuages, 60 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of pasture, 10 of wood, and 30 s. rent, by the service of the 40th part of a knight's fee (*).

The Maner of BRETT'S-HALL

having gone a while with the two last, we shall take it into consideration here. It was so named from a Family. See above under Bradfield-hall.

The mansion house stands above half a mile south from the Church.

Edmund Arblaster above-mentioned, at the time of his decease in 1560, held one messuage or tenement called Bretts-hall, with divers lands, meadows, &c. thereto belonging, of Sir William Pirton, as of his maner of Little Bentley. After the death of his son—Edmund, in 1565, it was divided amongst his three Sisters and co-heirs. John Heton, Gent. and Margaret his wife, had a third part of it: Henry Wentworth, and Jane his wife, had another third part (y); and at length, it seems, the whole: which was conveyed by them to the Drury family, in which it continued several years.—William Drury Esq; had it in 1589 (z).

Afterwards it came into the family of Bowes, of Great Bromley. [See above, p. 442.]—Thomas Bowes Esq; the last heir male of the family, dying without issue, 12 March 1747-8, it descended to his sister—Bridget, widow, of Read Grimston, Gent. still living. For a further account of the Bowes family, see above, p. 442.

The Maner of NEW-HALL

is now reckoned the chief Maner in this parish, the others keeping no Courts. It was undoubtedly so named in contradistinction to the other Maner of Old-hall.

This maner is what Aluuard had before the Conquest; and, at the time of the Survey, was part of the Bishop of London's fee [2].

The first mention we find of it by the name of New-hall is in 1366, when Alesia, and her husband Hugh de Groos, held jointly the maner of Tendring called New-hall, of the heirs of Thomas Stoddeye, by the service of the third part of a knight's fee, and a pair of gilt spurs of the price of 6d. They held also in this parish, of the Prior of St. Botolph's Colchester, 60 acres of arable, formerly Peter att Hill's, by the service of 15s. a year; and 20 acres called Wildis, of Sir John Sutton, by homage, and the service of 20d. a year.—William de Groos was their son. He held the premisses at the time of his decease in 1368, and was succeeded by his brother—Thomas (a). [See above, p. 445.]

Sir Richard de Sutton had the maner of New-hall in 1383. He dyed in 1395, and was succeeded by his son—Thomas (b). From the Sutton family it passed, as Hamstall in Wics, to Idonea, wife of Bartholomew Lord Bouchier. [See above, p. 468.] For, at the time of her decease in 1409, she held 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 20 of pasture, and 20s. rent in Tendring, called Newhall; and 80 acres of arable, 5 of pasture, and 2 of meadow, called Le Hide; all of the Bishop of London, by fealty only (c).

Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bouchier, had it afterwards (d).

And then it came, as Hamstall, into the Pirton family. William Pyrton Esq; dyed possessed of it 24 June 1533 (e).

It was afterwards in the Cardinal family, a branch of that which formerly had Great Bromley. From the late Mr. William Cardinal, it came to his son—Clarkson Cardinal, Gent. who hath sold it to Charles Gray, Esq; Lord of the Hundred of Tendring.

The Demefnes had been separated some years ago from this maner. The late John Philipson Esq; had them; and they belong now to

Robert Bristow Esq;

The Maner of HARESTILLS, alias HANHAM-HALL.

This maner is justly supposed to be what Ralph Peverell held at the time of the Survey [R].

We have a very imperfect account of its subsequent owners.

In 1474, Margery, widow of John Hanbam, held, in Tendring, one messuage, 200 acres and half an acre of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of pasture, and 17 of wood, of Sir John Doreward, in socage, by the service of 3s. a year: and 100 acres and more, of Sir William Pyrton, also in socage, by the service of 11s. a year.—John Hanbam was her son and heir (f).

The account we have of this family is as follows. Sir John Hanham, knight of the H. Sepulchre, married Catharine, second daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Mortimer, by Elizabeth second daughter of John Howard Duke of Norfolk, and had by her—Sir John Hanham, of Essex, who married . . . daughter of . . . Long, and had by her—Peter, living in 1489; and Edward. This latter, by Agnes his wife, daughter and heir of Nicolas Reeve of Hitcham in Suffolk, Gent. gentleman usher and carver to the last Abbot of Bury, had Robert Hanham, of Hitcham, where his posterity continued. Peter, the eldest son, married . . . daughter of . . . Rookwood, and had by her—a son, whose son and heir . . . Hanham, of Tendring and Fanton, married . . . daughter of . . . St. Clere, and dyed without issue, having sold and spent his whole patrimony [S].

This estate was afterwards in the Pyrton family. For William Pyrton Esq; who dyed 24 June 1533, held the maners of Hamstall [which seems to be a mistake for Hanham-hall] and Newhall, with appertenances, in Tendring, and lands called Wyland, Smales, and Hellond, of John Earl of Oxford, Sir Humfrey Wyngfeild, Sir John Seynt-is another Maner, or reputed maner, in this parish.

The house is about a mile north from the Church.

This estate belonged to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, and was given to it, either by John Doreward, and Richard Fitz-Nicol, in 1406, under the title of the maner of Tendring, excepting the advowson of the Church; being then holden of William de Ferrar, Lord of Groby, by the service of 2 parts of a knight's fee (b): Or else it was part of the 483 acres of land, in Tendring and other parishes, which John Wawayn, and John Chateris, gave in 1364 to that Abbey (i).

At the time of the suppression it was lett for 7l. 13s. 4d.

Queen Elizabeth, 5 April 1566, granted the maner of Wolfes in Tendring, with appertinances, late belonging to St. John's Abbey in Colchester, to Edward Lord Clinton, and Saye (k). The 17th of December 1602, she granted the maner, farm, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of Wolves, in Tendring, to Timothy Lucy, to hold in free socage (l).

It belonged to James Smith Esq; and now to — Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart. who hath also in this parish an estate called Old-house, and Odors, or Odow's land; formerly Drury's.

Other Estates in this parish.

Mitchells, a maner or messuage formerly belonging to the Rainsford-family of Bradfield; and so named from Roger Michell, who held, jointly with William de Billingsford, 2 fees in Tendring, in 1303 (*).

17. WILEY.

This parish joins to St. Osith, and therefore is sometimes called Wiley juxta S. Ositham.

The name is otherwise written in records Weeley, Wiggele, Wigley, Wilege, Wyleigh, Wyrley; and seems to be derived from the Brockets, belongs to the widow of Henry Bevan, Esq; — Foulshams, . . . to Mr. William Dennis. — Swallows Rose . . . to Mrs. Edwards. — A farm called the Folly . . . to Clarkson Cardinal. — Mrs. Moore hath also an Estate here.

In 1263, John de Stodham held in the vill of Tendering 80 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 5 of wood, and 13s. 4d. rent, of the heirs of William Fitz-Adam of Gosfend, by the service of one soar hawk (m). [See above, p. 291.]

In 1418, Joanna Filyoll held a tenement called Badons in Tendringe, and 80 acres of arable, and 6 of wood, of Hugh Stafford, Lord Bourgher, by the service of 2s. a year (n).

What estates these now are, or what parts of the others, that are better known, we cannot discover.

Here is a Fair September 21.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Edmund, stands on an eminence, which hath a pleasant slope or descent to the south. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, tiled. In a wooden Turret are 4 Bells; above which is a Spire, shingled, painted of a leaden colour.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Tendring-hall, or Old-hall; as appears by the several institutions in Newcourt [T]. Before the year 1663 it came into the Bowes family, Lords of Bretts-hall; of whom it was purchased by the Incumbents Bowtell, and Curtis. Of the last, Bishop Compton bought it, and settled it upon Balliol-college for ever, of which he was Visitor.

Tendring Rectory hath a large Glebe of about 80 acres, upon which was rebuilt a very good Parsonage-house by the Rev. Mr. William Bree, the late Rector; who thoroughly repaired the other edifices. This Parsonage-house stands a mile north from the Church.

There belongs also to this Living another Parsonage-house, a little way north-east from the Church, wherein the Rector commonly resides. It was greatly repaired by Mr. Bree; but mostly improved, with additional buildings, and brick-walls round the Gardens, by the present Rector, the Rev. John Hunfdon.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 548l.

WILEY-HALL,

which is a good house, chiefly of brick, stands by the Church, most pleasantly on an eminence; the lands about it falling in an easy natural slope, and having a good prospect on most sides, especially the south-west.

Eudo Dapifer gave this maner of Wilege to his Abbey of St. John Baptist's in Colchester, being the first mentioned in his Charter (o). [See under the History of Colchester.]

It continued in that Abbey till its suppression, being then lett to farm for 29 l. 6 s. 8 d.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, the maner of Wyleghe to Thomas Lord Cromwell: Upon whose attainder it reverting to the Crown, K. Edward VI. granted in 1553, the maner and park of Wileigh, and tene-ments here called Maykins and Brookes, to

Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs; to hold by the 20th part of a knight's fee (p). His son — John Lord Darcy succeeded him; and had for successor — Thomas Lord Darcy his son, created Viscount Colchester, and Earl Rivers, who departed this life 21 February 1639, without surviving issue male. [For a further account of this family, see above, p. 457.] His eldest daughter, and coheir, Elizabeth, widow of Sir Thomas Savage, and Countess Rivers, sold this estate to William Weoley, or Weeley, Esq; This family was originally of Camden in Gloucestershire. William, the purchaser of the estate, was son of Thomas, and grandson of Richard Weoley of London. He married Martha, daughter and coheir of Jolliffe Lowndes, apothecary to K. Charles I. and had by her William who dyed young, another William, Stephen, John, Thomas; Martha, Judith, Jane, Mary, Anne. — Thomas Weoley Esq; was educated at Hart-hall in Oxford, and the Inner Temple, London. He married, first, Catharine, daughter of . . . Paine, of Leicestershire, Esq; and had by her, Edward: His second wife was . . . — Edward Weeley Esq; of the Inner Temple, the son and heir, having no issue, left this estate by will to

Samuel Weeley, Esq; who was succeeded in it about the year 1743 by his heir at law

Samuel Weeley, Esq; the present possessor [W].

The Lodge, about half a mile south-east from the Church, belongs also to Samuel Weeley Esq; and other farms in the parish.

CRUSTWIC

is the other Maner in this parish, otherwise named

Cattridge-hall, Custard-hall, Cuftridge, and Guftridge-hall.

The mansion house stands about a mile south-west from the Church.

Of this maner the only account we have is as follows.

In 1301, Maud wife of Richard Batayle granted to her nephew Anfrid de Staunton 4 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 12 of pasture, 8 of wood, and 2 s. rent, in Wylegh, Great Bentley, and St. Osyth; holden of the King in ca. by the service of 12 d. a year only (q). — Margery, wife of Humfrey de Staunton, held the same in 1343, then described as 240 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 4 of pasture, and 18 of wood, of the King in ca. by the service of 12 d. called Wardpennis, payable yearly by the hands of the Bailiff of the Hundred of Tendring for the time being. — Hugh Gros was her cousin and heir. They had also the maner of Allesford. In 1358, Roger de Stonham, and Mabil his wife, held the same (r).

After that we have no account of this maner till 1580, when Edward Coke, and Charles Cardinall, recovered against George Knightley Esq; Crustwicke, alias Crusticke-hall maner, and 4 messuages, 3 tofts, 2 mills, 1 dove-house, 3 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 40 of wood, and 20 s. rent in Wileghe, holden in capite (s). It continued after this many years in the Coke family of Norfolk. — Robert Coke, of Holkham Esq; married the Lady Anne, second daughter of Thomas Osborne, Earl of Danby, and Duke of Leeds. She was remarried to Horatio Walpole Esq; but dyed without issue 4 August 1722. This estate being vested in her, she sold it to William Feild, Esq; He married Arabella daughter of Earl Rivers, by whom he had, Richard, an Officer in the Army; William, of the Inner Temple, Esq; and Elizabeth, wife of Sir Richard Lloyd, Kt. one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

It belongs now to Richard Lloyd, Esq; son of Sir Richard.

Here was another LITTLE MANER, which Edgiva a noble woman, in Edward the Confessor's reign, and her husband, gave to the Church of St. Paul in London. It was lett to farm about the year 1200, for a yearly pension of 40 s. (t).

Miss Sarah Saville; William Lynch Esq; Mr. Thomas Alefounder; Abraham Thorp; &c. have also Estates here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, stands pleasantly on an eminence near the Hall, and is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Tower is built of bricks (remarkably large) and embattled, and in it are 3 Bells. The Church is

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner, which as we have seen belonged to St. John's Abbey, till the year 1237, when the Abbot and Convent gave to the Church of St. Paul, and to the Bishop of London and his successors, the whole Patronage of the Church of Wyley: and it hath continued ever since in the collation of the Bishops of London.

The Parsonage-house, which is thatched, and one of the worst in the kingdom, stands about a mile south south-west from the Church, at the bottom of a little dirty and squealy heath, upon the confines of the parish of St. Osith. A Barn, and a few other out-houses, stand in the same yard. There is about the house a small Glebe of 7 acres; and a piece of Glebe more, of two roods, about half a mile north of the other, by the right hand side of the road leading from the Parsonage to Weeley-street.

CLACTON.

Here are two contiguous Parishes so named, and distinguished from each other by the addition of Great and Little. They were not distinct at the time of the Survey. The name is otherwise written in records Clachintun; Clacton; and Claston; and from whence it is formed I cannot well say, unless it is from the Saxon words, Clæg, clay, and tun, a town, village, or farm.

18. LITTLE CLACTON

being nearest to the last Parish I have been describing, I therefore begin with it. Before the Conquest, and after, Great and Little Clacton, were part of the Revenues of the Bishopric of London [X].

In this parish are two Maners. 1. The maner of Geddy-hall. 2. . . . that of Bovills.

The Houses belonging to these two Maners are about half a mile south-west from the Church, with a little Green between them. Geddy-hall is a new house.

The Maner of GEDDY-HALL, is otherwise styled Engains, or Engayne.

It belonged formerly to the Priory of Thremhall in Stansted Montfichet, but when and by whom given I do not find. [See in the other Volume, p. 580.]

After the suppression, K. Henry VIII. in 1536, granted the maners of Thremhale, and Engayneshall, to John Cary, and Joyce Walsingham, widow and their legitimate issue, to hold in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee (u). Sir John Cary, at the time of his decease, 9 September 1552, held the maner of Engershall, with appertinances. — Wymond Cary, his son and heir, was then 15 years old (w). In 1565, 21 March, Qu. Elizabeth made him a grant of Thremhall Priory, and Engayneshall among the rest. The same year, he had licence to alienate the maners, Henry Golding (x).

This estate was afterwards in the Drury family of Tending. For William Drury, who dyed 7 May 1589, held the maner called Gyddy-hall, alias Eynegaynehall, and messuages called Pestells, Rosebridge or Risbridge, and Watmeade. — John Drury, Esq; his son and heir (y), afterwards knighted, was succeeded by his son — John. [See above, under Tending, p. 471.]

Edward Webbe, of London, Esq; had this estate some time ago. It belonged afterwards to Robert Baker, Gent. and now to Capt. Bagney.

The Maner of BOVILLS.

Of this we find very little account in records, only what follows; where it is called Devill alias Dovell.

In 1552, a fine passed between William Cardinall, Gent. plaintiff, and John Brokeman, defendant of the maner of Devill alias Dovell, 4 messuages, and lands in Little Clacton; the right of William (z).

William Hubbard had this estate afterwards: And Samuel Travers, Esq; of Great Holland.

It belonged lately to Samuel Holditch, of Witham, Esq;

Cookes, a messuage so called, with divers lands &c. in this parish, were holden of the maner of Chiche by the Arblaster family of Tending (*).

Mrs. Turner; Mr. William Pikarel; Richard Ladyman; Thomas Bidwell; John Keble; John Sparling, &c. have also some lands here.

Six pounds a year in land belong to the Poor, distributed amongst them by the Churchwardens and Overseers.

Here is an Almshouse for 3 dwellers.

The CHURCH is small, of one pace with the

This Church was given by Robert de Belmeis, or de Beaume; to his Monastery of St. Osith. The Great Tithes were appropriated to it, and a Vicarage ordained and endowed, of which the Abbot and Canons remained possessed till their suppression, when the great Tithes, and Advowson of the Vicarage came to the Crown; and were granted to Lord Cromwell. Afterwards they passed to the noble Families of Darcy, and Savage.

The Advowson of the Vicarage is now in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford; but the great Tithes belong to Col. Schutz.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 666l. 3s. 0d.

19. GREAT CLACTON, lies south of the other, nearer the Sea, towards the Gunfleet; and is the largest of the two, as the name denotes.

This parish belonged chiefly, by way of exchange or otherwise, to Richard de Belmeis, Bishop of London, who made some of it part of the endowment of his Abbey of St. Osiths. But another part remained in the See of London [X].

There are in it four Maners. 1. The maner of Clacton; the mansion house of which stands on the north side of the Church. 2. The maner of Canons-hall, or Can-hall. 3. Aulton-park. 4. The maner of Colbaines.

The Maner of CLACTON, was in the Bishopric of London, before the Conquest, and at the time of the Survey, as we have seen above; and Richard de Belmeis, bishop of that See in K. Henry the 1st's time, confirmed it to his successors for ever.

They enjoyed it till 26 July 1545, when Bp. Bonner conveyed to K. Henry VIII. this maner of Great Clacton, Aulton Park, and the maner of Loddesworth in Suffex; by way of exchange for some other lands in Worcestershire, and elsewhere, which K. Henry settled upon the said Edm. Bonner, and his successors Bishops of London (a).

In 1553, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Clacton with appertenances, and Walcote marsh, lands called Westwicke, the Rouch, Seeland, the Cow-park, and the Parks of Acton and Clackton, all in this parish, to Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs. He had also then a grant of the or Aula Canonica, in this parish, of which I proceed to give an account: It had been granted before, with the rest of the Abbey's possessions, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (b).

[X] That plainly appears from hence; when this Bishop made a Park here, he inclosed in it a wood called Edulvesnase, belonging to the Canons of the Church of St. Paul's: but fearing they might thereby lose it, he solemnly restored it, and gave this maner to his successors the Bishops of London for ever. Dugdale's History of St. Paul's.

Can-hall, the mansion-house, is above half a mile west north-west from the Church.

It was called Canon-hall, and by contraction Can-hall, because it belonged to the Abbot and Canons of St. Osith.

Thomas Lord Darcy dyed 28 June 1558, possessed of the maners of Clackton &c. and divers messuages, and lands in Clackton, and the Rectories of Great and Little Clackton: and, though Can-hall is not mentioned in the Inquisition, he undoubtedly had it among the rest. For his son—John Lord Darcy, at the time of his decease, 3 March 1580-1, held the maners of Great and Little Clackton, and Can-hall; the Rectories of both Clacktons; and the tithes of Clackton, Bishopswic, and Jaywic; and a yearly pension of 13 s. 4 d. out of the Rectory of Great Clackton. — Thomas Lord Darcy, was his son and successor (c). So that although the first Thomas Lord Darcy had obtained a license, 25 June 1556, to alienate the maner of Canne-hall alias Canons-hall, together with the Rectories of Great and Little Clackton, late belonging to, and parcel of the possessions of St. Osithes monastery, with other lands (d) [Z], to Henry Windham, yet they remained in the Darcy family. However Henry Windham had license, 8 May 1570, to alienate the maner of Canne-hall, alias Cannons hall, to — John Lord Darcy (e).

From him the maners of Great Clacton, and of Can-hall, descended to Earl Rivers; and are now in The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

But the demesne lands both of Great Clacton, and of Can-hall, maners belong to Col. John Schutz; who hath several good Estates in the two Clactons, and St. Osith.

AULTON-PARK,

is above a mile south-west from the Church.

This, as far as we can find, is the Park that was made in this parish by Richard de Belmeis, wherein he inclosed the wood belonging to the Canons of St. Paul's, called Edulvesnase (*).

[Z] Those lands are described, as lying between Bishopswell and Alton Park, late the Bishop of London's, and Longland thereto annexed; and Bennetts land; and the Bishop's three Wics, viz. Creswic, Bishopswic, and Clackton Jawic; together with Skilmasfield, and Buttishills; and the two Pondpittels. Pat. 3 & 4 Ph. & Mar.

It went along with the Maner of Great Clackton.

K. Edward VI. granted it, in 1553, to Thomas Lord Darcy, by the name of the Park of Acton; together with Clackton Park (f).

It belonged lately to Samuel Travers, Esq; who left it for Charitable Uses.

The Maner of COLBAYNS, is otherwise called Colbrooke, Copt-hall, and Copping-hall.

A court is kept here.

Of this Maner we find little or no account in records: Only that Henry Parker, who dyed 15 January 1541, held the maner of Colbayns; and a tenement called Boytons, and 200 acres of arable and pasture thereto belonging, in Great Clackton, of the Bishop of London, as of his maner here, in socage, by the yearly rent of 17 s. then worth 6l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. — Roger Parker, his son and heir, was 17 years old (g). [See in the other Volume, p. 380.]

Jaywic farm, once Lord Darcy's, afterwards Garbat's, belongs to George Wegg, Esq; who hath also Cross-house, and Miller's, in this parish.

Pill-croft-farm, and Ironside farm, belong to Mr. Abraham Thorp.

William Mayhew, William Feild, and Philip Dennis; Esqres. Mr. Daniel Nicholson &c. have also some Estates and lands in this parish. Skirmans fee in Frinton extends into Great and Little Clackton.

One messuage, with 140 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 8 of wood, called Grays, and 10 s. rent; likewise another messuage, 20 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, and 2 of wood; all in this parish; were settled, in 1461, by Thomas Kemp, bishop of London, on a Chantry founded by him in St. Paul's Cathedral (b).

St. Osith's Abbey had also 1 messuage, 32 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, a marsh, and 20 d. rent, in Great and Little Clackton (i).

Here is a Fair June 29.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. John, stands pleasantly by the Hall. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, and tiled. The Tower, in which are 6 Bells, is 17 yards high to the battlements; and hath on the top a low shingled spire.

This Church was given by Richard de Belmeis to his Monastery of St. Osith; and the great Tithes being appropriated to it, a Vicarage was ordained, which continued in the gift of the Abbey till its suppression, when the Rectory and Advowson of the Vicarage came to the Crown; and were given to Thomas Lord Cromwell, who had them a very little while. In 1553, K. Edward VI. granted them both to Thomas Lord Darcy; and from him they descended to Earl Rivers. But now the Advowson of the Vicarage is in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford, and the Rectory or great Tithes belong to Col. Schutz.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1034 l. 2 s. 6 d.

HOLLAND.

Two Parishes, called Great and Little Holland, lie along the Sea side, east of the Clacktons.

The name is derived from the Saxon word Dol, hollow, or from the Belgic, or Celtic, word Hoy, hay; and land. It is otherwise written in records Hoiland, and Hoyland.

20. LITTLE HOLLAND

is nearest to the last described parish of Great Clackton.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Lestian, and afterwards Ingelric, were possessed of Little Holland; which Eustace, the great Earl of Bologne, held at the time of the Survey, and Adelolf de Merk under him [A].

Here is but one MANER.

The mansion house stands on the north side of the remains of the Church.

About the year 1210, the Earl of Guisnes mentioned above, p. 400. held one fee and a half in Little Hoiland of the Honor of Bologne (k). He had it afterwards in his own hands.

Fulk Basset, bishop of London, held it in the year 1251; and Robert Earl of Guisnes gave him the homage of Henry de Merk, a descendent from the forefaid Adelolf (l).

This estate was afterwards in the Batayle or Betaile family. Sir Richard Betaile, at the time of his decease, left two daughters coheirs, Margery married to Sir William de Sutton, and

Anne to Peter de Taleworth. The latter had Little Hoyland for part of their share. [See above, p. 608. and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

How long this family enjoyed the maner of Little Holland doth not appear.

Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bouchier, who dyed in 1421, held, in right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bour- chier, half a knight's fee in Little Holand, which had formerly been Nicolas Talleworth's (m).

The Abbey of St. Osieth had this maner about that time, of whose gift we cannot discover. But, their lands here being rendered unprofitable by the frequent inundations of the Sea, was one of the reasons given for appropriating the Church of Elmsted to that Monastery (n).

Upon the dissolution it fell to the Crown, and continued in it till it was granted to the Arblaster family. Edmund Arblaster, Gent. who dyed 7 September 1560, held the maner of Little Holland, with appertenances, of the Queen, as of her maner of Parkehall, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaster, by fealty, and yearly rent of one penny, or one pair of hare-skin-gloves if demanded, in lieu of all services, then worth 20l. a year. — Edmund, his son and heir, held the same at the time of his decease 10 April 1565. and Jane, wife of Henry Wentworth, Gent. Prudence, wife of William Scott, Gent. and Margaret, wife of William Mallows, Gent. were his sisters and coheirs (o). See above, p. 470.]

It passed from them to the Drury family of Tendring. For William Drury Esq; who dyed 7 May 1589, held this maner of Little Holland of the Queen, as of her maner of Parkehall in Wicks, by the service of 1 knight's fee, and one pair of hare-skin gloves, doubled or lined, and 2 d. a year, if demanded. — Sir John Drury, his son, succeeded him (p).

This estate was afterwards in the heirs of Brian Darcy Esq; of St. Clere's-hall in St. Osieth, and of Tiptre. His great-grandson — Sir Thomas Darcy, Bart. kept a court here 26 August 1691. His son, — Sir Thomas, left at his decease, — Sir George, a minor, who dyed young; and three daughters, Frances, married to Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York; Mary, to Richard Boteler Esq; and Elizabeth, to William Pierpont, Esq; [See above, and in the other Volume, p. 139, 140.] Sir William Dawes sold this maner and estate to Nicolas Corfellis Esq; who held a Court here 2 October 1711. He gave it to his daughter Elizabeth, married to Capt. James Kettle. They leaving no issue, it came to Capt. Kettle's sister's son,

Mr. Patrick Coppinger, who hath sold it to Mr. Michael Hills.

The Church stood near the Hall, but was so much exposed to the blasts from the Sea, that it is demolished.

This Church belonged to the neighbouring Monastery of St. Osieth, to which the Tithes were appropriated, they serving the cure by some of their own Monks; for there is no record of any institutions thereto: so that it is a perpetual Curacy, the profits of it being annexed to Little Clacton.

After the suppression of St. Osieth's Abbey, the Rectory, and Tithes of this parish were granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, in 1539. Upon his attainder they reverting to the Crown, K. Edward VI. in 1553, granted them to Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs (q). From the Darcy family they descended to that of Savage; and to Elizabeth, Countess Rivers. They belong now to Col. Schutz.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 93l. 2s. 0d.

21. GREAT HOLLAND, lies by the Sea side, north of the other.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, Lestan was possessed of it, as well as of the last; and very likely they were then but one estate: Walter de Doai held this at the time of the Survey [B].

In this parish there is one MANER.

The mansion house stands on the north side of the Church.

In the beginning of K. Edward the First's reign, this estate belonged to Robert Burnel, bishop of Bath and Wells, and Lord Chancellor (r). His nephew — Philip Burnel dyed in 1294, immensely rich; holding, particularly in this parish, of the King, in ca. by the third part of a knight's fee, 1 messuage, 380 acres of arable, 19 of meadow, 45 of wood, 1 marsh, 46 s. 2 d. ob. rent of assise, with work of customary tenants, perquisites of court, and a wind-mill. — Edward Lord Burnel, was his son and heir (s).

In the mean time Philippa, eldest daughter and heir of Walter Bolebec, lord of Stansted-Montfichet, and widow of Roger de Lancaster, who dyed in 1293, held in Great Hoyland, of the King, in ca. by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee, 120 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 16 s. rent of assise. — John de Lancaster, her son (t), parted with this estate. [See in the other Volume, p. 577.]

Edward Lord Burnel, who dyed in 1316, doth not appear to have enjoyed this estate (u); but his sister and heir,

Maud, did. She was married, first, to John Lovel; and afterwards to John de Handlo. In 1330, She and John de Handlo held this maner of Great Holland of the King in ca. as parcel of the Barony of Montfichet, by the service of half a knight's fee, and yearly payment of 3 s. to the ward of Colchester-castle. John de Handlo, at the time of his decease, in 1346, held the same, by the courtesy of England, of the King, in ca. as parcel of the Barony of Montfichet, by the service aforesaid (w). His son Richard was dead before him; therefore he was succeeded by his grandson — Edmund de Handlo. But he dying 1 June 1355, a minor, and without issue; the great inheritance came to his uncle — Sir Nicolas de Handlo, who took the surname of Burnel from his mother. He held the maner of Great Hoyland, with the advowson of the Church, in the same manner as his predecessors: and departing this life in 1382, left — Hugh Burnel, his son and heir; who held this maner of the King, in ca. by the service of the third part of a knight's fee. He dyed in 1420, having only these three Daughters coheirs, Joice, wife of Thomas Erdyngton jun. Catharine Burnell, and Margery wife of Edmund Hungerford (x).

In the mean time, some branches of the Burnel family were interested in this estate. For, in 1417, a fine passed between Joane wife of Sir William de Beauchamp, of Bergavenny, and others, plaintiffs, and Sir John Burnell of Holcote, deforc' of the maner of Holand, and the Church of this parish; with lands in Hatfeild-Peverell and Boreham (y). And, in 1439, Elizabeth, wife first of Sir Thomas Criston; and afterwards of Sir Edward Burnel, held for her life the maner of Holand, of the King, in ca. by knight's service (z). [For a more particular account of the Burnel and Handlo families, see above, p. 14. and in the other Volume, p. 12. 92. 577.]

James Boteler, Earl of Wiltshire, who was attainted 4 March 1461, for his adherence to the House of Lancaster, held this maner, with the advowson of the Church (a).

K. Edward IV. gave them, in 1474, to Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, and Isabell his wife, sister of Richard Plantagenet Duke of York, that King's father. He dyed 4 April 1483, and was succeeded by his grandson — Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, who was killed by a fall from his horse 13 March 1540, leaving an only daughter and heir, Anne Marchioness of Northampton. [See in the other Volume, p. 254.]

In 1542, May 1. William Stafford, and others, had license to alienate the maner of Great Holland, with appertenances, and 20 messuages, 10 tofts, 1000 acres of arable, 400 of meadow, 300 of pasture, 100 of wood, 300 of furze and heath, 40 of marsh, and 20 l. rent, in Great Holland, Walton, Great and Little Clifton, Kirkby, Thorpe, Mose and Beamond, and the Advowson of this Church, to Sir Thomas Pope, and Nicolas Bacon, Esq; (b). This seems to have been in trust. For, in 1546, a fine was levied betwixt the King, plaintiff, and Nicolas Bacon Esq; and Joane his wife, deforc' of the maner of Great

Holland, the right of the King (c). And in 1551, K. Edward VI. granted this maner, and the advowson of the Church, to Sir Thomas Darcy, afterwards Lord Darcy, who dyed possessed of them, 28 June 1558 (d). As did his son — John Lord Darcy 3 March 1580 (e).

As far as we can find, Elizabeth, Countess Rivers, sold it about the year 1639.

In part of the last century, and beginning of this, it was in Joseph Thurston, Esq; Recorder of Colchester. After his decease, an act of parliament being obtained for sale of part of his estates, by his widow Mary, daughter of Sir Isaac Rebow, Kt. the trustees under the act conveyed this Maner to

Mr. Daniel Bayley, of Colchester. He sold it again to

Sir Richard Hopkins, of London, Kt. who dying intestate, it came, among the rest of his coheirs, to his sister

Elizabeth Barrow, widow. And Elizabeth Barrow, widow, and Rachel wife of William Stephens, of Hereford, coheirs of the first named Elizabeth Barrow, sold it, in 1748, to

Robert Martin, of Row-edge, Esq; He dying 7 November 1763, was succeeded by John Kirby Esq; who hath married his only daughter and heir, Anne.

The Demesnes are separated now from this Maner; for when it was sold by the trustees, the Demesnes were purchased by Samuel Travers Esq; member of Parliament for New Windsor, and Secretary to the then Prince of Wales, afterwards K. George II. He left this, as well as Aulton-Park to Charitable uses.

The late Samuel Holditch Esq; had them as trustee for his uncle's Charitable gift.

Mr. Samuel Newton; and John Blowers, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tiled. In the Tower are 4 bells.

This Church was at first a Sine-cure, appendent to the Maner, with a Vicarage endowed, in the Rector's gift; and so continued till after the year 1410; when they were united, and have remained so ever since as one Rectory. It went along with the Maner till Mrs. Thurston alienated it; since which time it hath passed through several hands.

There belongs to it a large Glebe.

This Parish is rated to the land-tax at 510 l. 3 s. 0 d.

lies upon the Sea-coast, next to Great Holland.

The name is otherwise written in records Frientuna, and Fretuna.

Norden says, that in some records it is called

Frinting, as being on the very front or brow of the Sea-cliff.

In Edward the Confessor's reign, it belonged to Levesin, and Harold; at the time of the Survey, it was holden, in almost equal portions, by Geoffrey de Magnaville, and Eustace Earl of Bologne [C].

These two parts became very early united into ONE MANER; styled the Maner of Frinton, alias Skyrmans fee, and said in the Court-rolls to extend into the Parishes of Great and Little Clacton.

Frinton-hall stands upon the beach, about half a mile east north-east from the Church.

About the reign of K. Henry II. this estate belonged to the Tregoz family, of Tollethunt-Tregoz or Darcy.

In 1205, a fine passed between Peter Tregoz, pet^r. and Geffrey de Berford, for land of 100 s. with appertenances in Freintone (f).—Nicolas Tregoz, who dyed in the reign of K. Edward I. had four Sisters coheirs, Lucy, married to . . . de Bois; Alice, to . . . de Burnham; Joane, to . . . de Ludham; and Hawise, to . . . de Gernon. [See above, p. 395.]

Alice, and her husband, to whom this estate was allotted for their purparty, had a son and heir named—James de Burnham. He dyed in 1295, and was succeeded by his brother, or son, — Hubert (g). Of the same family was—Geffrey de Burnham, who presented to this living in 1321.

Under Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, who dyed in 1298, John de Leys held two knights fees in Frynton, and Sheltseye, [Shelley] (b).

In 1392, John Rokele held the maner of Frynton of Thomas de Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, by the service of the 4th part of a knight's fee (i).—Geffrey de Rokett, or rather Rokell, presented to the living in 1421, and 1426. Of this Geffrey,

John Godmanston, of Little Bromley, purchased a moiety of the maner of Frynton, and of the Advowson of the Church, for the sum of 500 marks; of which he paid in part 80 l. in 1440; and a sixth payment of 50 marks, in further part of the said sum of 500 marks, in 1445 (k). The Godmanston family remained possessed of the maner and advowson from 1426 to 1473, or rather to 1495. For, Joane widow of William Godmanston taking to her second husband Gilbert Huffy, Esq; they jointly presented to the Living in 1493 and 1495 (l). Her first husband, William Godmanston Esq; lost his life at Barnet feild, 14 April 1471, fighting for K. Henry VI. She held this estate in dower till her decease about the year 1498. After which it came to Philippa, sister of William Godmanston, afore-said. She was married to Henry Warner, Gent. and had by him an only daughter,

Christiana, whose first husband was William

Brown Esq; and her second Humfrey Dymock Esq; [For a further account of the Godmanston family, see above, p. 439.]

Sir Ralph Chamberlain was the next possessor of this estate. His granddaughter, Mary Gray, was married to Francis, or Henry, Cockain, and being his widow in 1576; she presented to this living. Their daughter and heir, Dorothy, took for her husband William Pirton of Little Bentley Esq; who, in her right, presented to this living in 1585 (m). Of them this estate was purchased by

Edward Grimston, of Bradfeild, Esq; He held his first court here 11 August 1603. and, at the time of his decease, 16 August 1610, held the maner of Skirmans fee, alias Frinton-hall, in Frinton and Kirkeby.—Sir Harbottle, his son and heir, was created a Baronet 25 November 1612, and departing this life in 1648, was succeeded by his son—Sir Harbottle Grimston, Bart. His heirs sold this estate to Thomas Warren, of Wapping, mariner, who presented to the Rectory in 1691. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Culmer, of Deal, and had by her Jeremy; Thomas; Joane, wife of James Bushell, of Little Holland, mariner, and Martha.—Jeremy Warren, the eldest son and heir, had, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of —Greenglasse, of Suffolk, Gent. two daughters, Lucy, and Joanna.

Sir Richard Hopkins, Kt. purchased it; and from him it descended to his heir at law

Sir Edward Bellamy, one of whose daughters brought it in marriage to George Lynne of Southwic, Esq; Frinton-wic belongs to Mr. Michael Hills.

Thomas Scipper hath also some land in this parish.

Not far from the Church is a pretty little House and Gardens, belonging once to the famous Cornelius a Tilbury, who, in K. William's reign, eat a great quantity of poison, and yet survived it.

Either this, or another, in this parish, belonged to the famous Capt. James Bushell, who was so successful in fishing for wrecks.

The Sea-shore here affords plenty of copperas.

The CHURCH, or rather its remains, are on a rising ground by the Sea-side. Nothing of it is standing, but part of the west end.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

Frinton parish is rated to the land-tax at 143 l.

23. T H O R P E, is one of those three Parishes, lying in a line from west to east, that are called the Soken, vulgarly Sookins: which name of Soken, or rather Socen, is derived from the Saxon word Soc, or Soca, signifying a peculiar power, authority or liberty to administer justice and execute laws, within itself; and likewise the circuit or territory wherein such power is exercised [D].

These three Parishes were so styled, because they were peculiars belonging to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's London, exempt from the Archdeacon's jurisdiction, and also from the Commissary's. The Dean and Chapter enjoyed those Privileges, with the Maners, till they were taken from them by K. Henry VIII. On the 2d of March 1553, Qu. Mary I. united and annexed these three Parishes to the jurisdiction of the Bishop of London (n); since which time they have been subject to the Bishop's Visitations, who also grants institution and induction to the Vicars.

The Customs in the Soken, as to lands, are particular. They are mostly copyhold, but very near as good as free. 1. They pay twelve pence an acre for a Fine, and two shillings for a cottage. 2. They may pull their houses down without a licence. 3. They may also cut down their small trees. 4. They may grant a Lease even for fifty years.—And indeed do most things contrary to the customs of other copyholds.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted to Sir Thomas Darcy the maners of Thorpe, Kirby, and Walton; the Park of Thorpe; lands there called Beldams; the Rectories of Thorpe, Kirby, and Walton; and the advowsons of those three Vicarages, with their singular Privileges. These Privileges have descended from him to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford. He styles himself Lord of the Liberty, Franchise, Dominion, and peculiar Jurisdiction of the Soken in the County of Essex; and appoints a Commissary, who takes the title of Official principal and Vicar-general in spiritual causes to the said Lord. This Commissary keeps court at Thorpe every three weeks, as occasion serves, and proves wills and testaments within the Soken; which wills are kept in the Church of Thorp.

The Lord of the Soken hath also this temporal exclusive Privilege, That no Bailiff can arrest within them, but his own.

The district including these three Parishes, and containing then thirty manses, and about 4000 acres of land, was given to the Church of St. Paul by K. Athelstan, before the year 941; under the name of Eadulfesnesa (o).

Under the same name, a little altered to Adululnafa, it was found to belong to the Canons of St. Paul, at the Survey [E]. And there is no other name than that, in Domesday-book, for the whole district, which then unquestionably was not divided into the three parishes.

Eadulfes-næse, was formed from Eadulf, a Saxon Thegn, mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle (p), and næse, a promontory, or point of land, jutting out into the Sea; there being such a remarkable one at Walton, called the Nase.

THORPE in Saxon signifying a Village, this place seems to have been dignified by that name, as The Village by way of eminence.

In this parish are two Maners. 1. The maner of Thorpe. 2. The maner of Landmere.

The Maner of THORPE.

Thorpe-hall, the mansion house, is about half a mile south-east from the Church.

This Maner, as we have seen, belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, till taken from them by K. Henry VIII.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Thorpe, and the Park of Thorpe, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (q).

Those greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe, got, in 1589, a grant of the Maners of Thorp and Thorp hall, and of the Advowson of the Rectory. As did, the same year, Gilbert Wakering (r).

But the Maner of Thorp, and the Advowson of the Living, remained in the Darcy family, as the Estates in St. Oliths, and other parts in this neighbourhood; and descended from them to the Earls Rivers, and to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

Thorp-hall, and the demesne lands of the Maner have been long separated from it. For, either Elizabeth Countess Rivers, or some of that family, sold them to Thomas Wharton Esq; of Grays-inn, Secretary to Queen Henrietta-Maria; mother of K. Charles II. He was son of Humfrey Wharton Esq; and Catharine Senhous; a branch of the ancient and noble family of Wharton, and born at Reagill-grange in Shapp in Westmoreland; Justice of Peace for the Counties of Middlesex, Essex, Lancaster, and Westmoreland. Departing this life 6 August 1669, aged 47 years; he was buried in the Chancel of this Church, with Elizabeth his wife; daughter of Andrew Browne of Lincolns-inn, Esq; A neat monument was erected to their memory by their son and heir—Andrew Wharton Esq; [F]. This estate being mortgaged by him, it came to

Henry Nurse, of Mile-end: After whose death, it was sold by decree in Chancery, in order to be divided, and purchased, in 1723, by

As, for instance, one in Colchester, where St. Mary's Church, and houses adjoining, stand, belonging to the Bishop of London. But Corporations looking upon such exemptions with a jealous eye, have mostly drawn them under their yoke. See Hist. of Colchester, Appendix, p. 3.

Admiral of the White, and Rear Admiral of England, who dyed 1 August 1720 without issue, left him his estate; whereupon, out of gratitude to transmit his benefactor's name to posterity, he took on him the surname and Arms of Leake [G]. His eldest son—Stephen-Martin Leake Esq; Clarencieux King at Arms, succeeded him, and is the present possessor. He hath written a most excellent Life of Sir John Leake, one Volume 8vo. of which only fifty copies were printed: and is also the Author of Nummi Britannici Historia: or an Historical Account of English Money, &c. The Rectory, or great Tithes of this parish, belong also to Stephen-Martin Leake Esq;

The Maner of LANDMER,

Landmer-hall, the mansion house, stands about a mile and a half north-east from the Church, and is reckoned the oldest house in the parish. The flowing of the tide here making a Landmere, is what occasioned the name.

We have very little account of this estate in records [H].

Robert Mortymer Esq; who dyed 22 August 1485, held the maner of Lardiner [Landmer] hall, with appertenances, of the Dean of St. Paul's, as of his Soke, by fealty and suit of court; worth then 10l. a year. — Elizabeth Mortimer, his daughter and heir (s), was afterwards married to George Gilford. [Concerning this Mortimer family, see more above, p. 434, 435. 441.]

This estate was next in the Abell family. John Abell, of Fordham, and West-Bergholt, Esq; at the time of his decease 26 June 1575, held the maner of Landmer-hall, with appertenances, of John Lord Darcy of Chiche, as of his maner of Thorpe, in socage, by fealty. — Waldegrave Abell, his son and heir, succeeded him (t). But doth not appear to have enjoyed this estate at the time of his decease 24 August, 1613 (u). It was then in

Paul Bayning Esq; who dyed 1 October 1616, possessed of the messuage, farm, and lands called Landmer-hall; and lands called Pages, in Thorpe. His son—Paul Viscount Bayning held the same, at the time of his decease 29 July 1629 (w). Whose son,—Paul Viscount Bayning, leaving only two daughters coheirs, Thorpe-Park, a considerable farm, belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford:—Another, called Thorp Beldams, near the Church, belongs to Mrs. Burton: This last, was once the Lord Darcy's (*).

Mr. Thomas Rutland; and Thomas Hallam, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

Thomas Howse Esq; who dyed in 1442, had in this parish, in right of Joane his wife, daughter of John Filioll of Thorp, one hide of land, called Le Hide in Thorp within the Soke; containing 120 acres; holden of Thomas Bekington, Prebendary of Holbourne, in the Church of St. Paul, London.—Walter Howse, his son and heir, was 30 years old (x).

Comarques, a seat in Thorp, built by Capt. Comarque, and the Rev. Mr. Joshua Lisle, belongs to Shaw King Esq; who hath also an estate in this parish.

Henry Lamb Gent. hath also a house here; but his estates lye elsewhere. [See above, p. 433.]

Near the Church-yard are Alms-houses for 4 dwellers, but no endowment.

Here is a Fair on the Monday before Whitsunday.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, or St. Michael, is large, consisting of a body tiled, and two aisles, leaded; but the Chancel is of one pace, and tiled. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and was a Rectory, till it was taken by K. Henry VIII. and given by K. Edward VI. to Sir Thomas Darcy. Then the great Tithes were taken from it, and a Vicarage endowed. The Advowson of the Vicarage hath continued ever since in Sir Thomas Darcy's heirs, and is now in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford. But the great or impropriate Tithes belong to Stephen-Martin Leake Esq; owner of Thorp-hall demesnes.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1019 l.

lies east of Thorp, chiefly. The name is otherwise written in records, Kirbe, Kirkby, and Kirkeby; derived from the Saxon words Cyric, or Kirk, a church; and bi, near, or by, a dwelling.

This is one of the three Soken, and belonged, as Thorpe, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; except Birch-hall.

In this parish are four Maners. 1. The maner of Kirby. 2. . . . that of Grove-house. 3. Sneddon-hall. 4. The maner of Birch-hall.

The Maner of K I R B Y.

Kirby-hall, the mansion house, is near the west end of the Church.

The lord of the Soken keeps his court, on St. Anne's day, here, as being the center of the Soken.

This Maner continued in the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, till taken from them by K. Henry VIII.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Kirby, alias Kirkby, and the rectory, and advowson of the Vicarage, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (y). From him they passed to his son—John Lord Darcy, and to the Savage family; and the maner is now in the Rt. Hon. the Lord Rockford.

The demesne lands were sold from the maner by Elizabeth Countess Rivers, to John La Motte Esq; Alderman of London; who gave them to his daughter the Lady Hester, wife of Sir Thomas Honywood, of Marketball, Kt. They have descended from them to—Lieutenant General, Philip Honywood. [See in the other Volume, p. 169.]

The great Tithes of this parish belong also to him.

The Maner of G R O V E - H O U S E.

All the account we have of this estate, is as follows. Sir John, Reynesforth, who dyed 16 September, 1559, held the maner or tenement called Grovehouse, with appertenances, of the Lord Darcy of Chiche, as of his maner of Kirkeby, worth 11 l. per ann. by fealty, and yearly rent of 28 s. His heirs were, Christopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne, wife of Henry Joffelyn, Esq; (z) [See above, p. 461.]

Robert Alefounder, of Dedham, was possessed at the time of his decease 5 April, 1630, of this whole maner or capital messuage of Grove-house; and of a messuage called Faytes, and 126 acres of land therewith occupied, in Kirkeby; holden of this maner, in socage, by fealty, and rent of 18 s. 2 d.—Robert his son and successor was then 40 years old (a).

He married Thamar, daughter and heir of Samuel Lewis, of Roydon in Suffolk, Esq; and had by her John, born in 1648; Samuel; Thomas; Jeremy; and 6 daughters, Thamar; Mary, wife of Joseph Thurston, Esq; Abigail; Penelope; Hannah; Elizabeth. John, the eldest son, dyed 13 January 1681, before his father, without issue surviving; though he had three wives, namely, 1. Anne, daughter of Thomas Brome, of Kent, Esq; 2. Penelope, daughter of Sir Thomas Dereham, of Norfolk, Bart. 3. . . . Daniel, of Colchester, widow. By the first he had John, Thomas, Joseph, Anne, which all dyed before him. Samuel, the second son, was a Barrister at law, but dyed unmarried, 16 April 1677. Thomas the third son, was Rector of Greensted, and Great Holland, and departed this life 3 May 1692, aged 40 years.

Jeremy Shaw, Esq; the fourth son, seated at Kirby, was a Justice of peace for this County. He married, first, Sarah daughter of Joseph Barbar of Bedfordshire, Esq; His second wife was Anne, daughter of . . . Hamond, of Oxfordshire, Gent. widow of John Nicholas, Esq; By the first he had—Gabriel Shaw Esq; many years a Justice of Peace for this County. By Anne his wife, daughter of Edward Cremer, of East-Bergholt, Gent. he had his only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, married, first, to John King, Esq; by whom she had Shaw King Esq; By her second husband, Mr. George Pickard merchant, she had one son named Thomas.

Shaw King Esq; succeeded his grand-father in this and other estates. He married, first, Mrs. Catharine Slaney, by whom he hath one daughter living. By his second wife . . . he hath several children [I].

is the other Maner I have mentioned in this parish. It is otherwise called Sneating, and Sneting.

The mansion house is near a mile north-west from the Church.

This is the endowment, or corps of one of the Prebends in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's London. It hath the 14th Stall on the right side of the Choir, and is rated at 100 s.

Before the Conquest, Ingelric held this maner of the Church of St. Paul in London; Eustace the great Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant Robert, held it at the time of the Survey [K]. So that it was taken from St. Paul's Cathedral, to be granted to Earl Eustace.

Afterwards it came to be part of the possessions of St. Osth's monallery; but by whom given we have no account: However it was before the year 1437 (d).

The yearly value of Birch-how, alias Birch-hall maner, with Horsey, at the time of the suppression of Abbeyes, was 25 l. 8 s. 0 d. (e).

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted this maner of Birch-hall in Horsey to Thomas Lord Cromwell (f). Upon his attainder, it reverted to the Crown, and continued in it till Queen Elizabeth, 24 June 1564, granted it to

Henry Fanshawe, and Dorothy his wife, to hold by the 40th part of a knight's fee (g). [Concerning the Fanshawe family, see more above, p. 4. 7.] How long it continued in the family of Fanshawe we have no exact account; But have reason to think, that is the furthest of the three Sokens, bounded on the east by the German Ocean. Part of it is a long slip of earth, running from south to north, about three miles in length, and one, or less, in breadth. The flowing in of the tide makes it a peninsula.

The Wall thrown up on this shore to keep out the Sea, is what gave name to this town, or village; It extended considerably further east than it does now, but hath been devoured by the Sea. Some have affirmed, that ruins of buildings have been discovered under water at a considerable distance. About five miles off from this shore lyes a shole of rocks, called West rocks, which on a great ebb are sometimes left dry: A spot amongst them is called the Town. The raging sea keeps daily undermining, and encroaching upon this parish, so that the Hall will soon be in an island.

The Nase [L] is a point of land in the east part of this parish, jutting into the sea, well known to sailors. Near it, the Trinity-house have erected a tower, or light-house, of brick, about 80 feet high from the foundation; for the direction and safe-guard of ships passing that way. The most northern part, or point, of the peninsula in this parish is called Walton-stone; and Goldmans

Mr. John Blatch of Colchester, merchant, and John Edwards, M. D. who married his third daughter, Sarah, purchased this estate. Dr. Edwards dyed 3 January 1757. His widow holds it now in jointure.

Horsey-island belongs to this maner.

Mr. John Blofs hath also an estate here.

By the Church-gate there are Alms-houses for the poor, and elsewhere in the parish, four in all.

Here is a Fair July 26.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of a body and a south aisle. The Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled.

This Church belonged to St. Paul's Church in London, and was taken from it by K. Henry VIII. In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the Rectory, and Advowson of Kirkby, to Sir Thomas Darcy (b). From him the Advowson of the Vicarage hath descended to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.—But the great Tithes belong to General Honynwood, as I have already observed.

The Vicarages of Kirby and Walton were united by Bp. Gibson in May 1730 (i).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 941 l. 2 s. 6 d.

gap is near the neck of land in the south part of the same.

There is only one MANER in this parish.

Walton-hall, is the mansion house.

This Maner belonged, as the two other Sokens, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and have passed from them to Thomas Lord Darcy, Earl Rivers, and the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

The other estates in this parish are; Walton-Ashes; and another good farm, belonging to Philip Bennet Esq;—A considerable estate, in Walton and Kirby, belongs to Shaw King Esq;—John Kirby Esq; hath also an Estate here.—And Mr. John Wheely, or Wheeler.

A farm in this parish was purchased, in 1739, by the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty, for the Augmentation of the Rectory of H. Trinity in Colchester. It consists of 55 acres, 3 roods, and 20 perches, of free-hold land, and about 34 acres of copy-hold; but it is too near the Sea, which undermines some part of it often.

Mr. John Bernard; William Stone &c. have also some lands in this parish.

26. BEAUMONT with MOSE.

These two parishes lye north of the Sokens; and were united and consolidated by act of parliament in 1678. They belonged mostly to the noble Family of De Vere, Earls of Oxford. We shall consider them as distinct, as long as they continued in other Families.

BEAUMONT.

This French name signifies fine Hill; and was undoubtedly taken from the pleasant prospect there is from the spot where the Church stands over the Sokens, and out at sea. It is otherwise written in records, Beamont, Beaumond, Bemond, and Bellamont, and Berners Beamont, from the Berners family that held it under the Earls of Oxford.

No mention occurs in Domesday-book of this parish; which probably was then included under Mose, or some other adjoining parish. Nor is Bellamont, or Beaumont, mentioned till about 1242.

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Old-hall, and New-hall. 2. . . . that of Bernhams.

The Maner of OLD-HALL and NEW-HALL.

The mansion house stands on the north side of the Church.

In 1242, a fine passed between William le Bretton, plaintiff, and Matthew de Leyham, and Nesta his wife, tenants, for the maner of Bellamont in Essex, which Rohefia de Cockfield, mother of Nesta, held for her life, remainder to the said William after her decease (k).

And, in 1270, another fine passed between Peter de Champvent, plaintiff, and Richard de Tylbyr, impediēt, for one messuage, and 120 acres of arable, the right of the said Peter (l).

The lords paramount of this maner were the Earls of Oxford: For, Ralph Berners, who dyed in 1297, held in Beaumond of Robert de Vere, the 6th Earl of Oxford, by the service of 3 parts of a knight's fee, 1 messuage, 180 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 6 of pasture, 16 of wood, and 9 s. 4 d. rent.—Edmund Berners, his son and heir, was 30 years old (m). Under John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358,—John de Berners held two parts of a fee in Beaumond; and John Sencler the twelfth part of a fee in the same place; and the advowson of the Church (n). Robert de Vere, the 9th Earl of Oxford, Marquis of Dublin, and Duke of Ireland, being banished the realm, and all his possessions confiscated: and Sir James de Berners, one of the declared enemies of the publick, a favorite of K. Richard II. being executed for treason; this, among the rest of their estates, fell to the Crown.

K. Richard II. 10 July 1389, granted the maner of Beaumond, for the sum of 250 marks, to Joane de Bohun, Countess of Essex and Hereford; and to John de Ondely, Ralph de Ondely, Cl. and John de Hermesthorp (o) [M].

But the Honors and Estates of the noble Family of De Vere being restored to Alberic, the 10th Earl of Oxford: and Richard de Berners recovering his father Sir James's inheritance, they both had their proper right in this estate. Accordingly the Earl, at the time of his decease in 1400, held the maner of Bewmond of the King, in capite, by knight's service. And had two fees besides in this parish, of which half an one was in his hands, and one fee and a half in John Armysthorp, or Hermesthorp (p), by virtue of K. Richard's grant. But the right of the Berners family still subsisted; For Richard de Ferrers departing this life in 1421, left Margery, his only daughter and heir, married first to Richard de Feriby; and afterwards to John Bouchier, fourth son to William Earl of Eu, who in her right bore the title of Lord Berners (q). John Ferby, most probably her son, presented to the Living in 1429, being styled lord of Beaumont. She herself, jointly with her husband John Lord Bouchier, presented in 1473 (r). He departed this life 21 May 1474, and she in December 1475. They held this estate of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester (s): for John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford, with his eldest son Aubrey, falling a sacrifice to the unhappy contentions between the Houses of York and Lancaster, and being beheaded 26 February 1461, K. Edward IV. gave the chief of their estates to his brother Richard.

The latter, in the first of his reign, 25 July 1483, granted this to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk (t). His enjoyment of it was short; for he being killed at Bosworth field, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, had his father's Honors and Estates restored to him by K. Henry VII. At the time of his decease, 10 March 1512, he held the maner of Beamont Old-hall, with appertenances, of William Pirton Esq; worth 10l. a year.—John the 14th Earl succeeded him (u).

How this estate came afterwards to the Crown we do not find; unless it was through the Duke of Somerset's means in the manner related in the other Volume, p. 293. note [P]. However K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted, among other things, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body, the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and Beaumont, and the Advowson of the Church. He dyed possessed of them 28 June 1558. His son —John Lord Darcy succeeded him (w): from whom they descended to the—Earls Rivers, &c.

This estate belonged afterwards to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Guilford, who sold it some years ago for the use of Mr. Thomas Guy's Hospital.

Here was formerly a Park.

The quit-rents of this maner are 7l. 19s. 9d. $\frac{1}{2}$.

This maner has the Royalty of fishing, and Hunckford water, and Oylford bed.

BERNHAMS

was a messuage in this parish, or reputed Maner derived from the other, but the site of it is now quite unknown.

All that we find concerning it are these few particulars.

In 1393, K. Richard II. granted to John Hundelby, Cl. a messuage called Bernhams in Beaumont, late Robert Vere's Duke of Ireland (x).

About the reign of K. Edward IV. it belonged to the Tanfeild family.

William Tanfeild, who dyed 26 November 1487, held the maner of Bernhammes of John Lord Berners, worth 100s. a year. — Robert Tanfeild, of Everton, his nephew, was his heir (y).

Thomas Christmas, at the time of his decease 5 February 1519, held the maner of Barnhams, with appertenances, of Elizabeth Countess of Oxford, as of her maner of Beamont-hall.—

John Christmas, his son then 30 years old succeeded him (z). See above, p. 377.

Robert Alefounder, of Dedham, who departed this life 5 April 1630, held the maner of Barnhams, and 120 acres of land thereto belonging, in Beamont, Weeley, Tendring, and Thorpe, of Earl Rivers, as of his maner of Old-hall and New-hall in Beamont, in free socage, by fealty, and 4 s. rent.—Robert, was his son and heir (a). See under Kirby.

This estate, as far as we can find, is incorporated into the other.

M O S E.

This parish lies along the Sea side; a little north of the other; and is otherwise written in records Moose, and Moyse.

In Edward the Confessor's reign Leuesun was possessed of it: At the time of the Survey it was held by Geoffrey de Magnaville [N].

Here is but one MANER.

Mose-hall, the old mansion house, lies near the Water side.

New Mose-hall is by the ruins of the Church, in a bottom.

In the reign of K. Henry II. William de Botever held two fees here under Geoffrey de Mandeville (b) [O].

Maud, daughter of Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, heiress of the Mandeville family, brought this estate to her husband Henry de Bobun, Earl of Hereford, and in her right Earl of Essex; High Constable of England. In this family it continued for some time.

Humfrey de Bobun, who dyed 17 January 1372, had 2 fees in Mose and Maschebery which William Boteveleyn formerly held (c). [For a particular account of this family, see the other Volume, p. 451, 452. and for that of Mandeville, p. 545, 546.]

John Plays, or de Playz, of Stansted-Montfichet, who dyed in 1388, held the maner of Mose.

Margaret, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her husband, Sir John Howard: At the time of her decease in 1391, she held this maner of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, who had married Elianor one of the daughters and coheirs of Humfrey de Bohun. Sir John held, after her decease, by the law of England, the maner of Mose, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Great Bentley: and having

He had the misfortune of being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to the House of Lancaster; and this estate was seized among his others, and continued in the Crown, or was granted away, till K. Henry VIIth's accession to the throne, when the De Vere family were restored to their Honors and Estates.

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, dyed possessed of this maner, and that of Great Oakley, in 1512; and was succeeded by—John, the 14th Earl (e).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body, the maner of Mose, with appertenances, the advowson of the Church; and the Park of Mose (f). For here had been a Park ever since the time of K. Richard I. [P].

This estate passed from the Rt. Hon. Lord Guilford to Tho: Guy's Hospital.

A Court is kept at Old Mose-hall, and the quit-rents are 7 l. 12 s. 8 d. [Q].

Holmes-island, Sunk-island, and one or two more, formed by the flowing in of the tide, belong to this parish.

There are said to be 840 acres of land in Mose.

The CHURCH of Beaumont, dedicated to St. Leonard, stands pleasantly on a hill. It is small, of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. In a wooden Belfrey are 2 Bells.

This Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner.

The CHURCH of Mose stood near the Hall, but is demolished. Some of the ruins still remain, covered with briars and thorns, and not even inclosed.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner of Old-hall and New-hall.

These two Churches and Livings were united in the reign of K. Charles II. For it being made appear, that the parish Church of Beaumont, and that of Mose, were very near adjacent, and the inhabitants of both parishes so poor, that they were not able to contribute to the sufficient reparations of their respective Churches; as also that the farmers belonging to the parish of Moose were but to the number of eleven, and their parish Church become very ruinous, and ready to fall down, the Steeple thereof being already fallen, and both the Churches having then the same patron and the same incumbent; therefore both these parishes were united and consolidated by act of parliament in 1678, and the Church of Beaumont made the Parish Church of both these Parishes, and the Patron and Rector enabled to pull down the Church of Moose, and to imploy the materials towards the repairs of the Church of Beaumont, and for the fencing in of the ground where the Church of Moose stood, and the Churchyard of the same; which ground and Churchyard was to be continued for the burial of the dead of the said parishes, and for no other use; and that the said Churches, and all tythes, and other duties, heretofore due and payable to the incumbent of the Church of Moose, shall hereafter be paid, and payable to the incumbent of the Church of Beaumont only.

Beaumont and Mose are rated to the land-tax at 764 l. 1 s. 0 d.

O A K L E Y.

Two parishes of this name lye along the Seaside, distinguished from each other by the addition of Great and Little.

The name is derived from Oak, and ley, i. e. Oak pasture: and is otherwise written in records Ocle, and Orle; and Acle, or Acley: Ac is the Saxon word for an Oak.

27. G R E A T O A K L E Y, is much the largest of the two.

The lands in Great and Little Oakley belonged to Aluric Caper, in Edward the Confessor's reign: At the time of the Survey, they were part of the many lordships holden by Robert Greno, or Gernon, lord of Stansted-Montfichet [R]. And for that reason held afterwards of the Barony of Stansted-Montfichet.

In Great Oakley are three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Oakley. 2. . . that of Skighaugh. 3. The maner of Blounts.

The Maner of G R E A T O A K L E Y.

Great Oakley-hall, the mansion-house, is above a mile east north-east from the Church.

For a particular account of Robert Gernon, and his descendents, we shall beg leave to refer to the other Volume, p. 231. and especially p. 576. under Stansted-Montfichet, which was their capital seat, and the head of their Barony. Robert was succeeded by his son — William, who took the surname of Montfichet, whose son — Gilbert had for successor — Richard, that dyed in 1203. — Richard, son of this latter, departed this life about 1258; and leaving no issue, his great inheritance was divided among his three sisters, Margery, wife of Hugh de Bolebec; Aveline, of William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle; and Philippa, of Hugh de Plaiz.

Great Oakley came to the share of Philippa, and her husband. — Richard de Plaiz, their son, did homage to K. Henry III. for the maner of Acley in Essex (g). — Ralph, his son, dyed without issue. His successor — Giles de Plaiz, at the time of his decease in 1303, held this maner, and the advowson of the Church. — Richard, his son (h), held the maner of Great Okele of the King in ca. by the Barony called Mountfitchett. He dyed in 1327. — Giles, his son and successor, held also the same. As did his son — Richard Playz; to whom the King confirmed free-warren in all his lands in the Counties of Essex, Hertford, Kent, and Bucks; and one Market, and Fair, at his maner of Acle in Essex. — Sir John, his son, succeeded him in 1360 (i). And departing this life in 1388, left

Margaret, his daughter and sole heir, then married to Sir John Howard [S]. At the time of her decease, in 1391, she held the maner of Okle, of the King in ca. by the service of one knight's fee (k). Her husband, Sir John, held this maner, by the law of England, till his death in 1437. They had one son, Sir John Howard, who dyed before his father, and left an only daughter Elizabeth, heir to this and other considerable estates (l) [T]. She was married to John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. He was beheaded with his eldest son Aubrey, in 1461, for their adherence to the House of Lancaster. And K. Edward IV. gave their estates to his brother Richard Duke of Gloucester.

The De Vere family recovered their estates and Honors upon the accession of K. Henry VII. to the Crown. This continued in them till 1 March 1540, when John the 16th Earl of Oxford had license to alienate the maners of Great Okeley and Dodinghurst to

William Pirton, and others (m). But K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted the maner of Great Okeley, and the Park of Okeley to Sir Thomas Darcy (n). It continued in his posterity for some time.

Mrs. Gilly, of Cleveland-Court had it afterwards; and sold it to Brigadier Warren.

It belongs now to Carteret Leathes Esq; or to his son John Leathes Esq;

Oakley-lodge, belonging to the Park, is about half a mile north from the Church. This also is part of the estate of Carteret Leathes Esq;

The Maner of SKIGHAUGHS, was taken from the foregoing maner.

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 10 March 1512, held, among the rest of his large estates, this maner of Skighaugh. And so did his successor, — John, the 14th Earl, in 1526 (o).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Skighaw to Sir Thomas Darcy [U]. His son — John Lord Darcy, at the time of his decease, 3 March 1580, held it of the Queen, in ca. by the half of a knight's fee; then worth 9l. 15s. a year (p).

It belonged to the Rt. Hon. Lord Guilford, now to Thomas Guy's Hospital.

This estate contains 253 acres: and the quit-rents belonging to it are 3l. 15s. 11d. $\frac{1}{2}$.

DENGWELL HALL.

This estate contains 250 acres of land, but is no Maner.

It took its name from Thomas de Denfshewell, who had it in the reign of K. Edward III. But it originally belonged to the Family of Plaiz.

Under Richard de Plaiz, who dyed in 1360, Geffrey de Dersham held one fee in Great Ocle: And, afterwards, Roger Dersham held three quarters of a fee in this parish, called Dersham-hall (q). Whether it was the same as this estate, doth not clearly appear. However, — Sir John de Plaiz, and — Sir John Howard, who married his daughter and heir Margaret, held 3 parts of a fee in Great Okle, called Danefswell (r).

This estate was afterwards in two moieties. Arthur Rusbe, who dyed 2 July 1537, held a moiety of the maner of Dangewell-hall, 360 acres of arable, 40 of wood, 20 of heath, and 20 s. rent, in Great Okeley, and Weekes; of John Earl of Oxford, and Christopher Roydon, Ham; Wormingford; Wivenhou, and Doniland; Witham; Maplested; Chingford; Manuden; Wendon; Takeley; Tendring; Mose; Matching; Arkefden; Widdington; Writtle; Stapleford; Navestock; Boreham; Springfield; Wenington; Reynham; Alveley. Besides the maner of Oakley, they had three quarters of a fee in this parish. Inquis. 53 Hen. III. 31 Edw. I. 1, & 34 Edw. III. 16 Hen. VI.

[U] And yet, 18 June 1555, John Coxhead had license to alienate the maner of Skyghawe, with appertenance to Edward Markaunt. Lett. pat. 2 & 3 Ph. & Mar.

Esq; by the service of 10s. a year. His son and heir—Antony Rushe was then three years old (s).

Thomas Storgard, Gent. and Edmund Witkipole, had this about the year 1556. Nicolas Steward held Dengwell-hall, in 1566, of John Lord Darcy. He left a son named James (t).

Another moiety was in John Ford, Esq; of Great Horkesley and Frating; as appears by a precept to the Sheriff, wherein it is described, as one moiety of 2 messuages, 3 tofts, 3 barns, 3 gardens, 2 orchards, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 200 of pasture, 40 of wood, 20 of furze and heath, and 20 s. rent, in Great Okeley, Herewyche; and Wykes (u). J. Ford's second daughter and coheir, Elleanor brought this estate in frank marriage to her husband Thomas Bendish, of Bumpsted-Steple, Esq; At the time of his decease, 23 February 1602, he held a moiety of the maner of Dangwell-hall, with appertenances, of Thomas Lord Darcy, as of his maner of Oakley, by fealty, and yearly rent of 10s. His son—Thomas Bendish Esq; afterwards created a Baronet, succeeded him (w). For a particular account of this Family see above, p. 449, and especially the other Volume, p. 350.

Mr. Thomas Guy's Hospital hath now this Estate, with Stone-hall, and some other lands.

This estate pays 1 l. a year quit-rents, or heriots, to Roydon-hall in Ramsay.

The Maner of BLUNTS-HALL, took its name from an ancient owner, Sir Andrew le Blund, mentioned above under Tendring, p. 470. From him it descended by marriage to the family of Battaile; and then to Sutton, Walton, and De Vere, as Wivenhou. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.]

In 1342, Sir John de Sutton granted to Ralph de Fylliol, for life, a yearly rent out of his maner of Great Ocle; in consideration of which, the said Ralph released to him all his right in this maner, and the advowson of the Church (x).

This estate seems to have gone along with that of Dengwell. For Thomas Bendish, Esq; held the maner of Blunts-hall with that maner (y).

It belongs now to the child or children of Mr. Thomas Mason, of Dedham, but is not reckoned a Maner.

HOUBRIDGE-HALL

belonged to one surnamed Hobrege, in K. Edward the third's reign. For Thomas Botelere, and Walter Arderne, enfeoffed Walter Hobrege, of Great Okele, and Rose his wife, and Maud daughter of Thomas Denshewell, in 60 acres of land in this parish; to hold to them and their heirs. This land was held of the King, in ca. by knight's service, as parcel of the maner of Great Okele, and paid 11s. and 11d. to that maner (z).

John Borlas, alias Borlacy, who dyed 6 May 1589, held the maner, or farm, of Hobridge-hall, and divers messuages, lands, and tenements &c. in Great and Little Okeley, Bradfeild, &c. —William was his son and heir (a).

In 1327, under Richard de Plaiz, Alexander Flyntard held 3 quarters of a fee in Great Okele. Sir John Howard held the same in 1437. Thomas de Brom held also three quarters of a fee here, under Richard de Plaiz (b).

Richard Drake, Rector of this parish, gave, 1 November 1718, an house new-built, with an orchard, that cost him in all above 50 l. to this parish, for ever, for the Poor to dwell in; upon condition, that the inhabitants built another house as large and as good. They accordingly did so, and theirs was finished 31 August 1721. Each of these Houses contain four families, and are situated above a quarter of a mile south from the Church.

Here is a Fair April 25.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Steeple, that was built of flints and stones, fell some years ago: In it were 5 Bells. About three years ago, the Parishioners having obtained a faculty to dispose of the four lesser Bells, and sold them for 80 l. they added 60 or 70 l. more, and repaired, almost rebuilt, the Steeple, and hung in it the great Bell.

This Rectory was anciently appendent to the Maner of Oakley-hall; and in the gift of the Families of De Plaiz, Howard, Vere &c. (c) till 19 August 1547, when K. Edward VI. granted the advowion of it to Sir Thomas Seymour, Baron of Sudeley, and his heirs, to hold in capite (d). The 24th of September following Sir Thomas gave it to—William Britton, Gent. who conveyed it, in 1549, to — Edward Regard; and the latter, 3 May 1561, conveyed it to—John Rochester, of Terling, Gent. He gave it, 1 May 1566, to his brother—Thomas Rochester, Cl.—John Rochester, Gent. his son, sold, 11 March 1614, the perpetual advowson to — Humfrey Cole, of Tillingham, Cl. and his heirs.—Robert Cole, his son, was instituted to this Rectory in 1627. He gave it to his son — Henry, who was instituted to the same in 1673, upon Bockenham's resignation; and dyed without a will in 1704, leaving two daughters coheirs, Jane wife of John Kirk, of Harwich, and Elizabeth wife of the Rev. Richard Drake; Elizabeth dyed 19 January 1706, only 25 years old; and left a daughter named Susanna. The Rev. Mr. Grimwood having purchased the advowson, sold it to St. John's College in Cambridge.

The Glebe belonging to this Living is above 60 acres.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 902 l. 1 s. 0 d.

28. LITTLE OAKLEY, lies north of the other, along the Sea side, towards Harwich.

The lands of this parish are comprehended in what hath been set down under the other, as belonging to Robert Gernon; especially that part, which one Ralph held, containing two hides and ten acres. This Ralph I take to have been Ralph Baynard, lord of Little Dunmow. [See under that parish.]

Here is only one MANER.

Little Oakley-hall stands near the east end of the Church.

The demesnes of it are about half the parish.

Ralph Baynard's grandson, William, being deprived of his estates, they were given to Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, ancestor of the Lords Fitz-Walter.

In 1259, Richard Filoll held the maner of Acle, of Robert Fitz-Walter. His son — Sir John Filoll succeeded him (e).

In 1316, a fine was levied between John Filoll sen. plaintiff, and Robert Filoll, deforc. of this maner; remainder to John Filoll, jun. and Christian his wife, and the heirs of their bodies. And, in 1331, Ralph Filiol passed this estate by fine to Sir John Filiol, and Margery his wife (f). At the time of his decease, in 1332, he held this maner of Little Okeley, with the advowson of the Church, of the heirs of Sir Robert Fitz-Walter, by the service of two knights fees and a half, and rent of 8 s. 4 d. a year, for ward at Castle Baynard six months. — John, his son and heir (g), left two sons, who dying without issue, the estates came to his daughter

Cecily. [For a further account of the Filoll family, see in the other Volume, p. 21. 151.] The 3d of February 1346, Cecily and her husband settled this estate by fine on themselves, and the heirs of their body; and for want of heirs on Ralph Filoll; and on default of his issue on

William, son of Sir John de Sutton, of Wivenhou, and his heirs male. By that means it came into the Sutton family, and they presented to the living (h). Griffin de Sutton, Parson of Tendring, had granted before to Sir John de Sutton, and his son Richard, all his right to the third part of this maner of Little Okeley (i). — Sir Richard de Sutton, at the time of his decease, in 1395, held this maner, with the Advowson of the Church, of Walter Fitz-Walter, Lord of Woodham, by knight's service. — Thomas de Sutton succeeded his father (k); but dying without issue, it came by the marriage of his sister, or aunt,

Margery, to John de Walton Esq; He was succeeded by his son — John; and he by — Richard de Walton Esq; who leaving no issue, his sister

Joane, wife of Sir John Howard, jun. inherited. Sir William Marny, and other trustees, released and confirmed to them, 6 January 1467, this maner, and the advowson of the Church. He died 13 December 1424 [W], leaving an only daughter Elizabeth, married afterwards to John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. This noble family presented to the living from 1448 till 1540 (l), which shews how long they remained possessed of the maner. — John de Vere, the 13th Earl, who died in 1512, held, of the Abbot of St. Johns in Colchester, this maner, and the advowson of the Church: As did — John, the 14th Earl, at the time of his decease in 1526 (m).

This Maner and Advowson being afterwards in the Crown, by the means, we think, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 293. K. Edward VI. granted them to Sir Thomas Darcy (n): and he and his descendents enjoyed them from that time, and presented to the Living till 1641.

Then it was in the family of Gilley; who first presented in 1660.

William Leathes Esq; had it next. He was appointed Resident in the Austrian Netherlands, 1 April 1716. And was succeeded in this estate by his nephew — Carteret Leathes, Esq;

Capt. Cockerell; and Capt. Baggot, of Harwich; Widow Lilly; Mr. Samuel Carrington; Francis Wilson &c. have also estates in this parish.

Pewit-island belongs to this parish. — It is so called from the great quantity of Pewits which come and breed in it in the spring. But whether all the wonderful circumstances related by Dr. T. Fuller, are exactly true, is doubtful; as that they come on St. George's day precisely; that they seldom sleep whilst they sit on their eggs, &c. See his Worthies, in Essex, p. 378.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tiled. In a stone Tower are 4 Bells.

This Church hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

The parish is rated to the land-tax at 429 l. 1 s. 0 d.

29. W R A B N E S E, lies north of the two Oakleys, and east of Bradfeild, abutting north on the river Stour; into which part of the parish advancing into a point, or promontory, [in Saxon næpe,] is what gave occasion to the latter part of the name. As for the former part, I cannot find from whence it is formed.

It is otherwise written in records, Warbenase, Wrabnas, Wrabnashe, and Wrabbenase.

Before and after the Conquest, this parish belonged to the Abbey of St. Edmundsbury in Suffolk [X], to which it was given by Alfric Kempe (o). Out of the rents of it, 10 marks yearly were paid to the cellarer of that Monastery.

Under the Abbey, it was held by the families of Blund, de Ufford, de Vere, Hende, and Ayloff, upon the payment of 10 marks per ann.

1. Wrabnese-hall; and 2. . . . Denballs, are the two Maners in this parish.

The Maner of W R A B N E S E.

The Hall, or mansion-house, stands a little way east from the Church.

Of the Blund family, who were its ancientest owners, or tenants, we have this account. Robert le Blund, or Blond, i. e. the Fair, one of William the Conqueror's attendants (p), had—Gilbert, his son, founder of the Priory of Ickeworth in Suffolk; and husband of Alice de Colekirk. By her he had—William, living in the reign of K. Henry II. that married Sarah de Montcheny. —Hubert; his son, had by Agnes Lisle his wife, —William le Blund, who married Cecily de Vere, and had by her William; and two daughters, Agnes, and Roese. —William, the son and heir, was standard-bearer to the Barons, at the battle of Lewes fought against K. Henry III. and was there slain. He held in the maner of Wrabnase 305 acres of arable, pasture, wood, marsh, &c. 4 l. rent of assise, and a water-mill; of Edmund Fitz-Thomas, Sir Richard de Wykes, John de Danesey, and Simon Plebien; and paid 10 marks yearly to the Abbot of St. Edmund. His two sisters were his coheirs.

Agnes was then the wife of William de Cretketoft, and had a son William, of full age. Roese, who was married to Robert de Valeyns, had a son Robert, 17 years of age (q). Between these two coheirs Blund's estates being divided,

Robert de Valeyns, or Valoines, had this. At the time of his decease, in 1282, he left two daughters, Roese married to Edmund de Pakenham, and Cecily to

Robert de Ufford (r). They had three sons, Robert de Ufford, the first Earl of Suffolk of this family; Ralph; and Edmund. —Ralph de Ufford, the second son, married, first, Maud one of the daughters of Henry Plantagenet Lord of Monmouth and Earl of Lancaster, second son of Edmund Crouchback brother to K. Edward I. widow of William Lord Burgh Earl of Ulster, by whom he had one daughter, named Maud. By his second wife, Eve, daughter and heir of John de Clavering, he had two sons (s).

Maud, the daughter by the first wife, was married to Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl of Oxford. At the time of his decease, in 1370, he held the maner of Wrabbenase of the Abbot of St. Edmundsbury, by the service of 10 l. a year (t). Their son Robert de Vere, Marquis of Dublin, and Duke of Ireland, dyed 22 November 1392, without issue. Maud, his mother, who survived both husband and son till 1412, by her will dated 20 January that year, gave the maner of Wrabnase, to the Abbess and Convent of Brusyard in Suffolk for a Chantry, consisting of a Warden and four Priests founded by her mother in 1354, and converted afterwards into a Nunnery: provided it was amortized, at the expence of that House in three years after her decease, otherwise to be sold by her feoffees, and the money paid to the Abbess and Convent, and their successors, for the health of her soul. To all appearance it was sold by her feoffees, and purchased by

Sir John Hende, a rich citizen of London, mentioned above, p. 188. and in the other Volume, p. 66. 155. 470. At the time of his decease, 1 August 1418, he held the maner of Wrabnase, with a Sea-water mill, of the Abbot of Bury. He had two sons both named John. —John, his eldest son and heir, then 9 years old (u), dyed in 1461, and John the younger in 1464. The eldest left an only daughter, named Joane, heiress to the whole estate of this rich family. She was married to Walter Writel of Bobbingworth Esq; He departed this life 18 April 1475, leaving two sons, William, who dyed young; and —John: that was cut off by the sweating sickness, which raged in 1485. [See in the other Volume, p. 156.] —John, his only child, then but 6 weeks old (w), was married very young to Etheldreda, daughter of his guardian Sir John Shaa, but dyed under age, 28 July 1507, leaving an only daughter—Julian, which survived him but a little while. His mother Anne held this maner, and that of Ramsay, at the time of her decease in 1488. And, upon his death, in 1507, it came into the king's hands (x).

It was, soon after, with the maner of Ramsay, in William Ayloff, of Bretons in this County, Esq; who married Etheldreda daughter of Sir John Shaa, and widow of John Writel, Esq; He held this maner of Wrabnase, and lands and tenements there and in Wikes, in socage, of the Abbot of St. Edmundsbury; and dying 10 August 1517, was succeeded by his eldest son —William Ayloff Esq; [For a particular account of this family, see above, p. 70.] His great grandson — Sir William Ayloffe, created a Baronet 25 November 1612, alienated it to

... Dawes, who sold it again to

Sir George Whitmore, of London, Kt. that had before a moiety of the maner of Ramsey-hall, or Michel-stow, granted him by K. James I. He was the second son of William Whitmore, Alderman of London, an eminent merchant, son of Richard Whitmore, of Charley in Shropshire Esq; Sir George Whitmore was also Alderman of London, for Langbourn-ward, one of the Sheriffs in 1621, Lord Mayor in 1631, and knighted 27 May 1632. He lived mostly at his mansion house called Barnes, between Hoxden and Kingland, in the parish of Hackney in Middlesex, where he dyed 12 December 1654. By ... his wife, daughter of ... Cascot, he had three sons, William; Charles; George: and three daughters, Mary; Elizabeth; and Anne, wife of Sir John Robinson, Bart. — William Whitmore, Esq; his eldest son, succeeded him. For some time he resided at Ramsey-hall; but, upon his father's death, went and lived at Barnes in Hackney. In his advanced years he took to wife Penelope, one of his menial servants, and had by her one son, born about 1670. Departing this life in 1678, aged 64 years, he was buried at Ramsey. — William, his son and heir, was contracted in marriage very young with the daughter of Sir William Whitmore, of Shropshire, Bart. and consummated his marriage some time after his father's death. He was accidentally killed by a pistol which lay by him in his own chariot, as he was returning from Epsom, being under age, and without a child [Y]. In case he should dye without issue, his father had by will settled his estates in trustees, who were to sell them, and divide the produce among about twenty five Legatees. Accordingly the following trustees, William, Marquis of Powis, William Earl Craven, and Charles Lord North and Gray, sold the Maner and Demesnes of Wrabnese in March 1686-7, to

Sir Thomas Davall, Kt. descended from an ancient family in the northern parts of England [Z]: who purchased at the same time the Whitmore's estates in Ramsey, and Dovercourt. He was knighted 21 February 1682, one of the Burgeffes for Harwich, in all the Parliaments of K. William, and the two first of Qu. Anne; and also Recorder of that Burgh. He dyed in November 1712, and was buried in Ramsey-Church. By Rebecca his wife, daughter of Daniel Burr of Amsterdam, merchant, that departed this life in January 1714, he had, Daniel who was buried 29 September 1711; Thomas; and Mary. — Thomas Davall, Esq; the only surviving child and heir, succeeded his father; and was knighted 19 June 1713. Dying before his mother in April 1714, he was likewise buried near his father at Ramsey. He married Lydia-Catharine Van-Hattem, daughter of John Van-hattem Esq; by his aunt Lydia Davall his father's third sister, and had by her two sons, Thomas; and John, buried 8 February 1715. — Thomas Davall, Esq; the eldest son, had a short enjoyment of the estates, being buried 23 June 1718; and with him ended the Davall family here [A].

Upon the death of this last child, a contest arose about the title to this estate, between Daniel Burr Esq; who claimed by virtue of the will of Sir Thomas Davall the younger, made in April 1714; and between Lydia Van-Hattem, widow; Elizabeth Davall; and Mary Davall, spinsters; and Catharine Bovey, widow, daughter and heir of Anne Riches, eldest sister of the first Sir Thomas Davall; all which four claimed as heirs at law to the Davall family. Alledging, that Sir Thomas Davall, the younger, dyed intestate, as not being of a sound mind [non compos mentis] at the time of making his will; or if he was, that the devise to Mr. Burr was void, for repugnancy [B]. The suit was begun in 1719, and lasted till 30 May 1722, when, upon an issue directed out of Chancery, at a trial in the Court of King's Bench, a verdict was found for Mr. Burr. Afterwards there was an agreement between the contending parties, about Davall's great Estate of between four and five thousand pounds a year; by which it was settled, That the Lady Lydia-Catharine, widow of the last Sir Thomas, should have her whole jointure of 800l. a year at her own disposal, and her late husband's personal estate, which was very considerable: And Mr. Burr had the estates at Wrabnese, Ramsey, and Dover-court, and in Burr-street at Wapping. [See above, p. 246.] This Daniel Burr Esq; married Elizabeth, daughter of Frederick Danchert of Amsterdam, and Petronilla his wife, and had by her, Frederic; Daniel; Sophia-Rebecca &c. [C].

Some years ago, Mr. Burr sold this, and the estates at Ramsey, Dovercourt, &c. to Lewis-Peak Garland Esq;

The Maner of DENBALLS.

Very little occurs in records concerning this Maner; nor is it known from whence it took its name.

In 1544, Christopher Roydon, Gent. held lands and tenements called Danbold and Hastings, in Ramsey, Wrabnes, and Mistelley, of the maner of Hedingham-castle.

John Lucas Esq; who dyed 27 May 1599.

Wrabnese, Ramsey, Dovercourt &c. to his eldest son Thomas and the heirs of his body; and an estate in Middlesex to his younger son and the heirs of his body; and, if either of his sons dyed without issue, what was devised to him in tail, to go to the other son, and the heirs of his body. Then follows the controverted clause. 'And if both my said sons shall depart this life with (instead of without) issue of either of their bodies; then I give all the premises in the Counties of Essex and Middlesex unto my cousin Daniel Burr and his heirs.'

held a maner called Denballs, and 30 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow, in Wrabnes, of William Ayliff Esq; as of his maner of Wrabnes-hall, in free socage, by fealty.—John, his son and heir, at the time of his decease 13 December 1619, held a messuage with appertenances called Denballs, and the other lands as his father: worth 3s. 4d. a year.—Alexander, his son and successor, was then 20 years old (y). [See under Ramsey.]

The next possessor we meet with, was James Smith, of Upton Esq; whose heir is—Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart.

Mr. Jonas Palmer; John Lucas; John Constable, &c. have also some lands in this parish.

lies between Wrabnes, Oakley, and Dovercourt; bounded on the north by the river Stour, or Channel: Part of it is a peninsula, called The Ray.

The name is formed from the two words, Ram, and ige, i. e. Ram's island. In records it is sometimes written Ramefey alias Misfletow, and Ramefey cum Misfletow, Micklestow, or Mistletoe.

Aluric Caper, and Alric, were owners of the lands here, in Edward the Confessor's reign. Ralph Baignard, or Baynard, held them at the time of the Survey, in two parcels, under the distinct appellations of Ramefeia, and Michesletou [E].

They were divided afterwards into these several Maners. 1. The maner of Ramsey, Parkers, or Roydon-hall. 2. . . . that of Ramsey-hall. 3. The maner of Michelstow. 4. East Newhall. 5. Strond-land. 6. The Ray. 7. Foulton.

The Maner of RAMSEY.

Roydon-hall, the mansion house, stands about two miles west from the Church.

Ralph Baignard was succeeded by his son—Geffrey, father of—William Baignard, or Baynard; who, for joining with William Malet, and

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is small, of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. Here was formerly a stone-tower, with 5 Bells; now only 2, in a wooden Turret.

This Rectory belonged, as well as the Maner, to St. Edmundsbury-Abbey, till its suppression. The Advowson then came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever since.

Mr. Robert Rich, late Rector, was a benefactor to this Church. by purchasing a piece of land for the convenience of his successors [D].

others, in a conspiracy against K. Henry I. was deprived of his estates: and that King gave them to his Steward,

Robert, a younger son of Richard Fitz-Gislebert, progenitor of the ancient Earls of Clare, from which Robert descended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter: And therefore this estate was holden of the Lords Fitz-Walter. [See above, p. 313. 338. and in the other Volume, p. 427.] The said Robert gave to Alberic de Vere, the first Earl of Oxford, who had married his niece Adaliza, the fee that Ralph son of Roger held of him in Ramefeia, consisting of three knights fees (z).—Hugh de Vere, the 4th Earl of Oxford, held, in 1263, the maner of Ramsey, of the fee of Walter Fitz-Robert, for which he paid 10 s. every 24 weeks, towards the ward of Baynard's-castle (a).—Robert, his son, the 5th Earl, held the little maner [manerettum] of Ramefey, of Robert Fitz-Walter, by the rent of 5 s. every 24 weeks, for the use aforesaid: And la Stonehyde, of the heirs of Alexander de Ramefey, by the yearly rent of 2 s. (b).—Thomas, the 8th Earl, in 1370, held the maner of Ramseye of the Lord Fitz-Water, in the same manner as Hugh, the fourth Earl (c).—Alberic, the 10th Earl, held, in 1400, half a fee for a reasonable aid, from the villans of Ramsey (d).

[D] Mr. Rich was born at Hatton in Scotland, and dyed 28 January 1728, having been 33 years Rector of this parish, and 48 Vicar of Ramsey. He is said in his Epitaph to have been a father to the orphan, a helper of the friendless, a preventer of strife, and one that spent his life in acts of charity and beneficence. He had a very uncommon Collection of Books of Alchemy, 39 Volumes of which are in Colchester-castle, deposited in the Library there belonging to the Book-Society; and by his marks in them with pen and ink, it appears he had thoroughly read them.

Family seems to have parcelled out this Maner. For, upon the death of John the 7th Earl, it was found, that of him Walter de Reydon held one fee in Ramsey, worth 100 s. when it happened to be taxed; and Geffrey Roily three quarters of a fee, worth 75 s. (e).

From hence arose the distinction of REYDON, or ROYDON, Hall, which was the capital Maner; and The RAY, holden by the Roily, or de Ruly, family, as we shall shew presently.

In the mean time, we shall observe, That this estate shared the different fates of the noble family of De Vere. For, when Robert, Duke of Ireland, was accused of high-treason, and his estates were confiscated, K. Richard II. in 1393, granted to Thomas de Percy, and John de Bouchier, and others, in fee, the Maners of Ramsey and Frating in Essex, 4 messuages, 286 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 6 of pasture, 17 of wood, and Borsfleet mill, the estate of Robert Duke of Ireland, attainted (f). And John Hent, mentioned above, p. 188, who held this maner of Ramseye of the Lord Fitz-Water, in ca. granted it to Sir William Bouchier, in 1416 (g) [F].

Under the Earls of Oxford, this estate was holden by a family surnamed de Ramsey: and from them it came by marriage to Parker, from which it took the name of PARKERS; then to Roydon, that gave it the name of ROYDONS; and lastly to Lucas.

Elias de Ramsey held it in the reign of K. John. Alexander de Ramsey in 1260, Alice de Ramsey in 1269. Alexander had, by Maud his wife, three daughters coheirs. Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, granted the marriage of them, and of their mother Maud, for 100 marks, to William de Clara, Archdeacon of Sudbury (b). Isabell, the eldest of these daughters, was married to Sir Ralph de Pbilely. Joane, another daughter, to John le Parker. These were possessed of this estate in 1275. The name of the third daughter is not mentioned.

By marriage, I suppose, it came into the Roydon, or Reydon, family. Walter de Reydon held it as one fee in Ramsey in 1360, and 1370 (i). — John Reydon in 1409 (k). In the reign of K. Henry VI. — Robert Reydon held a knight's fee here, called Reydons. — Thomas Reydon held the same in the time of K. Edward IV. And — John Reydon did homage for it at Castle Hedingham in 1498. — Christopher Reydon Gent. who dyed 6 September 1544, held the maner of Ramsey, called Parkers, alias Roydon-hall; and lands and tenements called Danbold and Hastings, in Ramsey, Wrabnas, and Mistley, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Henningham-Castle, by the service of one knight's fee. He left an only child and heir,

Mary, or Margaret, then only two years old (l). She was married afterwards to John Lucas Esq; to whom she brought this estate in marriage. He was the son of John Lucas Esq; of Colchester, by his second wife Elizabeth Christmase; and by Mary Roydon his wife had five sons, John; Roydon; Edward; Edmund; Christopher: and three daughters, Elizabeth, married to Robert Darcy of Tiptre; Mary, to Edward Bedingfeild; and Margaret to . . . Tillingham. [See History of Colchester, p. 124.]

In a precept to the Sheriff, in Hilary-term 1567, this maner of Roydon is described as 10 messuages, 600 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of pasture, 500 of wood, 100 of marsh, 200 of furze and heath, and 3 l. rent, in Ramsey, Wrabnes, and Witham (m). John Lucas Esq; at the time of his decease, 27 May 1599, held this maner of Parkers, alias Roydon-hall, with appertenances, and 300 acres of arable and pasture, 20 of meadow, and 75 of wood, in Ramsey, of William Stanley, Earl of Derby, as of his maner of Henningham-Castle, by the service of one knight's fee, also a tenement, and 8 acres of land: and 40 acres of arable and pasture, and 9 of meadow called Barwicks, in this parish. — John Lucas Esq; his eldest son, succeeded him (n). He dyed possessed of the same 13 December 1619. — Alexander, his eldest son and heir was above 20 years of age (o). He had besides a son named Thomas, and a daughter Anne.

Robert Carey, Earl of Monmouth, held this maner of Thomas Lord Bruce, and the Lady Diana his wife, Countess dowager of Oxford, in 1630, by the service of one knight's fee, and yearly rent of 3 s.

Sir Harbottle Grimston, Kt. and Bart. had it in 1635.

James Smith, of Upton, Esq; purchased it some years ago: and it now belongs to — Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart. who hath also a farm close to Stoure-wood.

The Maner of RAMSEY-HALL.

The mansion house stands a little way south from Roydon-hall.

This maner was taken from the other capital one; but when, doth not plainly appear. The earliest mention we find of it, is, That it belonged to John Herde, in 1599 (p).

K. James I. 22 July 1605, granted the maner of Ramsey, with appertenances, to Robert Earl of Suffex, to hold of the maner of East-Greenwich, in socage (q).

Thomas Branfon, of East-Bergholt, clothier, had it next.

Mrs. Peeke of Lawford was afterwards possessed of this estate; And upon her decease it came amongst her daughters, one of whom is married to Mr. William Elliston of Sudbourn in Suffolk. — Mr. Palmer Firmin hath also one share.

This Maner consists of demesnes, rents, and services.

The Maner of MICHELSTOW

The Maner of STROND-LAND, was originally a member of the capital Maner in this parish, and used to be named with it; viz. Ramesey cum Michelstou.

It came to be so called, because the House stands near the Church, which is dedicated to St. Michael. By late improvements it is made a handfom feat.

When it was separated from the capital Maner we have no plain account, but it was before the year 1379. For then K. Richard II. granted license to Walter Legat Vicar of Dovercourt, Adam Waryn, and John Hall of Colchester, to give 3 messuages, 200 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, and 16s. rent, in Michelstou, and Adburton, to the Monastery of St. Osith. The said messuages and lands were held of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Gelham, by the service of one rose, and suit of court from 3 weeks to 3 weeks (r).

At the suppression of Monasteries, this Maner was lett, with the Rectory, for the yearly rent of 50 l. (s) which shews how fine an estate it was.

It then falling to the Crown, a moiety of it was granted to Robert Carey, Earl of Monmouth; and the other moiety to Sir George Whitmore. From the Whitmore family it came to that of Davall, and then of Burr, as the maner of Wrabnese; and now belongs to

Lewis-Peak Garland, Esq;

The Maner of EAST NEW-HALL.

The mansion house is about three quarters of a mile north from the Church. 'Tis sometimes called East-Hall.

Like the other estates in this parish, it was held of the Earls of Oxford; except during their attainder under Edward IV. Richard at Pantry, and Thomas Holbeck were possessed of it in 1406. — Thomas Holbeck, who dyed in 1480, held this maner of Est New-hall in Ramsey of Sir Thomas Montgomery, as of his maner of Great Tey; by fealty, and rent of 5 s. a year. He had also the Ray in this parish. His heirs were, Christiana, and Alice, two of his daughters; and Thomas Wilkokys, son of Margery, another daughter of his (t).

A fine passed in 1543, between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and William Burnynghyll and Elianor his wife, deforc' of the maners of East New-hall, and le Ray, and 300 acres of arable, 31 of meadow, 100 of pasture, 150 of marsh, 80 of wood, and 5 l. rent in Ramsey; to be the King's right (u).

The families of Whitmore, Davall, and Burr, had it afterwards, and now Lewis-Peak Garland Esq;

In 1557, this estate was granted, among many others, to Sir Thomas White, as parcel of the possessions of William Burnegill, Henry Wilcocks, and John Broke, copartners (w).

was so named, because the House and land lie upon the Strand, by the river Stour.

It was taken, like the former, from the capital Maner.

We have no distinct account of it till 1433; Then William de Reynford Esq; of Bradfeild, held the maner of Strondelond, in Ramseye, of Robert Reydon: And departing this life that year, was succeeded by his son — Henry (x). [See above; p. 464.]

The next possessor upon record was John Lucas Esq; mentioned above. At the time of his decease, 27 May 1599, he held this messuage called Strandlands, of John Herd, as of his maner of Ramsey-hall, in free socage. — John, his son and heir, was succeeded, in 1619, by his son — Alexander (y).

Sir George Whitmore had it afterwards; from whom it passed, as the rest of the estates, to the Families of Davall, Burr, and Garland.

The Maner of RAY, or LE REY lies in the peninsula, formed by the influx of the tide, in the north part of this parish.

The mansion house is about a mile, north north-east from the Church. Here was formerly a Chapel, dedicated to St. Peter (z).

This was one of the knights fees granted by Robert Fitz-Richard to Alberic de Vere, Earl of Oxford, as mentioned above; and it appears by the Feodary-book of the Honor of Castle-Hed-ingham, that a Family, surnamed de Ruly, held it under some of the Earls, in the reigns of K. Henry III. and K. Edward I. II. and III. William de Ruly is the first mentioned — Geoffrey de Ruly did homage for his tenement in le Ray and Michelstow, being half a knight's fee; in the years 1291. 1293. and 1319. Under John, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, — Geoffrey Royly, held three quarters of a knight's fee. — John de Rily, and the Vicar of Ramsey, held the same under Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl, who dyed in 1370 (a). And afterwards — Geoffrey de Ruly is recorded to hold half a fee in Ramsey, and Michelstow; and half a fee in Le Ray.

In the reign of K. Henry VI. the Abbey of St. Osith, Thomas Holbeck, and Nicolas Peeke, held three quarters of a knight's fee in Ramsey, and Le Ray, called Rulyes. — Thomas Holbeck, at the time of his decease in 1480, held the maner of Ray in Ramsey, of the King, as of the Honor of Hengham-Castle, by fealty, and suit at the Court of that Honor; which was fallen to the Crown, upon the cruel execution of John, the 12th Earl, in the year 1461. Holbeck's heirs were his two Daughters, Christian, and Alice; and Thomas Wilkokys, son of Margery, another daughter of his (b).

In 1543, William Bunynghyll, and Elianor his wife, passed this estate by fine, with East hall, to K. Henry VIII. And Qu. Mary I. granted it, in 1557, among many others, to Sir Thomas White (c).

Afterwards, it passed from Sir George Whitmore to the families of Davall, and Burr; and is now in Lewis-Peak Garland Esq;

Foulton,

otherwise Foughton, or Fulton, is another Maner in this parish.

Foulton-hall, the maner-house, is about three quarters of a mile south from the Church.

This hamlet belonged, in Edward the Confessor's reign, to Briccius, and to Ednod a freeman. At the time of the Survey, Suene of Essex, and his tenant Odard, held one part; and Robert son of Corbution, and his under tenant Robert, the other part [G].

The earliest possessors of this estate upon record, after that, was the Filyoll family, of Little Oakley adjoining.

Joanna, daughter of John Filyoll of Thorpe, who dyed in 1418, held of the Earl of Oxford a tenement called Fulton Bernes, and 40 acres of arable, and 40 of marsh, in Ramsey. She took for her husband, as the record expresses it, John Howse, by whom she had a son named—Walter, born in 1402 (d).

Edward Duke, Gent. at the time of his decease 8 May 1572, held the maner of Fulton-hall, with appertenances, of the Lord Hunsdon, of his Honor of Raleigh, by the service of a quarter of a knight's fee, homage, and suit of Court. His son—John Duke, of Colchester, in 1629 held this maner of Foulton-hall, with 60 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 20 of pasture, and 20 of marsh, in Ramsey, of Sir Thomas Wroth, Kt. and William Couch, as of their Honor of Rayleigh (e).

It belonged formerly to Robert Lowndes, Gent. and afterwards to his widow—Mrs. Mary Lowndes.

Philips Baggot, Gent. is the present owner of Foulton-hall.

South house belongs to Mr. Robert Carrington. —Hicks, to Mr. Amis Hempson.

Robert Bristow Esq; Wadham-College; Mrs. Warner; and Miss Stebbing; Humfrey Sidney, Esq; The Rev. Mr. John Hall's; Mr. Richard, and Samuel, Carrington; Mr. Thomas Seaman; George Simpson; Arthur Taylor; Philip Hempson; John Smith; Hazel Salmon; William Welch; Wimple Pavell; Samuel Simpson; John Blane,—Prescot, or James Clements, Gent. Abraham Everard; John Constable; Mr. Wilson, &c. have also estates, or lands, in this parish.

On the west side of a Creek, which the tide comes into, there is a number of Houses called Ramsey-street: And, over that Creek, a long timber Bridge, in the great road to Harwich, kept up at the charge of the County.

Here is a Fair June 15.

This parish had a benefaction of 20 nobles a year, given by Henry Smith Esq; and payable out of the maner of Stroughton in Leicestershire; but now reduced to 4l. 4s.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a stone Tower are 5 Bells. The Chancel was built, in 1597, by Goldingham Gent. and William (f).

This Church was given to the Abbey of St. Osith, and the great Tithes being appropriated to it, a Vicarage was ordained, which continued in the Abbey's gift till the Suppression. Then it came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever since.

In the Hamlet of Foulton was a Chapel, now entirely demolished: in which the Vicar of this parish was obliged to perform divine service. The Advowson of it was holden of the Lords Fitz-Walter, and Earls of Oxford (g). It was endowed with lands called Northfeild, Brodehole, Hawkland, Wall croft, and Galleis-pightel, Brodepiece, Preistsfeild, Yard land acre, Mill-hillfeild, Louncefeild, Fryreson marsh, and Burghpightel, the first mowing of one acre in Foulton-marsh, and feed in that marsh for 50 sheep. Upon the dissolution of Chantries, the endowment of it was granted, in 1549, to William Fountayn, and Richard Mayne (b).

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 1219l.

noble family there is a particular account above, p. 191. and especially in the other Volume, p. 292, &c. to which we shall beg leave to refer.

Here is only one MANER.

The Earls of Oxford continued lords paramount of this Maner from William the Conqueror's time to K. Henry the Eighth's, except during the forfeiture of Robert Duke of Ireland, and the attainder of John, the 12th Earl.

Under them it was held by the noble Families of Bigod, or Bigot, Plantagenet, and Mowbray, Earls and Dukes of Norfolk &c.

Alberic de Vere, First Earl of Oxford, had a daughter named Juliana who was married to Hugh Bigot, and brought him the maner of Dovercourt with Harwich. He dyed in 1177. — Roger his son dyed in 1220. As did his successors — Hugh in 1225 — Roger in 1270. This last held the maner of Dovercourt, with the vill or town of Herewic which was a member of this maner, of the Earl of Oxford, by the service of one knight's fee. His brother Hugh's son — Roger Bigot, succeeded him (i). This Hugh was his second brother, and chief Justice of England. Roger, either out of fear of K. Edward I's. resentment, whom he had highly offended, or out of dislike to his brother and heir apparent; constituted the said King his heir, 12 April 1302, surrendering to him his Honors, and his high office of Marechal of England: upon condition, that if his wife bore him any children, all should be returned, and he should hold it peaceably. Upon his death in 1306 or 1307, without issue, his estates, and this in particular (k), came to K. Edward I. [See more fully in the other Volume, p. 554.]

The 16th of December 1312, K. Edward II. gave this maner, with others, to his brother Thomas de Brotherton, and afterwards the office of Marechal. His first wife was Alice, daughter of Sir Edward Hayls, of Harwich, and his second, Mary daughter of William Lord Roos. By this last he had no issue (l); but by the first he had two daughters, Margaret, and Alice. The latter had for husband Edward de Montacute.

Margaret, the eldest daughter, styled Marshall Countess of Norfolk, was married, first, to John de Segrave, and afterwards to Sir Walter de Manny, Knight of the Garter, from whom this maner is sometimes called Mawney. She was created, 29 September 1398, Dutches of Norfolk for life. Her first husband John de Segrave dyed in 1353, and Sir Walter de Manny in 1372. The first is recorded to have held, jointly with her; and the latter in her right as parcel of the Earldom of Norfolk; this maner of Dovercourt with Herwiche, of the Earl of Oxford by the service of one knight's fee (m). She herself, departed this life 24 March 1399. By John de Segrave she had two daughters; Anne Abbess of Berking, and Elizabeth, born in 1340; who was married to John de Mowbray, Lord Mowbray, of Axholm; He dyed 9 October 1368. By him she had two sons, John, and Thomas. — John, the eldest son was created Earl of Nottingham 16 July 1377; but dying under age 10 February 1382, — Thomas Mowbray, the other son became heir apparent to the estate. The 12th of February 1382, the title of Earl of Nottingham was conferred upon him, and he was further advanced to the title of Duke of Norfolk, 29 September 1397, and constituted Earl Marshall of England. He dyed an exile at Venice in 1400. By his first wife, which dyed 23 August 1383, he had no issue. But by Elizabeth his second wife, Sister and co-heir of Thomas Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, he had two sons, Thomas, and John; and two daughters, Margaret, and Isabell. Elizabeth his widow was married again twice; namely to Sir Robert Goushill, and Gerard Uffet. Robert Goushill, at the time of his decease in 1403, had a third part of the maner of Dovercourt with Herwich, in right of his wife, whose dower it was (n).

The said Elizabeth, at the time of her decease, in 1424, held the maner of Dovercourt, of the Earl of Oxford, by the service of one knight's fee, and the Burgh of Harwiche of the King, in burgage (o). — Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marshall, her eldest son, was beheaded in 1405, for being in a conspiracy against K. Henry IV. and forfeited all title to his estates. — John, his next brother, was restored to the Earldom of Nottingham, with the Office of Earl Marshall in 1413, and to the Dukedom of Norfolk in 1416. He held this maner of Dovercourt of the Earl of Oxford; and the burgh of Herewich, at the time of his decease 19 October 1432. By Catharine his wife, daughter of Ralph Nevill; to whom this maner, and the burgh of Harwich were assigned, in part of her dowry (p); he had — John Mowbray, his son and heir, that dyed 6 November 1461 (q). Having married Elleanor only daughter of William Bouchier Earl of Eu, he had by her — John Mowbray, the last Duke of Norfolk of this family, who dyed in 1477. He held the maner of Dovercourt, of whom was unknown; and the maner of Harwich of the King, in capite, by knight's service (r): For the Earls of Oxford were then attainted. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, by whom he had an only daughter, Anne, contracted in marriage to Richard, Duke of York, second son of K. Edward IV; but he dyed without issue in 1483, having been privately murdered, as there is reason to believe. Anne, the wife dyed in June 1483 (s).

Upon that, the large Estates of the Mowbrays, Dukes of Norfolk, came to the families of Howard, and Berkley, as descended from Margaret, and Isabell, above-mentioned, the two daughters of Thomas Mowbray, the first Duke of Norfolk. Margaret was married to Robert Howard, ancestor of the noble and numerous family of that surname; and Isabell to James Lord Berkley, in 1423. They had two sons, William, and Maurice. Upon partition of this great inheritance, Dover-court and Harwich were allotted to Berkley. [See in the other Volume, p. 554, 555].—William Lord Berkley, the eldest son, who had this estate, among others, was knighted in 1438, created Viscount Berkley, 21 April 1481; made Earl of Nottingham, 28 June 1483, advanced to the title of Marquis of Berkley, and constituted Earl Marshall, in 1485. Though he had three wives, yet having no issue surviving, and being displeased with his brother and heir Maurice, for marrying beneath his quality, he did by indenture, 10 December 1487, covenant to assure most of his estates to K. Henry VII. But the maners of Mawny, Dover-court, Harwich, Great Chesterford, and Denge, were allotted, or given up, to the Marquis (t).

Most probably, they came to the Crown among the rest, and This was granted to the ancient proprietors the De Veres Earls of Oxford. For, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, at the time of his decease 10 March 1512, held the maners of Harwich and Dovercourt of the Abbot of St. Osith, then worth 39 l. 11 s. 8 d. a year. And so did—John, the 14th Earl, who dyed 14 July, 1526 (u).—John, the 16th Earl, gave up this, and other estates, to the Crown. For, in 1544, a fine passed between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and John Earl of Oxford, Dorothy his wife, and Robert de Vere, deforc' of the maners of Dovercourt, Harwich, Great and Little Oakley, Skighawe, Moose, Old-hall, and New-hall, in Beaumont, with great parcels of land; the Advowsons of the Churches of Great Oakley, Moose and Beaumont; the Advowsons of the Vicarage of Dovercourt, and of the Chapels of Harwich, and Fulton; the right of the King (w).

In 1558, Qu. Mary granted the lordship and maner of Dovercourt, late parcel of the lands and possessions of the Earl of Oxford, to Sir Thomas White, and others (x).

This maner came again soon after to the Crown; and rested in it all the reign of Qu.

Elizabeth, and part of K. James's. The latter sold, or granted, it to Sir George Whitmore. From whose Family it passed into those of Davall, Burr, &c. and it belongs now to Lewis-Peak Garland Esq; like most of the neighbouring estates.

Mr. Thomas Christmass; Mills Rutland, &c. have also some lands here.

In this parish grows a strong, knotted, and crooked sort of Elms; famous for their several uses in husbandry; which, it is said, are very durable, and wear like iron (y).

This is one of the Parishes in this County that receive part of the Benefaction of Henry Smith Esq; namely 4 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year.

Here are two Fairs, May 1. October 18.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; all tiled. In a stone Tower are 5 Bells.

Alberic de Vere, founder of Colne-Priory, endowed it, among other things, with the Church of Duarecourt, and the lands thereto belonging, and the tithes of the demesnes, and of the town, and fishery, and feed for 100 sheep in the marsh, and one tenant with 10 acres. His son Alberic confirmed this grant: as did K. Henry I. in 1111 (z). Roger Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, having, with the consent of Colne-Priory, founded the Chapel of Harwich, made a fresh grant of this Church, with all its appertinances, and with the Chapel of Herewiche, to the Monks of Colne (a). The great Tithes were appropriated to these Monks, and a Vicarage ordained, of which they continued patrons till their dissolution, and then both fell to the Crown. The Advowson of the Vicarage hath continued in it ever since: But K. James I. alienated the great Tithes and Glebe to Sir George Whitmore, and they have passed with the rest of the estates.

The Vicarage was augmented with a Farm purchased by Bp. Robinson's benefaction, jointly with the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty.

In this Church was anciently a famous Rood or Crucifix, whose supposed Sanctity drew from far unto it many votaries and pilgrims, with their offerings. See an account of it in J. Fox's Book of Martyrs, Book II. p. 250.

Here was also a Presbyter Guild, or Fraternity of St. George, endowed with some lands and houses, and a garden at Harwich. It is supposed, that the George-inn over against the Church, was either the site of it, and from thence received the name; or was part of its endowment [I].

That Inn, with a tenement and shop adjoining, is part of the Estate given for the reparation of the Church: And for the same use a field of seven acres called Frankes was given by Richard Strought in 1631. Two fields, of ten acres, near Dover-court-green, are also appropriated to the same use.

This parish is rated to the land-tax at 672 l. 3 s. 0 d.

H A R W I C H,

otherwise Herewic, and Herewich, was so named from the two Saxon words, Depe, an army, and Pic, a castle, a fortification, or a bay, the winding of a river, &c. (b).

By the Saxons naming it Here-wic, i. e. the Army's Castle, it seems probable that they kept here an Army always ready to oppose the descents of the pirating Danes: and it is not improbable, that the Count of the Saxon shore had some Fortification here in the Romans time.

A confirmation of it, is part of the Roman Castra, or Camp, still remaining; which shews not only such labour and industry as that great people was famous for, but also carries in it visible marks of antiquity. One side of it, at least half a mile long, runs southerly from without the Town-gate to the Beacon-hill-field, in the midst of which is a Tumulus, whereon stands, or lately stood, a wind-mill. The Rampart, or Vallum, in many places is 12 feet high; and the Ditch, or Fossa, though chiefly filled up, at least 6 feet deep, and 40 feet wide. The Sea hath devoured the rest. On the top of the hill another Work runs across from the first, easterly. The high road going to it, which is the present one leading to the Town, is still called the Street: and has here and there mutilated parts of a considerable large stone-pavement. From the name of Street, and these remains, they preserve a tradition, that hereabout was formerly a considerable Town; and that these stones are remains of its pavement, when it was a great street. All which evidently prove it a very large military way of the Romans, or in the Saxon style, a Stane street. To put its Roman original out of all doubt, several Coins have been found in it, formerly in the possession of Mr. Bagnal, naval officer here. A tessellated Pavement was also discovered at a small adjoining Farm, belonging to the Vicarage of Dovercourt. And, as far as a description of the Bricks can warrant us, about 20 years ago a Wall was pulled down, built entirely of Roman materials (c).

The earliest account we have of any transactions in these parts, was in the year 885, when K. Ælfred obtained a complete victory over a Danish fleet here. The particulars are thus related in the Saxon Chronicle (d). K. Ælfred sent a fleet from Kent into East-Anglia. When they came to Sturmouth, i. e. the mouth of the Stour here, they met sixteen of the enemies ships, which they fought, and took them all, and slew the men. But as they were going back with their booty, they met a large fleet of the enemy, which attacked them, and the Danes got the victory.

The first time Herewic is mentioned in records, is in 1270. It was then an appendage to the maner of Dover-court, and a Hamlet in that parish, and so continues still, though in 1477, &c. it is called a Maner.

As it was all along in the same Lords as the Maner of Dover-court, namely, the noble Families of De Vere, Earls of Oxford; of Bigod, Earls of Norfolk; of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk; of Mowbray, Dukes of Norfolk; and Earls Marshall; &c. of which we have given an account under the parish of Dover-court; we shall beg leave to refer thither, and not to repeat the same things over again here.

Of late it hath been in the Families of Whitmore, Davall, Burr, and now of Lewis-Peak Garland, Esq;

This Town is 72 miles from London. It stands on a Cliff, or point of land, at the north-east corner of this County; bounded on the east by the Sea, and on the north by the mouth of the Stour, and the famous haven of Orwell. The washing and undermining of the Tides, and the falling of large pieces of the Cliff, have made this point a peninsula, and it is apprehended in a course of years will make it quite an island.

Though it is so near the Sea, yet standing high, and by a clean bold shore, it is therefore healthy.

Its nearness to the Sea exposes it to this inconvenience, that their Water is brackish. So that, besides what they save from rain in cisterns; in a drought, they are forced to have water fetched in water-carts, from a spring near a mile from the Town by the road to Dover-court; or to have it brought in boats, or schoots, from a fine spring at Land-guard fort; or from a spring at Arwarton in Suffolk, which they had by permission from Sir Philip Parker, Bart. lord of the soil.

The Town in general is well-built, consisting of three main Streets, the High-street, Church-street, and West-street; out of which several Lanes branch out on each side. Formerly it was walled round [K], and had four Gates, namely, St. Helen's Port, Barton's or Water-gate, St. Austin's gate, and the Castle Port; besides three other Gates called Savers or Salve-gate, Burham's, and Tilney's gates. It had also a Castle, and an Admiralty-house: But they are all either gone to Sea, or ruinous. The Dukes of Norfolk had a large House near St. Austin's gate; in the Hall-window of which were the Arms of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, till 1676, when they were taken down, to list ed y d. The chief Buildings at present are a School-house, intended for a Charity-School by Humfrey Parsons, Esq; at whose Charge it was erected. Also, the Guild-hall, and a pretty good Exchange.

As this is a Sea-port, here is a Custom-house, called The King's House, with a Collector, Comptroller, Land-Surveyor, Tide Surveyor, two Land-waiters, and four Tide-waiters.

The shortest and safest Passage to and from

(b) A haven or bay where an army lies. Camden Britan.

(c) From a letter of the Rev. Dr. Gower's. (d) p. 87.

[K] In 1338, a tax or toll was granted for building, or repairing, the walls of this Town; and the same again in 1352. Pat. 12, & 26 Edw. III.

England and Holland being from this Port; that brings a considerable number of Travellers this way, especially in time of War. For whose Conveniency, and the carrying of the Mailles, there are Four Pacquet-boats: and, in war-time, two Dover packet-boats.

K. William, and K. George I. and II. usually embarked and landed at this place, in their Journeys to and from Holland and Hanover.

For the Conveniency of Travellers, a Stage-coach comes hither from London Mondays and Thursdays; and returns again to London Tuesdays, and Fridays. They have also a Machine, part of the year.

Here is a convenient Yard for building Ships, belonging to the King, and three Store-houses. From the year 1665 to 1765, several Men of War, of considerable burthen, have been built in this yard; the first was the Rupert, a third rate, by Sir Antony Deane, and the last the Arrogant, a 74 gun ship, by Mr. Bernard.

The Harbour is very safe and of great extent, able to receive the biggest Ships. The Author of the Tour through Great Britain affirms of his own knowledge, 'That there has been in it 'one hundred sail of men of war, with their 'attendants; and between three and four hundred 'sail of Collier ships all in this Harbour at a 'time, and yet none of them crowding or riding 'in danger one of another (e).'

For the safety of Navigation, and the Guidance of Ships; in a Room over the chief Gate there is a Light kept every night with a coal fire: to which answers a Light-house, on the Town Green below the Cliff, with lamps supplied with oyl. By means of them, ships are conducted clear off a sand called the Andrews into the Rolling grounds, where there is good anchorage; from whence the passage lies safely to Orwell before the Town.

The Cliff, on the south-side of the Town, dividing Orwell-haven from the Bay that extends to Walton-Nase, contains many acres of land. The height of it, from the beach to the top where highest, is about fifty foot. At the bottom, there is a layer of clay of a blueish colour about a foot thick, which is succeeded by another of stone of much the same colour for a foot more: In this layer of stone are imbedded Shells, though but sparingly, of the turbate as well as bivalve kinds; and also pieces of wood and sticks petrified. Upon the fall of a piece of the Cliff, a few years ago, a large tree lying horizontally appeared, which was as hard and black as jet, but was soon after buried again by the fall of another lump of the Cliff. Above the layer of stone are divers layers of the same blueish clay mentioned already, about 20 feet high or more; this clay hath Copperas stones sticking in it, but no shells. Several layers come next, reaching within about two feet of the surface, some of which are only of fine sand, and others have stone and gravel mixt with small pebbles; and it is in some of these last mentioned layers, that the fossil shells are imbedded. These fossils lie promiscuously together, bivalve and turbate; neither do the layers in which they lie observe any order, being sometimes higher and sometimes lower in the Cliff; with layers of sand, gravel, and fragments of shells between. Nor do the shells always lie separate or distinct in the layers, but are oftentimes found in lumps or masses, something friable, cemented together with sand and fragments, of an iron or rusty colour, of which all these layers are. Over all is a covering of common sandy earth, about the thickness of two feet, in which are sometimes to be seen veins of a white friable substance resembling icing-glass, though more tender than that brought from Germany.

The blueish Clay above-mentioned tumbling down upon the Shore, within a short time turns to Stone, though washed by the Sea at high water. Some pieces new fallen are as soft as the Clay in the Cliff; others that have lain longer, are crufted over and hard, but if opened or broke, the Clay is still soft in the middle; others that have lain longer are petrified to the heart: And with these the Walls of the Town were for the most part built, and the Streets are paved (f). The Walls of the Town of Colchester seem also to be mostly built with some of the same kind of stone.

On the top of this Cliff, along the Sea-side, is a handfom Walk, about a mile long: which is of great use to those who come here for benefit of Bathing.

For Griffith Davis Esq; hath made two very convenient Baths; one cold, and the other hot.

From the side of the Cliff, above the level of the Sea, issues a Spring of fine and pleasant Water: But it is not of a petrifying quality, as some have imagined (g).

This Town was first incorporated, in 1318, by K. Edward II. through the procurement of his brother Thomas de Brotherton, lord of this place. The substance of the Charter was, That the Town of Harwich be a free-borough, and that the said Earl's men and tenants of the said town, and their heirs and successors, be free-burgesses; and use and enjoy the liberties and free-customs appertaining to a Free-borough; with a Market every week on Tuesday, and free-customs belonging to Markets, &c. (h).

This Charter was confirmed, 12 August 1342; again 20 March 1377, and afterwards by K. Henry IV. V. and VI. The last of whom, in 1422, by the advisement and assent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in his Parliament then held, confirmed their Liberties and Franchises, not in the least revoked: and again, 21 May 1438, accepted of, approved, ratified and confirmed them. K. Edward VI. in 1547; and Qu. Mary, in 1553; and Qu. Elizabeth, in 1560, renewed and confirmed the same. But the amplest Charter was procured for them, 18 April 1604, by Sir Edward Coke, then Attorney-General. Under the former Charters, the government of this Corporation had been in a Port-Reeve, or Portman; in a Bailiff, Con-Constables, and Tenants; a Chamberlain and Treasurers; a capital Burgefs, or Præpositus. By this last Charter it was settled in a Mayor, eight Aldermen, twenty four capital Burgeffes, and a Recorder. The Mayor is chosen by the capital Burgeffes on St. Andrew's day, and sworn on St. Thomas's day. They were also then invested with the Privilege of sending two Burgeffes to Parliament; [and a List of their Burgeffes may be seen in the Introduction.] Moreover, they had then the grant of a second Market weekly on the Friday; and two Fairs yearly, each to last three days: the one on the feast of St. Philip and St. James, the other on the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist.

K. Charles II. confirmed their Franchises and Immunities by Charter, 24 April 1675: a Quo-warranto was afterwards brought against it; but it was fully restored and confirmed by K. William III.

As to the Extent of the Corporation; By Charter of K. James I. it contains the Burgh of Harwich, and the Tenants, Residents, and Inhabitants of the village of Dovercourt, near adjacent and adjoining to the same Burgh. How far it reaches by water is not ascertained in the Charters; only by the records of their Admiralty Courts it appears, that they have amerced certain persons for unlawful fishing near Shotley (i).

The Arms of this Burgh, are, a Portcullis. Crest. An ancient one-masted ship, with sail furled, the poop and stern much higher than the middle.

Harwich hath given the title of Marquis, and Viscount, to some noble Families. Frederic, Count Schomberg, was created Marquis of Harwich 9 May 1689; Benjamin Mildmay, Viscount Harwich, 14 May 1733; and Wills-Hill, Lord Hillsborough in 1756.

The CHURCH, belonging to this Town, dedicated to St. Nicolas, consists of a body and two aisles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole leaded. At the west end, there is a low Tower of stone, with an octangular wooden frame and a spire, leaded. In it are 5 Bells.

This Church is only a Chapel of ease to the mother Church of Dovercourt. It was founded by Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk, son of Juliana daughter of Aubrey de Vere: and probably was at first a donative, or free Chapel (k).

Charitable Gifts.

A farm of 20 l. a year lying in Tendring, given for the perpetual repairs of Harwich Chapel.

Fifty shillings yearly, to be distributed to the Poor of this place, at the discretion of the Minister and Church-wardens; being the gift of Mrs. Offley; who also gave to the poor two small tenements in West-street.

Twelve wheaten loaves given weekly to the poor by the Corporation.

This place partakes also of Mr. Henry Smyth's benefaction, mentioned above under Dovercourt.

Near the Sea are Alms-houses of brick, for four dwellers, but without endowment (l).

Harwich is rated to the land-tax at 1340 l. [L].

For the defence of this Town, and the excellent Ports of Harwich and Orwell, LAND-GUARD-FORT was built. It stands upon a neck of land, now joined to Walton Colnefe in Suffolk; but the common tradition is, That the river Stour passed on the north side of it, and discharged itself into the Sea about Hoafeley-Bay. The remains of the Channel are to this day called Fleets: And the ground, which the Fort stands upon, juts out further south than the town of Harwich. So that it is not improbable, that the two great Rivers Stour and Orwell bringing down by the violence of the floods much sand and gravel, and by degrees lodging it near their mouths, first made an island in the middle of the Haven; and then, by frequent additions on the Suffolk side, streightned the passage, until by degrees it was filled up, and the washing away of the Cliff on the Essex side contributed to the bringing of the mouth of the Harbour more southward than it was at first. This is more probable than what a certain Author (m) asserted, namely, that this harbour or channel was artificial, and of no old date; against which opinion several good reasons are urged in the Philosophical Transactions (n).

It may further be observed: From the great quantity of shingle or beach stones in Walton marshes on the Suffolk-side, from the courses of the several Creeks, the regular sloping of the Cliffs, &c. it seems likely, that the river Orwell had its outlet into the Sea below Bulls Cliff in the parish of Walton, and there found the spacious Harbour of Orwell, secured from the east and north-east winds by a large tract of land, now washed away by the sea, [as appears from records,] where lately were to be seen the ruins of a very strong Castle built by the Romans, which belonged after the Conquest to the Bigods. And it was bounded on the south and south-west by a long narrow tract of land, extending from the Nase in Essex, about 6 or 7 miles, or somewhat more; at or near the extremity of which was seated the Town of Orwell, so called from the River or Harbour on whose banks it stood: all which have been long swallowed up by the Sea.

This town of Orwell stood on the south side

[L] It appears by S. Taylor, that several of our Kings were at this place, either in their passage to and from the Continent; or else in their progresses. Particularly, 12 August 1561, Qu. Elizabeth came hither, and accepted of an entertainment from the Burgh, lodging, as it is said, for several days at a house about the middle of the High-Street; and being attended by the Magistrates at her departure as far as the wind-mill out of town, she graciously demanded of them, what they had to request of her, from whom she received this answer, 'Nothing, but to wish her Majesty a good journey.' Upon which she turning her horse about, and looking upon the town, said, 'A pretty town, and wants nothing,' and so bad them farewell. S. Taylor, p. 246. 253.

of the Harbour, upon a neck of land running out from the coast of Essex, at the place now called the West Rocks; where are to be perceived, at low water, ruins of old buildings, square stones, bricks with mortar about them, tiles, &c. [See above, p. 484.] The place is large and full of deep holes, and from thence to Walton in Essex the sand lies in a ridge, and there is not above 5 or 6 feet water, or scarce so much at low water.

Upon the decay of Orwell, Harwich began to grow populous and considerable. But the sea has, since that, swept away a great part of the land belonging to it, there being nothing, since Orwell is gone, to break off the violence of the sea when the wind is in the east.

To corroborate what hath been said, about the Stour's running formerly on the north side of Landguard Fort; we shall add the thoughts of an ingenious correspondent. "It is very certain that the point of land on the extremity of which the Fort stands, now a mile and near a quarter from the Cliff or high land, was not in being when the Romans were in Britain. For, at a Roman Castle, called by Camden Walton, alias Felixstow Castle, near the Fort, you can hardly turn up the soil in any part, but you will find fragments of Urns, pieces of Coin, and various things that belonged to that people. A man who has dug eringo-roots upwards of fifty years in the low land between the Castle and the Fort, never yet found the least remains of the Romans; and therefore it may be taken for granted that the point did not then exist. If it had, a place so contiguous to it must have, even at this day, shewn some marks of it. I lately found an Elephant's tooth near the remains of this Castle; and Mr. Davis of Harwich says, he has seen more than one that has been found in Harwich Cliff. The most rational account how those Bones and Teeth came here, is as follows.

Teeth and bones of Elephants are often dug up in countries of which this animal is not known to have ever been a native. Some call them Hammon's or Mammuth's bones, as they are vulgarly believed to have belonged to Giants. Wherever these teeth and bones are found lying with unbroken strata over them, they are supposed by Naturalists to be as old as Noah's flood, or at least to have been buried there, at a time when the earth suffered some greater alteration in its surface, than any recorded since the beginning of the historic age among the Greeks. It seems uncertain whether any have been found lying in this manner in England; but there has been one found lately near Harwich, which was undoubtedly buried there while the Romans were in this Island. For it was found in the ruins of that ancient Fortification mentioned by Camden near Landguard Fort: together with many Coins, Utensils and Ornaments, which are well known to have belonged to the Romans. The exact age of this tooth may be guessed at with the highest probability, for we can hardly doubt of its having belonged to one of those Elephants which Dion Cassius in the 21st Chapter of his 60th Book, says, were brought by Claudius into England, who landed with his Army in Kent; and crossed the Thames with it into Essex, where he conquered the Natives, and, after disarming them, established a Roman Government. This happened in the year of our Lord 43, at which time therefore the Elephant was living to which this tooth belonged; which probably has been buried in the earth seventeen hundred years. Camden, in his Britannia, relates from Ralph de Coggeshal, who wrote 500 years ago, that in King Richard's time there were found two teeth of a Giant near Ness point; and there is an account in the Philosophical Transactions N^o. 274. that A. D. 1701. there were bones found of an extraordinary size at Wrabnesse near Harwich: all which may reasonably be supposed to be parts of those Elephants brought over by Claudius, probably the first ever seen in this Country. Some of these fossil teeth are said to have weighed twelve pounds; this, which I am now speaking of, weighs not quite seven, and perhaps did not weigh above eight when it was entire: For at one end there is a piece broken off. We might judge then, that this was the tooth of an Elephant not full grown, if the different quantity, as well as kind, of stony matter united with the fossil teeth, allowed us to form any certain judgment from their weight."

To conclude what we have to say about this Fort; The officers of his Majesty's ordnance did lately, and perhaps do still, according to former precedents, write it as being in Essex. It is supplied with fresh water by Pipes under ground from Walton Colnese.
